The condition in the United States today is such that any man who starts out with industry, intelligence and honesty has a chance for success such as was never known before in the world.

There is always room at the top, and just at present the road that leads to the top runs through pleasant valleys.

The demand for men with brains and capacity is far beyond the supply.

A college education certainly has a broadening and refining effect unless it goes to the other extreme and makes a prig of a man.

What we want to breed in our young is the wholesome conviction that nobody in this world has any business to exist without work, that true happiness is to be achieved only by the worker, not by the idler or dawdler; that the man who labors to the best of his ability in the field in which he finds himself is the only one for whom the world has any use."

Facts and Fancies.

A Brooklyn man has been cured of paralysis by being hit on the solar plexus.

The European war cloud, after a long rest, has returned to hover over the same old spot.

Two prisoners in the Merrill, Wis., jail escaped by throwing pepper in the eyes of Jailer Schroeder.

It would be unfair to judge a man by the stuff he keeps in his ice box. He may have bibulous visitors.

While peaches are being disposed of by the crate and bushel, potatoes, the reel thing, are offered only in pound lots.

After considering recent operations of the Chicago tax viewers we are constrained to place the "knocker" in the list of necessary evils.

The two-minute trotter has not as yet arrived, but they are preparing to make it possible for people living in Europe to be regular New York commuters.

A daughter of ex-Vice President Morton is going to marry a French count. After the wedding he will be the count, she will be the countess, and pa will be the counter.

The "Star Spangled Banner" has been translated into Spanish. The people of Spain, however, will likely be careful how they fool with it. They probably think it's loaded.

The city council of Hamilton, Ont., has refused to allow the streets to be sprinkled on Sunday, on the ground that it would be a profanation of the Sabbath. In St. Hilaire men go dry on Sunday, but it was not supposed that a Canadian city would take that fact up as precedent to letting their streets go dusty.

That new Hungarian telegraph system which is successfully sending messages at the rate of 40,000 words an hour could almost keep half way up with an old-fashioned New England sewing circle.

John Razao seems to have considered 90 per cent the proper price for his service as an agent for making bank deposits, but the fact that he is under arrest makes it seem possible that he is mistaken about the rate of commission.

Bullfighting has now become so commonplace that they have to employ woman as matadores in order to draw crowds. One trouble with bullfighting as a sport is that the bookmakers have not seen fit to turn it into a gambling game.

Eighty-nine professional certificates have been issued to Minnesota teachers this year by the state superintendent of public instruction. Of these, seventy-nine were first grade certificates, entitling the holder to teach in any high school.

Leslie's Weekly says the woman who prides herself on her domestic incompetence and boasts of her inability to cook a dinner or scrub a floor has no right to get married. If this dictum were to be generally accepted fashionable weddings would become rare and curious.

A Yale professor is out in Colorado spending time by demonstrating that the tail of an adder may be grafted onto a rattlesnake. Wouldn't it be more profitable for the professor to try to discover some means of exterminating potatoes bugs?

Astounded The Editor:

Editor S. A. Brown, of Bennettsville, S. C., was once immensely surprised. "Through long suffering from Dyspepsia," he writes, "my wife was greatly run down. She had no strength or vigor and suffered great distress from her stomach, but she tried Electric Bitters which helped her at once, and, after using four bottles, she is entirely well, can eat anything. It's a grand tonic, and its gentle laxative qualities are splendid for torpid liver." For indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Stomach and Liver troubles it's a positive, guaranteed cure. Only 50c at W. A. Schreiter's.

Fred Harrington, of the billard hall, has taken into partnership Telesfore Tessier, and the firm name will be Harrington & Tessier. A bowling alley will be put up in the rear of their place. Carpenters have the building already well under way. It is to be 16x80 feet.

A dance by Coscio's Italian Orchestra was advertised for Friday night last. The orchestra failed to put in an appearance. Even had they come, the news of the attempted assassination of President McKinley, which at the time was thought to have been accomplished, kept many away.

A number of our local teachers went to Grand Rapids Friday to file on claims near the Big Fork river. There will be quite a Red Lake Falls colony at that point. The claims were taken under the homestead law and are valuable for hardwood timber no less than for agricultural purposes.

The Minnesota & International railroad contractors are paying $2.25 per day for laborers, and yet can not succeed in getting a sufficient number of men. The company wants to let the work of clearing the right of way between Blackduck and Bridgie—a $20,000 job—but can get no bidders, although willing to pay good prices for the work. It looks as if prosperity had struck the labor world when such a state of affairs exists.

Wm. Goette, who bought N. P. Nelson's farm, has a sorghum mill and expects to do considerable business in the molasses line this fall. Mr. Goette came here last spring and was wise enough to distribute considerable sugar cane seed among the farmers hereabouts, with the result that his mill will have a nice lot of material to work on.

Theo. Schmitz the jolly and popular landlord of the North Star hotel, has a new guest to whom he seems to be giving a good deal of attention who, on arriving was so well pleased with the stopping that she immediately settled down to stay. The guest in question is nothing less than a sweet little daughter, born to Mr. and Mrs. Schmitz, on Tuesday.

The Senior Class of the High School wish to express their grateful thanks through the columns of The Gazette, to all those citizens who assisted in making such a fine success of their play rendered last Tuesday evening, and especially to the Philharmonic society for their fine and well rendered selections during the intermissions of the play, and also to the press of the city.

A few reasons why the eyes are responsible for so many nervous ailments.

Of all the centers the visual centers are the most delicate, the most sensitive, the most constantly in use, and are larger than all the other centers put together. From morning until night the feeling of the visual centers has been a constant one. While we see apparently without effort, every impression costs a certain amount of nerve force. Think of the thousands of impressions which are received by the eyes in the course of a single day. To lift a penny once does not require a great deal of nerve force, but no one can lift a penny one million times each day.

GREAT STATE FAIR

ATTENDANCE THIS YEAR TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT GREATER THAN LAST.

Receipts Estimated at $125,000, $20,000 More Than the Previous High Record—Vice President Roosevelt Addresses Minneapolis Veterans—St. Paul Man Poisoned by the Flower of a Weed—State News in General.

St. Paul, Sept. 9.—"The state fair which closed Saturday has established a new record for the management to beat, and was the most successful state fair, in point of number and variety of exhibits and in attendance, ever held in the United States," said Secretary Randall, after the number of admissions had been determined.

The increase in attendance and receipts, compared with last year, is about 25 per cent. The total number of admissions at the turnstiles was 185,585, not including those that passed in with badges, an increase of 43,242 over the record for 1900. A total of more than 200,000 visited the fair. A pleasing feature was that there were 22,109 railroad coupons taken at the gates, 6,999 more than last year, showing an increase of almost 50 per cent in the number of people from outside the Twin Cities attending the fair.

Secretary Randall estimates the total receipts of the fair at $125,000, which is $20,000 more than last year, when there was a balance on hand of $18,285.61.

TALKS TO VETERANS.

Minneapolis, Sept. 3.—Vice President Roosevelt addressed the veterans of the Civil war and their friends at the Fourth Ward Republican club wigwam at 11 o'clock.

The event was arranged by the Union Veterans' League. An hour before the hour fixed the hall was filled. The vice president was escorted to the platform by his host, Thomas Shevlin, and Congressman Fletcher.

He confined his remarks to the achievements by the veterans and the soldiers of the Civil war. He spoke of his pleasure at meeting the people of Minneapolis and of the Northwest.

"But," said he, "I know that none of you will begrudge my saying that above all citizens of this republic, I feel honored to meet the men who in the times that tried men's souls, proved the faith that was in them by their works."

NIBBLED AT A WEED.

St. Paul Man Poisoned by Chewing the Flower.

St. Paul, Sept. 7.—Daniel Doyle is dead from thoughtlessly nibbling a flower of the weed known as stromanium.

Doyle was 18 years of age, and was employed at the St. Paul Foundry company's plant. Before leaving home Wednesday morning he stood in the yard, and, while talking, chewed the flower that he had plucked from a weed near by. He subsequently became ill and lost consciousness.

He was found to be under the influence of a poison, similar in physiological effects to belladonna. He lingered until 7 p. m., when he died. Coroner Miller was summoned, and almost immediately discovered the cause of death. Instances of the sort are common in medical annals.

Northwestern Flour Output.

Minneapolis, Sept. 4.—According to The Northwestern Miller the flour output at Minneapolis last week was 316,485 barrels, as compared with 370,200 barrels for the corresponding week of last year. Superior and Duluth ground 15,600 barrels, an increase of 5,000 barrels. Export business was even lighter than in the week before. Domestic trade was exceedingly quiet, buyers taking only what necessity demanded.

For a Military Reserve.

Duluth, Sept. 5.—Captain Alex McDougall, a man whose advice carries as much weight as that of any man at the head of Lake Superior, advises that Minnesota point should be converted into a government military reserve. The point is a great natural breakwater for the Duluth-Superior harbor and must be maintained as such. To that end the government has already made regulations concerning it and is now engaged in widening it.

Mob Would Lynch Him.

St. Paul, Sept. 3.—Harry Lovell, 39 years old and a janitor by occupation, had a close call from lynching at Fort Snelling during the Labor day celebration. Only the presence of a dozen stalwart policemen saved him from dangling at the end of a rope. His alleged crime was an assault on a 6-year-old daughter of Mrs. Charles Hauch, 534 Cedar st.

Ore Shipments Below the Record.

Duluth, Sept. 4.—Iron ore shipments for the season to date from Minnesota are about 50,000 tons under the figures for the corresponding period last year, being 6,250,000 gross tons, against 6,300,000 tons. This shows that for August the shippers made up 130,000 tons of the shortage that existed at the commencement of the month.

Gave Birth to Triplets.

Monticello, Minn., Sept. 4.—Mrs. William Nelson has given birth to triplets, two boys and a girl. Mother and children are doing well. The combined weight of the three is 21 1-2 pounds and they are well developed and of even size.

Montana Murderer Hanged.

Deer Lodge, Mon., Sept. 6.—James MacArthur, alias James Fleming, was hanged here for the murder of Captain Oliver Dotson last February. The execution was witnessed by nearly every sheriff in the state. MacArthur kept his nerve to the last and walked to the gallows without a sign of weakness.

FINDS VALUABLE PEARL.

Gem Is Said to Be Worth About Two Thousand Dollars.

Taylors Falls, Minn., Sept. 5.—Much excitement has prevailed here for a week among pearl hunters. Several small finds have been reported, but Wednesday afternoon Johnnie Emery, whose parents live at St. Croix Falls, found a shell in the river, above the old dam, which contained a pearl as large as a marble, perfectly round and of that peculiar luster that makes it very valuable. Those who claim to know say it is one of the finest ever found in the West, and worth at least $2,000.

MINNEAPOLIS MAN SHOT.

Editor of The Tribune Dangerously Injured.

Cass Lake, Minn., Sept. 8.—W. J. Murphy of the Minneapolis Tribune was dangerously injured by the premature discharge of a shotgun. The charge entered his right hand and under the arm.

The accident occurred on Lake Winnibigoshish. He was taken to this place by boat where prompt medical assistance was obtained.

Mr. Murphy is resting comfortably and no serious result is apprehended.

HARD COAL SHORTAGE.

Anthracite, It Is Feared, Will Be Very Scarce.

West Superior, Wis., Sept. 5.—There seems to be every prospect for quite a shortage of coal at this point the coming winter. It is without question true that there will be a much greater shortage of hard coal than there was during last winter when the docks early shut off shipping anthracite to outside points and early commenced crushing and screening coal in order to get the different grades and varieties of anthracite for the trade. The supply was pieced out last winter, but there is great danger and possibility that if there is not a big rush of coal to this port within a short time there will be a shortage that will be felt during the coming winter. Coal commenced selling Wednesday at an advanced price of 25 cents per ton, and it may go higher before the winter sets in.

SAILBOAT OVERTURNED

Prominent Young People Drowned Near Bottineau, N. D.

Bottineau, N. D., Sept. 6.—A sad accident occurred in the Turtle mountains, 10 miles northeast of this place.

A pleasure party went for a sail on Fish lake, the resort of this region. In some unknown way a boat was overturned and three persons were drowned. The dead are Harry Sims, Miss Marie Cook and Miss Ruth Saucre, all of Willow City.

Harry Sims was the son of Postmaster Sims of Willow City, and Miss Cook was formerly from Vermont. The bodies were taken to Willow City for interment.

It is learned that a pleasure party of 11 young persons was in the boat and that by strenuous efforts all were saved, except three.

SEVEN MEN ARE KILLED.

Fatal Railroad Wreck Occurs at Jamestown, N. D.

Jamestown, N. D., Sept. 10.—Five men were killed and six others were seriously injured near the railroad depot in this city at 3:30 p. m. Two of the six injured have since died.

A mixed train came in from Oakes, carrying 17 men on a flat car. The train had but passed the depot when a road engine was struck. The force of the collision caused the flat car on which the men were riding to collapse, with the above result. The men boarded the car at La Moure, where they had been working in the harvest field, and came here for work.

SOUTH DAKOTA BANK ROBBED.

Canton, S. D., Sept. 10.—Burglars broke into the safe of the Farmers' and Merchants' bank at Worthing, this county, and about $600 in silver was taken. The robbers were frightened away by the night patrol and thus were prevented from looting the bank. There were two engaged in the work and they were tracked several miles in the country, where their trail was lost.

The safe door was blown open and the noise this made was what attracted the attention of the night watch.

COUNTERFEITING CHARGED.

Hedrick, Ia., Sept. 7.—Deputy United States Marshal Webb of Omaha arrested Columbus Monahan and Gerald Ruby here, charging them with making and having in their possession counterfeit quarters, half dollars and dollars. It is evident that a gang is at work and more arrests will probably be made. The headquarters are in the woods on Skunk river and the work turned out is rather crude, although it has been passed frequently within the last few months.

ROBBED THE POSTOFFICE.

Burglars Make a Good Haul at Amery, Wisconsin.

Amery, Wis., Sept. 6.—The postoffice here was robbed during the night. Burglars pried open the front door, then drilled a hole in the safe and blew the front door partly open. The safe contained $10,000 in notes, $1,200 in stamps and $250 in cash.

Owing to the peculiar effect of the explosion it is impossible to learn the amount secured by the burglars. Cash and registered letters in drawers were taken.

Anniversary of Galveston's Storm.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 10.—The first anniversary of the great storm was appropriately observed in Galveston with public memorial services on the beach at the foot of Broadway. The services were held under the auspices of the Women's Health Protective association and were attended by about 7,000 people.

Threshing mostly all done in this vicinity

Last Thursday morning the home of Leon Aulette was destroyed by fire. Very few of his household goods were saved, all those on the upper story went up in smoke.

Our school is still closed on account of sickness amongst the children.

Your correspondent is in receipt of a letter from Victor Patnaude. He is well and thinks he will re-enlist as he says that a soldiers' life suits him better than any other.

Last week I went about,
Full of trouble and of doubt.
Now I'm smiling and dance with delight,
I had Rocky Mountain Tea last

Stood Death Off.

E. B Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex, once fooled a grave-digger. He says "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood: aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. Only 50c at W. A. Schreiter's drug store.

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Thirty Years of Suffering.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Halloway, of French Camp, Miss. "I had spent so much time and money and suffered so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effects of diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor, could not even travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer as I have." For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Mothers write us that they have solved the problem of keeping their children well. Give them Rocky Mountain Tea each week. A blessing to mother and child. W. A. Schreiter.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Great Favorite.

The healing and soothing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a great favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children for colds, croup and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and had cured her of Consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. A. EVERY LADY RECEIVES A HANDSOME SOUVENIR

MAJESTIC COOKING EXHIBITION.

Think of it—biscuits baked perfectly, browned top and bottom, in THREE MINUTES. We don't ask you to accept this statement on the bare assertion, but we do ask—and extend to every one in this community—a cordial invitation to be in attendance at our store any day next week from

September 23 to 28

and see this wonderful baking performance with your own eyes, have a dainty lunch and a delicious cup of coffee with us, and hear the demonstrator from the Majestic factory explain why a bakes so quickly and so perfectly. When you have examined this modern cooking wonder you can readily see from its construction why this is true.

Majestic Malleable Iron and Steel Range

MAJESTIC RANGES are entirely different from all other cooking apparatus. Will not clog with ashes and clinkers, allow smoke and soot to escape into the kitchen, crack or break, or subject you to the expense and annoyance of every other cooking apparatus.

Made of MALLEABLE IRON and best open hearth cold-rolled steel, 10 to 50 per cent. heavier throughout than any other range. Flues lined with pure asbestos, and the entire range riveted with the Norway iron rivets. Air-tight and dust-tight. This explains why a Great Majestic Range will do its work in half the time, and consequently with half the fuel.

After investigating we find that the claims made for MAJESTIC RANGES are true to the letter, and have selected them for our range department, and give our personal guarantee that the Great Majestic Ranges are the most complete, durable, dependable and economical range made, and that's why, at great expense, we're having this cooking exhibition. We want all our citizens to see for themselves the proof of the claim made for Majestic Ranges.

A VALUABLE PRESENT

We are going to give, absolutely free, to every purchaser of a Majestic Range during the sale only, a complete set of celebrated Majestic Cooking Ware made of copper, steel and enamel, worth $7.50—cheap at that and the best at any price.

MAJESTIC RANGES are made in all styles and sizes, to fit every condition and every purse. Examine the Majestic Range—glad to show it to you whether you intend to buy or not.

MIDNIGHT BLAZE.

DEPARTMENT'S PROMPT ACTION CONFINES FLAMES TO TO ONE ROOM

August Krueger and Geo. Brunelle were standing in front of the Grand View hotel at 12:15 Tuesday night when they heard a terrible explosion; looking down the street, they saw immediately following it, a dense mass of smoke belching forth from J. R. Fortier's, successor to Lemieux Bros. store. The explosion had shattered one big plate glass in the front. The alarm was immediately given, and in a few minutes two streams of water were playing on the fire, one from the rear and one from the front of the building. The fire had made considerable headway, seeming to have extended to all parts of the room, but the ceiling and the partition between that shut out W. A. Schreiter's drug store, were suffering the most. After the department had worked an hour and a half, the flames subsided, and investigation showed that not a great deal of damage had been done to the building, probably not exceeding $300, and fully insured, but the stock and fixtures were complete wrecks. The building in which the fire occurred is located at the corner of 1st and Main streets. It is 50 x 80, and divided into two rooms 25 x 80, with a plastered partition. The corner room is occupied by W. A. Schreiter's drug store and the local telephone exchange; the inside room by J. R. Fortier, successor to Lemieux Bros., with a stock of general merchandise. It was at first thought advisable to move Schreiter's stock, and several show cases and tables were hurriedly taken out. But the smoke working through the plastered wall and ceiling became too dense even in this room to admit of further operations. Shortly before the fire was completely extinguished, the stream playing on the partition from the other side found its way through, while water was dripping from the ceiling. This was in the rear of the drug store, but the damage was not great. $200 will fully cover it, and Mr. Schreiter carried ample insurance in the Pennsylvania. German Alliance and St. Paul Fire and Marine companies. The Fortier stock was insured for $1,200 in S. A. Swanson's agency. Remi Fortier, father of J. R., the latter being confined to the house with typhoid fever, arrived in the city from Gentilly in the morning, and says the stock and fixtures inventoried at $4,400 when his son went in with Lemieux Bros., and in this event the loss is quite heavy. The building has not been materially damaged, further than that the plastering is gone, and the front is smoked. The Merchants' State Bank building, adjoining on the south, shows the effect of the smoke on a portion of the front.

The attorneys and land men who are officed over the bank took the precaution of moving their books and office supplies to places of safety, but the efficiency of the fire department obviated any possible spread of the flames.

Considerable regret is expressed that the brick row, to which our citizens generally point with much pride, should have been visited by the fire fiend. But the building itself was damaged little, and will soon be repaired and as good as ever.

KILLED TWO BEARS.

JOHN BISHOFF'S TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE AT NOTCH HILL.

MET THREE BEARS—SHOULDER DISLOCATED, EYE NEARLY OUT.

From the Daily World, Vancouver, B. C.

John Bishoff, of Notch Hill, B. C., has a record of bear killing to his credit that is not surpassed by any other hunter in the province. The story which a correspondent sends down to The World indicates that as a mighty nimrod and a fearless man Mr. Bishoff has not an equal. A couple of weeks ago he left Notch Hill and went up Mason creek to do assessment work on a mineral claim which he owns in that section. One day while out deer-hunting he met with the experience in which he had his shoulder dislocated, and had an eye almost torn out. He had hunted a long time and was proceeding along the trail when suddenly he came face to face with three huge grizzly bears.

To the tenderfoot the words "grizzly bear" do not convey any particular meaning, and it is safe to say that any theory which he might entertain of the breed on view in the pit at Stanley Park would be quickly dispelled were he to meet one of those hairy monsters, which when they stand flat footed seems to be as tall as a yearling steer. Rearing a grizzly stands six or seven feet, and has a spread of arms which might hold four men in their embrace. With such an animal as that in front of one, it is no wonder that even to a dead sure target shot, the sights blur and wabble all over the barrel. While a grizzly is not always looking for a fight he generally goes around with a chip on his shoulder so to speak, and it is always willing to accommodate one who wants a fight.

Mr. Bishoff and the bears came together so suddenly that before either were really aware the combat had begun. The largest of the animals reared and encountered the hardy prospector, who flinging his rifle away, as it was useless at such close quarters, and pulling his hunting knife, awaited the onslaught. The big, shaggy fellow came lunging rapidly toward him, emitting rumbling growls which would have frightened a less nervy man. Prompt action was necessary, for the two animals evinced no notion of retreating, and were preparing to second the efforts of the other in the annihilation of this intruder of their haunts. As the bear threw his paws out wide, preparatory to clasping Bishoff in a death hug, the brave hunter aimed a blow at the heart of the animal, and thrust by the strength of a man in a desperate strait, the knife sunk to the shafts in the vitals of the grizzly. It dropped dead.

Meanwhile the dog had been holding at bay the other two, but at this juncture it had been outdone, and they came bounding toward Bishoff. Again the knife proved particularly available at the critical time, and with all the effort of which he was capable, he drove the weapon into the foremost bear's breast. It was a death dealing drive. Bear and man tumbled to earth together, but the knife had done its work, and the fur-bound iron muscles of the grizzly slowly relaxed.

Quickly releasing himself, Bishoff, smarting with the pain of a dislocated shoulder, on which one gigantic paw had fallen, and the hurt of the right eye badly injured, sprang to his feet ready to charge the other bear which was following close. It, however, after witnessing the fate which had befallen its comrade, thought discretion the better part of valor and beat a retreat. A handy tree offered a refuge, and it quickly mounted into the branches. The pain of Bishoff's shoulder was so great that he could not raise his rifle to destroy the last of the monsters, and allowed it to escape, perhaps to convey the intelligence to other bears that they might acquire a knowledge of the fighting qualities of the human race.

In addition to the dislocation of his shoulder, and the injury to his eye, Mr. Bishoff was otherwise disfigured, for the bears had made good use of their teeth during the short encounter. Still he may thank his stars that he came off so luckily, for in such experiences the grizzly usually comes out best.

The first of the animals which was killed tipped the scales at 945 pounds, and the second over 700.

MINNESOTA CHEESE.

DAIRY COMMISSIONER URGES BUILDING OF MORE FACTORIES.

SAYS THAT CHEESE FACTORIES ARE GREAT REVENUE TO FARMERS.

The dairy and food department under the supervision of Commissioner McConnell is trying to awake interest in the manufacture of cheese in the northern and western counties of the state. The contrast in the extent of cheese making between Wisconsin and Minnesota is very great. While Minnesota may never exceed Wisconsin in the amount of cheese made, Commissioner McConnell thinks the introduction of cheese making in many counties will be a revenue.

The cost of putting in a small cheese factory, says the commissioner would be about $500, while a fair sized creamery would cost ten times as much. In Wisconsin there are 1,800 cheese factories, a majority of them small concerns, while Minnesota has but sixty-one. The revenue from the industry in Wisconsin amounts to $6,000,000 a year, and one county alone produces $1,200,000 worth of the product. Minnesota produces about $600,000 worth of cheese.

There are many creameries in the state receiving too small a quantity of milk to make them pay. A cheese factory will do well on from 2,000 to 3,000 pounds of milk a day, while a creamery receiving that amount seldom pays.

There are many districts in the northern and western counties which do not produce enough milk for a creamery but would profit by the establishment of cheese factories. Commissioner McConnell is doing missionary work in such localities to get the industry established.

A School For Training Nurses.

Dr. N. M. Watson, N. P. surgeon, for this division, has received the following letter which is self explanatory.

Brainerd, Minn., Sept. 9th, 1901.

Dear Doctor:

We are erecting a five thousand dollar building to be used as a Nurse's Home, in connection with a Nurses' Training School, which we hope to have completed and ready for occupancy by the first of November next. By that date we hope to open our Training School and run the same in connection with this hospital. Thinking you may know of some young woman, or women, who desire to take up trained nursing as an occupation, I send you this information, hoping it may assist us all.

Applicants must be not less than 21 nor more than 35 years of age; possessed of good health (free from physical infirmities) good moral character; and a good general education, which has included High School work or its equivalent. Other things being equal, we desire to give members of N. P. Ry. employes' families the preference among applicants.

Those desiring to make application in regard to entering the School, may do so by addressing Miss Laura Whittakar, Supt. of Nurses, N.P. Hospital, Brainard Minn., or myself.

Yours truly.
W. Courtney,
Chief Surgeon.

A few reasons why the eyes are responsible for so many nervous ailments.

Of all the centers the visual centers are the most delicate, the most sensitive, the most constantly in use, and are larger than all the other centers put together. From morning until night the feeling of the visual centers has been a constant one. While we see apparently without effort, every impression costs a certain amount of nerve force. Think of the thousands of impressions which are received by the eyes in the course of a single day. To lift a penny once does not require a great deal of nerve force, but no one can lift a penny one million times each day.

TO THE PEOPLE:

Some time ago the "Jack-of-All-Trades" began to tell the people what he could do. He made great claims; promised to do more than ever had been done before, and more than most people believed possible. You all know the success he has attained, and as he became more familiar with the country he was traveling in, he could see the possibilities of greater work, and to accomplish this he has introduced to you a traveling companion. Behold his features in the shape of a 2½ H. P. Geared Base Vertical Gasoline Engine. His specialties are pumping water and general farm use. He is very versatile, and when his time is not wanted for pumping water, by a movement of one of his arms, he can disconnect the gears and his power can be directed for other purposes. He is beginning to travel all over the country from the Canadian Provinces to the Equator, and from the Eastern Coast to the Philipines. He is taking up all sorts of work for all kinds of people, and it is surprising to note the results of his work for the first year.

Send for information and catalogue.

minutes were slipping away. Only the sobs of those in the circle about the president's bedside

Broke the Awe-Like Silence.

Five minutes passed, then six, seven, eight. Now Dr. Rixey bent forward and then one of his hands was raised as if in warning. The fluttering heart was just going to rest. A moment more and Dr. Rixey straightened up and with choking voice said:

"The president is dead."

Secretary Cortelyou was the first to turn from the stricken circle. He stepped from the chamber to the outer hall and then down the stairway to the large room where the members of the cabinet, senators and other officials were assembled. As his tense, white face appeared at the doorway a hush fell upon the assemblage.

"Gentlemen, the president has passed away," he said.

For a moment not a word came in reply. Even though the end had been expected the actual announcement that William McKinley was dead fairly stunned these men, who had been his closest confidants and advisers. Then a groan of anguish went up from the assembled officials. They cried outright like children. All the pent up emotions of the last few days were let loose. They turned from the room and came from the house with streaming eyes.

The Public is Informed.

Through Private Secretary Cortelyou the waiting newspaper men newspaper men received the notification. In a trice there was the keenest excitement in the broad avenue, but there was no semblance of disorder.

The waiting crowds melted away rapidly, giving expression in unmistakeable terms to the great sorrow they felt. Within a brief space of time the newspaper men, the policemen, the sentries of the guard and those whose duties kept them abroad were the only persons in evidence within the immediate vicinity.

With the momentary excitement incident upon the announcement of death the entire scene became one of unmistakeable and deep mourning. As if nature lent its aid to the grieving crowds a dense fog settled like a pall over the city. The Milburn house became a tomb of silence. Lights not extinguished were dimmed, visitors were denied admittance and the mourning family and their more intimate friends were speedily left alone with the distinguished dead.

BEARING UP BRAVELY.

Mrs. McKinley Is Told of the Death of the President.

Buffalo, Sept. 14.—It is definitely learned that it was Mrs. Barber, Mrs. McKinley's sister, who broke the news of her great loss to the stricken wife. She went from the bedside of the dead president to the wife whose condition was such that it seemed best to remove her from the sick room before the end came.

Mrs. McKinley is occupying a large south room in the Milburn house, overlooking Delaware avenue and Fenney streets. Through the drawn shades the early morning light was breaking when Mrs. Barber told her that the sleep into which the president had passed would know no awakening. Mrs. McKinley, whose extreme delicacy was for many years the president's chief sorrow, received the news with unexpected calmness and at once acquiesced in the request of her physician and family to leave the details of the last sad ceremonies in which the entire nation is to join entirely in the hands of the official and personal friends, who are assembled.

All day long she has remained quietly in her room, stricken to the soul, but bravely bearing her sad burden, because she knows "the major," as she lovingly calls the late president, would wish her to do so.

Dr. Rixey, who for years has guarded her from all excitement and was in constant attendance during her recent illness in San Francisco, is much encouraged by the way she is bearing up at present, although it is quite possible the strain of the next 24 hours may make it desirable for her to return with her sister to Canton to avoid the serious strain of a state funeral.

SERVICES IN WASHINGTON.

Body of the President to Lie in State at the Capitol Tuesday.

Washington, Sept. 16.—The following official statement regarding the plans for the funeral services over the remains of President McKinley in this city has been given to the press:

In compliance with the earnest wishes of Mrs. McKinley that the body of her husband shall rest in her home at Canton Wednesday night the following plan for the obsequies of the late president has been made:

Funeral services in the rotunda of the Capitol will be held Tuesday morning on the arrival of the escort, which will accompany the remains from the White House. The body of the late president will lie in state in the rotunda for the remainder of Tuesday and will be escorted to the railroad station Tuesday evening. The funeral train will leave Washington at or about 9 o'clock Tuesday evening and thus will arrive at Canton during the day Wednesday.

STILL IN IGNORANCE.

Czolgosz Has Not Been Informed of His Victim's Death.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—The assassin Czolgosz does not know yet that President McKinley is dead and will probably not know it until he is arraigned for murder. He will be indicted by the grand jury at once and the case will then immediately be removed to the supreme court. The arraignment will take place in that court and very soon, the exact time depending on the return of the indictment. No further attempt was made during the day to talk to Czolgosz, nor was the theory of poisoned bullets taken up by the police. They say that when the chambers of the revolver will be chemically examined, as they undoubtedly will be, no poison will be found on them. As to Emma Goldman the situation remains unchanged, the police holding there is insufficient evidence on which to ask for her extradition

ROOSEVELT TAKES THE OATH

President McKinley's Successor Sworn in at Buffalo.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—President Theodore Roosevelt took the oath of office at the Wilcox house after an arduous and exciting journey covering over 400 miles. When notified of the dying condition of President McKinley Mr. Roosevelt was hunting on Mount Marcy, in the Adirondacks, 22 miles from the Tahawas club. The search for him had taken hours and he was finally located by a posse of guides who attracted the attention of the vice presidential hunting party by megaphone calls and a system of rifle shot signals. Then followed a 22-mile horseback ride to the club, a 35-mile drive over a dangerous and precipitous mountain road to North Creek, where a special train was waiting to bear him to Buffalo. He arrived at 1:40 o'clock in the afternoon.

Before taking the oath Colonel Roosevelt drove to the Milburn house on a visit of condolence to Mrs. McKinley. He then returned to the Wilcox house, where he met the five members of the cabinet present in the city and a number of other people of prominence. Secretary Root, as ranking member of the cabinet, said:

"Mr. Vice President, I am requested by all the members of the cabinet who are present in Buffalo, including all but two of the cabinet, to request that for reasons of weight affecting the administration of the government you proceed without delay to take the oath of office of president of the United States."

Colonel Roosevelt, in a rather strained voice, but clearly and with grave decision of manner, said briefly:

"Mr. Secretary, I shall take the oath in accordance with the request of the members of the cabinet, and in this hour of deep distress and national bereavement I wish to state that it shall be my concern to continue absolutely unbroken the policy of President McKinley for the peace, prosperity and the honor of our beloved country."

Judge Hazel of the United States district court, who had been selected for that purpose, then proceeded to administer the constitutional oath. As the repetition of the oath was concluded Theodore Roosevelt became by this simple act vested with full power as president of the United States of America.

PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

Sets Aside Thursday as a Day of Mourning and Prayer.

"A terrible bereavement has befallen our people. The president of the United States has been struck down; a crime committed not only against the chief magistrate, but against every law-abiding and liberty-loving citizen.

"President McKinley crowned a life of largest love for his fellow men, of most earnest endeavor for their welfare, by a death of Christian fortitude; and both the way in which he lived his life and the way in which, in the supreme hour of trial, he met his death, will remain forever a precious heritage of our people.

"It is meet that we as a nation express our abiding love and reverence for his life; our deep sorrow for his untimely death.

"Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States of America, do appoint Thursday next, Sept. 19, the day on which the body of the dead president will be laid in its last earthly resting place, as a day of mourning and prayer throughout the United States. I earnestly recommend all the people to assemble on that day in their respective places of worship, there to bow down in submission to the will of Almighty God, and to pay out of full hearts their homage of love and reverence to the great and good president whose death has smitten the nation with bitter grief."

WILL ASSIST ROOSEVELT.

Cortelyou to Be His Private Secretary for the Present.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—President Roosevelt passed a very quiet day at the Wilcox house arranging to attend the funeral of the late president. His secretary, Mr. Loeb, and his assistants were, however, kept busy opening telegrams and mail and classifying them. Piled up on the oak table in the sitting room of the house were at least 600 telegrams and letters, all of them expressing regret at the sad occurrence to the late president and assurance of confidence and support to the new president.

The only announcement that the president had to make was that Mr. Cortelyou, the secretary of President McKinley, would for the present act in that capacity for him because of his knowledge of the condition of affairs. Mr. Cortelyou confirmed this statement.

THE LATE PRESIDENT'S WILL.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—President McKinley has left a will. The instrument was executed some time before the shooting and at no time during his final suffering was there any wish or occasion to revise it, or to frame a codicil. It leaves the bulk of his property to Mrs. McKinley. How much the estate is worth cannot be stated with exactness by those most familiar with the late president's business affairs, but it is believed to be a goodly sum, although not amounting to a large fortune.

Speaker Henderson's Tribute.

New York, Sept. 15.—David B. Henderson of Iowa, the speaker of the national house of representatives, and Mrs. Henderson, returned on the steamship St. Paul after a two months' trip abroad. Speaker Henderson was very much affected when he heard the news of the death of President McKinley. "The death of President McKinley is a blow to me," he said. "I feel as though I had lost a brother. He was my personal friend, a good man and a great char-

DIED AT HIS POST

Two Trainmen Killed and Three Seriously Injured the Result of the Accident—Venerable Bishop Whipple Critically Ill at His Home in Faribault—Scarcity of Laborers Around Duluth—General State News.

On train No. 66, Engineer W. A. Percy had a shoulder dislocated, Brakeman Colby was thrown a long distance into Vermillion slough and so seriously injured that he may die, and Brakeman H. C. Arne was hurt. He will recover.

At the coroner's inquest Conductor J. D. Trusome of Minneapolis, who was in charge of No. 69, said he received orders at Red Wing to meet No. 66 at Eggleston and No. 70 at East Hastings. He showed these orders to Engineer Saxe, who read them aloud and said he understood them.

When nearing Eggleston the conductor noticed that the train was running faster than it should and he and his head brakeman applied the brakes.

A moment later the crash came. Both engines were demolished and 13 cars ditched. The third car on No. 69 was an empty box car. It jumped clear over the cars ahead of it and the two engines rolled into the ditch 20 feet below.

The general opinion is that Engineer Saxe died from heart failure after leaving Red Wing. He did not blow the whistle nor shut off the steam when approaching Eggleston, and railroad men are confident that he was dead before the collision. His fireman, having never been over the line, could not be expected to notice the engineer's failure to whistle or shut off steam when approaching the station.

BISHOP WHIPPLE ILL.

Venerable Minnesotan in a Critical Condition.

Faribault, Minn., Sept. 16.—Rt. Rev. Henry Benjamin Whipple, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Minnesota, lies dangerously ill at his home here. His condition is so serious that Dr. Rose, his attending physician, has summoned Dr. A. J. Stone of St. Paul.

Bishop Whipple is 79 years of age, and his friends fear the result of his illness. He is suffering from a severe attack of angina pectoris.

Although Dr. Rose says the bishop is slightly improved, his condition is critical and he is not out of danger.

For more than 40 years he has ministered to the people of the diocese and done pioneer work which has given him a place and name not only in the church but in American history.

LABORERS WANTED.

Railroad Contractors Complain of a Scarcity.

Bemidji, Minn., Sept. 12.—The large amount of railroad and logging work to be done in this county this fall and coming winter will demand so many laborers that the contractors are becoming alarmed over the situation, which has been a harassing one all summer. The Minnesota and International has several times had to practically cease construction work, and has not had an average of 100 men at work since the advent of harvest time in Dakota.

NEW MINNESOTA RAILROAD.

Surveyors at Work Between Zumbrota and Minnesota City.

Winona, Sept. 12.—Surveyors have just completed running a line between Zumbrota and Minnesota City, going through Plainview. Engineer Armstrong refuses to give out the name of the road making the survey, but states that the branch just surveyed will be constructed and put in operation in the near future. It is generally believed here that the branch will be a part of the expanded Chicago Great Western.

SIDETRACK ELEVATORS.

Railway Commission Follows Attorney General's Opinion.

St. Paul, Sept. 14.—The railroad and warehouse commission has decided to abide by the ruling of Attorney General Douglas relative to the designation of public elevators, and will require elevators not directly upon railway rights of way, but connected thereby by side tracks, to take out regular state elevator licenses. The decision of the commission will undoubtedly result in a test case.

Northwestern Flour Output.

Minneapolis, Sept. 12.—According to The Northwestern Miller the flour output at Minneapolis last week was 273,920 barrels, compared with 288,470 for the corresponding week last year. Superior and Duluth ground 21,260 barrels, an increase of over 5,000. The week was a dull one for both domestic and foreign flour trade. Practically no new export business was transacted and domestic buyers only took enough flour to satisfy their immediate requirements.

Relic of Early Days Demolished.

Winona, Minn., Sept. 12.—The old band stand in Central park, which has stood there from early days, is no more. During the night a band of boys visited the house and by the use of ropes and saws demolished it completely. An attempt was made to burn it last spring, but the fire department arrived on the scene too quickly for this to be successful.

MRS. M'KINLEY.

a plurality of 80,995, up to that time the record in Ohio.

The policy which Governor McKinley pursued during his four years of occupancy of the gubernatorial chair was outlined when in his inaugural address he said: "It is my desire to co-operate with you in every endeavor to secure a wise, economical and honorable administration and, so far as can be done, the improvement and elevation of the public service."

From the day of his inauguration Governor McKinley took the greatest interest in the management of the public benevolent institutions of the state, and he made a study of means for their betterment. During his first term the state board of arbitration was created, and he made the workings of the board a matter of personal supervision during the entire four years of his administration.

No account of McKinley's connection with labor problems would be complete without some mention of the tireless energy which he displayed in securing relief for the 2,000 miners in the Hocking valley mining district who early in 1895 were reported out of work and destitute. The news first came to the governor one night at midnight, but before 5 o'clock in the morning he had upon his own responsibility dispatched to the afflicted district a car containing $1,000 worth of provisions. Later he made appeals for assistance and finally distributed among the 2,732 families in the district clothing and provisions to the amount of $32,796.95.

McKinley's nomination and election to the presidency in 1896, the stirring events of 1897, culminating in 1898 in the war with Spain, and the acquisition for the first time in this country's history of foreign territory by conquest as well as his re-election, with Theodore Roosevelt as his running mate, in 1900 are events of too recent occurrence to require more than passing mention. With the circumstances surrounding his death, resulting from the bullet of an assassin, fired while Mr. McKinley was receiving at the Pan-American exposition, and his gallant but unsuccessful fight for life the public is but too painfully familiar.

M'KINLEY IS DEAD

THE NATION AGAIN CALLED ON TO MOURN A MARTYRED PRESIDENT.

HIS WIFE AT THE BEDSIDE

LAST CONSCIOUS HOURS ON EARTH DEVOTED TO HER CONSOLATION.

SHOWS GREAT FORTITUDE

THE STRICKEN WOMAN GOES BRAVELY THROUGH THE TRYING SCENE.

Buffalo, Sept. 14.—President McKinley died at 2:15 a. m. He had been unconscious since 7:50 p. m. His last conscious hour on earth was spent with the wife to whom he had devoted a lifetime of care. He died unattended by a minister of the gospel, but his last words were an humble submission to the will of the God in whom he believed. He was reconciled to the cruel fate to which an assassin's bullet had condemned him and faced death in the same spirit of calmness and poise which has marked his long and honorable career." His last conscious words, reduced to writing by Dr. Mann, who stood at his side when they were uttered, were as follows:

"Goodbye, all; goodbye. It is God's way. His will be done."

His relatives and the members of his official family were at the Milburn house, bade him farewell, except Secretary Wilson, who did not avail himself of the opportunity. Some others of his personal and political friends also took leave of him. This painful ceremony was simple. His friends came to the door of the sick room, took a longing glance at him and turned tearfully away. He was practically unconscious during this time. But the powerful heart stimulants, including oxygen, were employed to restore him to consciousness for his Final Parting With His Wife.

He asked for her and she sat at his side and held his hand. He consoled her and bade her goodbye. She went through the heart-trying scene with the same bravery and fortitude with which she has borne the grief of the tragedy which ended his life.

The immediate cause of the president's death is undetermined. His physicians disagree and it will possibly require an autopsy to fix the exact cause. The president's remains will be taken to Washington and there will be a state funeral. Vice President Roosevelt, who now succeeds to the presidency, may take the oath of office wherever he happens to hear the news. The cabinet will, of course, resign in a body, and President Roosevelt will have an opportunity of forming a new cabinet if he so desires.

A noticeable theme of comment was occasioned by the hour at which the death occurred. It partook somewhat of the providential that the event should have come in the dead of night instead of the early evening when the thousands who gathered on the streets of the city were in no tender mood. Had the death come earlier it is possible that the authorities would have had to cope with more or less violence.

The Last Farewells Said.

Before 6 o'clock it was clear to those at the president's bedside that he was dying and preparations were made for the last sad offices of farewell from those who were nearest and dearest to him. Oxygen had been administered steadily but with little effect in keeping back the approach of death. The president came out of one period of unconsciousness only to relapse into another. But in this period, when his mind was partially clear, occurred a series of events of profoundly touching character. Downstairs, with strained and tear-stained faces, members of the cabinet were grouped in anxious waiting. They knew the end was near and that the time had come when they must see him for the last time on earth. This was about 6 o'clock. One by one they ascended the stairway—Secretary Root, Secretary Hitchcock and Attorney General Knox. Secretary Wilson also was there, but he held back, not wishing to see the president in his last agony. There was only a momentary stay of the cabinet officers at the threshold of the death chamber. Then they withdrew, the tears streaming down their faces and the words of intense grief choking in their throats. After they left the sick room the physicians rallied him to consciousness and the president asked almost immediately that his wife be brought to him. The doctors fell back into the shadows of the room as Mrs. McKinley came through the doorway. The strong face of the dying man lighted up with a faint smile as their hands were clasped. She sat beside him and held his hand. Despite her physical weakness she Bore Up Bravely Under the Ordeal.

The president in his last period of consciousness, which ended about 7:40, chanted the words of the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and his last audible conscious words, as taken down by Dr. Mann at the bedside, were:

"Goodbye, all; goodbye. It is God's way. His will be done."

Then his mind began to wander and so he completely lost consciousness. His life was prolonged for hours by the administration of oxygen and the president finally expressed a desire to be allowed to die. About 8:30 the administration of oxygen ceased and the pulse grew fainter and fainter. He was sinking gradually, like a child, into the eternal slumber. By 10 o'clock the pulse could no longer be felt in his extremities and they grew cold.

Below stairs the grief-stricken gathering waited sadly for the end. All the evening those who had hastened here fast as steel and steam could carry them continued to arrive. They drove up in carriages at a gallop or were whisked up in automobiles, all intent upon getting here before death came. One of the last to arrive was Attorney General Knox, who reached the house at 9:30. He was permitted to go upstairs to

upon the face of his chief. Those in the house at this time were Secretaries Hitchcock, Wilson and Root, Senators Fairbanks, Hanna and Burrows, Judge Day, Colonel Herrick, Abner McKinley, the president's brother, and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Baer, the president's niece and her husband; Mrs. Barber and Mrs. Duncan, the president's sisters; Mrs. Mary Barber, Mrs. McWilliams, Mrs. McKinley's cousin; the physicians, including Dr. McBurney, who arrived after 8 o'clock; John G. Milburn, John N. Scatcherd, Harry Hamlin, all of this city; Secretary Cortelyou and a number of others. Rev. C. D. Wilson, a Methodist minister of Tonawanda, N. Y., who was the president's pastor for three years at Canton, called at the residence to inquire whether his services were needed, but did not enter the house. Another Methodist minister who has a church near by remained at the Milburn residence for two hours in the belief that his services might be desired. At 9:37 Secretary Cortelyou, who had been much of the time with his dying chief, sent out formal notification that the president was dying. But the president lingered on, his pulse growing fainter and fainter. There was no need for official bulletins after this. Those who came from the house at intervals told the same story—that and that the end might come at any time. His tremendous vitality was the only remaining factor in the result, and this gave hope only of brief postponement of the end. Dr. Mynter thought he might last until 2 a. m. Dr. Mann said at 11 o'clock that the president was still alive and probably would live an hour. Thus minutes lengthened to hours and midnight came with the president still battling against death. At this midnight hour the Milburn house was the center of a scene as animated as though it were midday, although a solemn hush hung over the great crowd of watchers. The entire lower part of the house was aglow with light and the many attendants, friends and relatives could be seen moving about and occasionally coming in groups to the front doorway for a breath of air. In the upper front chambers the lights were low and around on the north side, where the chamber of death is located, there were fitful lights, some burning brightly and then turned low.

Secretary Root and Secretary Wilson came from the house about midnight and paced up and down the sidewalk. All that Secretary Root said was: "The night has not come yet." Despite the fact that vitality continued to ebb as midnight approached no efforts were spared to Keep the Spark of Life Glowing.

Dr. Janeway of New York city arrived at the depot at 11:40 o'clock. George Urban was waiting for him and they drove at a breakneck pace to the Milburn house. He was shown to the president's room at once and began an examination of the almost inanimate form. Secretary of the Navy Long arrived at the Milburn house at 12:06 o'clock. This was his first visit to the city and he had the extreme satisfaction of seeing the president alive, even though he was not conscious of his visitor's presence. Secretary Long was visibly affected.

Shortly after midnight the president's breathing was barely perceptible. His pulse had practically ceased and the extremities were cold. It was recognized that nothing remained but the last struggle, and some of the friends of the family who had remained through the day began to leave the house, not caring to be present at the final scene.

Such an intense state of anxiety existed among the watchers that rumors gained frequent circulation that death had already actually occurred. The arrival of the coroner gave rise to one such rumor and a flood of groundless dispatches were sent saying that the end had come. These were speedily set at rest by an official statement from within the house that the reports of death were premature.

About 2 o'clock Dr. Rixey noticed the unmistakeable signs of dissolution and the immediate members of the family were summoned to the bedside. Mrs. McKinley was asleep and it was deemed desirable not to awaken her for the last moments of anguish.

Silently and sadly the members of the family stole into the room. They stood about the foot and sides of the bed where the great man's life was ebbing away. Those in the circle were: Abner McKinley, the president's brother; Mrs. Abner McKinley; Miss Helen, the president's sister; Sarah Duncan, another sister; Miss Mary Barber, a niece; Miss Sarah Duncan; Lieutenant J. F. McKinley, a nephew; William M. Duncan, a nephew; Charles G. Dawes, former comptroller of the currency; F. M. Osborne, a cousin; Colonel Webb C. Hayes; John Barber, a nephew; Secretary George B. Cortelyou; Colonel W. C. Brown, the business partner of Abner McKinley; Dr. P. M. Rixey, the family physician, and six nurses and attendants.

In an adjoining room sat the physicians, including Doctors McBurney, Wasdin, Parke, Stockton and Mynter.

It was now 2:05 o'clock and the

A NATION'S SORROW.

President McKinley is dead.

Such was the gruesome message which greeted a watching nation as it arose from restless slumbers Saturday morning, Sept. 14, 1901—a day that will go down in history laden with the memory of the tears and prayers—yes, the imprecations—of a great people. After the first awful shock of the tragedy, when hope was almost gone, the seemingly uninterrupted progress of President McKinley from death's door to convalescence, was the signal for universal rejoicing, and indeed, plans were already in process of formulation for a fitting observance of the event of his recovery. Higher and higher swelled the tide of national thanksgiving, for the prayers of a grateful people were not to await a formal signal. But suddenly, on Friday, the 13th, the news was flashed of a relapse, of apprehension, and of grave danger. Suspense, born of alternating torrents of hope and fear: a longing to extend a hand of succor--a hand electrified and made wondrous strong by that union in which there is strength:—all beating more futilely against the shores of fate than beat the mighty ocean waves against the unchanging rocks. Saturday at 2:15, the president died. Died with these Christ-like words upon his lips: "It is God's way. His will be done."

Ours is to-day a saddened, chastened nation, thus cruelly robbed of a president whose wisdom, second only to his goodness had become recognized the world around; with the stricken wife, who has depended so entirely upon his watchful care, the nation weeps today beside the bier of the fallen chief.

For less than five years he had been president; but momentous was that period: from financial chaos was evolved wonderful commercial and industrial progress; the United States became a world-power; and through the war with Spain the man of peace developed the genius of a war god: the bark of state encountered dangerous waters; but his safe hand, directed by his mellow judgment, rode her grandly through. Long before he was president had he achieved greatness; and it was a greatness that ever grew more lustrous, illumined not only by his civic and military successes, but by a personal character which has had few equals and no superiors among all the world's great men, who have gone before. As a citizen, soldier, statesman he occupied an exalted place; as a man in the relations of husband, son, brother, his life will ever be a model for American manhood. And his achievements in all other lines can not outweigh the infinite good that has been done by his personal example. When other soldiers, other statesmen, come and with God-given power draw upon themselves the admiring plaudits of our nation, when the civic and military achievements of William McKinley are, as they will be, commingled in history with theirs, and with those or other illustrious dead, the lustre of his personal grandeur will stand out alone. Mothers, in countless years to come will point him out as a model, while wives will ever bless his name. As an example of the highest development of the ideal in man, our martyred president's fame will ever endure—embalmed in the unperishable gratitude and love of the American people.

The world's peace has lost a powerful advocate; the ship of state an unerring pilot; the engine of commerce and business a master mind; the nation a safe and trusted, a worthy chief; but the home, the mother heart, beating with mingled pride and expectancy for the son; and the wife, to whom the love of a good husband is life itself—for these the seal had been set forever in the life of William McKinley, long before the assassin's bullet had laid him low.

President McKinley's last speech was delivered at Buffalo the day before the tragedy. His words, relating to the enduring influence of the spirit of the exposition might be more aptly applied to his own achievements:

> "To make it live beyond its > too short living
> With praises and thanksgiving."

And the last words of his last speech show sentiments to which may be attributed the world-wide reverence with which he was regarded; at peace with all the world, and with God's name reverently upon his lips, it could not have been more beautifully if advisedly spoken:

"Our earnest prayer is that God will graciously vouchsafe prosperity, happiness and peace to all our neighbors and like blessings to all the peoples and powers of earth."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Theodore Roosevelt assumed the office of chief executive by virtue of the constitution, immediately upon the death of the president. His first utterance as to his policy was made immediately after he took the oath of office, and was to the effect that the policy of president McKinley would be continued unbroken. Nothing the new president could have said would have been as high a tribune to the martyred chief, nor given a stronger assurance to the American people of the sound judgment of the man on whom the gravest responsibitities now rest. That Roosevelt enjoyed the confidence of the people before is unquestioned, but there can be no mistake as to how this confidence has been strengthened by his timely statement.

Facts and Fancies.

At Wausau, Wis., S. Haskin, in a saloon, is said to have remarked that "he was glad that McKinley was dead." Don Finney, who is said to have overheard the remark, it is alleged, whipped out a knife and stabbed Haskin. But for the interference of the proprietor, who made Finney desist by pointing a gun at him, Haskin would have been killed.

State Superintendent Olson yesterday issued a circular letter to school authorities throughout the state requesting them to have the national flag display at half mast from all school buildings until after the president's funeral. It was not necessary for the loyal Red Lake county school teachers to receive this order. The flags have been at half mast since last Saturday.

Fire broke out in the round house of the Minnesota and International railroad at Bemidji at about 5:30 Monday morning, entirely destroying the coal dock and the round house. The round house is about a mile south of town and the flames were beyond control before the Bemidji fire department could reach the scene. Two locomotives were also destroyed, but the coal sheds were saved by the department.

This week we have experienced a fore-taste of winter. Stoves have been put up, old pipes that six months ago were cast disdainfully aside as if never again to be needed, are again treated with due respect whenever one is fortunate enough to find them; the wood pile is hurriedly inventoried and with shuddering submission we settle down to await the onslaughts of winter, hoping in the meantime that the Indian Summer will last through a somewhat longer period than usual. After the stove is up and the cheerful fire crackles, we will forget the unpleasant anticipations and realize the winter season has its attractions and enjoyments too.

Marshall county, Minn., showed up well at the Minnesota state fair. Hugh Parr of Argyle was awarded first premiums on Blue Stem, Red Fife, White Fife, and Scotch Fife wheat, flax and Hungarian grass, and second on Brome grass. This is a very nice list of premiums for one man.

John Patterson, of Bemidji, went down the Mississippi river to spend a few weeks in search of pearls among the clam beds. He has a complete pearl finding and clam cleaning outfit, besides tent and boat. He has already found one pearl worth $200, and his success has given him a touch of the pearl fever.

Death of Mrs. Joseph Lachance.

The curtain fell on the sad scene at the home of Joseph Lachance, at 12 o'clock Sunday night, when his beloved wife, who had lain on a bed of sickness for many months passed from earth through the Valley of the Shadow of Death. Mrs. Lachance had been a sufferer with consumption for over a year, and months ago it was not thought she could survive many days. The case is especially a sad one, and her devoted husband, whose tender care and solicitude has been her mainstay, has the sympathy of many sorrowing friends. Married but a short time ago, on January, 17, 1900, their ideal home life, in the cozy dwelling which the groom had built and furnished for his bride, was to be of all-too brief duration.

The funeral, which occurred Tuesday morning, was under the auspices of the Catholic Order of Foresters, of which both Mr. Lachance and his lamented wife were members. The pall bearers were Messrs. Theo. LaBissoniere, A. E. Garceau, J. P. Harren, Thos. Crompe, W.T. Spillane and Joseph Tschirhart. The honorary pall bearers, representing the Women's C. O. F., were Mesdames Geo. Marchand, Ed. Bray, Misses Melvina Allard and Jennie LaBissoniere. Members of the orders marched from C. O. F. hall to the dwelling, and formed an escort to St. Joseph's church, where a requiem mass was sung, the music being most impressive. The remains were interred in St. Joseph's cemetery on the North Side.

Delia Demarais was born 22 years ago, and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Demarais, who are among our pioneer settlers. She was of an unusually happy disposition, and attracted to herself many warm friends. She was an active worker in St. Joseph's congregation, a member of St. Anne's Society, and a member of the Women's Catholic Order of Foresters.

Something over a year ago she contracted a severe cold which developed into consumption.

Card of Thanks.

In this, my time of sorrow, it is with a heart full of gratitude that I turn to my kind friends to tell them how deeply I appreciate all that they have done for my beloved wife in her last illness, and for me. Especially do I wish to thank members of the men's and womens's Catholic Order of Foresters, whose kind administrations will never be forgotten.

Joseph Lachanec.

Astounded The Editor:

Editor S. A. Brown, of Bennettaville, S. C., was once immensely surprised. "Through long suffering from Dyspepsia," he writes, "my wife was greatly run down. She had no strength or vigor and suffered great distress from her stomach, but she tried Electric Bitters which helped her at once, and, after using four bottles, she is entirely well, can eat anything. It's a grand tonic, and its gentle laxative qualities are splendid for torpid liver." For indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Stomach and Liver troubles it's a positive, guarenteed cure. Only 50c at W. A. THEO. LaBISSONIERE

ROMANCE OF A BANK BOOK.

Story of a Savings Account That Had Lain Dormant for Many Years.

The Bank for Savings, which is 82 years old, has the heaviest dormant account in New York, about $300,000, in which 2,000 accounts are tied up, reports the Press, of that city. Of these the ownership of about 200 are solved each year, and to this account are added about 50, which, after the lapse of 21 years without being touched, are entitled to enter the dormant class. But in these days the bank does not allow accounts to rest so long, and after ten years have elapsed a search is made and the depositors located. After that the bank keeps informed of their whereabouts each year. In 1819, the year when the bank first opened its doors, a church mission in New York made a deposit in the name of "Mission of Jerusalem." The amount deposited was small, but it was 61 years before that amount and interest was paid to the proper church authorities.

"One of the oddest cases which I have seen since I took hold of this work," says Mr. De Lisser, of the Bank for Savings, "was that of a colored girl who lived four miles from Jamaica. The pastor of the family while making a call one day saw the children playing with a soiled and torn bank book. They had scribbled over the leaves and were tossing the book about. No one in the family seemed to understand what the book was, and the pastor looking at it and seeing that it was one of our pass books, advised them to bring it to the bank. The girl, who was 17 or 18 years old, brought it to me, and on looking up the account I saw that it called for several hundred dollars, deposited by a woman who afterward proved to be the girl's grandmother. Eventually the girl got the money, and the incident, I thought, was closed. But several months afterward she came in and said: 'I was just goin' by, and I thought I'd drop in and tell you how much good that money did us. And, say, do you know, I've just been married on it.' And she left, beaming all over as I congratulated her."

COST OF A ROYAL KITCHEN.

The Immense Sums That Are Spent by the British Sovereign Every Year.

It is said that King Edward of Great Britain proposes to economize a little in his household expenses and will make a raid upon the costly royal kitchens in his palaces, says a London exchange. The one at Windsor is by no means the most costly. Nevertheless it contains nearly $10,000 worth of copper and $35,000 worth of silver and silver-plated utensils. George III. expended $30,000 upon the fittings, which are mostly of black oak, and apart from their historical interest have greatly decreased in value.

Soon after his accession to the throne the czar laid out $400,000 in remodeling and furnishing the imperial kitchens at the winter palaces, St. Petersburg. All the cooking utensils are of solid silver, and include 40 stewing pans, none of which could be purchased under $200 apiece.

The spice boxes are of solid gold, engraved with the imperial arms, and the ranges and ovens are edged with silver. The actual cost of building the kitchen was $120,000, the purest black marble being used throughout, and the decorations were responsible for an outlay of $25,000.

Among the cooking utensils should be mentioned 3,000 silver spoons and a gold gridiron that belonged to the great Catherine. The chief cook draws a salary of $40,000 a year, and he has subordinates in receipt of salaries ranging between $5,000 and $7,500, to say nothing of hundreds of supernumeraries. Altogether the czar's kitchen expends about $600,000 per annum.

HARSH-VOICED CANARIES.

They Are Not Allowed by German Experts to Stay with the More Promising Singers.

"Moulting is the crucial time for a canary's voice," writes Ida Shaper Hoxie in an article on "The Singing Village of Germany," in Ladies' Home Journal. "Some birds lose the little that they have; others, of course, blossom out into promising singers. As soon as a harsh tone is heard, out goes that unfortunate bird, for promising singers must never hear a harsh chirp. When I asked what became of the unfortunates I was told by the fanciers: 'Oh, we sell them, of course. You know they can sing in a way, and many people don't know the difference between a good singer and a bad one.' My mind went back to a certain canary I had had to live with once in America! I wondered what percentage of these outcasts, who are huddled together in a cage out of hearing of the more favored birds and allowed to chirp as they please, go to America. One of the men who devotes all his time to the canaries allowed me to spend several hours among his birds. I sat a long while trying to analyze the exquisite sounds that came from a dozen tiny cages with closed fronts hanging high on the wall. I could have gone to sleep had I chosen—the trilling was so soft and sweet, not at all like the songs of the lusty-throated American birds."

A Delicate Trade.

The trade of artificial fly making is the lightest fingered business in the world, and it is not one man or woman out of 5,000 who can learn to tie flies. These flyers are remarkable for the beauty and delicacy of their hands, and only the cleverest of fingers can deal with the "niggling" work of knotting hairs that can hardly be seen.

CANADIAN WHEAT.

Receipts at Duluth From Manitoba Are Large.

Duluth, Sept. 14.—A good deal of Canadian wheat is coming in here now in bond for Eastern shipment and for export. The receipts of Manitoba and Northwest province grain this year will probably be larger than any year in the past, but may cease with this season, as the Canadian Northern will be able to handle this to Port Arthur another season.

All employment agencies are short of men and most of them are unable to fill any large portion of the orders they are receiving now. There seems to be an insistent demand for labor and a very slack supply. It is expected that with the return of the harvest hands there will be a better supply, but most of these men will go at once to the woods or to railway construction at points adjacent to Duluth.

GOT HEAVY DAMAGES.

Duluth Milliner Awarded $2,000 for Breach of Promise.

Duluth, Sept. 14.—Miss Catherine Alward, a local milliner, was awarded a verdict of $2,000 in the district court in her suit against Isaac Green, a street car conductor, for breach of promise.

About a year ago Green and Miss Alward were to be married, but a few days before the ceremony the man told her that he had changed his mind and had concluded to marry an old love in Canada. He did so and several months later Miss Alward brought suit. She asserted that her wounded feelings, disappointment and cost of trousseau were worth $2,000 and the jury awarded her a verdict after 10 minutes' deliberation. She is 25 years old.

ASK STRINGENT LAWS.

Meeting of Condolence and Thanksgiving at Duluth.

Duluth, Sept. 14.—Four thousand people assembled at the armory to listen to speeches of condolence and thanksgiving for President McKinley and condemnation of anarchy. Congressman Morris, Former United States Senator Sabin, Bishops McGolrick and Morrison and others were the speakers. At the conclusion resolutions were adopted calling upon lawmakers of the city, state and nation, to enact adequate legislation to control inflammatory oratory against the government, the exclusion of anarchists from the United States and the death penalty for any person assaulting the president or vice president of the United States.

SCHOOLMATE OF CZOLGOSZ.

Duluth Man Says Assassin Was of a Retiring Nature.

Duluth, Sept. 12.—Roman G. Doyas, a local confectioner, went to school with Leon Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, at Alpena, Mich., 19 years ago. In speaking of the anarchist, Mr. Doyas said:

"It was wholly unlike him. When a mere boy at school he was of the quietest disposition imaginable and had but few companions. I was one of them, however, and we were in each other's company much. I never knew Leon to engage in a fight and as far as I know he never had one. He was not a coward by any means, but he always avoided a fight if he could do so with good grace."

SENATOR ALLISON'S TRIBUTE.

McKinley One of the Strongest and Greatest of Our Presidents.

Dubuque, Ia., Sept. 15.—"President McKinley's loss will be deplored not only in every home of our country, but in all lands where our history is studied," said Senator Allison, speaking of the death of President McKinley. "He was beloved by all who came within his benign influence and he possessed a gentleness and kindness rarely found among men, always thoughtful and responsive to every demand made upon him if in his power to help. Lovable in character, in every social relation, earnest for the good and glory of his country and countrymen and vigilant in his high place for the promotion of both. He was, take him all in all, one of the strongest and greatest of our presidents. As popular veneration for his character and intellect increased, so these grew stronger and stronger as the demand made upon their strength increased and as the months and years passed by."

SAVED THREE LIVES.

Heroic Action of Fourteen-Year-Old John Airis of Janesville, Wis.

Janesville, Wis., Sept. 14.—John Airis, the 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Airis, is being praised as a hero because of the rescue of three persons who were drowning in Rock river. He saved the lives of Mrs. Frank Peters, her daughter, Pearl Peters, aged 1–, and Fanny Litts, aged 11. The girls were in wading when suddenly Mrs. Peters saw both step into a deep hole and sink out of sight. She ran to the river, plunged into the water with all her clothing on and she too went down. Young Airis then came to the rescue. He jumped in, and, with great effort, succeeded in bringing all three to shore.

Miss Morrison Now at Liberty.

Lansing, Kan., Sept. 13.—Jessie Morrison, who was sent to the penitentiary here for five years for killing Mrs. Clara Wiley Castle, her rival, at Eldorado, was released during the day. She appeared well and happy and alone boarded a car for Excelsior Springs, Mo., where she will join her brother before going home to her parents. Miss Morrison was released on bond pending an appeal of her case to the state supreme court.

Poured Kerosene on the Fire.

Delavan, Wis., Sept. 13.—Lizzie Endrich, a nurse at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Howison of Chicago, was burned to death, and Hilda Nelson, a cook, was fatally burned, the result of an explosion of kerosene caused by pouring oil from a 5-gallon can on a live fire.

M'KINLEY

His Rise From Schoolteacher to President.

Sketch of the Career of the Third Chief Executive of the United States to Fall Victim to the Assassin's Bullet.

THE LATE WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Long and honorable was the public career of William McKinley. It extended from the time when, as a mere stripling, he held sway in a log cabin country school to the tragic moment when, as chief executive of the nation, he was felled by the assassin's bullet. During all that time his record suffered neither blot nor blemish. He was tested as a soldier, as a lawyer, as a politician, as a statesman, as the head of the nation. In each case he stood the test.

In private life he began by being a manly boy, a dutiful and obedient son. He continued as a faithful and loving husband, one whose example has had its good effect on the national character. His life was typically American, the life of an American of the best type. And through it all he was a patriot. Above personal ambition were ever in his mind his country and his country's good.

McKinley as a Boy.

William McKinley came from that dominant race that has furnished this nation with some of its greatest soldiers and statesmen. He was Scotch-Irish by descent, and his ancestors immigrated to this country early enough to have sons who took a patriotic part in the war of the Revolution.

The family removed from Pennsylvania to Ohio in 1814, and from that day has been identified with that state not in a great public way, but simply as faithful and devoted citizens, not striving for particular eminence, but notable for sturdiness of character and integrity.

It was among such people and of them that William McKinley was born at Niles, in Trumbull county, O., Feb. 26, 1844.

A younger son, he was destined by his father, after whom he was named, for the bar. He was educated at the public schools, and later entered Allegheny college at Meadville, Pa., teaching school to pay his tuition fees. Scarcely was he matriculated when the civil war came on. He was but a stripling of nineteen when he entered as a private.

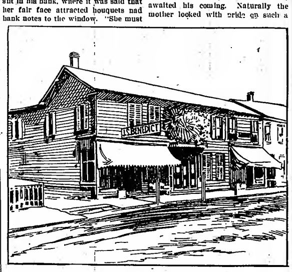
McKinley, as those who remember him as a boy in Poland, O., declare, was a real boy, full of fun, loving athletic sports, fond of horses and hunting and fishing and all outdoor exercise, and yet at 16 we find him taking upon himself a serious view of life. The church records show that in 1858, when he was hardly 16, he united with the Methodist Episcopal church of Poland.

McKinley's father was an iron manufacturer and a pioneer in that business. William was his third son, the eldest being David, the second James and the youngest Abner.

McKinley's mother was alert and vigorous, mentally and physically, up to the time of her death, which occurred when she was nearly ninety years of age.

As a Husband.

Major McKinley's home life was very happy despite the fact that his wife was an invalid. Mrs. McKinley was Miss Ida Saxton, daughter of James and Mary Saxton of Canton, O. She received an excellent education when a girl, spent some time abroad and became her father's assistant in his bank, where it was said that her fair face attracted bouquets and bank notes to the window. "She must be trained," said her father, "to buy her own bread if necessary, and not to sell herself to matrimony."



M'KINLEY'S BIRTHPLACE.

She had many suitors, but Major McKinley, then a rising young lawyer, vanquished all rivalry, removed the young woman from the cashier's window and won from honest James Saxton these words when the hand of the daughter was gained:

"You are the only man I have ever known to whom I would intrust my daughter."

Mrs. McKinley always assisted her husband in politics. Her ill health in nowise deterred her from enjoying the political honors he won, nor did it prevent her from being a wise counselor. Her presence time and again served as an inspiration to her husband. When political preferment first came to McKinley, it was his wife who convinced him that he should accept. She believed implicitly in his talents, and that his service would be for the good of the state she was certain. She never wavered in her faith in her husband's convictions.

Mrs. McKinley had confidence in her husband not only as a public official, but as a man. Her illness was often overcome by her affection, and she traveled thousands of miles when she was weak in body merely that she might be near him. She encouraged him by word, look and presence, and he in knightly style returned the favors and reciprocated the sacred affection. Her home life was short, for out of the thirty years of married life more than twenty-four were passed by her husband in the public service.

Mrs. McKinley for years has spent much of her leisure in crocheting those dainty little slippers which have so many times brought sunshine into gloomy hospital wards in various parts of the country. It is said that she has knitted over 5,000 pairs of these slippers in her twenty-six years of invalid life. In appearance Mrs. McKinley is of medium height, with brown hair and large deep blue eyes. Although an invalid, she was fond of making and receiving calls and often went on shopping tours. Mrs. McKinley never cared much for dress, although her toilets have always been in excellent taste.

For many years Mrs. McKinley's face has betrayed a faint languor, suggestive of the invalid, but it is fair and bears a stamp of beauty, in spite of the fifty-five years she carries. Her ill health dates from girlhood. As a student she with difficulty undertook the studies of the course, by reason of this condition, but with constant care and frequent medical attention she overcame all trouble sufficiently to enjoy life and to taste of its pleasures. Her actual invalidism dates from the birth of her second child, in 1871. This child died in its infancy and was followed by the first child, a daughter of three years, a short time afterward. Mrs. Saxton, Mrs. McKinley's mother, also died about this time. These sorrows were more than she could bear, and she never recovered.

As a Son.

A little story of McKinley's home acts while governor may be of interest. No less than his attention to his wife, his thought and care for his mother, particularly since his father's death in 1892, have attracted comment. It had been his custom while at home in Canton to take his mother to church each Sunday morning. When he went to Columbus as governor, he determined to keep up the practice as much as possible, and unless the press of public business was very great he always slipped quietly over to Canton from the state capital on Sunday mornings and walked to church with his mother on his arm. The next train would carry him to Columbus, where his wife awaited his coming. Naturally the mother looked with pride on such a son, and she followed with keen interest the progress of his first presidential canvass.

McKinley as a Soldier.

Young McKinley had been a keen observer, so far as his opportunities went, of the political events that culminated in the firing on Fort Sumter. The call of the president for troops found a quick response in his breast, and when the drums and fifes aroused the echoes of the quiet streets of Poland among the first applicants for enlistment was William McKinley, Jr.

It was a new experience and a new school that the eighteen-year-old boy entered, this school of war, but he had wonderful teachers. It was his good fortune that assigned him to the Twenty-third Ohio. The recruits that composed it were in June, 1861, mustered and formed into a regiment. Its first colonel was William S. Rosecrans, afterward major general commanding the department of the Cumberland. Second in command was Stanley Matthews, who was a splendid soldier, but won his greatest honors in civil life by becoming United States senator and justice of the United States supreme court, and Rutherford B. Hayes, afterward governor of Ohio and president of the United States. These are a few of the illustrious men who were borne on the roll of officers of the gallant regiment in which marched Private William McKinley, Jr.

He carried the musket for fourteen months; then he was promoted. But he won his promotion honestly. His comrades of the rank and file bear testimony to the fact that he was a good soldier; that he performed every duty devolving upon him with fidelity and intelligence and without complaint. They congratulated him, therefore, when he was made commissary sergeant of the regiment. Later, after Antietam, he was made a second lieutenant, and the Mahoning county boy had risen from the ranks.

He was now to all intents and purposes a trained veteran. He had had his baptism in blood at Carnifex Ferry. He had gone through the West Virginia campaign and become a part of the magnificent Army of the Potomac under McClellan. South Mountain and Antietam had been made immortal by the blood of heroes, and the shoulder straps were worn with a due but not exaggerated realization of the responsibilities they implied. He became a second lieutenant on Sept. 24, 1862. He was promoted to first lieutenant Feb. 7, 1863. His commission as captain bears date July 25, 1864.

The brevet rank of major was conferred by President Lincoln "for gallant and meritorious services at the battles of Opequan, Fisher's Creek and Cedar Hill." He was with Sheridan in the Shenandoah campaign, was at Winchester, Cedar Creek, Fisher's Hill, Opequan, Kernstown, Floyd Mountain and Berryville, where his horse was shot under him, and in all the battles in which the Twenty-third participated. He served on the staffs of Generals Hayes, Crook, Hancock and Carroll. He was mustered out with the regiment July 26, 1865, after more than four years' continuous service.

McKinley as a Lawyer.

When the war closed, McKinley was just twenty-two. He was full of youthful enthusiasm and ardor, and he returned to his home in Ohio fully expecting to accept the flattering offer made him of a commission in the regular army. But to this his parents offered strong opposition. They pointed out the small rewards that come to the soldier in time of peace. At length he yielded to their persuasions and reluctantly gave up his dreams of martial glory and bent his mind upon the pursuits of peace. The war had ended all thought of a collegiate career. He cast about for a profession, and naturally, considering the bent of his mind, he chose the law. He became a student in the offices of Charles E. Glidden and David Wilson, then leaders of the Mahoning county bar. He supplemented his reading by taking the course at the Albany Law school and in 1867 was admitted to the bar. He located at Canton, where he formed a partnership with Judge Belden.

He was an excellent advocate, even in those early days, and made some of the best jury arguments ever heard at the Stark county bar. At the time he was first elected to congress he enjoyed one of the best general practices in the county.

As a lawyer Mr. McKinley was always thorough and careful in the preparation of cases. He had the confidence of everybody and soon became particularly prominent as an advocate. He prepared himself by thorough courses of reading for his public career. He resembled Garfield much in this respect and possessed elements of strength by reason of his thorough study of political subjects. He seems to have had in view from the beginning the devotion of his life to public service. During all his early professional years he was an active participant in Republican campaigns and early gave evidence of the power he later developed as a public speaker and orator. The plan of his political speaking was always the same. He first thoroughly mastered the subject in hand and then presented it forcibly.

As a Statesman.

Major McKinley was but thirty-three years old when he was elected by the people of his district to represent them in congress. There he soon made his mark and was returned at each subsequent election until that of 1890, in which year a change in the boundaries of his district defeated him by a majority of only 302.

While in congress he served on the committee on revision of laws, the judiciary committee, the committee on expenditures in the postoffice department and the committee on rules. When General Garfield received the nomination for the presidency, Mr. McKinley was assigned to the vacancy on the committee on ways and means. He served on the last mentioned committee until the expiration of his last term as representative. While chairman of this committee he framed the McKinley bill, which afterward became a law.

McKinley was a protege of ex-President Hayes, and up to the time of the latter's death he recognized the ex-president as his adviser and counselor.

MR. M'KINLEY'S FATHER.

He was in General Hayes' regiment during the civil war. General Hayes knew him and his father well, and saw in the dashing young cavalier the germ of greatness. He needed a counselor, an adviser, a friend, and General Hayes watched over him with the filial love, devotion and pride of a father.

The war ended, McKinley still remained an object of hope, of interest and pride to General Hayes. McKinley became a candidate for congress and was elected. When Hayes was president, McKinley was in the house of representatives. The major was a frequent welcome visitor at the White House. One day the president gave McKinley advice which made McKinley the foremost champion of a protective tariff. President Hayes thus spoke to the young representative:

"To achieve success and fame you must pursue a special line. You must not make a speech on every motion offered or bill introduced. You must confine yourself to one particular thing. Become a specialist. Take up some branch of legislation and make that your study. Why not take up the subject of tariff? Being a subject that will not be settled for years to come, it offers a great field for study and a chance for ultimate fame."

With these words ringing in his ears McKinley began studying the tariff and soon became the foremost authority on the subject.

The McKinley Bill.

The day upon which the "McKinley tariff bill" was passed in the house must always stand as the supreme moment of McKinley's congressional career. The bill, by adroit parliamentary generalship which had prevented it from being weighed down with amendments not approved by the committee, had been brought under the operation of the previous question. It stood complete, ready to go forth for good or evil. Upon McKinley devolved the task of smoothing its path and speeding it upon its way.

The occasion, thoroughly advertised, attracted to the capitol an immense throng. The galleries were one mass of humanity, and the anticipation of the vote had compelled the attendance of every member. As usual, McKinley spoke without notes. His voice, penetrating but not harsh, filled the chamber. Every sentence was distinctly heard. Never was an orator more free from the ordinary claptrap than McKinley. So true is this that the incident when he suddenly drew from beneath his desk the suit of clothes which he purchased for $10 at the establishment of a fellow representative in Boston, in order to demonstrate the cheapness of wearing apparel, stands out with vivid distinctness.

MR. M'KINLEY'S MOTHER.

It was this earnestness and self conviction that made McKinley's address in the house and on the stump so effective. Indeed the occasion is still recalled when he held an audience of Georgia people for two hours at a Chautauqua assembly near Atlanta while he preached to them the glories of the protective tariff system. "It was only by the greatest self control," said the late Henry W. Grady, speaking of this event afterward, "that I restrained myself from rising as McKinley concluded his wonderful speech and declaring myself henceforth ready to follow him as a disciple."

James G. Blaine in his "Twenty Years of Congress" reviewed the Forty-fifth congress, in which McKinley first sat, as follows: "William McKinley, Jr., entered from the Canton district. He enlisted in an Ohio regiment when but 17 years old and won the rank of major by meritorious service. The interest of his constituency and his own bent of mind led him to the study of industrial questions, and he was soon recognized in the house as one of the most thorough statisticians and one of the ablest defenders of the doctrine of protection."

At a great mass meeting in Indianapolis several years ago the late ex-President Harrison was presiding officer. McKinley was one of the speakers, and Harrison introduced him as follows:

"He has endeared himself to all by his record as a gallant young soldier battling for the flag. He has honored himself, his state and the country by his conspicuous services in high legislative and executive places. No man more than he is familiar with the questions that now engage public thought. No man is more able than he lucidly to set them before the people. I do not need to invoke your attention to what he shall say. He will command it."

As Governor and President.

The sentiment which resulted in the nomination of McKinley for governor of Ohio was engendered immediately upon the announcement of the result of the election of 1890, when after fourteen years' continuous service in congress the Ohio statesman was defeated for re-election.

During his gubernatorial campaign in 1893 McKinley visited eighty six of the eighty-eight counties of Ohio and made 130 speeches. He was elected by

MY CAPTIVE.

BY JOSEPH A. ALTSHELER

AUTHOR OF "A SOLDIER OF MANHATTAN" "THE SUN OF SARATOGA" ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY JOSEPH A. ALTSHELER.

He wagged his head as a sign that my apology was sufficient and made no further protest. I slipped the bridle over his head, and the girl broke into a nervous laugh of relief.

"Did you think Old Put would desert a comrade?" I asked.

"Wait here just a moment," I continued. I led Old Put a little distance, and gathering up some dry leaves wiped the stains off his hoofs. Then I returned with him to her and told her to jump upon his back, but the horse shied away from her, showing aversion and anger.

"Never mind, Old Put," I said. "It is all right. She won't beat you again. She likes us both."

"It seems to me that you are rather inclusive in your statements," she said.

"Get up," I said, and, giving her a hand, I assisted her to jump upon the back of Old Put, who had received my explanation with perfect confidence and assumed a protecting air toward her.

"And now once more for Morgan," I said.

"Which, of course, means Tarleton in the end," she said. "And I want to say, Mr. Marcel, that when the rebel army is taken I shall not forget the service that you have done me at a great risk to yourself. My father has influence with Colonel Tarleton, and I shall ask him to secure your good treatment while in captivity."

She spoke with quite an English—that is to say, quite a patronizing—air.

"You are very kind," I said, "but Morgan has not been caught yet, has he, Old Put?"

The old horse shook his head defiantly, and I felt encouraged. We had entered a good country for traveling and at last came into something that was meant evidently for a road, but it very much more resembled a gully washed out by the rains. It led in the right direction, and I followed it, despite my persuasion that we were now in territory practically occupied by the British and were much more likely to meet them in the road than in the fields or forest. But I was tired of such difficult traveling, and, being extremely anxious to rejoin Morgan, I chose the course which promised the best speed.

Old Put carried the girl, and I walked on before, holding his bridle in my hand. I sank into a kind of walking doze—that is, I slept on my feet and with my feet moving. I was but dimly conscious, but I knew that I could put my trust in Old Put and that he would warn me if she made any attempt to escape. Whether the girl was asleep or wide awake I knew not, for my brain was too tired and dull then to tell me; but, looking back once, she seemed to be awake. She had slept well in the hut, while only a short nap had fallen to me.

We were in the darkest hours, those that stretch out their length between midnight and dawn, and I walked on over a dim and shadowy world. Sometimes I was not conscious that my feet touched anything but air. This queer feeling that I was walking on nothing lasted for more than half an hour, and then my half sleep took another phase. I came back to earth, and the red clay of the road took on for awhile the color of blood. The trees by the roadside raced past, rows of phantoms, holding out withered arms and making gestures that I did not understand. Once the dead face of Crowder rose up out of the road and confronted me, but when I said, "You were a murderer and worse and compelled me to kill you," and walked boldly at him he melted away like so much smoke, and I laughed aloud at such a poor kind of a ghost that would run at the first fire.

I awoke with a jerk and replied:

"At your gratitude."

But I was on the verge of sleep again in five minutes, and the trees and the hills and the bushes were playing new tricks with me. The bushes were especially impudent, nodding to me and then to each other and then saying aloud:

"Here he goes! Look at him—making a fool of himself and wasting his time over an English girl who hates him and all his countrymen!"

I picked up a stone, threw it at one excessively impudent bush and shouted at the top of my voice:

"It's a lie!"

"For heaven's sake, Mr. Marcel," cried the girl, "what's the matter? Have you a fever?"

"I was dreaming," I said confusedly, and I made no further explanation, for she asked no more, merely saying that she hoped it was no worse than that.

The trees and bushes did not cease to nod at me and waggle their heads at each other and make jeering remarks about me, but I paid no further attention to them, treating them with the lofty scorn of silence, which is supposed to be the most effective of all replies. The road led into hilly country, but I tramped on in my dream, becoming dimly conscious that it was growing light. Afar off there in the east, just where the sky touched the earth, was a bar of light shining like silver. As I looked it broadened and began to roll up like a great wave of molten silver. On the horizon the hills and trees rose out of the darkness.

Old Put turned his face to the daylight and whinnied approval. An answering whinny came as 20 cavalrymen galloped around a hill, opening in two lines and closing up again, with us in the center.

"Wake up! Wake up, man! Why, you'll walk into a river or over a cliff if you sleep on in this way," said one of the cavalrymen, leaning over and slapping me vigorously on the shoulder.

I awoke and looked up at his bewhiskered English face and his bestriped English coat and was in confusion and dismay.

"Why, he isn't awake even yet!" said the officer, with a laugh. "Are you from Cornwallis?"

His tone, though eager, was friendly, and the reason for his question flashed upon me. It was the red coat that I wore, Crowder's coat, which had served me one good turn already.

"Yes," I said, "my name's Hinkle, and I'm from Cornwallis with an important message for Tarleton. I was pursued last night by a gang of rebels, who shot my horse, but I escaped them in the wood. An hour ago I overtook Miss Howard here, who also has an important dispatch for Tarleton, and I am trying to pilot myself and her to him at the same time."

"Your bravery and loyalty equal your beauty, Miss Howard," he said. "England can never suffer when we have such as you. Don't you remember me? I'm Lieutenant George Cuthbert, and I had the honor of an introduction to you at Lord Cornwallis' ball in Charleston some months ago."

"Indeed I do," she said in a tone of recognition, "and I hope that we shall meet again soon under such peaceful circumstances, but now I must hasten on, for my message will not wait, and so must this kind soldier, who has been such an assistance and protection to me. Can you direct us by the best road to Tarleton?"

"Keep straight on the way you are going," said the officer, "and if you hurry you might overtake Tarleton before noon. Have no fear of the rebels, for Tarleton is driving them all ahead of him, except one small party to the south of here, for which we are looking. I'd give you an escort into Tarleton's camp, but I need all my troopers for the task I have in hand."

WE STARTED ON OUR GREAT CURVE AROUND TARLETON.

"I thank you for your courtesy and information, Lieutenant Cuthbert," she replied, "and I hope that we will meet again soon in Charleston when all these rebels are taken."

"And that will not be long, Miss Howard," he said, with a gallant bow.

He gave the word to his troopers, and they galloped on.

During this ordeal the behavior of Old Put was something wonderful to see. Though he hated a redcoat as a cat hates a snake, he seemed to understand that he had a part to act and that he must act it well. All his true character disappeared. He was a shambling, drooping horse, with his head down and ready to submit to anything, just an ordinary, oppressed British horse of the lower classes, not a proud spirited American horse, conscious of the Declaration of Independence and the truth that all men and horses are born free and equal.

But when the last of the British troops had disappeared around the hill and the gallop of their horses had sunk into a mere echo Old Put resumed his former and true character—his figure expanded, he held up his head once more. He was the true patriot, equal to all. I was glad to see the change, for that was the character in which I liked him best.

We went on for a long time in silence, barring a request from the girl that I ride and let her walk in my place. I declined abruptly, saying I was a cavalryman, with such few opportunities for walking that I intended to enjoy one when I had it.

The sun, following the new light in the east, had appeared above the hills. The far crests and forests flamed with red gold, and we trod silently in the shining light of the morning. "Why did you not take your opportunity," I asked at length, "and return to your own people? Why did you not tell them back there who and what I was?"

She remained silent, and I looked back at her.

"Julia," I said, and she did not seem to notice that I had called her by her first name again despite her command, "why did you not tell them who I was and let them take me a prisoner?"

"I have called you a rebel, with a noose around your neck, and it is true. The noose is always there, and it was pressing very close then. For you to have been taken a prisoner then meant your death. I could have taken the chance of returning to my own people then only by hanging you."

"How? I do not understand you."

"Look at the red coat you wear. 'A spy!' says Tarleton, who knows no mercy. 'Hang him at once!' and you are hanged."

I had forgotten the coat, which, having served me well twice, might serve me very ill the third time.

"I must get rid of this coat soon," I said. Then I added as an afterthought: "But what is it to you were I hanged? It would be only one more wicked rebel meeting the fate that he deserves. Why should you put yourself to trouble for me?"

I looked back over my shoulder though I may not have had the appearance of looking. I saw a flush as of the morning that was around us overspread her face, and she looked afar over my head, her eyes shining with something I had not seen there before. I asked her no more, but the morning continued to grow into a splendor and radiance passing all previous knowledge of mine.

The sun crept up, and the light reached all the earth, west as well as the east. We were still in the red clay road, winding among lone hills and deserted fields and patches of primitive forests. We came to a brook of cool, clear water, babbling over the stones.

"Here we rest," I said, "and eat breakfast. Jump down, Julia."

She sprang down, and all three drank at the brook—Julia, Old Put and I. Then we ate the remains of our provisions, while the horse found some tender stems of grass by the brookside.

"I think we had better leave the road now," I said, "for this is the enemy's country, and I do not want to meet any more of Tarleton's men."

It was my purpose to make a circuit around Tarleton and join Morgan, and she made no objection, but suggested that she walk with me.

"I am tired of riding," she said, "and it will be good for the horse too."

I threw the bridle reins over Old Put's head, told him to follow us, and we started on our great curve around Tarleton. Being a Charleston man, I knew very little of that part of the country, but in my campaigning with Greene and Morgan I had obtained some idea of the lay of the land, and I knew the general course I ought to follow. Besides, I felt very good, and I was full of enthusiasm. But little of the country had been cultivated, and as the forest was not dense there was nothing to stay our progress. We marched steadily on, and what impressed us most was the desolation of the land. But thinly peopled in the first place, everybody here, as in the country through which we had traveled the day previous, had fled before the advance of the armies. We passed two abandoned cabins in the scenty fields, but saw no other sign of human habitation. Yet it did not sadden me. The sunshine was beautiful, and the old world was fresh and young.

"In a few years, Julia," I said, "when the last of Tarleton's raiders is sent across the sea or to his final home and we win our freedom, all this will be peaceful and populated."

She said nothing—nothing about the valor of the English and the speedy destruction of the rebels—but looked abroad over the country with kindling eyes. It was fair to see, even in winter, with its rolling hills and sloping valleys and streams of sparkling water, a fit place for a noble race of freemen to grow. But just then it was the most unhappy part of all our continent. Neither man nor woman could expect mercy where Tarleton's raiders came, and all the books will tell you, and tell you rightly, that the war was more ferocious in the south than in the north and most ferocious of all on the soil of South Carolina. Where partisan bands ravage and fight and the people of the soil themselves are set and imbittered against each other then war is seen at its worst.

CHAPTER IX.

SEEN IN A DREAM.

We were young and vigorous. The girl was tall, straight, almost as strong as I, and mile after mile dropped behind us. The air had the crisp, fresh coolness of a South Carolina winter, like a northern day in autumn. The sun, climbing steadily toward the heavens, shone in full splendor and in an atmosphere as pure as that over the sea. We could see far to the right and to the left and before us, but we saw neither men nor horses, just the rolling hills and valleys and the straggling forests.

"So much the better," I said to Julia, "for the lonelier the country is the less obstacle there will be to our flight. Morgan is retreating toward the Broad river, and as we surely have passed around Tarleton by this time we ought to overtake him by night. I hope he will have plenty to eat, for I think that you and I will miss our dinner."

"Do you know," said she, "I begin to hope that Tarleton will not overtake Morgan at all? It would be an awful scene, and perhaps some of the rebels are good men after all."

"Perhaps."

"Couldn't the war be ended in some way without more years of fighting—by some sort of compromise? Suppose each side should give up a little."

"We might make the proposition, you and I, to congress and the king."

"Don't jest. I'm in earnest."

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND.

State of Minnesota }
County of Red Lake } ss

In Probate Court.
Special Term.
Sept. 16, 1901.

In the matter of the estate of
Anna Kees,
Deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Michael Kees, administrator of the estate of Anna Kees, deceased, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of, the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences, and praying that license be to him granted to sell all of the real estate that Anna Kees died seized of.

And it appearing by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay said debts, legacies or expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debt, legacies and expenses, to sell all of said real estate.

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 21st day of October, A. D. 1901, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court house in the probate office, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Michael Kees, administrator of said estate to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered, that this order shall be published once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls, in said county.

By the Court.

TO BUILD SIX BIG DITCHES

Contracts Let For Over Thirty Miles of County Ditching.—Contractors to Begin Work at Once.

Monday was a busy day in the county auditor's office, County Auditor Zch, Engineer Geo. Ralph and the County Commissioners having the matter in charge, met early, prepared for a hard days' work.

Contracts for excavating six ditches were to be let, and some forty sealed bids were presented for consideration. The bids were all fairly high, few lower than the estimate price on certain sections, and none as low as the estimate on the whole. In each case the lowest bid on the whole work was accepted. Although it appears in some instances that lower bids than those accepted were in, these are for sections only. The engineer averaged the bids and the contracts were let to the bidder whose offer averaged the cheapest on the whole job.

The auditor and commissioners of Red Lake County are to be congratulated on the business like manner in which this all important matter has been handled. The work will be commenced at once, and half of it must be completed before December 1st, the balance to be finished as early as possible next spring.

Following is a list of bidders, and the prices asked, together with the total number of cubic yards to be excavated in each ditch, except in the Wyandotte Ditch No. 1, the figures for which were not available. The successful bidder is marked by an *:

SAD AND SOLEMN

WERE THE MEMORIAL EXERCISES HELD THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The memorial exercises, a program of which was published in last week's Gazette, were carried out at the opera house Thursday afternoon. A procession, headed by Mayor Watson, wended its way from the city hall to the opera house. Members of the local G. A. R. post, a host of school children, the Red Lake Falls band, and citizens on foot and in carriages formed an imposing spectacle as they marched through the city streets, animated with one patriotic purpose.

The opera house was fairly jammed with the gathering of sorrowing citizenship. After an address by Mayor Watson, the Rev. Andrew Walker gave the opening prayer. Short addresses followed by Messrs. Chas. E. Houghton, L. C. Simons, W. A. McIntyre and Thos. Germo. The choir sang "Lead, Kindly Light," while all present joined in the hymns, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "America."

The occasion was a solemn and impressive one, and the sentiment of those present was undivided. It was announced that both Rev. E. Fayolle and Rev. P. Ansgar O. S. B. were out of the city and so could not participate in carrying out the program. Much credit is due Mayor Watson and those on the committee for their indefatigable work in connection with the affair, which was creditable in every way. Its helpful impress has been indelibly written on the hearts of all—old and young—who were fortunate enough to be participants.

INSTRUCTIONS TO AUDITORS.

State Auditor Dunn Gives Pointers on Tax Law.

State Auditor Dunn Saturday issued a circular letter to county auditors on the sale of property bid in for the state. The letter gives instructions on the sale of real property sold for delinquent taxes under the general laws of 1901, which has been bid in by the state.

If the applicant offers to pay the full amount of the taxes for which the tract was forfeited, together with the subsequent delinquent taxes, costs and penalties, the approval of the county auditor is sufficient. If the applicant offers less than the stated amount the applications must be approved by a majority of the board of county commissioners.

The current taxes should not be included in the application. Redemption can be made by the owner before the time of redemption expires only upon payment of taxes, penalties, interest and costs. The interest is to be computed at 1 per cent a month. When redemption is made for tracts sold for less than the full amount of the taxes and costs the purchaser is entitled to a refundment of the actual amount paid in by him, with interest at 1 per cent a month.

NEW PASSENGER SERVICE INAUGURATED ON THE G. N. MONDAY.

MIXED TRAIN RUNS AS USUAL—THIS IS MORE LIKE IT.

Never since the first train on the N. P. arrived in this city on Friday, Nov. 12, 1886, has there been evinced keener appreciation than that displayed by our people, Monday when at 12:05 the first regular passenger train on the Great Northern pulled in. No need has been more pressing than that supplied by this service, and it is evident that there will be greatly increased passenger traffic on account of the improved accommodation. Conductor Lockman, who has been on the mixed train has been placed in charge of the Flyer. The others of the train crew are Engineer N. J. Nelson, Fireman Frank Hunt and Brakemen Young and Ditty, while Baggageman Woodra looks after the canary birds, dogs, etc. A really newsie furnishes the sweet meats, dime novels and daily newspapers.

There are two coaches, a first-class passenger and a combination smoking and baggage coach. Fully forty-five passengers alighted from the train the first day, and the exodus is equally large. The amount of baggage and express handled is enormous, and is increasing daily. The mixed train, which until Monday was our sole accommodation on this line, is kept up, and the result is an opportunity to pick the time most convenient for arrival and departure, and a convenience before unheard of by the people along the line.

Sense of Touch In Surgery.

There has been of late more or less discussion on the use of antiseptic gloves. These articles are strongly objected to, however, by experienced surgeons, who claim that the surgeon acquires a sense of touch that is of very great value to him in performing delicate and complicated operations. So acute does this become that even the extent of disease may almost be determined by it. They believe that it is possible to exercise sufficient care in the washing of hands and the application of antiseptics to make such gloves wholly unnecessary. Be this as it may, the [illegible] surgeons are very reluctant to [illegible] anything that interferes with the [illegible] of handling, which is their [illegible] pride and upon which to a great [illegible] the safety of the patient depends. —New York Ledger.

A Popular Prince.

Prince Henry of Prussia is in every [illegible] the exact opposite of his brother the kaiser. A quiet, modest, unassuming young man, he makes friends everywhere he goes. He is idolized by his brother officers in the navy and by the men also, who do not forget that on two occasions he dived from the quarter deck to rescue drowning sailors. His devotion to his mother in 1889 was most marked, and, in embracing and blessing his sailor son on the occasion of his marriage with Irene of Hesse, Frederick the Noble pressed into his hand a slip of paper (for he could not speak) on which was written, "You at least have never given me a moment's sorrow and will certainly make as good and true a husband as you have been a loving son."—London Globe.

JEWISH CEREMONIES

IMPORTANT ONES AT GRAND FORKS THE FIRST OF THE WEEK.

A. Horovitz returned to Red Lake Falls Monday from participation in the celebration of the Jewish New Year at Grand Forks. He gives an interesting account of the manner of observance:

Monday, be it known, is the Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, or as some feel inclined to translate it, the Day of Forgiveness. To the religious Jew, it is a day of supreme importance. This year it fell on Monday, Sept. 23. In the synagogue he must put off his shoes. Women as well as men attended the services which lasted (on Monday) from 9:30 in the morning until sunset. On Sunday evening there was a long service, the first of a series.

According to the printed ritual, this is how the services opened. The minister and a past president of the congregation pronounced the following sanction: "In the celestial and worldly tribunal, with the permission of the Almighty and this holy congregation, we declare it now lawful to offer prayer with those who have transgressed." The "Reader" (the Hazun) then thrice repeat the "formula," which is intended to nullify in advance all those vows and promises to Almighty God, which men are apt to utter inconsiderately and hastily in the emergencies of sorrow and passion.

When the fast ends on Monday, a horn is blown ten times in the synagogue. On the New Year's day (Rosh Heshanah) the sins of all, and fates of all during the coming year are written out; and on the Yom Lippud (Day of Atonement), ten days later, considered as days of grace given for repentance, the seal is set by the Lord, and the decrees of destiny become irrevocable. After such a long feast, it is natural that the people should be hungry, so they hasten home and feasting and joy succeed abstinence and sorrow. So they have a good time. But they remember, in their feasting and their mirth, one of the sins for which they have craved forgiveness, the sin of "ecstacy."

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Thirty Years of Suffering.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Halloway, of French Camp, Miss. "I had spent so much time and money and suffered so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effects of diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor, could not even travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer as I have." For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

VIC'S LETTER.

A LETTER FROM THE PHILIPPINES UNDER DATE OF AUGUST 23.

VIC HAS DECIDED TO RE-ENLIST—WANTS TO COME HOME FIRST.

Calamba, P. I. Aug. 23, 1901.

To The Gazette:

I will take a moment to drop The Gazette renders a few lines.

Everything here is about as quiet as ever. One gets sort of lonesome because there is no place to go—no amusements of any sort. Today a few young men belonging to the Y. M. C. A. arrived here and they will open a Y. M. C. A. building in this town, then it will be more like "God's country"—the U. S. There also arrived on the transport Thomas some 600 school teachers who are already assigned to different provinces. Eleven women and one man teacher will come to this province. With American schools and American soldiers the Philippines ought to be Americanized in a very short time.

According to a late order from Gen. Chaffee, soldiers will carry no more lockers or trunks, but will pack up their belongings in a knapsack. It looks strange that officers may have a whole wagon train for transportation while a soldier can not even secure enough for a small locker or trunk but must carry everything in a knapsack. Even when returning to the U. S. he cannot carry a box of any kind. Now readers imagine serving in a foreign country for nearly three years, and on returning home not being able to take with you a few relics. What man during his three years service would not have acquired a few trinkets as keep sakes? It is economy where it is not needed.

Gen. Summer went through here a few days ago bound for Lija which is to be his headquarters in the future. A few weeks ago Lija was the scene of a hard fight, in which several officers lost their lives, one being 2nd Lt. Walter Lee, of the Eng. Corp. It is a hot bed and needs the presence of such a noted man as Gen. Summer to pacify the peace.

We are expecting to be relieved here soon. The 2nd Battalion of Eng., who arrived on the transport Hancock will take matters in hand the 1st of Sept., thus relieving us from duty. It is expected that we (the 1st Battalion) will go to the U. S. Most of the 1st Battalion has been here for over two years although one company has been formed out of old service men who were transferred from other companies as non-commissioned offiers. Thus the new company is practically a skeleton with a full set of non-commissioned officers and hardly a private. There are a great many vacancies in the line of 2nd class privates in Co. D., and any one intending to join the U. S. Army in the engineer branch of service would do well to ask to be assigned to Co. D. with the prospect of quick promotion to a non-commission or 1st class private.

When we are relieved from here we will leave a good piece of work, in fact, one of the best in the P. I. We have built a Macadamized road from this town to San Pablo, and done more or less repairing on roads in the entire Le Loguma Province, even build abutments for several steel bridges, and much maping and sketching. We leave a good record for seventeen engineers under one officer.

I expect to return to the United States in about five months if not sooner. There's no official orders as yet but indications point to our leaving in the winter so as to arrive in the United States in the early spring. I have decided to re-enlist if I can secure a furlough to visit Red Lake Falls for a few weeks.

As ever,
"Vic."

POPULAR SPORT.

HARRINGTON & TESSIER OPEN THE BOWLING ALLEY.

Harrington & Tessier on Saturday opened their new bowling alley, and the popular sport, which has assumed the proportions of a fad all over the Northwest, was taken up with considerable spirit. The firm have fitted up a splendid alley and are gratified at the favor with which their enterprise is met.

Minneapolis has one resort in which the equipments cost no less than $6,000. Bowling Alley parties for both men and women have become the rage. And the places are rented out for evenings and afternoons, sometimes several weeks ahead. Tuesday and Thursday afternoons are reserved for the ladies, and the sport is as popular with them as it is with the gentlemen.

FAVORS THE OPENING

COMMISSIONER JONES SO DISPOSED TOWARDS RED LAKE LANDS.

INVESTIGATING PARTY ARRIVED AT THIEF RIVER FALLS, MONDAY.

Indian Commissioner Jones, U. S. Senator Quarels, of Wisconsin, Col. R. H. Platt, superintendent of the Carlisle, Pa., Indian school, and Capt. W. A. Mercer, were taken to Thief River Falls Monday on a special train and at once proceeded to Red Lake on the Steamer Ethel, to investigate the timber question.

Commissioner Jones stated to the News that he was strongly in favor of seeing not only the lands on this portion of the Red Lake reservation opened to settlement but also favored the opening of all lands in the state. He did not think the reservations were of any benefit to the Indians and the best way to teach them civilization was to bring them in closer contact with the whites.

Mr. Jones said that if the people at Thief River Falls were desirous of having the reservation opened it would be a good idea to have a meeting of all the Indians on the reservations to agree on a stipulation as to the terms on which they would cede. He thought such an agreement would be ratified at once by congress.

A few years ago we owned a large dog by the name of Duke, writes Josephina Maguire to the Philadelphia Ledger. He was a wise old fellow and loved to play with children. He would allow my little 4-year-old brother to pull his hair and sit on him. The dog would not show the slightest annoyance. One moonlight night we were all sitting on the front piazza except my mother, who had gone up stairs to put our little brother to bed. She remarked as she came down again that we had better come in and have some music, as it was getting cooler. Some hours after that we were annoyed in the middle of the game by Duke scratching on the piazza floor and otherwise behaving as no dignified old dog should. We paid no attention to him, but he commenced barking and scratching again. At last my brother walked out, and Duke went on ahead, wagging his tail and looking behind him. Down at the very foot of our garden was a small river, and there my brother found our little brother lying on the bank fast asleep. The wee toddler had walked out in his sleep, as my mother had left the door open. Of course she was frightened when she saw my brother come in with the child whom she had put to bed some time ago. Duke was a much petted dog after that, and many offers were made to buy him, but we all said that we would not sell him

CONTEST THE TITLE

MINNESOTA MAY BE COMPELLED TO GIVE UP RAINY LAKE MINERAL LANDS.

Agent of the Federal Government Sent to Investigate the Matter—Boiler Explosion at Willmar Wrecks the Waterworks and Electric Light Plant—Funeral of Bishop Whipple. Blooming Prairie Bank Looted. General State News.

Marquette, Mich., Sept. 22.—Under orders from Washington, a special agent of the land office has left for Minnesota to investigate and report on lands in dispute between the federal government and the state. The area affected is a large one, running from Rainy Lake east to Lake Superior, a distance of nearly 200 miles, and taking in all the northern tier of townships bordering on Canado.

The lands are located in the newly discovered gold district, and are said to be very valuable.

They were taken by the state as swamp lands under the act of 1860, but now it is the contention of the government that the tract so selected in the northern tier is illegally in the state's possession, as the lands are not swamp lands, as provided in the statute, but are suitable for agriculture and valuable for other purposes.

Should the agent find this to be the case, proceedings will at once be instituted to compel Minnesota to relinquish ownership. The inquiry will be thorough, and will spread over the next three months.

THE BOILER EXPLODES.

Willmar, Minn., Sept. 23.—One of the boilers of the city waterworks and electric light plant exploded at 2:10 a. m. from a cause unknown. The building was totally wrecked and the dynamo and appliances hurled under debris.

A large section of the boiler was thrown over a block of residences, landing in the street. Night Engineer Nels Bredeson was thrown into the engine pit, escaping with slight wounds on his arm. One boiler was but slightly injured. The waterworks will be able to run shortly but it may take a month to get the electric lights running. Damage is estimated at $30,000.

BENTON COUNTY COMPROMISE.

Citizens of Foley and Sauk Rapids Seek a Peaceable Settlement.

St. Cloud, Minn., Sept. 21.—A committee of Sauk Rapids citizens met a similar committee of Foleyites at Foley yesterday in conference in the county seat removal proposition. It is believed that an agreement will be arrived at whereby the contest proceeding instituted by Frank H. Mooers et al will be called off. Work is already under way on the new court house at Foley, and it is believed that the county commissioners can handle the building operations to far better advantage than the citizens' committee which now has charge of the work.

LOOTED THE BANK.

Burglars Rob a Blooming Prairie Concern of Several Thousands.

Blooming Prairie, Minn., Sept. 19.—The safe in the bank of J. C. Brainerd & Co. was blown by cracksmen and cash in bills and gold and silver of between $4,000 and $5,000 taken.

The burglars entered through rear windows, which they broke out. Dynamite was used on the safe and it was blown to pieces.

No one can be found who saw the men and to this time there is no clue. Officers are here to begin pursuit and all adjoining points have been wired and instructed. It is believed the burglars will be caught.

FUNERAL OF BISHOP WHIPPLE.

Many Clergy and Laymen Attend the Obsequies.

Faribault, Minn., Sept. 23.—A large number of the clergy of the Protestant Episcopal church, with many laymen, attended the funeral services over the remains of the Rt. Rev. Henry Whipple, bishop of Minnesota, which took place during the afternoon. Bishop Tuttle of Missouri was the chief officiating clergyman, assisted by Bishop Morrison of Duluth, Bishop Edsall of Minnesota, Bishop Hare of South Dakota, Bishop Millspaugh of Kansas and Bishop Grafton of Fond du Lac. The interment was beneath the altar in the cathedral.

SEEKS SANITARIUM SITE.

Committee of Physicians Is Touring Northern Minnesota.

Brainerd, Minn., Sept. 19.—The commission appointed by Governor Van Sant to look over Northern Minnesota and select what they believe will be a suitable site for a proposed sanitarium for the cure of tuberculosis, consisting of Doctors J. L. Camp of Brainerd, G. S. Wattman of Worren and Taylor of St. Paul, is in the city, looking the place over. They have visited Walker, Cass Lake, Bemidji and Grand Rapids.

DEATH OF A PIONEER.

Red Wing, Minn., Sept. 24.—General Israel Garrard died shortly before 1 o'clock p. m., at his home at Frontenac, as the result of injuries from burns caused by the explosion of a lamp last Monday evening in his home.

With his passing away there is removed from the stage of active life in Minnesota one of its most picturesque and widely known characters. For over 40 years he had been a resident at Frontenac save the time he served in the war of the Rebellion. The general first came to Minnesota in 1854 on a hunting trip, camping six weeks on the shore of Lake Pepin. Attracted by the natural beauty of the lake and particularly by the grand scenery around Frontenac, he made extensive investments in land there and prepared to make the place his home. When the war broke out, however, he returned to Ohio, was commissioned colonel of the Seventh Ohio cavalry, and in command of his regiment went into the field with the army of the Ohio. Later he joined General Burnside and became commander of a brigade.

Returning to Frontenac after the war he took up his abode in St. Hubert's cottage, first established as a hunting lodge, and there he lived ever since. He was 76 years of age and is survived by a son, George Wood Garrard, and a daughter, Miss Daisy. One brother, Colonel Jeptha Garrard, resides at Cincinnati.

MINNESOTA BUTTER SCORING.

Buffalo. Sept. 20.—The scoring of Minnesota butter at the Pan-American exposition for September is very high. There was no scoring in August, so this is the first since the July scoring. In all 39 tubs from the state were in competition, 37 being from creameries and 2 from dairies. The average scoring for Minnesota butter for September was 49.60, and the highest scored tub of creamery was from A. T. Radke of Viola, Olmsted county, scoring 97 flat, or a quarter of 1 per cent higher than was scored by any Minnesota tub in the July scoring. Second was from C. J. Bang of Frost, Faribault county, scoring 96.75, and third was from W. P. Mortenson of Stockholm, Wright county, scoring 96.50. The highest scoring tub of dairy butter was from Mrs. J. H. McRostie of Owatonna, Steele county, which scored 94.50.

MACKAY IS MISSING.

Well Known Timber Explorer Is Lost in the Woods.

Duluth, Sept. 18.—E. P. Mackay, a well known timber explorer of Gordon, Wis., is reported lost in the woods north of Ely. He and Hans Peterson of Superior were on a trip for the purpose of estimating timber, and were on their way back Saturday night, expecting to reach Ely before morning. Peterson alone reached Ely, and he said that in some unaccountable manner Mackay had become lost.

While making a portage, Peterson was ahead, and supposed his companion was behind him. When he arrived at the end of the portage, Mackay was missing, and Peterson started back over the trail. After searching a long time in the dark he had to give it up and came on without him. A searching party went out from Ely. Mackay is well known in Northern Wisconsin.

TRAIN IN A SINK HOLE.

Serious Trouble on the Eastern Minnesota Railroad.

Duluth, Sept. 20.—The Eastern Minnesota railroad is having much expensive trouble with sink holes on the Mesaba range division. A few weeks ago a train went down in one near Stoneybrook, causing the loss of a life and the damage of much property. Now another has developed about 15 miles above the first. A few days ago while an ore train was crossing a swamp the track for the distance of about a block suddenly disappeared and 14 cars followed. Quick work finally resulted in their recovery. The ore shipments of the road are being retarded by the condition of the tracks in these quagmires, and it is no easy matter to fill them.

SCALPED BY A WAGON.

St. Cloud, Minn., Sept. 21.—Louis Anderson, a blacksmith employed by Kling Bros., met with a terrible accident near this city yesterday in a runaway. He fell from a load of household goods, and the wagon wheel passed over his head, literally tearing the major part of his scalp from the skull. Twenty stitches were necessary to put the wound in shape. He will probably recover.

Northwestern Flour Output.

Minneapolis, Sept. 18.—The flour output at Minneapolis last week, according to The Northwestern Miller, was 310,885 barrels, compared with 325,585 for the corresponding week of last year. Superior and Duluth ground 23,890 barrels, an increase of 12,000. Nearly all the mills sold their output. Domestic buyers took most of the product. Foreigners were almost entirely out of the market.

St. Paul Honors McKinley.

St. Paul, Sept. 21.—Memorial exercises in honor of the late President McKinley were held at the Auditorium during the afternoon. Archbishop Ireland was among the speakers. A parade, made up of civic, fraternal and military organizations, preceded the exercises.

BURGLARS GET CASH.

Hudson, Wis., Sept. 19.—The bank of Hammond was broken into during the night and looted by burglars. Several thousand dollars in currency and securities, including city of River Falls bonds, were taken. The bank officials refuse to give out any particulars at this time. It is estimated that the cash taken amounts to $5,000 and that the bonds are to an equal amount.

WYLIE BREVITIES

Oliver Romsos went to St. Hilaire last Saturday.

Erick Hanson, of St. Hilaire, was seen here last Monday.

Ole Brink, of St. Hilaire, passed through here last Wednesday with a number of cattle.

Alfred Lindquist took his brother Oscar to St. Hilaire last Sunday where the later will work in Patterson's livery barn.

Oscar A. Naplin left last Saturday via G. N. for St. Peter, Minn., where he will continue his studies in the Freshman class at Gustavus Adolphus College.

Naplin Bros laid up their threshing rig last Saturday, having finished shock threshing. They say it does not pay to thresh this year. They will thresh flax and a few jobs in stacks after a couple weeks.

Dr. Doran's Great Work

Crowd's Continue to Throng His Office During His Visit to the Principal Towns Throughout the State.

Many Remarkable Cures After All Other Doctors Had Failed,

Dr. Doran, the specialist who announced in our paper that he would continue to visit this city for a series of visits and who has been filling his appointments each month, is certainly a physician remarkably eminent in his profession. He has spent years of study in his specialties, and besides that has been connected with some of the principle hospitals throughout the United States and the Dominion of Canada, and has performed some remarkable cures. Dr. Doran is connected as an associate partner with the Doctors Rea Bros., of the Southern Medical and Surgical Institute of Louisville, Ky., with a large established office in Minneapolis, Minn. Dr. Doran is considered one of the best diagnosticians of the age, and as he has practiced his profession in the various stages of life knows precisely the kind and many complications of disease that are especially liable to occur. He has traveled from north to south and from east to west, and nothing but praise and entire satisfaction wherever he has visited. Dr. Doran it is claimed, can diagnose a disease of any patient without asking a question, and for that reason he is not liable to treat the patient for the wrong ailment. His charges are reasonable and he has never been known to turn an actual case of charity away from him. We hereby take the liberty to publish a few of the names of the many patients he has cured. These names came to us unsolicited and represent the best class of people in the community:

Geo. Fellman, Casenovia, Minn., cured of long standing, severe case of rheumatism. Mr. Fellman had been doctoring with many physicians, none seemed to do him any good until he began taking Dr. Doran's medicine. The change was remarkable and a cure was soon made.

F. C. Krusp, Banks, Minn., cured of a chronic, aggravated case of piles. A very long standing cured in two treatments without operation or loss of blood.

Tom Ervin, Magnolia, Minn., cured of early consumption, the disease had been coming on Mr. Ervin for a long time. He is now able to work every day and feels better than he has felt for years.

John Vanderwedge Kinbrae, Minn., cured of chronic kidney troubles, complicated with varicocle and general weakness and a general wornout feeling. Cured very quickly and at a very reasonable cost.

C. F. Westman, St. James, Minn., cured of a chronic case of piles. Was cured without operation and is now feeling fine and seems to want to tell everybody what a great man Dr. Doran is.

C. W. Fink, Steen, Minn., cured of chronic stomach troubles. Dr. Doran says he used the celebrated Cascarine, combined with his treatment, which cured Mr. Fink quickly after years of suffering when other treatments failed.

P. M. Olson, Wheaton, Minn., cured of chronic cystis and bladder trouble.

Mrs. Sarah Walters, Pipestone, Minn., chronic female trouble, stomach and ovarian troubles. Mrs. Walters was very bad, couldn't keep anything on her stomach and was almost given up to die. Write her if you are in doubt.

F. Densmore, Valley Springs, S. O., chronic catarrh of the stomach, cured quickly with medicines such as he had never taken before. Dr. Doran's treatment gives quick relief and is permanent in its results, and is the treatment that can be had only from a man of his experience and extraordinary ability.

Such are his cures and such we do not hesitate to publish. His consultations and examinations to those interested, $1.00. Dr. Doran will continue to visit the following towns:

Park Rapids, Minn., Hotel Commercial, Wednesday, Sept. 25.

Bemidji, Minn., Hotel Markham, Thursday Sept. 26.

Fosston, Minn., Hotel Commercial, Friday to Saturday noon, Sept. 27 to 28.

PHILIPPINE EDITORIALS.

The Manilla Freeman, a newspaper published by an American, makes the following caustic remarks anent the arrival of a coterie of school teachers from the United States. the paper having been sent to The Gazette by our correspondent, "Vic:"

The new corps of instructors will undoubtedly be successful in teaching the young Filipino idea to shoot. It is hoped that the weapon will not be the Mauser.

Nipa Barracks will be an interesting location after the arrival of the "Thomas." The tailor-shops and the Barberias will undoubtedly be kept busy, and hair oil will go up to the limit.

Give Aguinaldo a Commissary privilege, exempt him from the income and the cedula taxes, tuck his shirt-tail in, and let him, replace some American in the Quarter-master Department.

There will be one man and eleven women teachers assigned to the Province of Laguna—Poor devil.

In Lepanto there will be one man and one woman teacher. Come on Cupid!

Romblon is to have twenty-one men and one woman teacher. Wow!

PRIMARY ELECTION LAW.

Minnesota's primary law went into effect September 1, 1901.

It covers the whole state, not applying to township, village or special elections however.

Candidates for city offices, county offices, membership in the legislature and in congress, are to be chosen by the vote of all qualified electors at the primary election.

A voter for candidates at primary election can vote for candidates named on the ballot of the one political party to which he belongs.

Primary election day is a "registered" day and voters at that time are "registered" for the coming election seven weeks later.

Every qualified voter may and should vote at primary elections.

Primary election comes seven weeks before the regular election; while a person desiring to be a candidate must appear before the proper officer, make his affidavit to that effect and pay his candidate's fee 20 days before primary election.

If a candidate for an office to be voted for in more than one county, the person goes before the secretary of state and pays a fee of $20.00; if to be voted for in but one county he goes before the county auditor and pays a fee of $10.00; provided the office he seeks carries with it a salary or other compensation.

Any number of citizens may thus present their names and pay their fees to the prescribed officer and have their names placed upon a party ticket for any office, the primary election determining which one shall be the candidate for that office on that party ticket to be used seven weeks later at the regular election.

Fourteen days before primary election the county auditor must make out and post up in a conspicuous place in his office the party ballots, each ballot containing all the names offered as candidates for all the offices upon that party ticket. The auditor must also publish in the official paper of the county twice at an interval of one week apart, the full party ballots as they will come before the voters at the primary election.

The law does not require that a candidate for the primary election ballot must be supported by a petition signed by voters.

Some organization will be required to offer its services in sundry ways to make this new law result in placing before the people candidates of high qualifications and good character.

What is known as the "party organization," or "party machine," will in most cases feel justified in "seeing" different persons and asking them to become candidates for the several offices to be filled.

Inter-partisan organization seeking to effect certain ends by the election of officers favorable to the objects of those organizations will now more than every use the primary election to get their men to be candidates and to he elected.

THE GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT.

At the Buffalo Good Roads Convention the committee on resolutions made a report, some of the principal recomendations being:

"That the work of the government office of public road inquiries in the department of agriculture should be enlarged into a bureau and that an appropriation of $150,000 should be made by congress for this purpose."

"That it is necessary for the purpose of carrying on the work of good roads construction to complete and protect the chain of organization in each state, territory and county and through concerted action and through the vice president of each state for the national good roads association in his respective state or territory.

"That we recommend the plan of state supervision and co-operation to the several states.

"That this congress indorses the use of labor where practicable in the work on public roads or in the preparation of materials.

"That this congress heartily approves the use of the wide tire on all public roads and the payment of the usual road taxes in cash instead of in labor."

A committee of five was appointed to see that the matter of a national appropriation is placed before every representative and senator in congress.

LET THERE BE A DIVISION.

Under the above heading the Thief River Falls Press makes the following comment, suggesting a division, and the making of Thief River Falls a county seat—to all of which Red Lake Falls says amen. On a fair plan of this kind we are with the upper Falls to a man:

A ride from Thief River Falls to the little village of Ringbo, eighteen miles north, gives a good idea of the magnificent recources of the great extent of territory which relies on this city for its supplies. A new comer to the country is immediately impressed with the well settled and prosperous condition of the country. Nearly all the grain is stacked and that already threshed has turned out very well for all the unfavorable conditions of the past season. Hay has been an immense crop and well built stacks dot the prairie in every direction. Plowing is getting well under way.

Several churches and school houses, in course of construction, were passed and inquiries brought out the fact that material for these buildings, and all other structures, was procured from this city. In fact the people up that way deliver all their grain and produce, and secure all their supplies, and mail, either directly or indirectly, from Thief River Falls. And, what is more, they will probably continue to do so for many years to come.

What should be done, and what will be done before many years, is to divide both Red Lake and Marshall counties and create an entirely new county out of the portion thus cut off and the western half of the present Reservation. Then make Thief River Falls, the county seat and the residents of what is now eastern Marshall county, no will longer have to go long distances to transact their necessary county seat business at an unnatural trading point. And such an unnatural point Warren assuredly is and always will be.

Anton Jenson, the McIntosh miller, has been granted an electric light franchise, and a complete plant will be installed at once.

Facts and Fancies.

The Lost River ditch in Polk and Beltrami counties, will be 3.7 miles in length, two feet deep and 20 feet wide; cubic yards to be excavated, 30,284.5; acres benefitted, 22,500. The Badger and Skunk creek ditch in Roseau county, will be 8¼ miles long, 12 feet wide and from 3½ to 4 feet deep. There will be 89,759 cubic yards to be excavated. The NewSolum ditch in Marshall county will be 4 miles long and 10 feet wide, with a total excavation of 55,728.6 cubic feet. It will benefit 1,000 acres of swamp lands. It is expected to secure the right of way for all four ditches free of cost.

According to a circular recently issued by the census department there are in Red Lake County 4724 persons of school age. Of this number 2333 are males and 2391 females. 445 are foreigners and 1 a negro. There are 3232 persons over 21, of which number 973 are natives and 2256 are foreign born. Out of these 3232 persons there are 550 who can not read or write.

The local paper is the one thing by which strangers judge the size of a town and the ability of its business men, hence the paper that does not have the advertisement of every business in its town is forced to misrepresent it. The paper is a mirror that should reflect a true picture of the town and business conducted therein.

O. J. Rollis, the general merchant at the new hamlet that bears his name up in eastern Marshall county, has sold his store to P. O. Berg, of Thief River Falls, who will also succeed him as postmaster.

Astounded The Editor:

Editor S. A. Brown, of Bennettsville, S. C., was once immensely surprised. "Through long suffering from Dyspepsia," he writes, "my wife was greatly run down. She had no strength or vigor and suffered great distress from her stomach, but she tried Electric Bitters which helped her at once, and, after using four bottles, she is entirely well, can eat anything. It's a grand tonic, and its gentle laxative qualities are splendid for torpid liver." For indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Stomach and Liver troubles it's a positive, guaranteed cure. Only 50c at W. A. Schreiter's.

Stood Death Off.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. Only 50c at W. A. Schreiter's drug store.

Mr. and Mrs. John Klein left for Mankato Monday, after a pleasant visit at the home of Mrs. Klein's sister, Mrs. H. B. Kaufer. Their departure was hurried on account of the sudden death of L. A. Linder, the cashier of the Mankato Frist National Bank, in which Mr. Klein is interested.

C. J. Heines, of Wall & Heines, publishers of the Northern Farmer, arrived in the city Monday from Langdon, N. D., where he has been writing up the town preparatory to issuing an advertising prospectus. Mr. Haines says that the wheat crop in the neighborhood of Langdon is superb, turning out at 30 and 35 bushels to the acre.

Messrs. S. M. Sivertson, Jos. Hebert and M. K. Wall, who were appointed to appraise the state school land that is to be sold in this county on Friday, October 18 have about completed their labors. The old list has been left practically at the old figures, and merely the new prices, odd and isolated tracts, those delinquent and those that have gone back to the state, have been visited by the appraisers and valuations placed by them. The law fixes the minimum price at $5.00 per acre.

A Shocking Calamity

"Lately befell a railroad laborer," writes Dr. A. Kellett, of Williford, Ark., "His foot was badly crushed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly cured him." Jones, adjuster for the Millers' & Manufacturers' Fire Insurance Co., who carried a $2,500 policy on the Lemieux Block, for the Powers Dry Goods Company was in the city Monday looking up the loss, which was in the nature of a damage to the building. Besides the insurance in this company there was $3,500 additional carried, making a total of $6,000 on the block.

Damien and Narcise Latendresse, who have been running the Palace hotel bar, on Monday closed a deal for the hotel property with Gottlieb Gerlach. The Minneapolis Brewing Co. had foreclosed a mortgage on the premises and the year of redemption expired yesterday. Latendresse Bros. paid $5,500 cash for the property complete with furniture. They are looking for a good hotel man to run the place for them and expect to open it inside of a few days.

Ira C. Richardson and K. M. Hansen went to Crookston Saturday to meet the senatorial party looking up matters affecting the Red Lake reservation. They were informed by telegraph that owing to an accident on the road east of Bemidji the party would drive in to the agency via Bemidji. This was a severe disappointment to the people up the river who had made elaborate preparations to arrange a hunt for the party near High Landing. In view of the fact that Capt. Mercer had informed the Thief River Falls people that the gentlemen did not wish to be entertained, it is more than likely that the party considered the "accident" out east with no large regrets.

Strange to say, men are beginning to patronize the bargain counters as well as the women. It has its charms for them in the way of neckwear and hosiery, which would surprise you. They seem to enjoy getting something for nothing as well as the feminine portion of the world and the avidity with which they grasp for bargains would put the ordinary bargain fiend to shame It is the same old story. When men put their minds to a thing they so often excel women in her own domain, because they go about it with such a lifelong determination. Last week it was quite amusing to watch two of our prominent business men struggling to get ahead of each other on 25 cents hose selling at the great reduction of 19½ cents—which looks so alluring in print.

O. T. Romsós, the hustling merchant and post-master at Wylie, rode in Tuesday for medicines for the family of Thos. Hensen. Hensen went to Wylie from Stephen the first of August to take the position of Great Northern section boss. Shortly after arriving, he was stricken with typhoid fever. His wife acted as nurse, but shortly succumbed to the malady herself, and died after an illness of several weeks. In the meantime two children were also taken sick. Mr. Hansen's mother arrived from Stephen after his wifes' death to nurse the family, and Mr. Romsos reports that she has now contracted the disease and is very ill. Mr. Hensen is convalescent, but unable to wait on the others, and they are depending upon charity. The people of Wylie have risen to the emergency and are looking after the stricken family.

Dr. J. F. Boles was over from Crookston Wednesday.

Eve troughs put up in city or country. Leave orders at Hunt's Hardware.

Don't patronize the mixed train if you can help it. We went to make this passenger service permanent.

J. R. Fortier, who has been ill with typhoid fever for six weeks past, is again able to be out.

F. Cass Ward is expecting his son-in-law, Geo. H. Cahoon, who contemplates putting in a machine shop here.

The N. P. bridge crew under Jim Johnston has brought in a pile driver and the spier leading to Healy & Bourdon's mill is being put in shape.

Mr. and Mrs. Alderic Chabot, of Crookston, were among those to patronize the new passenger train on its first trip. They visited friends enroute between stops.

A renewal of the mission held at St. Mary's church last year, has been announced by Rev. P. Aasgar. Frs. Augustin and Alfred will conduct the renewal as they did the mission.

Ed Townsend, who is looking after the shipment of the Crookston Co's. stock purchased from the Red Lake Falls Lumber Company, went to Crookston Tuesday to confer with members of his firm.

We have received our consignment of jackets, ladies' capes, etc., from the Philadelphia Cloak Co. The line is now on exhibition at our store. Your inspection solicited.

Those army officers who attended a ball last week with crepe on their scabbards, could learn a lesson of patriotism from the Red Lake Falls teachers' association, known as the Theta Delta Gamma fraternity, who, after invitations had been issued, postponed their social event out of deference to the sense of propriety.

Daily excursions to Buffalo and New York via the Nickel Plate Road. Through trains to New York City without change. Vestibuled sleepers Chicago to Boston; dining cars on all trains. Meals served on American club plan at from 35 cents to $1.00. Write John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St. Chicago, for particulars.

Albert Gerlach and Docite Miller came up from Turtle River Tuesday. They will return tomorrow. Mr. Gerlach reports the M. & I. completed to within a quarter of a mile of Tenstrike. Farley the new town a mile from Turtle, is playing hob with that village. The Turtle townsite company now regrets that the half a block that was asked for by the lumber firm who are starting the new town was not given. Had it been, the firm of Blakely & Farley, who are back of the rival place, would have located their saw-mill in Turtle River and pushed for that point.

A. Horovitz and wife returned Monday from celebrating the Jewish New Year at Grand Forks. The year is 5662 in the Hebrew calendar—which dates from the beginning of the world. They leave for Northwood, N. D., where the general stock moved from this city will be closed out. Mr. Horovitz says they leave on account of his wife's health, and will go to California or Oregon after New Years. Otherwise he was well satisfied with his business, and after his experiences in many of the cities of the Red River Valley, he says Red Lake Falls is the best of all.

J. W. Geissler, of St. Louis, demonstrator for the Majestic range company, has been giving his cooking exhibition this week at O'Brien Bros'. store. The object is to demonstrate the superior qualities of the great Majestic Range. Biscuits are baked in three minutes and served with delicious coffee free to all who call. Probably Mrs. O'Brien will see in this statement the cause of the falling off of Will's appetite at home since this exhibition began. Mrs. M. Verboncer is assisting Demonstrater Geissler. A handsome set of ware, seventeen pieces is being given away to all who buy ranges, and the sale is attracting wide attention.

Alderman Fred Borchers opened his new saloon yesterday. The place is a veritable palace. A brick building, 22 x 60, two stories, handsomely finished, gives not an inkling of the splendor that confronts one in the interior. The fixtures are of antique oak, and of the latest and most expensive pattern on the market. An especial feature is the magnificent electric light chandelier in the centre of the ceiling. French plate mirror and rich frosted glass in the partition complete the effect. Alderman Borchers has no doubt one of the most magnificent places in the Northwest. The building was constructed entirely of Red Lake Falls brick and is one of the handsomest and most substantial structures in the city.

Working Night and Day.

The busiest and mightiest little thing that ever was made is Dr. King's New Life Pills. These pills change weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-fag into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health. Only 25c per box. Sold by W. A. Schreiter.

Phil. Ryan, of Wylie, was a visitor in the city Saturday.

A. Romsos, a brother of the popular Wylie merchants, has taken a position as clerk for Bangs & Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Eckstein were in the city Monday. Mr. Eckstein is one of the leading merchants of Wylie.

Wm. Eickhoff, of St. Hilaire, who wanted a ditching contract, and put in a bid in conjunction with A Larson, registered in Saturday.

W. H. Peavy, who is keeping the books for the Clearwater Logging Co. in the work of constructing the big dam at Clearwater Falls was a visitor in the city and says the work is progressing rapidly.

The Gazette's fine Boston fern is offered for sale to the highest bidder. This don't mean that we are busted, but it is an indication of cold weather. This fern is one of the finest ever seen. Will sell cheap.

Donat Boyer of Crookston was a business visitor to the city Tuesday. Mr. Boyer first made the acquaintance of our people as a political speaker in the last campaign, when his home was in Minneapolis.

Last week I went about,
Full of trouble and of doubt.
Now I'm smiling and dance with delight,
I had Rocky Mountain Tea last night.
W. A. Schreiter.

Dr. Dayolheasaln and wife were registered at the Grand View Monday. The doctor is a mind reader, hypnotist and thought transmissionist and held the attention of a big crowd on Main street in the evening despite the bad weather. He is an Indian, a fine physical specimen and assumes the title of chief.

Jas. Meehan Jr. of Thief River Falls, came down Saturday for an over Sunday stay. He was a member of a party including K. M. Hansen, and D. Connelly. In regard to the suit brought by the heirs of Moose Dung against the firm of P. & J. Meehan who purchased a piece of land owned by Moose Dung. Mr. Meehan says the suit amounts to nothing. He did not expect to see it go to trial, and avers that it is brought to cast a cloud over the title to lots in his addition to Thief River Falls, which are being offered for sale.

Miss Henrietta Zaiser gave a parcel shower for Miss Mamie Kaufer yesterday afternoon at the home of her mother on Bottineau av. The friends of Miss Mamie's maiden days were invited, and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent. The shower took the form of china and cut glass ware, and the recipient had reason to think it a real thunder storm of gifts to be long treasured. The afternoon was passed pleasantly in playing games, and refreshments were served at 5, when the guests dispersed, with many good wishes for the future happiness of the bride of next week. The happy affair was the first of the kind given here, but those who are fortunate enough to be on Miss Zaiser's list, always expect the latest when she entertains.

Impressive Initiation.

A man who had applied for admission into a secret society, which, for the purposes of this narrative, may be called the Ancient Order of Queer Fish, and had been accepted presented himself at the appointed time for initiation.

In accordance with ancient usages, the candidate was blindfolded, ushered into the lodgeroom, marched in slow and solemn procession around the darkened hall, subjected to various trying ordeals, including that of being tossed in a blanket held at the corners and sides by athletic members, and, having come through the ceremonies alive and in fair preservation, was declared duly initiated and entitled to the right hand of fellowship. The bandage was removed from his eyes, and the brethren crowded about him to extend their congratulations on the fortitude he had displayed.

"How did it impress you?" asked one of them.

"It was the most impressive ceremony, take it all around," he answered, "that I ever knew or ever heard of."

"You were aware, of course, that there was a fire across the street while we were putting you through?"

"Why," rejoined the new member, "I could hear the puffing of the engines, the tramping of the horses on the stone pavement, the yelling of the firemen and the swish of the streams from the hose, and I could smell the smoke, too, but, good gracious, I thought it was part of the initiation."—Youth's Companion.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

FUNERAL OF THE LATE PRESIDENT M'KINLEY.

The remains of the late President McKinley were taken from the White House to the Capitol Tuesday under escort of a military and civic parade. At the Capitol, in the presence of an immense audience including leading citizens in official and private life and representatives of other nations, the public services over the remains were held. The services were conducted in accordance with the rites of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which the deceased president was a lifelong member. After a hymn by the choir and a prayer by Rev. Dr. Naylor the funeral oration was delivered by Bishop Andrews of Ohio. His address was simple but earnest. All present then joined with the choir in singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and the services were concluded by Rev. W. H. Chapman of Washington, who pronounced the benediction.

The funeral train bearing the remains of the late President McKinley arrived at Canton Wednesday noon, hundreds of thousands of people having turned out at the stations along the line to silently honor the illustrious dead. At Canton the entire town was at the station or lined the route of march to the courthouse, where the body laid in state until 9 p. m. The national guard of the state of Ohio, over 5,000 strong, were massed at Canton and acted as part of the escort to the remains. After President Roosevelt, his cabinet and the other prominent people making up the funeral party had viewed the remains the doors were opened to the public and from 2 o'clock until 9 thousands of people passed the bier. When the doors were closed an immense crowd was still in line. The body was then taken to the McKinley home.

The remains of the late President McKinley were laid to rest in Westlawn cemetery, Canton, thousands of people from all parts of the country participating in the final exercises. The corpse was taken from the McKinley home at 1:30 p. m., reaching the Methodist church at 1:45, where brief and simple services were held. After the close of the exercises at the church the body was taken to the cemetery, escorted by a military and civic parade, in which thousands of men took part, and followed by President Roosevelt, many senators and representatives and prominent officials from all parts of the country. Mrs. McKinley was on the verge of collapse at the time the funeral procession left the house and her physician decided it was best for her to remain at home. The streets in front of the McKinley cottage before the funeral were one solid mass of citizens and soldiers. Thirty special trains arrived during the day and it is estimated that fully 60,000 strangers were in the city.

A chemical examination of the bullets and revolver used by Czolgosz failed to reveal any trace of poison.

Business was practically at a standstill throughout the country Thursday, and memorial services were held in churches and elsewhere.

The Knights of Pythias have taken steps to expel Senator Wellington from the order because of his remarks on the death of President McKinley, who was also a member.

Loren T. Lewis and Robert C. Titus have accepted the assignment of Judge Emery to act as counsel for Czolgosz upon his trial for murder in the first degree in killing President McKinley.

Investigation made by Police Inspector Schmunk of Cleveland reveals the startling possibility that a plot to assassinate President McKinley was laid a year or more ago, before he was elected for his second term.

Assassin Czolgosz was arraigned at Buffalo Tuesday charged with the murder of President McKinley. He refused to plead or even utter a word and his attorney, ex-Supreme Justice Lewis, entered a plea of not guilty.

During the progress of Thursday's memorial pageant at Chicago nearly 100 persons were injured or overcome. Many of these were the victims of their overwrought feelings, but others were caught in the pressure of the crowd.

Twenty anarchists, armed with double-barreled shotguns and 1,000 rounds of ammunition, are standing guard over the office of L'Aurore, the notorious anarchist publication at Spring Valley, Ills., which expressed joy at the murder of President McKinley. Two thousand citizens of adjoining towns have sent word that they are ready and anxious to assist in exterminating the reds.

Nearly 100 persons were injured in the crush at the Capitol when the doors were thrown open to allow the public to view the remains of the late President McKinley. Of the injured 32 were treated at the hospitals and removed to their homes in the police wagons. In addition 25 were sent home in private carriages. Forty were treated at the Capitol and eight cases were sent to the casualty hospital.

LABOR NEWS.

At a meeting of striking tin workers from the Star and the Monongahela plants, Pittsburg, at which 500 were present, it was decided by a unanimous vote to repudiate the New York agreement and continue the strike indefinitely.

The steel strike is practically over in all the mills in the Pittsburg district but the tin plate plants. The tin workers are still dissatisfied and refuse to go to work, pending further information from the Amalgamated officials.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the American Sugar Refining company the capital stock of the corporation was increased from $75,000,000 to $90,000,000.

The liquidator of the Leipzig bank, which failed some time ago, reports that the deficit on Sept. 10 was 43,300,000 marks. It is probable that the shareholders will get back 50 per cent on their investments.

BRITISH-BOER WAR NEWS.

Lord Kitchener reports that the Boers have captured a company of mounted infantry and two guns at Vlakfontein. One officer was killed. The Boers, in superior force, surrounded the British.

In view of the imminence of the reinvasion of Natal by General Louis Botha, with a force of 1,500 men, a special issue of The Gazette has called out a number of men of the Natal corps to muster at Pietmaritzburg.

September 15 was the last day for the Boers to surrender under Lord Kitchener's proclamation. No news has been received in regard to effect of the proclamation, but there are no reliable indications that there have been any important surrenders.

Corrected casualty returns show that the squadron of the Seventeenth Lancers in their fight with the force of Boer Commandant Smuts sustained a remarkable loss. Of a total force probably not exceeding 100 they lost 3 officers and 30 men killed and 2 officers and 31 men wounded.

Kritzinger, while endeavoring to force a passage of the Orange river near Herschel Friday morning, rushed the camp of a party of Lovatt's scouts. He failed to cross the river, but the scouts lost heavily. Lieutenant Colonel the Hon. Andrew Murray, and Captain Murray, his adjutant, were killed.

General French reports that Commandant Smuts, in order to break through a cordon, rushed on a squadron of the Seventeenth lancers at Eland's River Poort, killing 3 officers and 20 men and wounding 1 officer and 30 men. The Boers, who were dressed in khaki like the British troops, lost heavily.

A dispatch from Lord Kitchener says that the Boers, Sept. 17, ambushed three companies of mounted infantry with three guns, commanded by Major Gough, in the vicinity of Scheeper's Nek. After severe fighting the British were overpowered and lost their guns. Two officers and 14 men were killed and 5 officers and 25 men wounded. Five officers and 150 men were made prisoners.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

The president has appointed Colonel James M. Bell, Eighth cavalry, and president of the military board of review, to be brigadier general, vice Brigadier General Ludlow, deceased.

President Roosevelt and cabinet held their first conference Friday. Many matters of importance were discussed and the members told the president of the status of affairs in their respective departments.

Through the recovery of $200,000 in cash and securities in Huntington, W. Va., the government authorities now have possession of about $360,000 of the funds embezzled by Oberlin M. Carter, former captain of the United States engineer corps at Savannah, Ga.

It is expected that one of the results of General Wood's visit to Washington will be the issuance of orders soon, making reductions in certain cases of the Cuban tariff, of which the most important will be on sugar machinery and materials for railroad building.

The Schley court of inquiry reconvened at Washington Friday and proceeded with the examination of witnesses. The testimony taken was unfavorable to Admiral Schley. It related to the bombardment of the Spanish cruiser Cristobal Colon, May 31, 1898, and to possibility of coaling warships off Santiago.

General Leonard Wood, accompanied by his secretary, Alexander Gonzales, has arrived in Washington. While there he will have conferences with President Roosevelt and with Secretary Root. The business which calls General Wood to Washington at this time is to submit to Secretary Root the new electoral law adopted by the constitutional convention.

IT'S TOMATO CHOWDER NOW.

That good old American dish which used to deserve its name of clam chowder seems to have degenerated these days into a thick, sour-tasting tomato soup, says the New York Sun. There is scarcely a place in town where one can get clam chowder now as it was made when the dish earned the great measure of popularity upon which its disreputable successor is still trading.

Instead of clams tomatoes have become the chief ingredient, and the result is an indigestible mess that recalls only in name the savory chowder of better days, and nine times out of ten the deluded diner who partakes of it will be afflicted with heartburn for hours afterward.

At the seashore where clams are abundant one would naturally expect to get a chowder made after the old orthodox fashion, but in the neighborhood of New York at least there remains only disappointment for anyone who banks on this hope. Even there the enterprising and inexpensive tomato has won the fight, and it is that product and not the clam that dominates the chowder.

Another instance of the aggressiveness of the tomato is to be found in most restaurants that serve spaghetti. This, too, instead of being an appetizing mixture of macaroni and meat gravy, topped with Parmesan, has come to be nothing more than a sauce of tomato poured over the spaghetti. So that it is little wonder that these two dishes—clam chowder and spaghetti—which formerly were so highly esteemed by those who knew good eating, have fallen in favor hers, and it seems probable that the time is at hand when they will be found on the lists of only the poorest grade of eating places.

SECURING A LOWER BERTH.

Those who travel a good deal and are compelled to make use of night appreciate the value of a lower berth in a sleeper. All kinds of tricks are resorted to to secure one and the agent must keep his eyes wide open if he would escape several kinds of trouble. One of Chicago's veteran passenger men the other day told of a practice that was common before it was decided not to show the diagrams of the cars to passengers.

"A customer would come into the office," said he, "and ask to be shown the diagrams of the various sleepers. In looking them over he would notice that John Smith had a lower reserved until four o'clock in the afternoon, as he was not certain that he would be able to take the train that day. After getting the name well fixed in his mind the tricky customer would purchase a ticket and go back to his office. About two o'clock he would send a messenger boy to the agency with a notice that John Smith had decided to take the berth he had conditionally reserved, whereupon it would be turned over to the messenger. When John Smith called at four o'clock the diagram showed that his lower berth was gone. It would not be proper to quote all that John Smith would say at such times. To save ourselves from these embarrassments and to protect our customers, we recently decided to treat our diagrams as confidential."

PROVISIONS FOR AN ARMY.

People who cross the Atlantic in one of the great liners are in no danger of famishing. A gentleman with a penchant for statistics has given the public the average supply aboard the Deutschland at the beginning of every voyage between New York and Hamburg, and, of course, all the other big ships are provisioned in about the same way.

In the first place, there are 40 tons of ice to keep things eatable and drinkable, and these are the things that were on the ice on a recent trip across: Fourteen beeves, ten calves, 29 sheep, 26 lambs, 9 hogs, 1,500 chickens, geese and game birds, 1,700 pounds of fish, 400 pounds of tongues and sweetbreads, 1,700 dozens of eggs, 14 barrels of oysters and clams, 175 barrels of potatoes, 75 barrels of other vegetables, 20 crates of tomatoes and celery, 200 dozen heads of lettuce, 90 barrels of flour, 500 pounds of oatmeal and hominy, 1,300 pounds of butter, 2,200 quarts of milk, 300 quarts of cream, 1,000 big molds of ice cream, 4 tons of fruit, 12,000 quarts of wine and liquor, 15,000 quarts of beer and 400 tons of drinking water.

Of course all of this is not used on each trip, but enough is carried to provide a liberal margin.

The Level of Lake Erie.

Lake Erie is now three and one-half feet below the city base of level, the standard from which the city takes measurements of altitude. What is known to engineers as the "city datum" represents the high water mark of the lake in 1838. It cannot be said that the level of the lake is steadily lowering, as some believe, for the level has risen above and gone below the city datum several times since 1838. It is interesting to note that the greatest depth in Lake Erie directly north from Cleveland is 83 feet. The greatest depth in the lake is more than 200 feet, off Long Point.—Cleveland Leader.

The manuscripts of various successful books have been declined by publishers before finally reaching a resting place; but when one considers the natural fallibility of judgment regarding the matter of popular taste and liking, it is really not extraordinary that new writers should quite often make a success in one publisher's hands even although others have hesitated to make the venture.

A short time ago a young author whose book had just been accepted was talking to his publisher, and Mr. John Habberton, the genial author of "Hellen's Babies," happened to be present, says the Literary Era. The publisher finally turned to the young writer, saying: "Your book has one great element of weakness, which, however, I hope may not be fatal."

"What is that?" replied the startled youth, with almost a gasp of consternation.

"Well, it has been rejected by enough publishers; it takes at least four or five rejections to make a phenomenally successful book."

Mr. Habberton, with the courtly bow which his friends know so well, and which is only one of his many charms, promptly responded: "It was rejected 21 times!"

Keeping a lighthouse is essentially womanly work. A well regulated woman takes pride in bright, well-kept things and orderly surroundings. Her heart leaps up when she beholds the perfection of Heaven's first law, says Mary Nimmo Balentine, in Woman's Home Companion.

The orderly woman can have a programme of work for the week just like any other housekeeper, although keeping a lighthouse is not light housekeeping, by any manner of means. In some lighthouses days are set aside for sewing, for burnishing the lamps, for reading and writing, some of the keepers having an extensive correspondence; and, if you please, there are reception days, for a rule of the board enjoins the keepers to show the light and the station to sightseers. Lighthouse life cannot be dull to a lover of such responsive friends as books and music. And so the identity of the tall, grim light tower is lost in the home under the wooing influence of the social and domestic atmosphere of the woman behind the lamp.

STEAMBOAT IN THE WOODS.

"Did you ever notice?" asked an observing man, according to the Chicago Tribune, "that when an unusual event occurs anywhere there is always somebody who is reminded of an event which overshadows the news of the day? I met a Kansas man today, who, after he had talked about the great calamity in Texas, told me that it was 'nearly as bad as one of the June rises of the Missouri river.'

"Then he went on to tell me some of the experiences which Kansas and Missouri farmers had in consequence of great overflows that often changed the boundary lines of counties, and two states. In one case a Kansas town by reason of the shift of the channel of the river found itself in Missouri. But his capsheaf story was that of an old steamboatman who, during one of the rises of which he spoke, cut across a field in Kansas with his boat, hoping thereby to make time. The water was high and swift in the forests, and the steamboatman took the wheel and steered his craft right through the woods and across fields. He concluded to tie up to one of the big trees during the night and resume his voyage on the following morning. But lo! when the morning came the waters had abated considerably, so that the steamer was stuck in the mud. The waters continued to abate, and by the second night there wasn't enough to drink. The river gradually resumed its old channel, according to the Kansas man, and the boat was finally left there, right in the woods. The boat was dismantled of most of its furnishings, but there were the outlines of a boat just the same. A farmer lived in the craft one winter, and in the following spring the boat became the abode of crows and other things. The moss gathered about the hull, the smokestacks rusted away, and at last there was a crash in the stillness of the forest, and the only dry land steamboat in Kansas, or anywhere, fell to pieces."

The Drum in Italy's Army.

The reason given for the substitution of the drum for the trumpet in the Italian army is that in these days of short service a young soldier learns to march to the drum far sooner than to the trumpet. Again, it is found that trumpeters are very subject to pulmonary affections.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

MY CAPTIVE.
BY JOSEPH A. ALTSHELER.
AUTHOR OF "A SOLDIER OF MANHATTAN" "THE SUN OF SARATOGA" ETC.
COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY JOSEPH A. ALTSHELER.

"Then I'm afraid there's no chance for a compromise, and there hasn't been for four or five years. Either we go free or we do not. You English like to boast of your courage and tenacity, and we make the same boast of ourselves. It has to be fought out to the end, win or lose."

"I am sorry."

She spoke truthfully, for she looked her sadness, but the wind soon blew it away, bringing back the sparkle to her eyes and the rose flush to her cheeks. We stopped about noontime to rest, and Old Put made use of the opportunity to hunt for green grass, stopping at times to look benevolently at us and to indicate that his state of mind was content. We were both hungry, but we had nothing better to do than to watch Old Put nibble for his dinner, which he did very industriously until I called to him and told him it was time to start.

Julia again refused to mount the horse, and we strolled on together. I felt safe now, and, coming to a cabin whose owner had been bold enough to remain and guard his own, I offered to trade him the fine British coat I wore for any coat of his own, however old, provided it would hold together on my shoulders. He produced the coat and made the trade, by which he was a great gainer, and asked me no questions, differing therein from the country people of the northern regions through which I had campaigned so long. Moreover, he looked very curiously at the tall girl with me.

"You are American," he said to me just before we started.

"Yes."

"The lady looks English."

"She is English."

"It is very strange."

"You are right. It is strange."

Such were my thoughts as we walked away. The man who seemed to live there alone, half hunter, half farmer, stood in his cabin door and watched us until we passed out of sight.

I prevailed upon the girl to ride for awhile, but after an hour on horseback she dismounted again, saying that she preferred to walk. About the middle of the afternoon we met a farmer who confirmed my belief that Morgan had passed on toward the Broad river, though he knew nothing of Tarleton. An hour later as we were passing through thick woods some one cried out to us to halt. I almost sprang up in my astonishment, and the girl uttered a little cry of fright, for neither of us supposed any one to be near, having seen nothing and heard nothing, and Old Put, I suppose, was tired or dreaming.

"Stop," I said to Julia. "It may be friends."

Two men on horseback came from a position among the dense trees. They were dressed in rough homespun gray and looked like Americans, the two facts together inducing the belief that they were militia scouts of Morgan's.

"An American and his lady," said the foremost to me. "You are a soldier, are you not?"

"Yes," I replied.

"And on the way to Morgan, too, I take it. Keep straight to the northwest, and you will overtake him. We are good patriots too."

"Thank you," I said. "Morgan seems to keep a good watch. I hope that we will overtake him before nightfall."

He had ridden very close to me.

"I don't think it, my fine fellow," he said. "We will take good care of both you and the lady, for we are Tarleton's scouts, not Morgan's."

I saw then that the appearance and manner of the men had deceived me, but no thought of surrender to them entered my mind. I snatched at my pistol. The man, who was as wary as a panther, saw the movement, and, drawing his own weapon, we fired almost at the same time. I saw him reel in his saddle, but not fall, and I was conscious of a thrill of pain in my head, followed by a heavy, crushing sensation, as if I had been struck by a hammer. I staggered, falling to the ground upon my hands and knees. Consciousness left me entirely for a few minutes and then came back dimly, just enough for me to dream and to create events for myself.

In this dream I saw a girl with tawny gold hair and blue eyes raise a pistol and fire at the second man, who had drawn a cavalry saber. The man, shouting with pain, dropped his saber, clapped his other hand to his shoulder and galloped after his comrade, whose horse, frightened by the shots, was running away with him. Both disappeared in the wood, and the girl, who stood for a minute or two watching, the empty pistol in her hand, seemed to feel sure that they would not come back, for she rushed to the wounded man on the ground and raised his head in her arms.

I watched her with a curious interest, this blond girl who had been so bitter of speech and yet so much the master of herself. The man had risen to his knees once, but had fallen back from weakness. His eyes closed almost, his face became very white, and there was blood on his hair. She raised his head and kissed his face, once, twice and more, and begged him not to die. "Live! Live for yourself and for me, Philip, for I love you, my hero!" she said, and a great bay horse stood looking and listening. Then she flew to a little brook she saw flowing through the wood, and bringing water in her cap poured it upon the man's face, while the horse nodded approval. Then she washed the blood out of his hair and bound up the wound with something white. "No, Put, I will never leave him," she said, "I will never leave him, for he has saved me from death and worse, and I love him—I tell you I love him!" whereupon the great horse nodded his approval with extreme vigor.

I came to myself, and I was sorry that the dream was over. It had been pleasant, very pleasant, and I was willing to dream on. I had a headache, but when I put my hand to the spot which ached I knew that the wound was not serious; that it was nothing but a trifle. A bullet, clipping under the skin, had glanced along my skull and passed on, inflicting a slight concussion, like a heavy blow from a man's fist, but that was all. I had seen 20 men who had suffered similar wounds in battle and were as good as ever the next day.

"You are not going to die, are you, Mr. Marcel?" tearfully asked the most modest and demure of blond English maidens, standing before me.

"My intentions are the precise opposite," I replied. "I have so much to live for."

It is curious how rapidly the feelings develop under the stress of great hardships and danger. The day and a half that I had been with her were equal to a year and a half of ordinary time.

"Would you bring me a little of that cool water to drink in your cap?" I asked. "I see that the cap is wet already, and it won't hurt it."

She brought the water, and I drank. It was as cold as ice and as refreshing as nectar as it ran down my throat. I have seen men lying on the battlefield begging for water as if it were the one great gift of heaven to man.

I felt twice the man that I was a minute before. The girl was strangely quiet, even shy, and more than ever I felt as if it were my chief duty to protect her.

"No, Julia," I said; "this rebel against the king means to live. So far from dying, I haven't had anything more than a knockdown which has left a sore spot on my head and a little ache inside it, but I can travel as well as ever. Here, Old Put is waiting for you. Get up and ride."

But she declined with indignation.

"I will not do that," she said. "You may be a rebel—in fact, I know you are—but you shall not walk while you are wounded. You must ride."

As I was still a little dizzy I yielded at last, though I did not like to do it, and rode for a couple of hours. Then, feeling as strong as ever, I dismounted and made Julia take her turn on horseback. But at the end of an hour she, too, dismounted, and we walked on together, as before, not talking much, but happy. The sun was again retreating before the night, and the western skies were aflame. The light fell full upon the girl's face, and her beauty, splendid and glowing before, was tender and spiritual now.

"We shall be in Morgan's camp soon, Julia," I said, "and I will have to resign my prisoner."

"I shall consider myself your prisoner until I am retaken by the English," she said.

I did not reply, but I was willing to accept my responsibilities.

Old Put, who was walking slowly behind us after his custom, raised his head and neighed. It was not a whinny, but a loud, sonorous neigh that could be heard afar. It was full of meaning too. And a quarter of a mile ahead of us on one of the open ridges I saw the cause—a troop of a dozen horsemen riding toward us at a half gallop. Old Put neighed again, long, loud and promptly.

"Ought we not to escape into the wood?" exclaimed Julia in alarm. "There is time yet. Those troopers may be English."

She did not seem to notice the strangeness of a suggestion from her that she hide from the English, but I was confident.

"They are not English," I said. "They are Americans. Old Put knows his friends. Trust him."

In truth, the horse uttered his loud and joyous neigh a third time, and I had not the slightest apprehension, for it was impossible to deceive Old Put when he was wide awake.

The horsemen saw us and quickened their pace to a gallop. As they approached I could recognize the Continental buff and blue, and, telling Julia that it was all right, we walked gravely on to meet them. Old Put, his demonstrations of joy made, followed after with equal sobriety.

They were dashing riders, those men, and their curiosity must have been aroused by the sight of the girl, for they came on at the long, swinging gallop of the good cavalryman and quickly inclosed us.

"Good evening, colonel," I said to the leader, saluting. "I am happy to see you again and to join your command."

It was Colonel William Washington, the distant cousin of our great commander in chief, one of the finest cavalry commanders of our time, a fine, open faced man of about 30.

"Why, Marcel—Phil Marcel!" he cried in surprise. "Is it you?"

"Yes, it is I, colonel."

"And the lady?"

"The lady is my prisoner, colonel, an English spy!"

"Did she give you that wound on your head?"

"I said a lady, colonel."

Every hat came off, and there was admiration as well as respect in the bow that each trooper made.

"The lady carried the news of our most important movements," I said, "and I was compelled to hold her a prisoner."

"You have done well, Mr. Marcel," said my colonel.

I thought so too. Perhaps I had done better than I thought.

"Now that I have brought the prisoner in," I said, "I will have to resign her into your hands, colonel."

"It will be but for a brief space, for the camp of Morgan is only three miles back. There are some American women there who will take care of her."

"What is that?"

"A lady cannot be shot or hanged as a spy, even though she be a spy."

He laughed the deep, hearty laugh that I like to hear from a man.

"Have no fear," he said. "We are Americans."

Then he laughed again that deep, resonant laugh which I like.

"I will send two men back with you and the prisoner, but I am on a scout to find Tarleton and ascertain when he is likely to attack us."

"Do we mean to make a stand?" I asked.

For the third time he laughed.

"Why, boy," he said, "you don't expect Morgan, who was with Arnold, the hero of Saratoga, to run away, do you? He only wanted a little time to drill his men and get his grip on them, and now he's ready to welcome Tarleton to the fray."

"Then you will have Tarleton by morning," I said, and I explained all that I had heard or learned otherwise in my flight with the prisoner, to which he listened with an interest that indicated its importance and made me feel mine.

"Good! Good, Marcel!" he exclaimed more than once. "This is precisely what we wanted to know. And so Mr. Tarleton is hot on our heels and will attack in the morning? Well, Philip Marcel, I think you will see tomorrow as pretty a little battle as was ever fought on this continent, and neither Colonel Tarleton nor I nor any other can tell yet what the result will be."

Julia was standing by me, and her old spirit suddenly flamed up.

"I can," she said, "and I only hope that instead of falling in the battle you will be taken a prisoner, for tomorrow night your army will not exist."

"Miss Howard," said Colonel Washington, bowing—I had given her name—"we have more admiration for the ladies than confidence in their military predictions."

CHAPTER X.

IN MORGAN'S CAMP.

Then we proceeded to the encampment, and Colonel Washington himself went with us, his plans being changed by my news. My head was buzzing with excitement. We were going to fight Tarleton at last, though with all the odds against us, numbers, discipline and arms, while Tarleton himself had won his reputation as the ablest and most successful cavalry commander in the British service. We might again experience the disgrace and disaster of Camden, but Morgan was no Gates, and perhaps, on the other hand, we might equal the exploit of the wild borderers at King's Mountain, though it was a little too much to hope for that. But still we would fight, and to a young man it always seems better to fight than to run.

"Old comrade," I said to my horse, "we fight the enemy tomorrow!"

He nodded joyously and then looked gravely at the bandage around my head.

"It is nothing," I said. "I will take it off tonight. My head is well."

He nodded again, as if all his troubles were over.

The wife of Captain Dunn of the South Carolina militia was in the camp, a lady whom I knew, my distant kinswoman, and Julia was given into her charge.

"Take good care of her, Cousin Anna," I said. "Remember that she is my prisoner."

"Your prisoner, is she?" she replied enigmatically. "But remember, Philip, that the captor often becomes the captive."

"Cousin Anna," I said indignantly, "I hope you are not going to preach our defeat by Tarleton on the very eve of battle. It will have a discouraging effect."

"I said nothing about the battle. Go and attend to your work, Philip. I will take care of the girl."

To Julia I said:

"We fight tomorrow, and I may not see you again."

Then I bent down and kissed her lips. She replied very simply and earnestly:

"May you live through it, Philip."

Cousin Anna's back was turned, and she did not see or hear.

I turned away and began to examine the camp and this field destined to be the scene of a memorable battle which was itself the opening of one of the greatest, most skillful and successful campaigns ever conducted on the soil of our continent.

We were on a long slope, consisting of several hills rising above each other like the seats of an amphitheater, though at a much greater elevation, as the slope was so slight that it offered no impediment to the gallop of a horse. The men were gathering up old rails, which they were using for the camp fires, and I noticed many old tracks of the feet of animals. To my question one of the men said:

"We are going to fight where the cows pastured. Don't you know that this army is camped on the cow pens of a very worthy man named Hannah? And these rails are the last that are left of his pens."

Behind us flowed the wide, deep and unfordable Broad river, retreat thus being cut off in case of defeat. I asked the meaning of this strange military maneuver which meant either victory or destruction, and again the explanation was ready:

"More than half of our men are militia, and you can never tell whether militia will run like rabbits or fight like devils. All early signs fail, and General Morgan says it's cheaper to have the river behind us and make 'em fight than to station regulars in the rear to shoot down the cowards."

Presently I saw General Morgan himself passing among the men and preparing for the expected attack in the morning. This was one of our real heroes, a fighter and leader and no politician, a man whom the great Washington esteemed and loved to reward. I had seen him at Saratoga and elsewhere, and his figure as well as his name always drew attention. Over six feet high and built in proportion, with a weight of 200 pounds, and a large, fine, open face, he was a type of the true American, the best of all men in mind and body.

There was plenty of provender in the camp, and I gave Old Put the first solid meal that had come to him in several days. I wanted him to be in good trim for the morrow, for he and I were to take our proper place with Washington's cavalry, to which we belonged, only a handful of men, but able and true and capable of doing great things in the nick of time. There had been some question about the bandage on my head, which I wore as a precaution against taking cold in the scalp wound, but I showed that it was only a trifle, and Colonel Washington rightfully remarked that such a slight wound would only increase a man's efficiency on the battlefield. Then he presented me with a fine saber, which I needed badly, and told me to lie down on the ground and go to sleep, but I could not sleep just then, and with the freedom of our colonial armies I roamed about the encampment.

The campfires flared up in the cold January darkness. The men sat around them, talking and playing cards with old greasy cards or singing the songs of the hills and the woods. Some of the soldiers were asleep on their blankets or the bare ground, for we were always a ragged and unhoused army at the best, and only a few of the officers had tents.

A sharp breeze came from across the river, and the flames bent to it, their light flickering over wild, brown faces that knew only the open air, wind, rain, hail or whatever came. Most of them still carried their curved and carved powderhorns and their bullet pouches, inseparable companions, over their shoulders, and their long, slender barreled rifles, so unlike the British muskets, lay at their sides.

Smoke rose from the fires and blew in the faces of the men, deepening the brown and giving them another shade of the Indian. A curse mingled now and then with the singing and the talk of the card players, and from the borders of the camp came the stamp of the horses and an occasional neigh. In the darkness, half lighted by the reeling fires, the camp became a camp of wild men, whose faces the wavering light molded into whatever grotesque images it chose.

We were but a little army, only 900 strong, but many of us had come great distances and from places wide apart. An arc of 1,000 miles would scarce cover all our homes. There were the militia, South Carolinians and Georgians, raw troops, whom one can never trust; then the little remnant of the brigade that De Kalb had led on the fatal day of Camden, splendid soldiers whose line the whole British army could not break, the survivors now eager to avenge the disgrace their brethren suffered on that day; then the staunch Virginia troops, that we knew would never fail, and near them our two or three score of cavalrymen under Washington—a little army, I say again, but led by such leaders as

State of Minnesota }
County of Red Lake } ss

In Probate Court,
Special Term,
Sept. 16, 1901.

In the matter of the estate of Anna Kees,
Deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Michael Kees, administrator of the estate of Anna Kees, deceased, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of, the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences, and praying that license be to him granted to sell all of the real estate that Anna Kees died seized of.

And it appearing by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay said debts, legacies or expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debt, legacies and expenses, to sell all of said realestate.

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 21st day of October, A. D. 1901, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court house in the probate office, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Michael Kees, administrator of said estate to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered, that this order shall be published once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls, in said county.

By the Court,
J. T. Knight,
Judge of Probate.

AT THE AGE OF 95

NELSON N. BOURDON SUBMITS TO AMPUTATION OF LEFT LEG.

OPERATION A SUCCESS AND INDICATIONS FAVORABLE FOR RECOVERY.

Nelson N. Bourdon, Red Lake Falls' oldest inhabitant, who celebrated his ninety-fifth birthday anniversary September 14, on Monday had his left leg amputated above the knee. He had been suffering with Old Man's Gangrene, which had afflicted him for four months past, causing such constant and intense suffering that after much hesitancy it was decided to remove the affected portion of the leg as his only relief from death by slow torture. Mr. Bourdon himself was heartily in favor of the move, which in the face of his extreme age, involved such a strong probability of a fatal result. The affected leg had turned as black as coal up to the knee, all feeling was gone, and it was as hard as a bone. The smell was very offensive. Monday at 2 p. m. he was put on the operating table, after having deliberately and carefully prepared for death, should it come. Dr. I. Lemieux performed the operation in eight minutes, assisted by Dr. J. Gendron. Mrs. Geo. Marchand administered the chloroform. In a few minutes after the ordeal Mr. Bourdon regained consciousness and later fell into a peaceful sleep. In the evening he awoke, and was as merry as a cricket, asking for his pipe, and enjoying the best smoke, as he stated, that he had had in months. He slept soundly that night, and has been freer from pain than he was before the operation. Strange enough, not a particle of fever has developed and it is thought the patient will surely recover. He is a wonderful old man, with intellect, eyesight and hearing unimpaired, and taking a keen interest in current events, and this last experience will furnish a case unique in medical annals. The fortitude displayed by the patient is said to have been extremely touching.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. P. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at W. A. Schreiter's Drug Store.

Answered Death's Call.

J. P. Benoit died Tuesday night at 9 o'clock, from typhoid fever, which seemed to have taken a death grip on him from the first. The funeral occurred this morning, a requiem mass being sung at St. Joseph's church.

Deceased was 32 years of age and leaves a wife and four small children to mourn his loss. He had been engaged in business in this city for over five years and was the junior member of the firm of Shagnan & Benoit. Mr. Shagnan will purchase his partner's interest and continue the business.

To the bereaved relatives we extend heartfelt sympathy.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, district court clerk, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely." This remedy is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

CANNOT BE BARRED

NON-VACCINATED CHILDREN CANNOT BE SHUT OUT OF SCHOOL.

Children cannot be shut out of the schools for failure to be vaccinated except in case of an epidemic.

Such was the ruling of the attorney general furnished Saturday to J. W. Olson, state superintendent of public schools.

This is in direct opposition to the position of the state and municipal health authorities. Mr. Olson directed this policy in Sherburne county, and drew on himself the wrath of Dr. Bracken of the state board of health. The attorney general's opinion sustains the superintendent, and children not vaccinated may not be deprived of school privileges unless an epidemic actually exists.

Married at Grand Forks.

The marriage of Gerhard Didrichson to Dora Hayden will be solemnized by Rev. Fr. Conaty at Grand Forks to-day, Mr. Didrichson having gone over to the Forks on the N. P. yesterday.

The groom is the popular clerk in W. A. Schreiter's drug store and the bride a charming young lady whose former home was at Terrebonne. They have a wide circle of friends whose very best wishes are theirs. It is expected that Mr. and Mrs. Didrichson will return on the N. P. to-morrow and that they will go to housekeeping in the rooms recently occupied by A. M. Anderson and family.

Murphy-Kaufer.

Wednesday evening at 7:30 at St. Mary's church occurred the wedding ceremony, which united for life two of Red Lake Falls' most popular young people—Mr. Wm. A. Murphy, general collector for the Plano Manufacturing Co., and Miss Mamie Kaufer, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Kaufer.

Miss Josie Kaus struck up the wedding march and promptly at the appointed hour the bride's mother arrived, escorted by E. S. Bryont, one of the ushers, and accompanied by her daughter's life long friend, Mrs. C. A. Whittaker, of St. Paul; following these at a little interval, the groom, with his best man, James Powers; the maid of honor, Miss Cora Arnet, of St. Paul, cousin of the bride, attended by J. R. Pouliot, one of the ushers; and finally the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away at the foot of the altar. The ceremony was brief and soon over, the happy couple led the way to the carriages amid showers of rice.

The bride was the picture of loveliness in a costume of silk mull, with a train and veil, and carried bride roses; the bridesmaid carried pink roses and wore a gown of blue muslin de soie. The groom was attired in full dress suit.

After the ceremony a reception from eight to ten at the home of the bride's parents was attended by the immediate relatives of the family, the best man and ushers.

Death of L. B. Eastman.

Mrs. L. B. Eastman last Thursday received a telegram to the effect that her husband, who left here July 11 for Colorado, in search of relief from pulmonary troubles, was very low. Mrs. Eastman had time to catch the train and left at once, but when she reached St. Hilaire another telegram was received announcing Mr. Eastman's death. She then went at once to Humbolt, Iowa, where the last sad meeting was to take place.

Deceased was accompanied by his brother H. O. Eastman, and was overtaken by the grim reaper at Trinidad, Col., from which point the remains were shipped to Humbolt for interment.

Mr. and Mrs. Eastman came to the city last March from Armstrong, Iowa, and opened the Racket Store in H. H. Zaiser's building. Since her husband's departure the business has been carried on by Mrs. Eastman, assisted by Miss Fanny Eastman.

The sympathy of many new but warm friends is with the ladies in their bereavement.

CREAMERY PROSPERS

PAID OUT SNUG SUMS TO PATRONS LAST MONTH.

WILL CLOSE NOVEMBER 15, AFTER SIX MONTHS' RUN.

S. C. Johnson, butter-maker for the Red Lake Falls Co-operative Creamery Association, has kindly given us the following figures taken from his last month's report. Mr. Johnson says the next report will show a gain of one-cent a pound on the price of butter fat. Last year the creamery closed down in September, while this year it will be profitably operated until November fifteenth, making a six months' run. This season has demonstrated the success of the institution, and next year, judging from the preparations being made by members of the association to increase their herds, the output of the plant will be almost doubled, thus making the profits larger, as the expenses will increase but little. Following is Mr. Johnson's report:

No. lbs milk received	74,893
Average test	4.20
Lbs butter	3,573
Lbs butter fat	3,165
RECEIPTS.
Total receipts	659.52
DISBURSEMENTS
Paid to patrons, net	541.40
For sinking fund	37.44
Other expenses	80.68
	659.52

RED LAKE LAND

INDIAN COMMISSIONER JONES THINKS ITS FINEST IN THE WORLD.

Indian Commissioner Jones and the other members of the investigating party have returned from their trip to Red Lake. In a long conversation with the Press Commissioner Jones said:

"It's the finest land in the world; at least the finest unopened Indian reservation in the country. Every bit of it is agricultural in character. If I could select a thousand acres I would give $15 to $20 an acre for it." Continuing Mr. Jones stated that the Department had the authority to treat with the Indians without any further legislation of Congress and was only awaiting a favorable opportunity to do so. Now, he said, was the right time to act. All the people in Northern Minnesota, who are interested, should get together and bring pressure to bear on the Minnesota delegation to congress, with whom the decision of the question now virtually lies.

Referring to the method of opening Mr. Jones was emphatically opposed to any more free homesteads. To propose this, he said, was to kill the whole plan. He favors opening the whole reservation, alloting the Indians land in the timber, paying them cash for the balance and then selling the agricultural land to bona fide settlers at auction. The money received by the Indians should and would go, he believed, to the Red Lake Indians and this fact, he said, must be impressed upon the Indians by our citizens. As to the time of opening, he said there was no reason why it could not be opened soon if the Indians would consent, which he thought very probable.

RE-ORGANIZED

THE ATHENIANS AND SPARTANS REPLACES H. S. O.

The High School Organization met Saturday and reorganized. There was no program. It was decided to reorganize the literary work. Instead of one society there are now two, named respectively the Athenians and Spartans. Each society will furnish literary programs on every alternate two weeks. On intervening weeks joint debates between the two societies will be held.

All programs occur Friday afternoons beginning at three o'clock and the public is urged to be largely represented at every meeting.

Stepped Into Live Coals.

"When a child I burned my foot frightfully," writes W. H. Eads, of Jonesville, Va., "which caused horrible leg sores for 30 years, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured me after everything else failed." Infallible for Burns, Cuts, Scalds, Sores, Bruises and Piles. Sold by W. A. Schreiter, druggist.

'NOTHER JAIL BIRD.

APPROPRIATED ANOTHER MAN'S CLOTHES AND LODGED IN JAIL.

James Bede thought Charlie Sundstrom's trosseau just the thing for himself. Accordingly he swiped it—vest, pants, neckties, watch chain, fountain pen and all, and lit out for St. Hilaire, after selling the pen to Arastide Robillard for twenty-five cents. This was on Wednesday last. He was caught at the Saintly city Friday and had an examination Saturday before Judge Toupin, who fixed his bail at $200, pending his appearance before the Grand Jury. Bede failed to secure bail and now keeps company with "Dotty" in the county jail.

BIG DITCHING JOBS

Friday at St. Paul the state drainage commission awarded contracts for 16.2 miles of ditches in Beltrami, Marshall and Roseau counties. The contracts aggregate $22,200, practically exhausting the drainage fund for the current year. The main ditches contracted for will open several thousand acres of state land, besides affording an opportunity for drainage to private holders, with an acreage several times greater. Beltrami county gets 3.7 miles in the Lost River ditch; Marshall 4 miles of 2 foot ditch, and Roseau eight and a half miles of 14 foot ditch.

The contract for the Lost river ditch was awarded to Halvor N. Engeland of Gully, Polk county, at 12 cents per cubic yard, or approximate total of $6,600. John R. McKinnon, of Crookston, got the Badger and Skunk Creek contract in Roseau county, which will amount to about $13,000. This ditch will be eight and a half miles long and 14 feet wide at the bottom, which will give it an average width of about 28 feet at the surface. The contract price is 14¾ cents per cubic yard. The contracts call for the completion of at least 50 per cent. of the work this year.

The Lost river ditch opens the channel of that river which has hitherto run through the soil and will bring into cultivation about three townships of land which are now worthless.

The New Solem ditch runs from a point eight miles north of Thief River Falls through the towns of New Folden and Marsh Grove into the Middle river. This will be a splendid ditch of inestimable value to this whole section of the state and will materially increase the territory tributary to Thief River Falls.

The Badger and Skunk Creek ditch is the longest one of the three and drains valuable lands in the vicinity of Roseau, the location being township 162, range 41-4. The ditch is in two sections. One portion extends from Badger down Skunk Creek to Badger Lake and the other from Badger Lake to a branch of the Roseau river.

It is estimated that one team will remove something like 30 cubic yards of earth per day and the work will be largely done by farmers.

Tot Causes Night Alarm.

"One night my brother's baby was taken with Croup," writes Mrs. J. C. Snider, of Crittenden, Ky., "it seemed it would strangle before we could get a doctor, so we gave it Dr. King's New Discovery, which gave quick relief and permanently cured it. We always keep it in the house to protect our children from Croup and Whooping Cough. It cured me of a chronic bronchial trouble that no other remedy would relieve." Infallible for Coughs, Colds, Throat and Lung troubles. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. A. Schreiter's.

ITS PRAISES LOUD

THE NORTHERN FARMER'S GOODS WORDS FOR THIS CITY.

Says the Northern Farmer: One of the most progressive and most promising of northern cities, situated in one of the very best counties of northwestern Minnesota, is Red Lake Falls, beautifully and picturesquely located at the junction of the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers. Red Lake county is abundantly blessed with rich soil, pure water and an abundance of timber and great natural pastures. Until half a dozen years ago it was part of Polk county, and owing to its fertility and general worth the parent county parted with the territory now comprising Red Lake county reluctantly, but the division was among the things inevitable, and the new county took a proud position from the start.

Red Lake Falls is the county seat of Red Lake county, and is a typical western little city of about 2,500 population, full of push and confidence. Its location at the junction of two important rivers is an enviable one from various points of view, but particularly owing to the splendid water power enjoyed, which is but partially utilized as yet, though the machinery of two flouring mills, a woolen mill, etc., is driven by this power. The lumbering industry is a most important one to Red Lake Falls, as it is collateral to other enduring branches now developing. It requires no great stretch of the imagination to foresee a beautiful and industrious city in the near future as the outgrowth of the Red Lake Falls of today since so many important elements are here combined for a great centre of population. As the lumbering interest wanes in the future rich fields and vast herds, endless sources of wealth will multiply to re-enforce the growth of the city. Manufacturing industries in great numbers are sure to rise to utilize the splendid water powers at the city's gates, since the field to be supplied is almost inexhaustible.

Both the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railways enter the city with their ample service, placing Red Lake Falls in easy communication with all points of the compass. Churches, schools and societies are well represented here, all well supported and all doing commendable work for society and the world in general. The English and French Catholics and the Presbyterians have good churches. The following societies are in a flourishing condition: Oddfellows, Rebekahs, Modern Woodmen, Royal Neighbors, Catholic Order of Foresters, Women's Catholic Foresters, Knights of the Maccabees, Ladies of the Maccabees, Red Men, G. A. R., Modern Brotherhood and the Masons organizing. The city has a good brass band, an efficient fire department, local and long distance telephone communication, and soon to enjoy the benefits of a good water and sewer system. It has two extensive brick yards, two bright and well conducted newspapers, numerous shops, stores, etc. many bright business and professional men, all these acquisitions conspiring to make a beautiful and prosperous town—a town worthy of the investigation of those seeking a new location.

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a few days the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider this a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

We, the jury find that the deceased came to his death from heart failure, caused by not taking Rocky Mountain Tea made by Madison Medicine Co. 35c. W. A. Schreiter.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

ECHOES OF THE ASSASSINATION.

Czolgosz was taken to Auburn penitentiary late Thursday night, there to await electrocution on the date set by the court.

Assassin Czolgosz collapsed completely on his arrival at Auburn prison and the officers accompanying him were obliged to carry him into the building. Later he expressed regret for his crime and sorrow for Mrs. McKinley.

The board of managers of the national military home at Marion, Ind., have discharged three inmates charged with treasonable utterances in connection with the assassination of President McKinley.

The health of Abner McKinley, brother of President McKinley, is causing his relatives and friends some concern. Since his return to New York from the funeral of the president at Canton to his home he has been completely prostrated.

The father, brother and sister of Assassin Czolgosz visited him in the Buffalo jail Wednesday. The interview lasted 35 minutes but no information leading to the implication of anyone else in the anarchistic plot to kill the president was given by the prisoner.

Emma Goldman, the anarchist lecturer, has been released by the Chicago authorities. Attorney Owens informed Magistrate Prindiville that the upper court had freed the men named as Miss Goldman's co-conspirators and that there was no evidence against her.

Leon F. Czolgosz was found guilty of murder in the first degree by a Buffalo jury, in having on Sept. 6 shot President William McKinley, the wounds inflicted afterwards resulting in the death of the president. The trial of the assassin consumed 8 hours and 26 minutes and covered a period of only two days. Practically all of this time was occupied by the prosecution. The defense offered no evidence, but Judge Lewis made a strong plea for the prisoner.

Leon F. Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, was sentenced Thursday afternoon to be electrocuted in Auburn state prison during the week beginning Oct. 28, 1901. Before sentence was passed the assassin evinced a desire to speak, but he could not get his voice above a whisper and his words were repeated to the court by his counsel. "There was no one but me," the prisoner said in a whisper. "no one else but me to do it and no one paid me to do it."

SCHLEY COURT OF INQUIRY.

The Schley court of inquiry was brought to a sudden termination Tuesday, 18 minutes after convening, by the announcement of the sudden death of Judge Jeremiah Wilson, senior counsel for Admiral Schley. The adjournment was for the day only.

In the Schley court of inquiry Wednesday Admiral Cotton testified that, in his opinion, warships could have been coaled at sea May 27, 1898, the day Admiral Schley left Santiago for Key West. Cotton was at Santiago that day with dispatches for the fleet. Captain Wise testified that on May 27 he had signalled Captain Philip of the Texas his opinion that Cervera was inside the harbor at Santiago, but the testimony was ruled out.

More evidence was brought out in the Schley inquiry Saturday to show that any of the navy officers under Schley at Santiago did not co-operate with him in his direction of the squadron. Captain McCalla of the Marblehead testified that so far as he knew the code of signals agreed upon with the Cuban insurgents was not made known to Schley. Commander Southerland, who commanded the Eagle, said the slow progress made in the cruise to Santiago was due to the fact that his vessel was one-third full of water.

The Schley court of inquiry was in session for only an hour and three-quarters Thursday, adjourning at 12:45 in order to permit its members and others engaged there to attend the funeral of Judge Wilson, late chief counsel for Admiral Schley. Captain Wise, who commanded the scout ship Yale during the war, was the principal witness and through him the department attempted to prove that Admiral Schley knew of the presence of Cervera's fleet in Santiago harbor at the time the retrograde movement was made toward Key West.

In the Schley court of inquiry Friday Judge Advocate Lemly read a letter from Admiral Sampson dated at Lake Sunapee, N. H., Sept. 20, asking that Messrs. Slayton and Campbell be allowed to represent him in the case. The court decided that they could not appear. The principal witnesses of the day were Lieutenant John Hood, who commanded the dispatch boat Hawk during the Spanish war, and Captain Bowman H. McCalla, who was in command of the Marblehead. The testimony of both these officers dealt with the delivery of dispatches from Admiral Sampson to Commodore Schley ordering him to proceed to Santiago.

State of Minnesota } SS
County of Red Lake }

In Probate Court.
Special Term.
Sept. 16, 1901.

In the matter of the estate of
Anna Kees,
Deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Michael Kees, administrator of the estate of Anna Kees, deceased, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of, the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences, and praying that license be to him granted to sell all of the real estate that Anna Kees died seized of.

And it appearing by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay said debts, legacies or expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debt, legacies and expenses, to sell all of said real estate.

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 21st day of October, A. D. 1901, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court house in the probate office, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Michael Kees, administrator of said estate to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered, that this order shall be published once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls, in said county.

Morgan, Washington, Howard and Pickens! Down the slopes the sentinels were on watch, but there was no fear of a surprise, for the scouts were just bringing in word that Tarleton could not come before daylight, and then owing to the slope and the open ground, his approach would be seen for a great distance.

The new men talked the most, some about the coming battle, eagerly voluble, others about things the farthest from it, but in the same eager, voluble, unreal tone. The veterans were silent mostly, and already with the calm and hardihood of long usage were seeking the rest and sleep which they knew they would need. A tall, thin man, with a wild face, whom I took to be one of the preachers at the great revival meetings so common on the border, rose in the midst of the camp and began to speak. Some listened, and some went on with the talking and card playing. I could hear the rustle of the pasteboard as the cards were shuffled. He was a fighting preacher, for he exhorted them to strike with all their strength in the coming battle and if they must die to die like Christian heroes. He prayed to God for the success of our arms, then stepped down from the stump on which he had stood and disappeared from my sight. He fought in the front line of the South Carolina militia the next day.

I sought my own place in our troop and lay down upon one half of my blanket, with the other half above me. Old Pat gnawed at some fodder beside me.

"Wake me up in the morning when you see the first red gleam of the British coats, old comrade," I said, and, knowing that he would do it, I closed my eyes.

But sleep would not come just yet, and I opened my eyes again to see that the fires were sinking and the darkness was coming down nearer to the earth. Half the men were asleep already; the others were quiet, seeking sleep, and the steady breathing of near 1,000 men in a close space made a strange, whistling noise like that of the wind. A flaring blaze would throw a streak of light across a sleeping soldier, showing only a head or a leg or an arm, as if the man had been disjointed. I would hear the faint rattle of a sentry's firelock and the heavy hoof of a horse as he crowded his comrades for room. An officer in dingy uniform would stalk across the field to see that all was right, and over us all the wind moaned and the darkness gathered close up to the edge of the dying fires. Weakness overpowered my excited brain and nerves, and I slept.

CHAPTER XI.

THE BATTLE.

I was awakened in the morning by the shoving of Old Put's cold nose, which said as plain as speech, "Rise, my master, and prepare for the enemy." Most of the other men were up, and the camp cooks had breakfast ready, bread, meat and coffee. I threw off my blanket and began to eat with the others.

It was the misty region between night and day, but the scouts had come in, telling us that the British would soon be at hand, and by the time the breakfast had been dispatched the rim of the sun appeared in the east, and the day was coming. Then the general formed the line of battle, and each of us took his appointed place.

On the first rise of the slope stood the South Carolina and Georgia militia, the raw troops, in a line about a sixth of a mile long, under the command of the iron nerved Pickens. They were expected to give way before the charge of the enemy, but Pickens was ordered to hold them in line until they could deliver at least two volleys with the precision in firing which all these farmer boys possessed. Then they were to retire behind the veteran regulars, under Howard, who were on the second slope 150 yards in their rear. An equal distance behind the second rise sat we cavalrymen on our horses, commanded to pull on our reins and wait the moment upon which the fate of the battle should turn.

Thus stood our little army, awaiting the rush of the battle which, as I have said, was to be one of the most important and decisive of our war. I stroked Old Pat's neck and bade him be cool, but he was as calm as I and needed no such encouragement. The man on my left, Dick Patterson, a Marylander, suddenly whispered:

"Don't you hear that faint rumbling noise, Phil? That's the hoof beats of cavalry."

"Silence there!" called the colonel.

No one spoke again; but, bending my ear forward, I could hear the far drum of the horses' hoofs, and I knew that the English army was coming. Old Put raised his head and sniffed the air. A red gleam appeared upon the horizon and broadened rapidly. A thrill and a deep murmur ran the length and breadth of our army.

"Oh, if those militiamen will only stand until the general bids them retire!" groaned the colonel.

That he believed they would not I knew, since it is a hard thing for new men to stand the rush of a seasoned army superior in numbers and equipment.

The sun was just swinging clear of the earth and betokened a brilliant morning, yet it was cold with the raw damp that often creeps into a South Carolina winter, and I for one wished that the men could see a little more of the day and loosen their muscles a little better before they fought.

The whole British army now appeared in the plain, cavalry, infantry and fieldpieces in a great red square. I could plainly see the officers giving their orders, and I knew that the attack would come in a few minutes.

"Eleven hundred of them and no raw troops," said Colonel Washington. "We know that exactly from our scouts. I think our cavalry will have something to do today."

One officer, in the gayest of uniforms, I took to be the barbarian Tarleton, the British leader whom we hated most of all, for, with all his soldierly qualities, he was a barbarian, as most of his brother British officers themselves say.

I wanted to see the faces of those farmer boys down there on the slope who were to receive the first and fiercest rush of the enemy and to check it. I knew that many of them were white to the eyes, but their backs were toward me, and I could not see.

"They don't appear to move," whispered Patterson. "Their line looks as firm as if it were made of iron."

A bugle sounded in the front of the British lines, and its notes, loud and mellow, came to us, but from our ranks rose only the heavy breathing and the shuffling of men and horses.

The trumpet call was followed by a cheer from more than a thousand throats, and then the British rushed upon us. The brass fieldpieces on their flanks opened with the thunder that betokens the artillery, and mingled with their roar were the rattle of the small arms, the throb of the drums and the clamorous hoof beats of their numerous cavalry.

"They are firing too soon and coming too fast," said Colonel Washington.

UP WENT THE LONG BARRELED BORDER RIFLES.

"By God, look at those militiamen! They are standing like the Massachusetts farmers at Bunker Hill."

It was so. The raw line of plowboys never wavered. It bent nowhere and was still as straight and strong as an iron bar. The plowboys knelt down, and, as the British cheer rose and the red line flaming in front swept nearer, up went the long barreled border rifles. I fancied that I could hear Pickens' command to fire, but I did not, and then all the rifles along a line a sixth of a mile long were fired so close together that the discharge was like the explosion of the greatest cannon in all the world.

The smoke rose in a thick black cloud, which a moment later floated a dozen feet above the earth and revealed the British squares, shattered and stopped, the ground in front of them red with the fallen, the officers shouting and reforming their lines, while our own plow lads, still as steady as the hills, were reloading their rifles with swift and steady hands.

We cavalrymen raised a great shout of approval, which the regulars on the rise in front of us took up and repeated. A second volley was all that we had asked from the militiamen, and it was sure now. Even as our cheer was echoing it was delivered with all the coolness and deadly precision of the first. Again the British line reeled and stopped, but they were veterans, led by the fiery Tarleton, and they came on a third time, only to meet the third of those deadly volleys, which swept down their front lines and blocked the way with their own dead and dying.

"The battle is won already," shouted Colonel Washington, "and it's the farmer boys of South Carolina and Georgia who have won it!"

Never did veteran troops show more gallantry and tenacity than those same farmer boys on that day. Two volleys were all that were asked of them, yet not merely once or twice, but many times, they poured in their deadly volleys at close range, again and again hurling back the British veterans, who doubled them in number and were supported by artillery and many cavalry, while we old soldiers in the two lines behind stood silent, not a gun or a saber raised, and watched their valor.

They retired at last, not broken, but in perfect order and at the command of Pickens, that we who stood behind them might have the chance to do our part of the day's work.

The smoke hung low in clouds and half hid either army, British and American. A brilliant sun above pierced through it in places and gleamed on clumps of men, some fallen, some still fighting. Shrieks and groans strove for a place with the curses and shouts.

Again rose the British cheer from the throats of all those who stood, for, the militiamen retiring before them, they thought it was a battle won, and they charged with fresh courage and vigor, pouring forward in a red avalanche. But the regulars, the steady old Continentals, who now confronted them, received them with another volley, and more infantrymen fell down in the withered grass, more riderless horses galloped away.

The battle had rolled a step nearer to us, but we cavalrymen, who formed the third line, were still silent and sat with tight reins, while directly in front of us rose a huge bank of flame and smoke in which friend and enemy struggled and fought. Even Old Put, with his iron nerves, fretted and pulled on the reins.

The long line of the British overlapped the Continentals, whom they outnumbered three to one, and the general, whose gigantic figure I could see through the haze of smoke, ordered them to retreat lest they should be flanked.

Again the British cheer boomed out when they saw the regulars giving ground, for now they were sure that victory was theirs, though more hardly won than they had thought. But the retreat of the regulars was only a feint and to give time for the militiamen behind them to come again into action. General Morgan galloped toward us, waving his sword to Washington, and every one of us knew that our moment had come.

"Forward!" was the single command of our leader, and the reins and the sabers swung free as we swept in a semicircle around the line of our friends and then at the enemy. At the same moment the regulars, ceasing to yield, charged the astonished foe, and poured in a volley at close range, while the militiamen threw themselves in a solid mass upon the British flank.

We of the cavalry were but 80 strong, with 50 more mounted volunteers behind us under Major McCall, but we were a compact body of strong horses and strong horsemen, with shortened rifles and flashing sabers, and we were driven straight at the heart of the enemy like the cold edge of a chisel.

We slashed into the British, already reeling from the shock of the Continentals and the militiamen, and they crumpled up before us like dry paper before a fire. Our rifles were emptied, and the sabers were doing the silent but more deadly work. Amid all the wild din of the shouting and the musketry and the blur of the smoke and the flame I knew little that I was doing except hack, hack, and I was glad of it. I could hear steel gritting on bone, and the smell of leather and smoke and blood arose, but the smoke was still in my eyes, and I could only see enough to strike and keep on striking. We horsemen, 130 strong, were still a solid, compact body, a long gleaming line like a sword blade thrust through the marrow of the enemy. We had cut our way directly to the heart of the English army, and their broken squares were falling asunder as our line of steel lashed and tore. The red army reeled about over the slopes like a man who has lost power over his limbs. I struck at a trooper on my left, but he disappeared, and a second trooper on my right raised his saber to cut me down. I had no time to fend off the blow, and in one swift instant I expected to take my place with the fallen, but a long muscular brown neck shot out, two rows of powerful white teeth inclosed the man's sword arm, and he screamed aloud in pain and fright.

"Do you surrender?" I cried.

"Yes, yes, for God's sake, take him off!" he shouted. "I can fight a man, but not a man and a wild devil of a horse at the same time!"

"Let him go," I said to Old Put, and, the horse unclasping his teeth, the man gave up his sword.

The smoke was lifting and clearing away somewhat, and the fire of the rifles had declined from a steady crackle to jets and spurts. A dozen of the militiamen had seized one of the brass fieldpieces of the British, and Howard's Continentals already held the other. Everywhere cries of "I surrender, I surrender! Quarter, quarter!" arose from the British horse and foot, who were throwing down their arms to receive from us that quarter which we willingly gave, but which the bloody Tarleton had so often denied to our men.

I could scarce believe what I saw. The whole British army seemed to be killed, wounded or taken. The muskets and bayonets, the swords and pistols, rattled as they threw them upon the ground. Whole companies surrendered bodily. An officer, his gay uniform splashed with mud and blood, dashed past me, lashing his horse at every jump. It was Tarleton himself, and behind him came Washington pursuing with all his vigor and lunging at the fleeing English leader with a bayonet fastened at a rifle's end. He returned after awhile without Tarleton, but there was blood on his bayonet. Tarleton, though wounded in the shoulder, escaped through the superior speed of his horse, to be taken with Cornwallis and the others at Yorktown.

The general raised his sword and cried to us to stop firing and striking, for the field was won and the battle was over, and he spoke truly. Far away showed the red backs of some of the English fleeing at the full speed of their horses, but they were only a few, and almost their entire army lay upon the field, dead and wounded, or stood there our prisoners. The defeat that so many of us feared had proved to be the most brilliant little victory in our history, a masterpiece of tactics and valor, the decisive beginning of the great campaign which won us back the southern colonies, one of the costliest of all her battles to England. I have told you how it was now, just as the histories, both English and American, tell it to you. All honor and glory to the gallant plowboys of South Carolina and Georgia who received the first shock of the British army and broke it so bravely! Of the 1,100 British veterans who attacked us only 200 escaped from the field, and we took all their cannon, baggage, ammunition and small arms, even of those who escaped, for they threw them away in their flight. The killed, wounded and taken just equaled the numbers of our entire army, and we had only 12 men dead.

CHAPTER XII.

LOOKING AHEAD.

I returned toward the Broad river, where, under the lee of a little hill, a tent had held six or seven friendly women. Julia came out, her face still pale, for she had heard all the crash and tumult of the battle.

"It is over, Julia," I said—I had hid my bloody sword—"and the British army no longer exists."

"And the victory is yours! Yesterday I thought it impossible."

"Your countrymen make the same mistake over and over again, but they pay the price."

We walked toward the field, and we met some men bringing in a gray haired prisoner, a tall, fine looking officer. Julia, crying aloud in her joy, ran forward and embraced him. He returned the embrace again and again with the greatest tenderness.

"Father," said Julia, "we are now prisoners together."

I watched them for a few minutes, and then I stepped forward and said:

"Good morning, Major Howard."

He stared at me in the icy way of the Englishman who has been addressed by a stranger.

"I do not know you, sir," he said.

"My name is Philip Marcel, and I am your future son-in-law."

He was now unable to speak.

"It is true, sir," I said. "Ask your daughter."

He looked at her. She smiled and reddened.

Old Put was standing by, and he nodded his head in approval. He had liked her from the first.

"Your daughter is to be my wife," I continued, with emphasis, "and you are to live with us and like us."

These were resounding boasts for a young soldier to make, but they all came true after Yorktown.

THE WHITE HOUSE.

The proposition to enlarge the White House has once more become a pertinent topic. The difficulty of finding quarters for the new President and his family has revived the old question whether the Executive Mansion shall remain inadequate because of the veto of those who regard alterations as a trespass upon a structure rich in historical associations. The opposition to a purely utilitarian scheme for enlargement is not mystifying. There is a delicate sentiment which instinctively resents the suggestion of changes. The objectors do not desire to deprive their Chief Magistrate of conveniences. In fact, they would be proud to supply every facility for his work and comfort. But when they consider the onslaught of artisans with their implements of destruction, the tearing out of stone and timber and plaster around which cling both sad and proud reminiscences, they feel like the poet who witnessess ivy torn from an ancient tower or huge rectangular office building erected to hide a famous monument.

The White House stands practically as it was in 1800, when it was completed after the model of the Duke of Leinster's mansion in Dublin. Visitors from all the world have admired it for its beauty and purity. Although several suggestions have been advanced in connection with the project of its enlargement, the one that really seems to meet with favor is that which provides for the addition of a wing on either side, preserving so far as possible the general character of the building and following the existing architectural design.

The agitation for the improvement has become general and it must be aknowledged that the demand is better grounded than ever before. White House families have for a long time been small and there has really been no pressing need for additional accommodations. The Roosevelts, however, will be quite cramped in the structure as it stands, such a great part of it being monopolized for official business. It seems that the present administration will be the witness of changes rendering the building so commodious that there will no longer be cause for complaint. Of course, the president has said nothing concerning the matter, owing to the proprieties, but it cannot be doubted that he would welcome the enlargement of his official home and that he will sturdily oppose any changes calculated to infringe upon the portions of the structure identified with memories so dear to the patriotic American.

THE LESSON OF IT.

The latest developments in the efforts of the Thief River Falls people to secure the opening to settlement of the Red Lake reservation serves as an illustration of the potency of agitation to accomplish an object. Not much over a year ago the commercial club of the ambitious town up the river took hold of this matter which was then thought to be very far off indeed. Vigorous, concerted, determined action brought Congressman Eddy in line, and the favorable action by congress followed, giving authority to the Department of the Interior to treat with the Indians in the premises, thus doing away with much red tape and bringing the matter to a head. The history of Cass Lake is another illustration, where a town was built on government land. Only the interference of President McKinley prevented the ejection of the bold squatters, and the favorable outcome was a direct result of organization and concerted action.

The lesson as taught has been repeated so often that the wonder is communities do not more clearly appreciate the power that lies back of agitation and organized effort. Organization is the wedge, the first step toward success in carrying out a public enterprise, and agitation is the sledge.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING SUFFICIENT.

The managers of the Minnesota State Agricultural Association, did not use a single billboard in advertising its annual fair, the publicity being carried on through the columns of the newspapers. That the billboards were not missed is shown by the fact that the attendance at the fair was the largest in its history.

The society found, early in the season, that billboard advertising was to be a luxury. The price had been advanced to a figure that was considered exorbitant, and it was believed that the fair could get along without this brand of publicity. The correctness of this opinion has been emphasized in the great attendance.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Ladies' Home Journal for October is, perhaps, the best number of this magazine ever issued. The literary features include "How the Leopard Got His Spots," by Rudyard Kipling; "A Fifth Avenue Troubadour," by Ernest Seton-Thompson; the first installment of "A Gentleman of the Blue Grass," by Laura Spencer Portor; the last of "Miss Alcott's Letters to her Laurie," and the closing chapters of "Aileen." "Some Thing the President Does Not Do," a collection of anecdotes about Whistler, the artist, and Mr. Bok's advice to a young man about to marry are important features. The regular editorial departments are supplemented by nine new ones of great interest, among which Professor Edward Howard Griggs's talk on "The Education of a Child from Eleven to Eighteen," Professor Schmucker's "Seeing Things Outdoors," and Miss Withey's "Writing and Speaking Correctly" are noteworthy. The illustrations and art features are superb. By The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar a year; ten cents a number.

The October number of the Woman's Home Companion is of particular interest to women. Mrs. Larned, the noted writer on fine cookery, contributes an article on "Modern Savories in Antique Settings." Mrs. Kretzschmar writes about "Servants." Sallie Joy White and Mary Graham talk about matters pertaining to the household. There are five pages devoted to fall fashions. The great Cincinnati Fall Festival is the subject of an illustrated article. Other features deal with Girard College and life of its eccentric founder; "The Southern Girl of To-day". The fiction includes "Love's Recompense," by Lewis E. MacBrayne; "The Awakening of Caleb Swift," by Frederic Van Rensselaer Dey; "The Stimulus of a Hope," by Grace S. Richmond. Published by The Crowell & Kirkpatrick Co., Springfield, Ohio; one dollar a year; ten cents a copy; sample copy free.

There are comparatively few poor in Sweden, probably fewer than in any other European country except Norway and Switzerland, because of the low cost of living, the sparse population and the ability of all men and women to find work if they are willing to earn their own subsistence. Able bodied paupers are compelled to work upon poor farms, but the aged, decrepit and invalids who are dependent upon public charity are kindly taken care of by what is called out-door and indoor relief. In the cities are asylums and almhouses similar to those in the United States, but in the parishes as a rule the care of the poor is assigned to individual farmers and others who are willing to take charge of them under contract, subject to the supervision of a board of guardians, of which the pastor is the chairman and the elders of the church are members. This has long been a practice in Sweden, but is not universal.

The Thief River Falls Press gloats over the fact that the population of its town is little less than that of Red Lake Falls. It is allright for the Press to boost its town—commendable, indeed, but let them remember

"If you can keep ahead 'tis well,
But never trip your neighbor.
'Tis noble when you can excel
By honest, patient labor.

The Indian Summer girl can give you pointers on how to make the most of fleeting opportunities.

Facts and Fancies

An attempt was made Sunday night to blow up McKinley's tomb.

The municipal electric light plant of Ada will soon begin all night service—something new there.

Louis Foss, for whom Fosston was named, now lives at Anacartes, Wash. He lost $40,000 in realestate in '93 but is still rich.

Joseph Smith has blossomed out as a land contest attorney, making use of the experience gained while an official in the Crookston land office.

On the Adams farm in Richland county, N. D., there were 1,400 acres of corn raised this year, and next year this will be increased to 2,500 acres.

The "doughnut" a 3-cent coin with a hole in the center—after the Chinese idea—will soon be in circulation in this country, to meet a pressing demand.

Foley M. Milby, the Ulen postmaster, has been convicted of the charge of misappropriating the funds of his office and sentenced to six months in jail.

A rich beggar in New York totters from lack of food, with money in his pocket, illustrating that there are all kinds of ways for enjoyment—according to one's point of view.

Over at Crookston J. A. Button's school which began a year ago as an evening class, will blossom out as Button's Business College. Thos. Casey has the English training department and C. M. Lohn stenography.

Mayor Ames has been in office long enough to have hatched a newspaper organ. It's named the Minneapolis News Letter and if the Minnesota winter is tropical this season don't wonder why.

Charles Johnson, of Lengby, has disappeared. His home was destroyed by fire last week but there were no evidences that he had been burned in the house. It is thought he is insane and has wandered away. It's a mysterious affair.

The tenth annual fair was held at Fosston last week. It was a big show and proved Thirteen Towns soil can produce great results. The corn exhibit was particularly striking—stocks nine feet high and over, with two large ripe ears on each were common. A quantity of broom corn—the first seen there—attracted considerable attention.

Jack O'Hara, who runs the Richards, that splendid hotel at Tenstrike, was hauled up before the grand jury for serving moose meat. The evidence was so strong against him that at the time of his arrest he wanted to plead guilty before a justice of the peace who fortunately for him had no jurisdiction. The grand jurymen had evidently been in the woods themselves, for they let him off.

Great activity is reportrd at the new town of Farley, two miles beyond its rival, Turtle River. Blakely & Farley are putting up an office and warehouse; Halvorson & Richards are building a warehouse; Fuller, Turpenning & Coleman are reported getting ready to put in a big store, and a saloon is said to be ready to expand things. The new town evidently means business.

The old steel bridge at Emerson is being overhauled and repaired and will be utilized by the Canadian Northern road which will connect with the line running to Warroad. A new depot will be built at Emerson and will be a joint station for the line running to Winnipeg up the west side, and the Warroad line. If the Great Northern rebuilds the old line between St. Vincent and Emerson, as has been spoken of, that place will experience quite a railroad boom.

Two miles from the exposition grounds resides Mrs. A. Baer, Mrs. Wichterman's mother, and a family reunion will take place upon their arrival.

An accident which caused a "pi" was responsible for the omission of F. A. Whiteley's name from the list of speakers at the memorial exercises, as given in last week's Gazette. In fixing up the pi, this name was inadvertantly left out. The Gazette always endeavors in its accounts to be accurate and we regret exceedingly the omission. Mr Whiteley, by his untiring efforts to secure a large attendance, and otherwise, contributed in no small degree to the success of this occasion—an occasion which will long be remembered by our citizens with melancholy pleasure.

A hay rack party was organized Friday evening with the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cheadle the objective point. —a surprise by the merry crowd. The party had provided a line of refreshments that would have done credit to Delmonico,s. After a pleasant visit at the Cheadle home, the party returned to town. All went well until Kretzschmar hill was reached, when a slight break of the wagon frightened the team, which started to run pell mell down the steep hill. Pandimonium ensued. When the horses were brought to a halt at the intersection of 8th street, members of the party were strewn all along the driveway for the distance of a block. Fortunately nobody was hurt. B. B. Nichols, general agent for the Madison Medicine Company, manufacturers of Rocky Mountain Tea, was a business visitor to the city Friday. As an indication of the enormous sales of that favorite medicine, Mr. Nichols cited the fact that the Company had just sent 101 gross in one shipment to a St. Paul jobber. $500 a month was the amount required for revenue stamps during the spring rush.

Rev. Eli Theillon, the popular Gentilly pastor, called on friends here Tuesday. The reverend Father says his new residence will be completed in the course of a week or two. It is a modern structure built after plans and specifications furnished by Architect Keene of Austin. Among the conveniences will be a hot water heating system. Rev. Theillon has been at Gantilly for many years and is not only beloved by his own parishioners, but by people of other denominations as well.

Fraternal Doings.

SOCIAL ITEMS, GOOD OF THE ORDER AND RECESS GOSSIP OF INTEREST.

Clearwater Lodge I. O. O. F was the first fraternal organization in Red Lake Falls. The membership of the lodge is now 68.

The Rebekahs, always in the vanguard in social affairs here, are planning a Basket Sociable the proceeds to go to the Oddfellow's Home at Northfield. The date has not yet been fixed.

Considerable interest has been aroused in the Women's Catholic Order of Foresters over the discussion as to the advisability of adopting the graded assessment plan. The progressive element is almost unanimously in favor of the advance.

The Modern Woodmen camp now boasts 118 members—100 beneficiary and 18 social. The last member taken in—Ed Broulliette, completed the even hundred beneficiary membership, and the camp feels well pleased with the progress being made.

The Royal Neighbors had planned an ice cream social at Woodmen hall for Friday night, but on account of a dance at the Opera house the same evening, they have postponed the sociable to a later date, which will be announced next week. Progressive cinch is to be the order, and 10 cents admission will be charged The public generally will be invited.

Ole Teigen, the Crookston land agent, was with us yesterday.

Miss Alma Berg went to St. Hilaire Tuesday for a short visit with friends.

John Cyr, the Thief River Falls barber, was visiting friends in the city yesterday.

L. C. Glass and family are expected here in a few days from Iowa. Mr. Glass recently purchased the Richards farm lying one mile directly west of the city through his brother-in-law P. B. Gnas.

Herman Adams came down from St. Hilaire yesterday to meet contractor L. Johnson, who has the contract for erecting the new bank building, which will be the first brick structure in the Saintly City.

On Thursday Oct. 9th, an agent of the great "Palmer" cloak house will give for Theo. LaBissoniere, a great opening sale of ladies' jackets, automobile coats, silk skirts and tailor-made suits. Don't miss it, and remember the date.

With the Churches.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

The Rev. P. Ansgar returned from Thief River Falls Monday. Services will be held as usual at St. Mary's church Sunday.

Communion services will be held at the Presbyterian church Sunday at 11 a. m. with preparatory services Thursday evening.

The Gentilly fair will be held Sunday the 27th of this month. Rev. Theillon has no doubt figured with the man in the moon and will get good weather as usual.

Arrangements have been made to pay the mortgage on the Methodist church in this city and it is expected that event will be celebrated in a suitable manner in a few weeks.—Thief River Falls News.

The Red River Presbytery meets at Fisher next Thursday at the Bethel Presbyterian church. The Rev. Andrew Walker of this city will be in attendance. An unusually interesting program has been prepared.

Says Rev. Andrew Walker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church: "The commonest complaint we hear in our pastoral visitations is that a great number of our young people were denied the privilege of an ordinary education in their youth. They had neither time nor opportunity to attend school. Now since you could not go to the higher sources of learning it is our pleasure to offer you the ripened and ripening product of the High School, University and college. These institutions, it is gratifying to notice, are well represented by graduates in our town. Some of them have kindly consented to favor us with papers affecting the higher interests of the community. The first address will be given in the Presbyterian church on Thursday, the 17th. The subject and speaker will be announced in this department in a future issue of the paper."

Here and Elsewhere.

Oliver T. Romace, of Wylie, was a visitor to the city Tuesday.

S. S. Haislet, of Adrain, foreman for John E. King, arrived here Saturday.

Geo. Brunolle and family have moved into the Perrault residence on Washington av.

The saw mill shut down yesterday, for lack of logs. A drive is on the way and the mill will start up Monday.

Rev. J. A. Petersan, D. D., president of Heidelberg university, is at the point of death at his home in Tiffin, O.

Harvey D. Young, formerly of Duluth, was fatally hurt by falling down a steamer hatchway at Portland, Or.

Mrs. Cushman K. Davis will donate to the schools and colleges of the Twin Cities about 3,500 volumes from the late senator's library.

F. W. Hoyer of Henderson, who threatened bodily violence to Governor Van Sant a few days ago, has been committed to an insane asylum.

Fire at Edgerton caused a loss of $150,000. It started from a gasoline lamp explosion, and 225 feet on the west side of the business street burned.

A dispatch from Christiania says that the condition of Henrik Ibsen, the Norwegian dramatist and poet, has grown worse and that his death is hourly expected.

Stone Nelson and Pete Fruland were injured by a work train at Cloquet. Nelson had an arm cut off. Fruland sustained severe cuts and bruises, but will probably recover. They were intoxicated.

Fire broke out in the Elba mine, at McKinley, and one life has in all probability been lost. The men fled from the mine, but one is missing. He is Gunder Olsan, who had charge of the pumps.

Congressman Stevens has been advised that the proposed trip of the Indian affairs committee of the house of representatives through the park district of Minnesota has been abandoned, owing to the death of President McKinley.

The Minnesota and International has closed a contract with the Backus-Brooks company for the hauling of 4,000,000 feet of logs to Minneapolis this fall. This will keep the mills of the company running until the close of the season.

A jury at Fergus Falls has awarded the plaintiff $1 in the case of Whetstone vs. Sutton, an action for $25,000 damages for slander. The trouble is the outgrowth of a horse deal. The parties are well known citizens of Argyle, Marshall county.

The department at Washington has definitely decided to transport mail between the Minneapolis main and substations by automobile. Bids will be advertised for, and the new service will go into effect as soon as the vehicles can be procured.

Two new pure food laws took effect Oct. 1. One prohibits the adulteration of maple sugar and maple syrups, and the other is directed against adulterated fruit jams and fruit preserves. These laws will be rigidly enforced by the state dairy and food department.

Governor Van Sant has removed George B. Whitehorne from the office of county commissioner of Ramsey county because of "willfully, without justification or excuse, he wholly neglected to perform the duties of said office, and is hereby adjudged guilty of nonfeasance in office."

Smallpox is again on the increase. During the two weeks closing last Monday 122 new cases were reported to the state board of health, as against 50 in the preceding fortnight. There were three new cases in Minneapolis and two in St. Paul, while Dexter, Mower county, has 36.

In federal court at Fergus Falls Ole Melbye, postmaster at Ulen, pleaded guilty to embezzlement and was sentenced to six months imprisonment in the Clay county jail. William Middagh, postmaster at Rollag, was given two months in the Clay county jail for padding his stamp account.

Rev. S. W. Taylor of St. Paul, secretary of the American Bible Society, is reported to have been seriously hurt in a railway accident in New Jersey. The accident was of the nature of a collision and occurred at Somerville. It is said that Mr. Taylor is likely to die as a result of his injuries.

Three persons have died as the result of the gasoline explosion in the house of Mrs. M. J. Filbert at Renville. One child, 20 months old, died in three hours after the accident, Mrs. Filbert, the mother, at 9 o'clock the same evening, and Ada, a 12-year-old girl, at 4 o'clock the following afternoon.

Lumbermen in Northern Minnesota are making a strong effort to reduce the rate of wages to be paid men the coming winter. As high as $30 to $35 a month has been the ruling scale for the summer, but now it is reported that these camps are paying but $26 and are giving it out that no more will be paid for the winter.

A rather peculiar circumstance occurred at a public auction near Plainview Saturday while selling the personal effects of the Jonathan Calby estate. An old Bible was put up, and, after the usual deliberations of the auctioneer, knocked down at 25 cents. In examining the book the purchaser was greatly surprised to find concealed among the leaves a bank note for $500.

Walter Anderson, one of the robbers who committed the crime which resulted in the death of John McGrath on a freight train near Little Falls about a month ago, has been sentenced to Stillwater for 30 years by Judge Searle. He was indicted for murder in the first degree, but as the testimony was rather weak he was allowed to plead guilty to murder in the third degree.

A new schedule of wages, arranged by the board of control, and effecting employes at the St. Peter state hospital, has been announced. The cut is especially severe in the laundry and kitchen departments, where it is from 25 to 50 per cent. Benjamin Wiberg, head cook, has been informed that his salary of $55 a month will be reduced to $35. The salary of his assistant has been reduced by one-half. Mr. Wiberg and six of his helpers resigned their positions, as well as six of the laundry employes, all of whom refuse to work under the new schedule.

Commander-in-Chief Torrance Names His Staff—James King, on Trial at Duluth for Murder, Given a Life Sentence—Gasoline Explosion Fatal to Three People—News of the State in General.

Duluth, Sept. 27.—Word reaches here from London that the deal for the lease of the Alice A. gold mine of the Seine river region, north of here, has been closed and that there is already $250,000 ready for the development of the property.

It is expected that a very large machinery plant will be installed and that an immense amount of development will be done. The English company leases the mine from the Alice A. Gold Mining company on a royalty. Much of the stock of the company is held among the flour mills of Minneapolis, where the company was originally floated.

ON TORRANCE'S STAFF.

Minneapolis, Sept. 27.—Judge Eli Torrance, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, has decided upon the following appointments to his staff:

Adjutant General—Silas H. Towler of Minneapolis. Captain Towler has been commander of John A. Rawlins post and is now president of the Minnesota Soldiers' home board, and in the opinion of G. A. R. men will make a splendid adjutant general.

Quartermaster General—Charles Burrows of Rutherford, N. Y. Mr. Burrows has held this office three times, first under Commander-in-Chief John P. S. Gobin, in 1897 and 1898; second under Commander-in-Chief James A. Sexton, 1898 and 1899, and third under Commander-in-Chief Leo Rassieur, 1900 and 1901.

Inspector General—Wilfred A. Wetherbee, Boston, Mass., who is past department commander of Massachusetts, a prominent business man of his city, engaged in the manufacturing business with the Atwood Lock company.

KING NOT TO HANG.

Duluth, Sept. 27.—James King will not hang for the murder of Williamson Carlson, at Hibbing, on Aug. 23. Imprisonment for life is the expiation he will make for his crime, for the jury this morning returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree.

The debate as to the degree of murder continued from 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon until just after the breakfast hour this morning. At the outset the jury stood 6 to 6, divided between murder in the first and second degree. About 4 o'clock the court was asked further to define the meaning of premeditation, as indicated by the statute. That done, the jury retired, and three men then changed their votes to murder in the second degree. Two more went over during the night and the last one about 8 o'clock this morning.

WOULD KILL THE GOVERNOR.

Demented German Placed Under Arrest at St. Paul.

St. Paul, Sept. 24.—F. W. Hoyer, a German resident of Henderson, this state, was taken into custody at the state capitol for uttering threats against the life of Governor Van Sant. Hoyer is believed to be mentally deranged.

The officials at the capitol had been notified that he had made threats and were told to keep a watch for him. As soon as he appeared he was apprehended. The police were called and the old man taken to the central station. Governor Van Sant knew nothing of the trouble.

Hoyer has pent some time about the capitol of late, and had written a long letter in German to the governor asking him to release his wife from the St. Peter insane asylum. He says she is not now insane and that he wants her to live with him again.

THREE PEOPLE DEAD.

Renville, Minn., Sept. 26.—Three persons have died as the result of the gasoline explosion in the house of Mrs. M. J. Filbert.

One child, 20 month old, died in three hours after the accident, Mrs. Filbert, the mother, at 9 o'clock the same evening, and Ada, a 12-year-old girl, at 4 o'clock the following afternoon.

M'CLEARY NOT A CANDIDATE.

Congressman Has No Thought of Trying for Governor.

Mankato, Sept. 27.—Congressman McCleary made the statement today that he would not be a candidate for governor and that he would do nothing to hurt the chances of Governor Van Sant for a renomination. He feels kindly towards those who are advocating him for the gubernatorial nomination, but he will not be a candidate under any circumstances.

Favor Opening the Reservation.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Sept. 26.—Commissioner Jones and Senator Quarles and party have returned from Red Lake. They favor opening the reservation at once, and state the land is the finest in the state. It would place 300,000 acres on the market.

Gasoline Lamp Explosion.

Pipestone, Minn., Sept. 26.—Fire at Edgerton caused a loss of $160,000. It started from a gasoline lamp explosion, and 226 feet on the west side of the business street burned. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

MINNESOTA W. C. T. U.

Twenty-fifth Annual Convention Opens in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Sept. 26.—The white ribboners of Minnesota assembled for their 25th annual state convention during the morning in Plymouth church. There were present at the morning session, when Mrs. Bessie Laythe Scovill called the meeting to order, 40 delegates from St. Paul and 100 from Minneapolis, besides a large number of visitors. Reports showed that the organization has grown in 25 years to a membership of 3,600.

Minneapolis, Sept. 30.—The W. C. T. U. state convention has closed. Considerable important business was transacted. By the resignation of Mrs. A. C. McCurdy, the corresponding secretary, it became necessary to cast votes for her successor. Mrs. E. T. Hendrix was elected to the office. A report of the annual appropriation was made by Mrs. Soule, treasurer and chairman of the committee. The amounts assigned to each department for expenses of postage and printing were then distributed and a recommendation was made and adopted that the president's salary be raised to $400 and that the salary of the corresponding secretary be $150, and that the treasurer receive $100. The salary of the recording secretary was raised to $75.

HAZING AT SHATTUCK SCHOOL.

Faribault, Minn., Sept. 26.—What promises to be a serious difficulty developed at Shattuck military school during the day. For some years past the senior class has practiced a light form of hazing on the freshmen at the beginning of the school year. This matter was brought to the attention of the rector, Rev. James Dobbin, this year, and he strictly prohibited the practice.

The seniors demurred at this and discarded their military uniforms and threatened to leave the school in a body if the order was not rescinded. The rector will not recede from his position, and many of the students have telegraphed for funds to take them home.

DULUTH IS GROWING.

New Directory Figures Indicate a Heavy Increase.

Duluth, Sept. 24.—The forth-coming 1901 directory of the city of Duluth will show a substantial increase in population, according to the manager of the directory company. It contains 24,164 names, which, by the multiple of 2 1-2, indicates a population of 60,310. This is an increase of 5,300 over last year's directory figures, and of 7,300 over the figures for the census of 1900. The directory issued last fall showed an increase of about 2,000 over the census taken in the spring, and it was believed that the directory figures then expressed the true condition, the population having increased that much during the summer of 1900.

ROOF COLLAPSES.

One Man Killed and Another Seriously Injured.

Duluth, Sept. 29.—Death for one man and serious injury for another was the result of a falling roof accident at the Mitchell and McClure logging camp on the Duluth and Iron Range road, situated about 12 miles north of Two Harbors. Joseph Eskleson is the name of the man who was killed and William Eagle is the name of the injured man. The men were at work on a new barn when the roof collapsed.

Northwestern Flour Output.

Minneapolis, Sept. 26.—The flour output at Minneapolis last week, according to The Northwestern Miller, was 302,725 barrels, compared with 337,415 barrels for the corresponding week of last year. Superior and Duluth ground 31,100 barrels, an increase of 15,000 barrels. The mills enjoyed a good business, which was confined almost entirely to domestic markets. Shipping directions on old orders were received freely and the sales in most cases exceeded the output. The mills are well sold ahead on clears and low grades.

Minneapolis Automobile Mail Delivery

Minneapolis, Sept. 27.—The department at Washington has definitely decided to transport mail between the Minneapolis main and sub-stations by automobile. Bids will be advertised for, and the new service will go into effect as soon as the vehicles can be procured.

GREAT NORTHERN WRECK.

Rear-End Collision of Two Freight Trains Near Devils Lake.

Devils Lake, N. D., Sept. 29.—At 3:40 a. m. at Penn, in this county, a rear-end collision on the Great Northern railway, killed George Conne, engineer; Clayton Saunders, fireman, and Fireman William Gill. L. Bissell, brakeman, had a leg broken.

Eighty cars of stock were wrecked, and at noon the cars were still piled up.

Conne has not yet been taken from under the wreck. The other bodies were taken to the morgue in this city. The wreck is the most disastrous that ever occurred in this section. Both were through freights, the last one being a double-header, which ran into the other train which was taking water.

Child Killed by a Horse.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Sept. 30.—The 15-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tobin, well known residents of the city, was killed by the kick of a horse. The child had been playing around the yard, and his mother saw him enter the stable. She hurried after him, but could not reach the infant before the heels of a horse had done their fatal work.

Cashed a Bad Note.

Fargo, N. D., Sept. 30.—Gustav Hook succeeded in cashing a $500 note at the Merchants' State bank here on purported indorsement of Alex Stern of Fargo. The note was purported to have been signed by Mr. Hans, by whom Hook was employed. Later, Hans announced that the note was a forgery, but Hook has escaped.

TO THE PEOPLE:

Some time ago the "Jack-of-All-Trades" began to tell the people what he could do. He made great claims; promised to do more than ever had been done before, and more than most people believed possible. You all know the success he has attained, and as he became more familiar with the country he was traveling in, he could see the possibilities of greater work, and to accomplish this he has introduced to you a traveling companion. Behold his features in the shape of a 2½ H. P. Geared Base Vertical Gasoline Engine. His specialties are pumping water and general farm use. He is very versatile, and when his time is not wanted for pumping water, by a movement of one of his arms, he can disconnect the gears and his power can be directed for other purposes. He is beginning to travel all over the country from the Canadian Provinces to the Equator, and from the Eastern Coast to the Philippines. He is taking up all sorts of work for all kinds of people, and it is surprising to note the results of his work for the first year. Send for information and catalogue.

HORRIBLE

EARL MEAD RUN OVER BY SEPARATOR AND INSTANTLY KILLED.

HEAD CRUSHED INTO UNRECOGNIZABLE MASS UNDER WHEEL.

Thursday afternoon one of the most shocking accidents ever recorded occurred on Main street, half a block south of The Gazette office, resulting in the death of Earl Mead, the little six year old son of Mrs. C. W. Mead.

The Perusse threshing rig was passing through and Earl, in company with Ervic Toupia, was clinging to the separator. Both fell under the machine about the same time. Theo LaPoint, the engineer, yelled to the boys to lie still until the rig had passed over, they having fallen safely between the wheels. Ervic heeded the warning, but Earl started to crawl out. His head was caught under the rear wheel, the unrelenting, ponderous machine passed slowly on, and his head was crushed into an unrecognizable mass. The men placed the quivering form upon the grass by the roadside.

A block away, busy sewing, happy in the toilsome labor of love, sat the mother, oblivious of what had happened. No one gently broke the news. No one concealed the awful sight or removed one iota of the awsome evidences of what had occurred. The child's brains that lay in the street were scraped up, and placed on a paper. The men carried this to her and told her her child's body could be found up the street! She ran to the scene and carried the lifeless form of her baby to the home which he had left in the full bloom and beauty of childhood but a moment before.

The sudden shock was almost too much for Mrs Mead, but she has rallied, and is improving. and it is the earnest prayer of the entire community that her strength will not forsake her in this trying hour.

Beautiful funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Andrew Walker Friday noon. and the remains were taken to Euclid for interment in the family lot.

They have placed the turf o'er the casket fair,
Which held a jewel all too rare:
Precious jewel the Maker lent,
As a beam of sunshine sent:
Rich the light and joy that came
With dear little Earlie's name.

Bright angles hovered around his head,
When the death angle the word had said.
They bore him far on wing of air
Up to the Father's throne, and there
Among the throng to welcome him.
Two cherubs came with shining wings.

Now two are there and still they wait
Oft'times beside the golden gate.
Waiting for four on the other side
Of that dark lone river's tide.
Hoping they'll come and enter in
When free from earth, when free from sin.

A CLOSE CALL

E. H. Gerlach Crushed by Threshing Rig Thursday.

E. H. Gerlach is thankful that he is alive today, even though he has been disabled from work for some time, being in a crippled condition.

He was engineer on the Gerlach threshing rig, and preparations were being made to move from Joseph Wagner's place. Gerlach was about to couple the engine and separator, but the firemen who had the engine in charge in the meantime, ran it back too far, and Gerlach was caught between and severely crushed. The engine was reversed in the nick of time. Had it backed up a few inches further his life would have been crushed out. He was first thought to have been fatally hurt, but there were no internal injuries and he is rapidly recovering.

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N.Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a few days the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider this a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

For sprains, swellings and lameness there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Try it. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

C. M. Hamma, of Emardville township, died Sunday night from injuries inflicted by a 2-year-old moolie bull in the forenoon of that day. Neighbors' cattle were grazing alongside the pasture fence, and annoying the bull, and Hamma went through the pasture intending to chase them away. The bull, which was dehorned, and but a young animal, was not considered dangerous, and Hamma was taken unawares. The animal made a furious assault, repeatedly jamming his victim against a tree with terrible force. Mrs. Hamma and the children ran to the pasture and the bull, upon their approach, went away.

Medical aid was at once summoned, but the unfortunate man died about eleven o'clock that night. He was about sixty-five years of age, and had been a resident of the county since he purchased the John Arland farm two years ago. He was a man of considerable means and leaves his family in comfortable circumstances.

Griffin's Woes—No Remedy Here.

John Griffin, of Parnell, has threatened to boycott Crookston unless he is allowed to leave his horse tied to a post on the street all day and all night, if the fancy possesses him. He left his horse on the street until a late hour last night. Out of sheer pity for the animal the police put it in a barn. When Griffin went to go home and found his horse had been cared for by the police, he was angry and sought out the chief of police and informed him that if such a thing happened again he would patronize Red Lake Falls. Mr. Creamer said he was sorry, but horses must be used in a humane way in Crookston, patronage or no patronage.

Separator Burned.

The Perras separator, which occasioned the death of little Earl Mead, after passing through town, commenced operations the next morning on Eli Lasha's "timber forty." The day was windy, and sparks from the engine set fire to three wheat stacks. Before anything could be done to obviate the catastrophe, the stacks and separator were burned. It is estimated 200 bushels of wheat went up in smoke.

GASOLINE EXPLOSION

STARTS FIRE, AND MRS. THOMAS BLAIR IS SLIGHTLY BURNED.

Says the St. Paul Globe of Saturday: Fire in the residence of Mrs. Thomas Belair, 131 Robertson street, at noon today, did $350 damage. Mrs. Blair was badly burned about the hands and wrist. A gasoline stove exploded while the family dinner was being prepared.

From Mrs. H. B. Davis.

Mrs. H. B. Davis writes for a change of address from Grand Rapids, Mich., to McLoud, Oklahoma. The family's hosts of friends here and elsewhere will be pleased to hear from them and we take the liberty of publishing the following extract from her letter:

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 7. 1901.
Dear Sir:

If we are entitled to any more Gazettes on our subscription please mail them to McLoud, Okla. Ter., or if we owe you please send the bill.

Now are you not surprised? Well, the Davises are going to the land of sunshine and mild winters. Mr. Davis has been there since March 20th, and his wife and son expect to leave Grand Rapids on the 15th, for a home on a ranch for a year or so.

Respectfully,
Mrs. H. B. Davis.

VIC'S LETTER

CAPTURE OF DESERTER HOWARD---TEACHERS FROM THE STATES.

Calamba, P I. Aug., 29th, 1901.
Editor Gazette:

Things have been rather lively here of late. It was every-one's wish that something should happen to liven up times around town. Late last night an order came for all the available men to go on a "hike" in search of some insurgents supposed to be in the vicinity of this town. We were then called upon to do outpost and cassock-post duty for the protection of the town, as there was scarcely a soldier in town. We all went out and did our share of outpost duty. But it was not long till the troops returned with the news of a fight between here and Tanawan, the next town east of here. We were immediately relieved from out-post duty, and today the troops are scattered in the country around here. The enemies are supposed to be entrapped or surrounded by our troops. We will not leave quarters tonight. We were re-enforced today by two batteries of heavy artillary.

Today, Lt. Hazzard of the 24th Infantry captured Howard, the well known deserter of the 1st Cal. Vol. Infantry, who has served with the insurgents since 1898. He had reached the rank of Lt. Col. of Insurgents, but his life is now near at end, as he has committed a great many murders, and boasts of having fired the shot that killed Gen. Lawton.

The Manilla Daily Times of yesterday contained an interesting article in regard to the teachers who arrived on the transport Thomas. Says the Times of these teachers:

The grades of education vary but the majority of the teachers come from universities and colleges. Some of the higher grade of Normal Schools have representatives. The grades of education vary from the man with a degree from Heidelberg and Bonn to the last graduate of a Normal School. C. H. Harvey, of West Virginia, bears the highest scholastic honors among the list, having spent many years in Germany after completing the full course at the University of Virginia. There are a few with a Ph. D. tacked to the end of their names and M. A.'s are common.

The University of Michigan sent 25 teachers. Their work also has begun in the way of lectures and instructions as to their life in the islands. Dr. Atkinson has made arrangements to keep the devil hustling to find idle hands to do his work and the teachers are aiding Dr. Atkinson and his corps of assistants to the best of their ability in the way of attending the course prepared. They now realize that they are up against the right in the way of life.

The first of the lectures, attendance at which is compulsory was held Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in a small building near the baggage room. The speaker was Mayor-Doctor Maus, head of the Health Department for the islands. Dr. Mitchell, City Inspector was also present. Dr. Maus' talk was given almost entirely to advice as to the means of avoiding the diseases liable to be contracted by those who, like his audience come from the States. He told of the various kinds of tropical dysentry, beri-beri, parasitical, water-born diseases, heat-fever and the dhobee itch. He was particularly careful in his injunction against getting nostalgia or homesickness. So far there have been no appearance of this trouble among any of the teachers. Manila and the surrounding country furnishes too much of the interesting to allow them time to do anything else but go sight seeing and so their minds are kept off themselves. After Mayor Maus had spoken, Dr. Atkinson introduced Division Superintendent Sherman, of Samar, to his fallow-workers. Mr. Sherman gave the teachers the usual little nice things to say. He told the teachers that all that was necessary to live in the island was a clear conscience and good common sense as regards the manner of living and eating. He took a stand different from Dr Maus in regard to the drinking of beer and wine. The doctor had said that there was no danger in drinking of beer and wine. Mr. Sherman called upon the teachers to show character in refusing to touch liquor of any kind even when invited to partake by local dignitaries.

This is all for this time.

"Vic".

NEXT WEEK

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE SOLICITED FOR PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

GRADES TO BE UNIFORM WITH THOSE OF PUBLIC SCHOOL.

Very Rev. E. Fayolle will next week begin solicitation of subscriptions for his new parochial school. He wishes The Gazette to say that he will visit only members of his congregation, but those who do not belong to his parish and those of other denominations who feel disposed to make donations, no matter how small, will be gratefully remembered. Funds may be sent to or left with him personally, or deposited in any Red Lake Falls bank.

The school will be graded uniformly with the state system so that when the children have completed their religious studies they may take up the work in the public schools.

The Rev. Fayolle says this parochial school will be a benefit to the taxpayers, inasmuch as several teachers less will be required in the public schools.

Negotiations are now pending for the purchase of the lumber, so that it may be worked up during the winter months when labor is cheap. All the sash and door frames, etc., will be made here, during the winter time thus obviating the necessity of sending the money out of town.

About one hundred thousand brick will be required. Of this seventy thousand have already been donated Red Lake Falls brick will be used exclusively.

The new building will face 1st street siding on Edward st. It will be so arranged that a wing can be put on in the course of a few years for boarders.

Gone Before.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brouillet are called on to mourn the loss of their treasured little son, who died Friday morning, aged two months 24 days. The little one had been ailing for some time but was seemingly better for several days before its death, and the end came as a great shock.

The funeral was held Saturday, and the remains interred in Ridge cemetery.

RED LAKE CO. GETS A LIFT FROM STATE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

Horses, 1 year old 20 per cent; 2 years, 5; three years and over 5. Cattle, one year old, 25 per cent; 2 year old 20; cows, 20; sheep, 50; hogs, 50; wagons, 15; organs 33⅓; pianos, 33⅓, household and office furniture, 50; farming implements, 10; manufacturers' tools, implements and machinery, 15; money, of unincorporated banks, 50; money, other than of banks, 50; elevators, 20.

In the village of St. Hilaire material and manufactured articles of manufactures, were raised 20 per cent; balance of county 10 per cent. This hits the flour and saw mill industries.

In Thief River Falls, the shares of stock of Scandia State Bank were increased 25 per cent.

Among instructions to the auditors we note the following:

Firms or co-parnerships, or corporations, are not entitled to an exemption of one hundred dollars on their personal property assessment.

Persons cannot be allowed more than one hundreds dollars exemption, though they may have personal property assessed in several assessment districts.

Any deductions on account of exemption made by the person in his returns to the Assessors, and any division of personal property among the members of a family, for the purpose of securing more than one exemption, is illegal, and should be disregarded by the Auditor.

NO SLAUGHTER SALE

STATE LANDS WILL BRING GOOD PRICES OR NONE.

St. Paul, Oct. 4.—Since the notice of the sale of state lands in the Red River counties, was published in the Iowa papers, more than 600 inquiries or descriptive lists have been received by State Auditor Dunn. Many applications have also been received from Wisconsin, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Illinois and Michigan, besides a great number from Minnesota.

The competition promises to be keener than ever before at a sale of state lands. State Auditor Dunn will sell about 90,000 acres in 12 counties. Fifteen per cent. of the purchase price must be paid at the time of the sale, and the remainder bears 4 per cent. interest and can be paid within forty years. Nearly all the lands are fine wheat land, mostly high, and have been drained. It is appraised at from $8 to $15 per acre, but will probably bring higher prices.

State Auditor Dunn is determined that state land sold this fall shall bring a fair value commensurate with the present high prices realized by railroad and land companies. Said he:

I do not propose to sell an acre of land this fall for less than $7, unless it is remarkably poor soil. I will start the bidding at that figure. If the land will not bring as much as $7 this fall, the state can well afford to hold it a while. I am not going to let any syndicate get rich off state land. On the easy terms the state makes, a man wanting the land for farming purposes can well pay a good, fair valuation.

A Word for Thief Lake.

Editor Gazette:

In answer to many inquiries as to the number of homesteads around Thief Lake, will say that there is some fine prairie land about three miles north of the lake, a distance of about seven miles from Ware. There are five or six sections in a body and numerous other homesteads adjacent that are partly timbered. It is estimated that there is room for five hundred settlers north of Thief Lake and Moose River and as fine a country as can be found elsewhere in the state.

N. P. Changes.

Commencing October 1st trains Nos. 7 and 8, formerly operated daily between St. Paul and Fargo, will be run from Fargo to Jamestown and return daily except Sunday.

Train No. 7 will leave Fargo at 7:10 a.m. and arrive at Jamestown at 10:10 a. m. Train No. 8 will leave Jamestown at 4:45 p. m. arriving at Fargo at 8:20 p. m.

West bound train No. 7 will make all branch line connections, and east-bound train No. 8 will make the connection at Sanborn; passengers from Devils Lake branch being obliged to take No. 4 out of Jamestown, as at present.

Stepped Into Live Coals.

"When a child I burned my foot frightfully," writes W. H. Eads, of Jonesville, Va., "which caused horrible leg sores for 30 years, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured me after everything else failed." Infallible for Burns, Cuts, Scalds, Sores, Bruises and Piles. Sold by W. A. Schreiter, druggist.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brouillet are very grateful to their friends for the many acts of kindness in their bereavements, and have asked The Gazette to make this announcement.

We, the jury find that the deceased came to his death from heart failure, caused by not taking Rocky Mountain Tea made by Madison Medicine Co. 35c. W. A. Schreiter.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, district court clerk, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely." This remedy is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

GRAIN FIRM FAILS

BIG MINNEAPOLIS CONCERN IS CAUGHT IN THE PHILLIPS CORN SQUEEZE.

Flour City Grand Army Men After the Next National Encampment—Immense Receipts of Flax at Duluth. Three Threshers Curned to Death in Pipestone County—State News in General.

Minneapolis, Oct. 6.—J. Q. Adams & Co., grain dealers of this city, who conduct a large grain exporting business under the name of the St. Paul and Kansas City Grain company, have been forced to the wall. An assignment was made to Fred V. Van Dusen and P. B. Smith. The assignees are not prepared to state the liabilities. The company owns or controls 70 country elevators. The gain company is capitalized at $150.000, and the J. Q. Adams company at $250.000. The trouble originated with the famous corner which George Phillips started in Chicago last spring.

The Adams company had a large amount of grain stored at Duluth, which was "hedged" in Chicago. When the price of corn "soared" at Chicago, the company being unable to deliver the corn at Duluth on the Chicago contracts was forced to sell it at a lower price than the option was then selling for in order to prevent further losses at Chicago, thereby losing heavily.

AFTER THE ENCAMPMENT.

Minneapolis Would Entertain the Grand Army Next Year.

Minneapolis, Oct. 6.—This city will in all probability make an earnest and systematic effort to secure the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic next year. Half a hundred members of George N. Morgan post met during the evening and discussed the proposition. The gathering included many of the best known "comrades" in the city. Practically every man present made a speech favoring an effort to secure the encampment. Not one man opposed the motion "that the time has come when Minneapolis seek the honor of again entertaining the national encampment of the G. A. R. in 1902."

A committee consisting of Representative Joseph L. Dobbin, S. S. Brown, Mayor Ames, William D. Hale, Representative William P. Roberts, L. W. Pruss, Robert Stratton and J. A. Fillmore was appointed to canvass the more important business men and ascertain the sentiment—or, more correctly, get an idea of how these business men will look upon a subscription list.

FLAX IS PLENTIFUL.

Big Receipts Avert Fear of a Possible Squeeze.

Duluth, Oct. 3.—Flax is coming in here very fast now, averaging about 75 carloads daily, and the fear of a squeeze in October flax is about off the minds of the shorts. There has been a slight squeeze in the September option, but it was quietly settled the first of the week without any fireworks. At times during the past few days September flax had been from 13 to 15 cents a bushel above the October option. It is expected that receipts will be very large during this month and into the winter, and the trade in cash flax is very heavy. Buyers representing Eastern and foreign crushers and markets are taking round lots, and it is said that not less than 2,500,000 bushels have been sold here for export to Europe. Most of this must go out this fall. The sales to Eastern crushers have been large, and this will be wanted before navigation closes.

VIOLATING A MONOPOLY.

Minneapolis Banks Have a Private Postal System.

Minneapolis, Oct. 5.—A number of banks in Minneapolis are in trouble with the postal authorities over the sending of a number of letters daily to St. Paul banks by messenger, thus saving a large amount of postage daily. The department will give these banks to understand that it has a monopoly on the postal business and the practice will be ordered discontinued forthwith.

The section of the postal regulation that is being violated reads as follows: "No person shall establish a private post between two points where a mail route is established."

The penalty for the violation of this law is a fine of $150 for each offense, and as the postal people consider each and every letter a separate offense it would amount to quite a sum if these banks were to be punished for their alleged violation.

THREE LOSE THEIR LIVES.

Threshing Crew of Nine Go to Sleep in a Barn.

Pipestone, Minn., Oct. 2.—Three men were burned to death in a barn near the village of Trasky, this county, during the night. A threshing crew of nine men were sleeping in the barn. Six escaped uninjured. The names of the unfortunates are Claud Main and Fred Houlette of Vinton, Ia., and Elbert Evarts of this county. The origin of the fire is unknown. The building and contents belonged to Hans Staltenberg and was valued at $2,000, partly covered by insurance.

BOLD HIGHWAY ROBBERS.

Hold Up Occupants of Three Carriages Near Madison, S. D.

Madison, S. D., Oct. 7.—A bold gang of highway robbers successfully held up and robbed the occupants of three carriages, including several prominent business men from this city, while presumably en route to Lake Herman, three miles west of Madison. A pitched battle was waged, but the tourists were relieved of their money, about $500 in cash, watches and jewelry. Officers and a posse fought the robbers with guns, but all escaped. A number of commercial travelers were among the victims.

MAY CAUSE TROUBLE.

O'Neil's Report on Timber Scale Will Be Interesting.

Washburn, Wis., Oct. 6.—It is probable that the report of Captain William O'Neil of this city to the Indian department, on the rescale of timber on the White Earth Indian reservation in Minnesota, will prove a sensation. According to the report made by Superintendent of Logging Joseph Farr, the lumbermen were found to be over a hundred thousand dollars in debt to the Indians. Owing to the controversy arising from Mr. Farr's work a rescale was ordered, and Captain O'Neil was placed in charge of the work.

When seen regarding the result of his investigation the captain refused to make any statement. Other members of the party, however, intimate that the estimates will raise those of Mr. Farr's party. It is even intimated that attempts were made to burn over the logged region, in order that the scale could not be computed. From what can be learned here the investigation just concluded makes a far worse showing for the loggers than the first investigation by Mr. Farr.

COUNTY AUDITOR COMPLICATION

Bemidji the Scene of a Mix-Up Among Officials.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 3.—At a meeting of the board of county commissioners, Theodore Welte was appointed county auditor, notwithstanding that Dave Sylvester was on Sept. 14 appointed to that office for the unexpired term of J. H. Haner, whose resignation took effect yesterday. Sylvester was also arrested on the charge of assuming the office and issuing warrants on the treasurer, which he signed as auditor, although the minutes of the previous meeting declared his appointment as approved by the board, and he had taken the oath of office and filed his bond. Last night an injunction was issued from the district court restraining Welte from assuming the duties of auditor until Sylvester's case can be heard. In the meantime no business can be transacted as all the county records and the seal are locked in the vault, of which Sylvester has the combination. These complications are the result of personal and political strife between the opposing factions.

Northwestern Flour Output.

Minneapolis, Oct. 3.—The flour output at Minneapolis last week, according to The Northwestern Miller, was 333,750 barrels, compared with 339,875 for the corresponding week of last year. Duluth and Superior ground 35,850 barrels, an increase of 27,000 barrels. Some millers ran nearly the full week on old orders, while others sold their output during the week in domestic markets. Some placed large orders for patents with foreigners at prices that promise a fair margin of profit.

Six Bullets Fail to Kill Him.

Barnesville, Minn., Oct. 6.—James Victory, who was lately shot near here, has every chance of recovery. Five bullets were extracted from his head, though one still remains. He is a hard working man and was in the habit of carrying his money in his stockings. Evidently this was known and he was shot and robbed by traitorous friends.

CEDE PART OF RESERVATION.

Rosebud Indians Readily Sign the Agreement.

Chamberlain, S. D., Oct. 6.—Men who have just arrived in the city announce that splendid progress is being made by Major McLaughlin, chief Indian inspector, in his work of securing the signatures of the Rosebud Indians to an agreement relinquishing that portion of their reservation lying in Gregory county. When the men left the reservation practically all the Indians in the vicinity of the agency had signed, and the work of covering the outlying districts was very well under way.

The Indians have been signing freely, and it was the opinion of the major that no trouble would be encountered in securing the necessary names, and it is believed the work will be completed the present week.

The lands in question are of a superior character, and upon being thrown upon the market will doubtless be taken by actual settlers in a brief period.

BABCOCK AFTER STEEL TRUST.

Washington, Oct. 7.—Congressman Babcock of Wisconsin had a rather long interview with the president during the morning. They went over the tariff situation, and, after the interview, Mr. Babcock said that whether his bill to place on the free list certain steel schedules now controlled by the trust was pushed or not at the next session of congress it represented a principle that would go on because it was supported by the people of the Northwest.

"The people of the Northwest are with me on this question," said Mr. Babcock, "and I would not have the least fear of stumping my district on this question alone."

Mr. Babcock is not opposed to reciprocity, but he does not believe that reciprocity would reach the trusts as his bill will.

WAREHOUSE BURNED.

Fire at Marinette, Wis., Entails a Loss of $200,000.

Marinette, Wis., Oct. 3.—Fire destroyed the warehouse of Smith, Thornkide & Brown, wholesale grocers, together with contents, entailing a loss of about $200,000. Among the goods stored was a large quantity of kerosene oil, which exploded with damaging effect to other goods.

It was with the greatest difficulty that the mills and lumber yards of the N. Ludington company were saved. The damage is partly covered by insurance.

Gebhard Asks for a Divorce.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 8.—Fred Gabbard of New York city, who took up his residence in Sioux Falls last April, has filed in the state circuit court here a suit for an absolute divorce on the ground of desertion. The defendant, before marriage, was Miss Louisa Morris of Baltimore.

2½ H.P. Gasoline Engine.

TO THE PEOPLE:

Some time ago the "Jack-of-All-Trades" began to tell the people what he could do. He made great claims; promised to do more than ever had been done before, and more than most people believed possible. You all know the success he has attained, and as he became more familiar with the country he was traveling in, he could see the possibilities of greater work, and to accomplish this he has introduced to you a traveling companion. Behold his features in the shape of a 2½ H. P. Geared Base Vertical Gasoline Engine. His specialties are pumping water and general farm use. He is very versatile, and when his time is not wanted for pumping water, by a movement of one of his arms, he can disconnect the gears and his power can be directed for other purposes. He is beginning to travel all over the country from the Canadian Provinces to the Equator, and from the Eastern Coast to the Philippines. He is taking up all sorts of work for all kinds of people, and it is surprising to note the results of his work for the first year. Send for information and catalogue.

ROMSOS BROS.

Rev. A. Melin of Alexandria Minn. preached in the Swedish Lutheran church Sunday forenoon. In the afternoon he held services at St. Hilaire. He will remain among us a month or six weeks.

The genial W. H. Scribner of Red Lake Falls was seen circulating among Wylie friends Saturday. He was setting up the cigars and when asked what it all meant he said it was "just one girl." We congratulate.

Red Lake Falls Gazette.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER
—BY—
PHIL A. KAUFER.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

SOMEWHAT PERSONAL.

The Gazette is going to say a few words about itself. We will not do any boasting, but assume that readers of the paper, and those interested in the advancement of Red Lake Falls, are always glad to learn of any element assisting in that advancement. As advertising is the main-spring of business, keeping the machinery in motion and leading to profitable progress, so it is an important element in the furtherance of the ambitions of cities and villages. Especially is this true of a place like Red Lake Falls, with its vast resources, only waiting the advent of capital to develop them. Anything that brings Red LakeFalls into prominence in a favorable way, tends to advertise the place.

Red Lake Falls is receiving considerable advertising at present through the newspaper directories, on account of The Gazette's goodly circulation. The average sworn circulation of this paper is over 1400 weekly. The September issue nf the American newspaper directory shows only eight cities or villages in Minnesota outside of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth, having newspapers with larger sworn circulations than The Gazette. This directory also publishes a map of each state, showing towns in which there are newspapers with more than 1000 circulation.

We have just received a letter from the publishers, in which they state, "In reply to your favor of the 30th ult., we wish to say that Red Lake Falls will appear on the map in the next edition, by virtue of the proved circulation of The Gazette."

The circulation of the Directory is 10,000 copies. There are only two other towns in the north half of Minnesota appearing on this map. Red Lake Falls thus secures valuable and conspicuous advertising, which is bound to help the city, and we modestly submit that The Gazette has done well.

LEST YOU FORGET.

Don't forget to pay the last half of your 1900 realestate taxes before th last day in November. If you do you will have to pay the penalty. —All the realestate taxes become due on the first Monday in January of each year. If not paid on or before the 31st day of May following a penalty of 10 per cent. is added: and if not paid on or before the first Monday of the following January, an additional penalty of five per cent. is added, and the land will be sold the first Monday in May. But, if one half of the tax due on the first Monday in January in each year, shall be paid on or before the 31st day of May following; then no penalty will be added to the remaining one half, if the said remaining one-half shall be paid before the first day of November. If not so paid a penalty of ten per cent. will be added, and if still unpaid on the first Monday in January, an additional penalty of five per cent. of the original tax remaining unpaid will be charged.

Interest on tax sale is one (1) per cent a month.

The attention of our readers is called to the fine showing made in the statement of the First State Bank, published in this issue. The deposits foot up to a total of $136,205.44. The bank officers inform us that the large increase in deposits is due to the fact that many farmers all over the county, recognizing the stability of this splendid institution, are placing their funds here for convenience and safe keeping.

The list of state lands situated in Red Lake County, to be sold October 18, is published on the last last page of The Gazette for the benefit of readers.

STAND BY THE HOME MERCHANTS.

The business men of Red Lake Falls are very much interested in the fact that at this season of the year as usual, there are agents selling goods of all descriptions to the farmers of the county. It is not in one or two lines but everything salable is offered by those going from house to house. Many of these agents are very smooth; put up a great talk of the superior quality of their goods. how much cheaper they can be sold where there is no expense incurred in renting store buildings, etc., and it is a fact that in many cases their stories are swallowed and a sale made, the price probably being higher, and the goods of an inferior quality.

The agents in these cases, as a rule do not care how badly the purchasers are gulled, as many of them never appear in the same town but once, as they well know they could not do business the second trip. The business men feel that this is all wrong for several reasons. One is that they are here the year around, during the rush season and during the dull season. If they sell anything that is not as it is represented, they are willing to replace it and satisfy their customers. In addition to this they make a city what it is. They are the heavy tax-payers, and when money is needed for any public purposes they are the ones who are called upon for the large contributions, and must respond liberally.

During the three months in the fall is the time when the great bulk of business is done, and the profits of the year made, as in a country where wheat is the staple crop, that is the season when the farmers have money to spend, and when the farmer has it every one has a slice of it. For this reason they do not think that those who jump into the city for the few months in the fall should be encouraged.

As one dealer said, agents in some line for which there is a special demand in the fall, can jump in, make a canvass of the best trade among the farmers and do a good business if they are allowed to, even if their prices are a trifle higher than those of the local dealers; but the business men generally feel that even if his prices are as low or lower than those of the regular, the people owe it to the home merchants to give them the preference.

We notice an ad in the last issue of the Northwest Magazine, where an enthusiastic Red River Valley man says "pastures are as green on the first of September as they were in the middle of June." That fellow is all right at heart, but wrong on the dates. Here it is, the 10th of October, and pastures are not only green, but it is a fact that farmers are still putting up hay—good hay, too, that has not been hurt by frost. This week we record an item where a man was hurt while putting up hay. In the High School Items appears an account of a lawn party held this week in Red Lake Falls. Ice cream and cake were served on the lawn. And so it goes. The trouble is, the public has gotten the idea that this is a cold climate, and can't seem to get it out of their heads. The air is "dry and crisp" in winter. But for cold, go to New Orleans and see the frozen banana trees if you are looking for evidences of cold weather.

"High School Notes" is a new department which we secure through the courtesy of Supt. Whiteley and the Athenian society of the High School. We doubt if any department in The Gazette will be read with greater interest than this. The items have gone in verbatim, as they come to us, and we say with considerable feeling of enthusiasm that the young people who furnished them have shown not only marked literary talent, but what is as important, a nice discrimination in the selection and classification of items. The Gazette is proud of its High School Department and prouder of the little men and women contributors.

Oct. 18 will come the freeze-up, says the Agricultural Department.

Facts and Fancies

Minnesota has 152 presidential postoffices.

The Duluth Normal School will open its doors on January 7.

The Bridgie Broadaxe has hewn too close to the heart—and died.

As long as a man is modest his mistakes are not held against him.

G. A. E. Finlayson, the Crookston attorney, has located at East Grand Forks.

Old widowers lean lots more when out riding with their second love than they did the first time.

It is not often that an old man wants to admit that he is a back number—unless it is when his wife wants him to run the washing machine.

A. D. Stephens thinks Capt. Barr of the Columbia can beat his own vessel with Shamrock II, and has written Sir Thos. Lipton, suggesting such a race.

C. H. Hicks, private secretary to Senator Knute Nelson, has taken a claim near Warroad. With Berg and the other heavy weights interested up that way developments ought to follow.

Under order from Washington a special agent of the land office has left Michigan for Minnesota to investigate and report on lands in dispute between the federal government and the state. The area affected is a large one, running from Rainy River east to Lake Superior, a distance of nearly 200 miles, and taking in all the northern tier of townships bordering on Canada.

An official report issued Saturday shows that the British casualties in South Africa from the beginning of the war to Sept. 30 were 548 officers and 5,823 men killed in action, and 1,529 officers and 28,032 wounded; 365 officers and 9,177 men are classified missing or prisoners, of whom 354 officers and 8,471 men have either been released or have escaped. The deaths from disease and accident numbered 10,738.

The annual report of Capt. Henry Castle, auditor of the post office department, shows the gross receipts for offices in this vicinity to have been as follows: Ada, $3,705.71; Bemidji, $6,265.51; Detroit City, $4,278.24; East Grand Forks, $3,185.30; Fergus Falls, $12,087.93; Fosston, $3,159.40; Hallock, $2,904.25; Moorhead, $8643.25; Red Lake Falls, $3183.65; Stephen, $1,587.64; Thief River Falls, $3168.55; Warren, $5,724.33.

Good for Carter Harrison—Emma Goldman, the anarchist queen, was going to deliver the speech in Chicago which Czolgosz claims incited him to the crime of assassinating President McKinley, and let the public decided whether there was anything in it to incite a person to crime, but Mayor Harrison, when spoken to in regard to it by his friends, decided it would not be best and as a consequence Emma didn't talk.

Three of the stingiest men on record are reported by an exchange. The first will not drink as much water as he wants unless it comes from his neighbor's well. The second forbade his family from writing anything but a small hand as it is a waste of ink to make large letters. The third stops the clock at night to save wear and tear on machinery. All of them rafuse to take a newspaper on the ground that it is a terrible strain on the spectacles to read.

Logging operations in the pine woods during the coming winter will be as heavy as the various logging and lumbering concerns are able to make them. The demand for pine lumber during the season has been so that stocks are little larger than they were at the beginning of the sawing season, and by the time the mills are ready to commence work next spring the assortment will be poorer than it was last spring. What the harvest of logs will be will depend on a number of things. The scant supply of labor is bothering the loggers and promises to continue to handicap them during the coming months. Wages are high and yet the men do not respond. Harvest fields and railroad work have kept them busy, and the latter will continue to keep many of them out of camp for some weeks.

LOCAL ❖ ITEMS.

County Attorney Grady made a business trip to Crookston Tuesday.

Jos. Schusser was down from Thief River Falls Sunday for a days' visit.

Ed. Bray went down to Crookston Monday, where he purchased that new dray.

Mrs. Itner returned Monday from a visit at the home of her son Otto, in Dorothy.

John Grady returned Monday from Dell Rapids, S. D., where he had been on business.

A land deal was the attraction that took J. A. Duffy and S. L. Lewis to Ives Friday.

Jas. E. Ford and Peter Pouliot drove to Thief River Falls Sunday. The roads were good. Not so now.

Jas. Meehan Jr., the handsome and popular Thief River Fallsite, tarried with us between trains Monday.

A. Chayer, a cigar-maker of Chippewa Falls, came up Monday to spend a few days with his uncle, Phil. Chayer.

T. B. McManus and family took advantage of the beautiful weather Sunday and drove over from Crookston.

Miss Alma Brummond, formerly of this city, now of St. Hilaire, was a guest of Miss Marguerite Kaus Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Inga Vikre came down from Thief River Falls Saturday and is a guest at the home of County Treasurer Tandberg.

Ralph Wyer, H. H. Zaiser and Harry Healy are on the hunt for geese. This item is published, not as a matter of news, but as a warning to the geese.

The Red Lake Falls teachers' fraternity, Theta Delta Gamma, have cards out for a social affair at Mrs. Spilinue's, Saturday, October 19, from eight to eleven.

Mrs. J. B. O'Brien and Miss Ellen Brady, of St. Hilaire, alighted from the Cannon Ball Saturday, having come over to do some shopping in our metropolitan stores between trains.

Mary Lacount, the spouse of Amiable Lacount, concluded to return from the Twin Cities with her husband, who went down to look for her. Accordingly they arrived in the city Tuesday.

H. J. Kaufer is making extensive improvements to his barber shop. The room has been doubled in size, and is being repapered and painted. A new reading table will be put in and other additions made to the furnishings.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Murphy, accompanied by Miss Cora Arnet, drove to Thief River Falls Saturday. On their return Mr. Murphy sold his team at St. Hilaire, one of Dan Patterson's rigs did service the balance of the way.

J. S. Malm, John Nelson and E. C. Berg, a Crookston business firm, have dissolved partnership, and to figure where each is at, according to the dissolution notice, would puzzle the Youth's Companion puzzle prize winner.

It is reported on good authority that Mrs. H. Sarasin, formerly of this city, died suddenly recently at Winnipeg. Mrs. Sarasin was an estimable lady, and has many warm friends here who will be immeasurably shocked at the sad intelligence.

Jas. G. Brady, who has spent the summer with the M. & I. surveying crew in the wilds of Itasca county, dropped in on his relatives and friends Friday, returning to Bemidji Sunday. "Jim" is now one of the familiar figures in the towns along the M. & I. where he is very popular.

Dr. Henry Stuhr, of McIntosh, who went to Euclid Saturday to attend the funeral of his little nephew Earl Mead, returned Monday with his sister, Mrs. Mead, and is remaining with her a few days to do what he can towards comforting her in this time of great sorrow. The threatened attack of brain fever it is thought has been averted.

The contest brought by Paul Trudell against Mrs. Maria Buse, on the latter's tree claim in Lake Pleasant township, has been decided by the general land office, in favor of the defendant, Mrs. Buse. The claim which is now quite valuable was taken by Mrs. Buse's husband over fifteen years ago, and since his departure has been claimed by the widow.

Misses Lorena Schreiter and Olga Kretzschmar drove to Thief River Falls Saturday for an over-Sunday stay at the home of Mayor and Mrs. Carl Kretzschmar. The young ladies report that they came within an ace of losing their horse. He was let out in the Kretzschmar barn yard which shuts on the river above the dam, and not being familiar with the situation there, succeeded in "getting in" and was about to go over the dam when lassoed and towed ashore.

A. M. Sivertson was away at Crookston Saturday on business.

Misses Nell Hanney and Minnie McAffery, of St. Hilaire visited in the city Saturday.

W. A. Murphy went to McIntosh Tuesday, to be absent a week in the interests of the Piano Manufacturing Co. He was accompanied by his wife.

Wm. Lee, who has been working at St. Hilaire, returned to the city Friday and will make his home with his aunt, Mrs. Ed. Enright, for the winter.

The dance last Friday night at the Opera house was attended by ten couples. The crowd made up in merriment what they lacked in number.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Kratha, of Thief River Falls, were passengers on the express Saturday, returning home from a trip to the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo.

Attention is called to the Goodyear Rubber Co's. advertisement. Their "Gold Seal" brand has a national reputation for reliability. Ask the man you trade with for "Gold Seal" overshoes.

Allier Pouliot has purchased the harness business of Adam Schmitz and will continue at the present stand, opposite the postoffice. Mr. Schmitz has not decided what business he will go into.

A Gazette reporter chased Agent Thomas down last night to learn all about that special. Did you notice it? Came in about 5:30 and made considerable ado. It was the freight several hours late.

Mrs. Otto Nelson, of St. Hilaire was down the first of the week, a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Harrington. Mrs. Nelson is seeking a divorce from her husband, and was here looking after the details of the case.

County Commissioner Wm. C. L. Demane is pretty proud of the fact that a little three-year-old apple tree in his orchard this year produced seven bushels of fine ripe apples. Mr. Demann brought in a few specimens this week, some of which are on exhibition at the First State Bank.

Philip Walter, of Fergus Falls, is a guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Walter. He will remain hereabouts for a couple of weeks, and the first of next month will go on a hunting trip in the Big Fork country in company with Messrs. Steve Withey of Crookston and Arthur Zaiser of this city.

On October 1st to 3d, the state board examined applications for license to practice dentistry. There were 32 applicants, sixteen passing. Among the successful ones is J. M. McNertiney of this place, who writes that he has now in his pocket his diploma from the state U, and the board certificate. Dr. McNerthney will open an office in Tacoma.

L. R. Bramsness, of River Falls, was in the city Tuesday making arrangements to ship his household goods to Rochester, Washington, next week. Mr. Bramsness settled on his homestead in River Falls township twenty-one years ago, and has been a resident of the county since that time. Last summer he sold his farm for $3,200, and goes to Washington with his wife to spend his declining years.

At the last meeting of the fire laddies it was decided to give the annual ball on Thanksgiving. The Woodmen hall has been secured for the occasion. A committee was appointed to urge the council to raise the bell tower on the city hall from eighteen to twenty feet, so that the fire alarm may be heard at a greater distance. As it is now the alarm is not effective, being smothered among the surrounding and overtowering buildings.

The man with the long hair seen about town this week is Charlie Brunelle, a cousin of Frank Lacount. Brunelle is a half breed Chippewa. He was educated at the government industrial school at Devils Lake, which takes only children with Indian blood. He can speak Chippewa, Sioux, English, German, French, and six other languages. He is regarded as a handsome specimen and is a professional poser. His last experience was before an art class of several hundred in the Hopkins Institute of San Francisco. It is very trying to sit for hours without moving a muscle, and every fifteen minutes there is a five-minute recess for relief from the strain. The pay is $1 an hour. Brunelle says he visited Europe with Buffalo Bill's Wild West show.

With the Churches.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

The regular Saturday and Sunday classes in catechism and bible history have been resumed at St. Mary's church.

The mission, which was to be held in St. Mary's church next week is postponed to the last of this month because it has become impossible for the missionary to be here next Sunday.

P. Ansgar O. S. B.,
Pastor.

Rev. Andrew Walker went to Thief River Falls Monday to preside as moderator at the installation ceremonies of Rev. Dale as pastor of the Presbyterian church of that city. Tuesday Rev. Walker left for Fisher to attend the sessions of the Red River Presbytery.

Last Sabbath was the eighteenth Sunday after Trinity in the Protestant church memoranda. This day in the Roman Catholic calendar is dedicated to St. Faith, a Syrian Christian, burned to death for refusing to worship a heathen God. St. Bruno, the founder of the Carthusian Order of Monks, one of the most austere of monastic orders, is also honored on this day.

Oct. 9 is dedicated in the Catholic calendar to St. Denis, the patron saint of France, and the first bishop of Paris, who is usually represented in pictures as carrying his own head in his hand. He was martyred at St. Denys in 272. This day is observed in Japan as the feast of Chrysanthemums. At Dublin, Ireland, this is Ivy day, when a procession goes to the grave of Charles Stuart Parnell and decorates it with ivy wreaths.

The Women's C. O. F. are planning a reception for Sisters Mrs. J. R. Fortier and Mrs. John Severd.

Clearwater lodge I. O. O. F. has appointed as a committee Brothers F. A. Whiteley, Aug. Riechel and Leo Steinert to arrange for a reception for recently married members. The date will be announced later.

The local Red Men, of Otista Tribe No. 43, have decided to reduce the initiation fee from $10 to $5. Plans are laid that are calculated, with this new rate, to bring into camp no less than fifty scalps during the next few months. The new order takes effect next Wednesday, Oct. 16.

The Royal Neighbors of Crookston have initiated the warmest kind of a contest for new members. The lodge has been divided into two sections, led by Mrs. Fred Walker and Mrs. Maggie Puhien. To the side winning the most members by November 16, which is the anniversary of the institution of the lodge in that city, $10 will be donated. Both sides are making an active effort and the lodge will no doubt receive a large number of new members. The anniversary will be properly celebrated with ceremonies and feastings, and November 16 will be a red letter day in the history of the order.

William H. Lincoln, of Columbus lodge of Elks, who is an expert shot and a member of the local gun club, is at the pinnacle of happiness when he has a party of attentive listeners while he tells of his wonderful achievements with the gun. One day lately Brother Lincoln was sitting in the library room at the Elks' club enjoying a quiet smoke, when several of the members came in and soon the conversation was lively, talking on the situation in the Philippines and China, and then on the skill of different ones present as expert shots, says the Columbus (Ind.) Republic. George Schwartzkopf related how, on different occasions, he had made some marvelous shots and that he felt he could give Lincoln a run for a short distance.

"You'd be a lobster in a match with me," said Lincoln. "I'll give you 40 dead birds out of 50 and shoot for the oysters."

"Being that no betting is allowed in these rooms we will agree to shoot and see about the oysters afterward," said Schwertzkopf.

"What kind of birds will we shoot at, George? And just to get a chance to trim your record, I'll agree to furnish the birds," said Lincoln.

"All right," remarked Schwartzkopf, with a twinkle in his eye, "we'll shoot at ostriches."

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Liebel drove in from Wylie to-day and Charlie made us a pleasant call—squaring his subscription account for a time in advance.

I have purchased the harness business of Adam Schmitz, and will continue the business at the old stand, opposite the post office. A well assorted stock at fair prices will be found on hand, and the best of workmanship is guaranteed my customers. I would ask all to give me a call, and whether you wish to buy or not, come in and have a harness talk.

Yours truly,
A. J. Pouliot.

High School Notes.

Edited by The Athenian Society.

LITERARY WORK.

Friday, October 4, the Athenian and Spartan literary societies of the High School Organization held their regular meeting. The two societies joined in rendering the following program:

Song—"Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."
By the School.
Essay............"Our New President."
Ralph Healy.
Essay.........."Our Recent President."
Eleanor Findeisen.
Debate—"Resolved that girls are of more account about the house than boys." Girls vs. Boys.
Song.........................."America."
By the School.

The girls were winners of the debate, Misses Fahy, Carley and Van Etten acting as judges. The above named judges were the only visitors. A very cordial and urgent invitation is extended to all to attend the meetings, which occur every Friday at 3 p. m. The next meeting, however, will be held Friday, October 18. The Spartans give the program. Of course if you wish to hear a good program it would be advisable to wait until the Athenians give their program November 1. October 25 there will be a debate between the two societies.

PERSONALS.

Emma Wagner and Rose Helm were enrolled as the new comers this week.

Mr. Philion, our janitor, is much grieved because the weather is wet, thus necessitating more sweeping than usual.

Miss Alice Newton entertained a few of her intimate friends last Friday evening at a lawn party. A very enjoyable time was reported.

Miss Olga Kretzschmar visited Thief River Falls Saturday, returning Sunday.

INCIDENTS.

A pleasant (?) odor has been going the rounds in the laboratory the past two days.

A few of the senior girls have secured permission to go home after the Cicero recitation, which comes the first thing in the afternoon.

It is hoped that the Juniors will make a better effort this month to have their average in geometry above that of the Sophomores, it being some twenty below theirs during the month of September.

Marjorie Rodgers and Doretta Mathias are detained from school, their younger sisters being afflicted with the latest. Their school mates hope to see them at school again shortly.

SCHOOL IN GENERAL.

Those desiring to hear a good (?) Caesar recitation may do so by visiting the High School at 2:30 p. m.

Report cards were issued this week. According to the per cent. in deportment, a decided change may be made in the High School for the better. We especially call the attention of the girls to this fact.

CONTRIBUTION.

I have seen many baseball games in my life, but the most interesting one to me, the one I am going to write about, was played in this town about three years ago, between the Red Lake Falls "Selects" and the Thief River Falls "Indians." There was an excursion and all kinds of people in town. The game was called at 3 o'clock p. m., the Selects taking the field with Farrel and Murphy for a battery. Well, the first man who stepped to the plate was retired by 1, 2, 3 strikes, the same with the second and third, with Murphy behind them catching and hollering to Ferrel "Shoot 'em in, old boy." For the next six innings all was white washes, and up to the seventh inning they had not got a tally yet on either side. In the 7th the Indians played hard and run in six scores, and the Selects none, making the scores 6 to 0 in favor of the Indians. In the 8th the Indians made another tally and the Selects were white-washed, making the scores 7 to 0 in favor of the Indians. But the 9th inning came and the Selects white-washed the Indians and managed to get three men on bases when they got into bat, and put Wm. Lachapelle to the plate. He just let the ball have it and sent it flying over center garden, making a home run. This made the scores 7 to 4 and encouraged the Selects. Then two men went out by a 1, 2, 3. Then 3 men got on bases and were brought in by Murphy who made a home run. This made them ahead of the Indians by 1 score. They had won the game by a score of 7 to 8. The Indians said that the Selects were struck out, but there is always a ninth inning. I'll tell you they were sore.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

Hiram F. Stevens of St. Paul is a prospective candidate for United States senator in 1904, to succeed Moses E. Clapp.

At the close of the present season St. Paul will have 35 miles of new sidewalks which were built this year. Last year the record was 23 miles.

The capital commission has awarded to W. I. Gray & Co. of Minneapolis the contract for the mechanical equipment and powerhouse at the new state capitol.

The burning Wednesday of last week of Bridge No. 60, near Mora, shut off traffic on the Duluth line of the Great Northern for several days. The fire started from forest fires.

The September lumber shipments from Minneapolis for 1901 were 41,950,000 feet, as against 38,356,000 feet a year ago. The average monthly shipments for this year is 41,000,000 feet.

William Lowry, a United States prisoner, escaped from the Blue Earth county jail. He was arrested last spring on a charge of passing counterfeit money, and was awaiting his trial in November.

The past few days large numbers of farmers from Northern and Northwestern Iowa have passed through Minnesota on their way to the northern part of Minnesota and to North Dakota in search of homes.

The Duluth, Virginia and Rainy Lake road has secured rails for 31 miles of track which it proposes to build this fall and winter. The company is advertising for 500 more men to get to work immediately.

United States Senators Moses E. Clapp and Knute Nelson have recommended to United States Marshal William Grimshaw the appointment of W. J. Mallery of Duluth as deputy United States marshal in that city, to succeed the late Paul Sharvy.

The oldest residence in Winona county was burned to the ground Saturday morning at Homer. It was owned by Dr. L. H. Bunnell, who is well known throughout the state as a historian of considerable note. The house was built in the early 40's.

The September receipts of wheat at Duluth port were 11,350,000 bushels, more than any September on record. October has usually been a larger month than September, but this year high offers for cash wheat at Minneapolis are diverting a large amount of grain to that city.

Oct. 1 finds the record for ore shipments from the Head of the Lakes, Duluth, Two Harbors and Superior, nearly 500,000 tons greater than that of 1900 on the same date. The aggregate shipments to Oct. 1, this year, are 8,192,752, as compared with 7,728,613 tons for the corresponding period one year ago.

The state historical society is urging the need of a separate building for its own use at the corner of Wabasha and Tenth streets, St. Paul, near the old capitol building. The society has not sufficient funds to purchase the building, but the members hope to secure an appropriation from the next legislature.

S. E. Atkins, clerk in the office of the state auditor, is of the opinion that the value of personal property in Minnesota will reach $130,000,000 this year. This will be about $10,000,000 greater than the increase ordered by the board of equalization last year. The heavy increases are in Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis counties.

Three men were burned to death in a barn near the village of Trasky, Pipestone county. A threshing crew of nine men were sleeping in the barn. Six escaped uninjured. The names of the unfortunates are Claud Main and Fred Houlette of Vinton, Ia., and Filbert Evarts of Pipestone county. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Smallpox is prevalent on the White Earth Indian reservation and among the Indians at Mille Lacs lake. The Indians on the reservations are not subject to the control of the state board of health, and Dr. H. M. Bracken, secretary of the board, has appealed to the Washington authorities. He thinks the Indians should be vaccinated.

In the township of Cambria, Blue Earth county, some strange disease is taking off the horses. Evan Harris started for the creamery with his team and before he got home both horses died. Others report sudden deaths among their horses. Some of the farmers lay the fatality to the feeding of new oats, which may contain some poisonous substance.

J. Q. Adams & Co. of Minneapolis, who conduct one of the largest grain receiving and exporting houses in the Northwest under the name of the St. Paul and Kansas City Grain company, made an assignment Friday to Fred V. Van Dusen and P. B. Smith. The failure is due to losses incurred last spring during the corner in corn, which was engineered by George Phillips.

There was filed with the register of deeds of Winona county Saturday the deed of the Winona and Western Railway company to the Chicago Great Western Railway company. The deed conveys the entire line and equipment and the consideration named is $1,350,000. The transfer is made to the Wisconsin, Minnesota and Pacific Railway company, which is the incorporation name of the Chicago Great Western.

Auditor Rittman, who has charge of the settlement of claims of states for reimbursement of war expenditures, has paid the state of Minnesota $8,238.50 since June 30, when his annual report was made public. The amount was for service pay of men who offered themselves to the United States at the outbreak of the Spanish war, but were rejected by the medical examiners. The state paid them for the time spent in camp awaiting examination and is now repaid that outlay by the general government. This makes a total of $49,474.40 paid to the state on account of claims aggregat-

NEWS OF THE WEEK

SCHLEY COURT OF INQUIRY.

In the Schley court of inquiry Tuesday Admiral Evans was put through a severe cross-examination by Schley's attorneys. He admitted that at the meeting of May 29 instructions were given in regard to attacking the Spanish fleet in case it left the harbor, but he did not consider it a plan of battle. Mr. Rayner then questioned the witness particularly as to his interviews with Commodore Schley after the battle of Santiago. The admiral denied having said that Captain Philip had run away or attempted to run away. The witness said that while before Cienfuegos or on the way to Santiago the squadron had no orders for battle. The chief point in Captain Sigsbee's testimony was his firm denial of Admiral Schley's statement that he (Sigsbee) informed Schley that Cervera's fleet was not in Santiago harbor.

An interesting turn was given to the Schley court of inquiry Wednesday by the introduction of the first witness in Admiral Schley's behalf. This was Lieutenant James J. Doyle, who was watch officer on board the flagship Brooklyn during the war with Spain. He was called by the department, but as he is one of the admiral's witnesses advantage was taken to question him as an original witness f· the applicant. Lieutenant Ooyle explained the change made in the Brooklyn's log regarding the famous loop. Relating the particulars of the blockade of Cienfuegos he described the signal lights on shore but neither he nor anyone else on the Brooklyn had been informed of the secret code and the signals could not be read. Commander Sharp was the other principal witness of the day and he corroborated the evidence of former witnesses for the department on the principal points in controversy.

Lieutenant James J. Ooyle of the Brooklyn continued his testimony before the Schley court of inquiry Thursday, detailing at great length the Santiago campaign. Doyle pictured the Brooklyn as a fighting ship, relentlessly and vigorously searching the enemy, with a commander who was cautious, alert and valiant. Doyle was brought in the case at this time to tell why he had changed the log book of the Brooklyn to show that the Brooklyn had turned on a starboard helm instead of a port helm, as originally written. He renewed his explanation to the effect that he was deceived by his view from the limited aperture in the turret and changed his words when Lieutenant Sharp called his attention to the mistake. Captain Dawson, signal officer of the Indiana, gave an account of the behavior of the various ship during the engagement. He said the Brooklyn had gone 2,000 yards southward before joining in the pursuit of Cervera's ships.

In the Schley naval court of inquiry Friday Mr. Rayner, chief of counsel for Admiral Schley, asked Judge Advocate Lemly to summon Admiral Sampson as a witness in the case. The request grew out of a difference in the construction of a sentence in Admiral Sampson's letter to Commodore Schley, written from Key West, May 20, while Commodore Schley with the flying squadron lay off Cienfuegos. While Commander Rodgers of the board of survey was on the stand Schley's attorneys submitted a computation of shells showing that at least 34 per cent of the shots which struck the Spanish fleet were fired by the Brooklyn. Commander Hodgson gave a graphic description of the battle off Santiago, describing the part taken in it by the Brooklyn and explaining the change in the entry of that vessel's log. He testified that he warned Schley that he would run into the Texas, and the commodore replied, "Damn the Texas. She must look out for herself."

The Schley court of inquiry held but one session Saturday and that was devoted mainly to reading the correspondence between Admiral Schley and Commander Hodgson, who was navigator of the Brooklyn in the Spanish war, relating to their dispute over the way the vessel was handled. The question of construction of Sampson's "Dear Schley" letter was again brought up and two "original" copies produced, one by the department and one by Schley's attorneys. They were identical with the exception that in the department's copy the word "Cienfuegos" had been erased and "Santiago" substituted.

State of Minnesota } ss
County of Red Lake }

In Probate Court,
Special Term,
Sept. 16, 1901.

In the matter of the estate of
Anna Kees,
Deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Michael Kees, administrator of the estate of Anna Kees, deceased, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of, the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences, and praying that license be to him granted to sell all of the real estate that Anna Kees died seized of.

And it appearing by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay said debts, legacies or expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debt, legacies and expenses, to sell all of said real estate.

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 21st day of October, A. D. 1901, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court house in the probate office, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Michael Kees, administrator of said estate to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered, that this order shall be published once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls, in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, the 16th day of September, A. D. 1901.

The NIGHT BEFORE THE FOURTH

AN INDEPENDENCE DAY STORY

By
HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1900, by Charles W. Hooke.

THE American boy regards the night before the Fourth of July as a time sacred to adventure. The courage of his forefathers inspires him, and deeds that would appall him at any other season seem then to be easy and natural. When he shins the lightning rod of the village church to tie a long rope to the clapper of the bell, the spirit of 1776 sustains him, and when he comes down again and fastens the other end of the line to the tail of the deacon's cow in a neighboring pasture he feels that something has really been accomplished for the honor of his country.

The most deliciously thrilling experiences of my own youth fall upon a single line of the calendar—the mark between the black 3 and the red 4 in the month of July. Some of them did not even pretend to spring from the impulse of patriotism; but at a different time I might have lacked the spirit to carry them through.

On the 3d of July, in my fifteenth year, I arrived in the town of Holbrook, on the Maine cost, where my father had hired a cottage for the summer. We had chosen the place upon the recommendation of a citizen thereof—Dr. Clarence Boyd, with whom my father had been friends years before.

Before I had left the steamboat wharf I had scraped acquaintance with two of the finest fellows ever born and was well started toward a pleasant summer vacation! I spent most of the day in their company and very early discovered that they had something important upon their minds and that I was a candidate for a share in some mysterious adventure.

Late in the afternoon we were sitting in the portico of a big, square, untenanted house on the ridge that overlooked the town. I had the oak door at my back. Ned Austin, a preternaturally tall youth, with the figure of an Indian, was upon my left, and Don Cheney, a chunky, muscular, square jawed fellow, was upon my right.

"Do you know anything about this house?" asked Austin suddenly.

"No," said I. "What's the matter with it? Why doesn't anybody live here?"

"The what?" I cried.

"Two years ago tonight," continued Austin, "Ezra Dumond was murdered in his bed, right up there." And he extended his long arm diagonally upward toward the southern corner of the house. "He was an old man—71—and I don't believe he had an enemy in the world or had quarreled with anybody in 20 years. That's what my father says. It's a great mystery. Mr. Dumond used to be a lawyer, but he hadn't done anything of late. He had a lot of money. His nephew's got it all now—Dr. Dumond Sanger of Boston."

"That looks bad," said I, wishing to show the instincts of a detective.

"Dr. Sanger wasn't here," said Ned. "He had been here in June and was coming back in August, but on the night of July 3 he was at some sort of a banquet in Boston. That is beyond question.

"There wasn't anybody at home but Mr. Dumond. His daughter had died during the winter. Old Joe Staples and his wife, who lived here as servants, had gone to spend the Fourth with their folks in North Holbrook, as they usually did. The old man was alone, but he wouldn't care for that; he was something of a hermit—a tall, stooping man, with fine blue eyes and a great shock of white hair as ragged as a crow's nest. It was a grand old head.

SITTING IN THE PORTICO.

"He was stabbed right through the heart as he lay in bed—just one wound. Dr. Boyd said it was done about midnight, and that the old man never waked nor moved. Cap'n Hutchinson found him. It happened that he and Mr. Dumond were going somewhere together that morning, or the body would have laid up there all through the Fourth, with the cannon shaking the windows.

"Well, the cap'n gave the alarm, and lots of people came. They hunted from cellar to garret, but they didn't find a weapon nor a trace of the murderer. There was no robbery. Nothing was gone from the house but Mr. Dumond's soul.

"They never found out anything," he continued after a brief pause. "Dr. Sanger came down here with a couple of Boston detectives, and he was going to get to the bottom of the affair right away. He's a queer fellow—a little wiry, nervous, irritable chap"—

"A funny looking cuss," said Cheney. "He's towheaded, but his eyebrows and lashes are black. His eyes are gray, with a dark line around the colored part—what d'you call it—the iris. Look at him in the face a minute, and he seems to be all eyes."

"He hadn't eyes enough to see through this mystery," said Ned. "Never mind him; he's in Europe now. Let me tell you something queer. One year ago tonight an old fellow named Simon Gardiner was passing this house at midnight. There was a bright moon shining on those windows up there—the windows of Mr. Dumond's room—and Gardiner seemed to see a tall man standing by one of them. Now, of course, he might have been mistaken; he rather thought that he was; but the next day he mentioned the matter, and somebody said it might be a good idea to look over the house. I'll show you what they found. It's there yet."

"PUT YOUR FINGER HERE."

He cast a glance around to make sure that we were not observed, and then thrust a great key into the lock.

"Everything's been fastened up tight since a year ago," whispered Cheney. "We had a lot of trouble getting a key to fit."

The stairs and the floor of the upper hall creaked under us and kept on creaking after we had passed, so that it seemed as if we led an invisible procession to the door of the southern chamber.

The window that faced southwestward let in a glare from the descending sun, and there was a tinge of red over all the room.

Austin approached the bed and touched the coverlet, making a depression in it about as high up in the bed as a man's heart would be.

"This is what they found, and all they found, one year ago today, one year after the murder," said Austin; "a mark like a hand on this quilt and a single clean cut through it and almost through the mattress. Put your finger here."

Shuddering, I obeyed and felt the stab.

"Now, boys," he continued, "there's something better for us to do tonight than ringing the church bell and firing giant crackers under the windows of the school committee room. We'll have a silent celebration of our own right in this room and see what happens."

It was stoutly agreed to, but the back of my mouth was dry and the joints of my legs cracked as I walked out of the room and down the groaning stairway.

After dinner I managed to meet Dr. Boyd in a corner of the veranda and questioned him about the Dumond murder. He said it was an absolute mystery. I asked him what he thought of the occurrence upon the anniversary, and he replied that it was one of Simon Gardiner's hallucinations, supplemented by the efforts of some grim practical joker who wanted to give the story a good climax.

"You knew Dr. Dumond Sanger quite well, didn't you?" I asked. "Do you think it's possible"—

"Utterly out of the question," he interrupted. "He knows no more than we do. I got quite intimate with him when he was here just before the crime. We were engaged in"—

He paused, and I waited to the end of my patience and then prompted him.

"Yes," he said, almost with a start, "we spent a good deal of time"—

Again he checked himself and almost immediately branched off upon some other subject. I brought him back to the point five times, but he always stopped just when he seemed about to tell me what he and Dr. Sanger used to do. Later I asked Austin if he knew anything about it, and he said the two men never did anything but sit in Boyd's office and tell stories.

At half past 11 o'clock that night I was sitting in a big chair in a corner of the room that had been Ezra Dumond's. Ned Austin lay on the bed, and Don Cheney was sitting on the floor, with his back against the southwestern wall and facing the door.

"Boys," said I, "it's getting near the hour, and I'd better say something that's on my mind before it's too late. I'm a new fellow here, and it would be natural for you to spring some kind of a joke on me. If that's what's up, stop it right now, for I tell you plainly that if—if anything comes into this room and doesn't give an account of itself I'm going to shoot."

Austin sat up in the bed.

"I give you my word of honor," he said solemnly, "that this is as far from a joke as it can be. As to shooting, you must use your own judgment and take your own responsibility. But don't shoot till there's nothing else to do."

Austin was not armed, but Cheney had a revolver. I could see it shining on the floor beside him. I drew my own and held it in my hand.

Ned lay back upon the bed, and for many minutes the room was quiet, except for a strange and faint tattoo coming from Cheney's direction. I judged that his heels must be trembling on the floor.

And then, with surprising distinctness, came the clicking of the latch in the front door. Cheney and I were on our feet in an instant, but Ned did not move.

The stairs creaked faintly. There was the same curious sound as of many footsteps that I had noted in the afternoon. They so confused the hearing that I knew not whether to expect one intruder or 20, nor could I tell when he who came was really at the chamber door. Suddenly he was within, a tall, stooping figure, with groping arms. There was scarcely any light upon him where he stood; he seemed a mere shadow.

He took two steps toward the bed and then paused. Surely he must see Ned lying there. I tried to speak, but could not. The figure again advanced. It seemed to be stooping over Ned, and one of its arms was stretched out.

"It's all right. Don't fire!"

Ned's whisper came just in time. I perceived that he had slid off the bed upon the farther side.

The figure hesitated, passing a hand over the coverlet, and then made a downward thrust, not violently, but steadily, as one who cuts with precision. In another moment it had glided out of the room.

"After it!" exclaimed Cheney in the most singular choked voice I ever heard.

Ned caught him by the arm.

"No use," he said. "I know who it was."

At that moment I heard the front door close gently.

* * * * * * *

It was the day after the Fourth, and we three boys were sitting on the veranda of my house. Dr. Boyd was there, and no one else.

"Doctor," said Ned, "you know all about hypnotism, don't you?"

Boyd laughed.

"I know a little about it," he said. "I used to experiment with"—

And then he stopped.

"If you experimented with a man," continued Ned, "and he hypnotized you and told you in that state never to mention the experiments, you couldn't do it, could you?"

IT SEEMED TO BE STOOPING OVER NED.

The doctor shook his head.

"If he told you when you were under his influence to do a certain thing, you'd have to do it, wouldn't you?"

"If I were completely under his influence, yes."

"And then you would forget about it?"

"If he told me not to remember it, I should not be able to do so," replied the doctor.

Ned's face became intent, and there was a flush of excitement on it.

"And if," he continued, "this man told you to do a certain thing on—well, we'll say on the Fourth of July—and forgot to tell you to do it only once you'd keep on doing it every Fourth of July, wouldn't you?"

"I should go through the motions," said the doctor, smiling.

I was sick with horror. Turning toward Cheney, I saw his face so bluish white that it was painful to look at him.

"In the name of heaven, boys," I gasped, "what shall we do?"

The case had gone beyond us. That day we consulted our elders, and as a result detectives were sent in pursuit of Sanger. He was arrested in Honolulu in October.

Meanwhile nothing was said to Dr Boyd. He was ill of pneumonia when the news of Sanger's capture and death reached Holbrook, and within a week thereafter he was sleeping under the withered grass of the North hill, near to the grave of Ezra Dumond.

KEEP YOUR BLOOD CLEAN

Worn-out overshoes and old rubber
Of every kind have a
Market value.
Rag and junk dealers buy them and Ship in car load lots to
"Reclaiming factories" or
"Shoddy mills."
Then this rotten stuff is Ground up and made into Cheap rubber goods
Or mixed with new material
For medium priced goods.
Of course
Shoddy rubbers won't wear any better
Than shoddy clothes.
Neither are they warm, and are Apt in cold weather to become Stiff.
Persons buying cheap rubbers usually
Pay mostly for shoddy.
To wear well, and be warm,
A rubber should be made of PURE GUM.
Not an ounce of shoddy is used
In "Gold Seal" Rubbers, Overshoes
Or Rubber Boots.
Every pair has a "Gold Seal" Sticker;
So no one need be deceived.
The man you trade with
Should keep them.
If he don't, tell
Goodyear Rubber Co., St. Paul.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. P. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at W. A. Schreiter's Drug Store.

Tot Causes Night Alarm.

"One night my brother's baby was taken with Croup," writes Mrs. J. C. Snider, of Crittenden, Ky,. "It seemed it would strangle before we could get a doctor, so we gave it Dr. King's New Discovery, which gave quick relief and permanently cured it. We always keep it in the house to protect our children from Croup and Whooping Cough. It cured me of a chronic bronchial trouble that no other remedy would relieve." Infallible for Coughs, Colds, Throat and Lung troubles. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. A. Schreiter's.

Policemen are reputed to be a brave set of men, especially Chicago's policemen. They are not afraid of anything human, and it is not often that they are afraid of mice, but a tiny mouse scared one of the desk sergeants at the East Chicago avenue station into a nervous frenzy one night lately, says a Chicago exchange.

The sergeant was sitting at his desk when he felt something wriggling up his trousers leg. He kept at work, but the sensation finally became unbearable and he began an investigation. Feeling for the place where he thought there was a flea or something of the kind he discovered to his consternation that he had a mouse under his clothing. Jumping from his stool, he rushed out of the room shouting for help.

"There's a mouse on my leg," he yelled. "Get him out! Get him out!"

Several officers came to his assistance. They found him in a state of nervous prostration and had to lay him on a bench before the mouse could be removed. The animal was dead when they found it, but the sergeant was unable to work for the remainder of the night.

Having and Giving.

In Sussex, England, a man whose desire to get and to keep is unduly developed is not called "grasping;" he is spoken of as a "very having man." There, as elsewhere, a "having" man is born to his title; when he sets out to acquire it he has some such experience as that which befell a western congressman, now deceased. The congressman was a very generous giver, so generous, indeed, that his friends were always urging him to keep his gifts and donations down to a certain limit. At length he seemed to realize that importance of retrenchment, and announced that he was going to turn over a new leaf, and not give away more than $1,000 a month. Two months later the friend to whom he made the announcement met him and asked, with interest: "Well, how are you making out?" "I began well," the congressman replied, "and if I hadn't given an old friend of mine who had been having hard luck $10,000 last month I am sure I should have kept within the limit."—Youth's Companion.

Quite Another Thing.

Doctor—You will have to give up all mental work for a few weeks.

Patient—But, doctor, in that case, my income would cease. I earn my living by writing poems for the magazines.

"Oh, you can keep right on at that."

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

SMALL POX IS EPIDEMIC IN THE STATE OF MINNESOTA.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH HAS POWER TO ENFORCE VACCINATION ORDER.

Dr. H. M. Bracken writes as follows, concerning the much muddled question of vaccination of school children:

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 12th, 1901.
Editor of The Gazette,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

My Dear Sir:

Word has been published broadcast that Attorney General Douglas has furnished the State Superintendent of Public Instruction an opinion to the effect that the order of the State Board of Health under date of August 12th, 1901, requiring all school teachers and pupils to present a certificate of vaccination on or before October 15th, 1901, could not be enforced. This is a mistake.

The Attorney General did give an opinion in 1899 to the effect that compulsory vaccination of school children could not be enforced unless small pox was present as an epidemic.

Under date of July 16th, 1901, an opinion was given from the Attorney General's office, to the effect that small pox was epidemic in the State of Minnesota at the present time and that therefore the State Board of Health had power to order a general vaccination of school children. It was upon this opinion that the State Board of Health, at a special meeting August 9th, based its order. It reasserted its position on this question by a vote at a regular meeting October 8th.

It would appear that Superintendent J. W. Olsen did not acquaint himself with this latter ruling of the Attorney General.

Respectfully.
H. M. Bracken.
Secretary and Executive Officer.

Lands to be Opened.

From Public Land, a new weekly published at Spokane, Wash., we learn that the following townships in the state are to be opened soon: Township 57 north of range 8; township 61 north of range 11 west; township 65 north of ranges 12, 13, 17 and 18 west; township 70 north of range 23 west; townships 67 and 69 north of range 24 west; townships 61, 62, 63 and 64 north of range 27 west of the 4th meridian; township 152 north of range 25 west; townships 153 and 154 north of range 28 west; township 162 north of range 38 west; townships 163 and 164 north of range 40 west, and townships 163 and 164 north of range 45 west 5th meridian.

GENTILLY FESTIVAL.

THE REGULAR ANNUAL EVENT WILL BE HELD ON OCT. 27.

The new parsonage which the Gentilly Catholics have erected for their pastor, the Rev. Eli Theillon, is about completed, and the event will be celebrated by a festival which will be held on the 27th inst.

The new parsonage has been erected at a cost of some $5000, and there is scarcely its equal in point of elegance and completeness of detail, anywhere in this section of the country.

The house is provided with acetelene gas lights; sewers, and water system ingeniously contrived in the absence of local water works or sewerage. The interior is finished in hardwood, and the arrangement of parlor, library, reception room, sleeping apartments, dining room, kitchen and laundry are such that once in the interior, one could imagine himself in a modern city.

The parish is a rich one, Gentilly farmers being among the most prosperous in this section, and the new parochial residence is not only an indication of this, but a testimonial as well to the general progress in this part of the great Northwest.

2 FINGERS SMASHED

GREAT NORTHERN BAGGAGEMAN MEETS WITH ACCIDENT TUESDAY.

J. F. Wondra, baggageman on the Cannon Ball, met with an accident at the Great Northern depot Tuesday which may result in the loss of his third and fourth fingers. He was taking a big sample trunk off the baggage car when his fingers were caught between it and another trunk on the depot platform. The third and fourth fingers of his left hand were badly bruised. Wondra was taken in hand by Dr. Watson, who immediately dressed the wounds, and if he pulls through without losing part of his hand at least, he may thank the skill of his surgeon. It will be some time before he will be on duty.

Official Kodaking.

Charles M. Hall, with the United Stated Geological Survey, spent two days in Red Lake Falls this week, taking notes, making a map and taking photographs of our topography.

Mr. Hall told of the work of the bureau with which he is connected, and how the report they are now laboring on will be compiled and published in book form. He was very enthusiastic in speaking of Red Lake Falls, and says although we now and then make a "modest boast," he thinks we ought to make more ado about our wonderful resources—"which are" to use his words "unexcelled anywhere." Several views of the Healy & Bourdon and Red Lake Falls Milling Co.'s water power were taken and he could not say in strong enough language what magnificent natural gifts they were. The elevation here, where a city lies from 75 to 150 feet above the river bed, is, he says, in marked contrast, too, with those of the other towns in this section, where the banks are but 10 to 15 feet high. Here, we need but to cut through the banks to afford fine drainage. The construction of the drainage ditches in this county meant woe for the cities of Crookston and Grand Forks in time of spring floods, when the surplus water, instead of soaking through the soil and evaporating by degrees would be carried off with a rush by these ditches, tending to swell the spring floods.

Red Lake Falls, he said, would be given the proper place on the topographical map, and a splendid report as to our water powers would go into the government. They are too valuable he said to lie unnoticed.

WELL IN HAND.

ARE SMALL POX CASES IN THIS CITY, SAYS DOCTOR BECKMAN.

E. H. Beckman, M. D., medical inspector for the Minnesota State Board of Health was on duty along this branch of the Great Northern this week to look into the small pox cases. We have a few exceedingly mild ones here, and Dr. Beckman made a personal inspection in each case. To The Gazette he said: "Where the disease is epedemic and a large number of cases exist it is sometimes necessary to quarantine a city. Messrs. Brothers, Schmitz and Lechapelle, your local board of health, in conjunction with Dr. Watson, your health officer, have the matter well in hand. They have made a quarantine of the effected houses, and have the situation under control, so that nothing further need be done. The state authorities are very insistent on the quarantine measure, and where officials are lax, sometimes, as I have said, the only remedy lies in a state quarantine of the town. This is not, however, necessary here nor in any of the towns in this section."

Dr. Beckman left on the afternoon train.

THIS AMOUNT OF STATE LAND WILL BE SOLD HERE TOMORROW.

BUYERS BY THE SCORE ARE ARRIVING ON EVERY TRAIN.

The sale of state school and institution lands to be held in this city tomorrow is attracting the attention of investors far and near. The Red Lake county list is one of the largest in the state, and this county will get no little advertising through the sale. Prospective buyers by the hundred are expected here, and Red Lake county needs only be seen to be appreciated. Some 16,000 acres will be disposed of, and State Auditor Dunn, who will conduct the sale in person, is aiming to run the price up as high as possible. There will no doubt be some lively bidding.

The first sale in this section was held at Moorhead Friday for Clay county and the county court house was crowded to the doors by farmers real estate men and land speculators who were there to bid at the sale which was conducted by State Auditor Dunn. The lands were offered for sale at public auction and the bidding was lively throughout the sale. Unusually good prices were bid and the sale was one of the most successful ever held in Clay county. In the township of Kratz one quarter section of wild land sold for $30 per acre, another for $28.50 and still another for $28.25. The prices bid at the sale show that outside investors, as well as local men, have come to a realization of the fact that these lands are good property. All told there were about 10,000 acres of land sold. The real estate firm of Elsworth & Jenkins were the largest bidders, investing over $25,000.

The lands to be sold are divided into three classes, unsold school land, delinquent school land and state institutions land. The number of acres in each class is as follows:

Unsold school	21,587.13
Delinquent school	3,360.00
State Institutions	1,547.00
Total	26,494.13

County Depositories.

E. M. Pope, public examiner, has sent to County Auditor Zeh instructions as to the legal limits of county deposits in the incorporated banks of Red Lake county. Here they are:

First State Bank, Red Lake Falls	$30300 00
Merchants State Bank, Red Lake Falls	$15800 00
First State Bank, Thief River Falls,	$13300 00
Scandia State Bank, Thief River Falls,	$10200 00
First State Bank, St. Hilaire	$10000 00

On the M. & I.

C. C. Knappen and A. M. Tuttle, of Crookston have returned from their claims and report lots of water up in the jack pine country. Work on the Minnesota & International R. R. is progressing slowly owing to the scarcity of labor, but it is expected that it will reach Blackduck by winter. The iron is already laid to within one mile of Tenstrike. It is not probable that anything will be done on the logging road between Turtle River and White Fish Lake until next spring.

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N.Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a few days the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider this a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

For sprains, swellings and lameness there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Try it. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

POTATOES WILL GO UP

COMMISSIONMAN SAYS PRICES WILL ADVANCE WITH COLDER WEATHER.

"The price of potatoes is not likely to go lower than at present," said a St. Paul commission man Monday, "and I look for an increase in prices as the winter advances."

"The decrease in the past two weeks is probably because this is the digging season, and because New York and Michigan potatoes are going into the southern markets. The crop is very short, and I shall be surprised if the good seed stock does not go as high as $1.25 in February. You can buy mixed potatoes now on the cars at 50 and 60 cents, but the better grade runs about 70 cents. This, I think, will be about the lowest limit."

In Justice Court.

The local mill of justice has been grinding steadily all week.

The case of Minnesota & Montana Co. vs. Henry Cyr, returnable on Monday before Judge Taylor, was settled. The company had sued Cyr for $50.

On Friday the case of R. H. Bourdon vs. John Kelfenheim was tried before Judge Taylor, plaintiff securing judgment against defendant for $20 and costs. Kelfenheim during the time he conducted the Grand View hotel carried the mail from the depot to the post-office. He transferred his contract to Bourdon, but did not account for $20 of the salary which the government sent to him instead of to the plaintiff after the transfer. The salary was $10 a month.

The replevin case M. Skala vs. Fred Gerke and Fred Schmidt will come off today before Judge Taylor. Three of Skala's cows which had been given to the care of Poundmaster Gerke by Schmidt after they had done damage to the latter's corn, were replevined, and the question of damages will be settled.

RED LAKE RESERVATION.

Long Struggle for Settlement Will Succeed.

Few people are aware of the fact that the largest body of fresh water lying wholly within the United States, if the great Lake Michigan is excepted, is situated in Minnesota. Such, however, is the case, and the Red Lake, thirty-six miles from east to west and twenty-three miles from north to south, with an area of 400 square miles, can claim that distinction. Compared with this mighty body of water, Leech lake is a frog pond, and Cass lake a mere puddle. Surrounding this great inland sea is the Indian reservation which takes its name. To the north and west stretch the vast marshes and floating bogs, the bed of the ancient geological lake Aggassiz, the home and breeding place of untold myriads of water fowl; to the south and east lie the great pine forests, home of the moose, the deer and the bear.

The Red Lake band of Chippewas, 1200 in number, roam this reservation at will, living, for the most part, in picturesque tepees and seldom over one week in a fixed place. In winter, however, when the bitter wind drives the aborigines to seek a more stable shelter than can be constructed of skins and canvas, each family retires to their one room log hut until milder weather permits a resumption of their favorite wandering life.

The Red Lake river, the outlet of the lake, flows west from the "south lake" and drains this watershed into the Red River of the North, which it joins at Grand Forks. Four large steamboats ply the lake, engaged in towing great rafts of logs which are cut on the pine lands east of the reservation and floated to the lake by its numerous inlets. These tows are turned into the outlet and floated to the sawmills at Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls, St. Hilaire, Crookston and Grand Forks, which are the main supply of lumber for North Dakota. Five steamers of lighter draught ply both lake and river engaged in transporting men and supplies to the lumber camps from Thief River Falls, which is at the head of the rapids and is the foot of navigation.

Leaving the lake by one of these river boats the prospect is, at first, extremely monotonous. As far as the eye can see in every direction stretches a waste of bog covered with grass higher than a man's head which ripples in the passing breezes like a sea of green. Through this treeless unhabitable waste the river twists its sinuous course and an approaching steamboat can be seen for hours apparently navigating the prairie until with a sudden bend of the stream it is seen to be paddling along a ribbon blue water and the sound of the whistles complete the courtesies of the river for passing boats.

As one proceeds westward, however, a gradual change may be noted. Clumps of trees here and there denote a firmer quality of land and the floating bogs give place to great hay meadows while the banks of the river rise higher and higher from the water's edge, until as the boundary of Beltrami county is approached the steamer is in the midst of as beautiful a piece of agricultural land as one might wish to see. Broad rolling prairie extends to right and left, dotted with groves of poplar and hardwood timber and the rank growth of weeds and grasses with silent eloquence bears testimony to the richness of the soil beneath.

Passing onward into Red Lake county one sails for thirty miles through this wealth of uncultivated richness, and the query at once presents itself to the mind of the traveler: Why is not this land occupied by prosperous farmers? Why this waste of nature's bounty? The explanation is simple, it is all Indian reservation, it cannot be occupied by whites. Then at once another query is propounded: Where are the Indians? The Indians are all at the lake; they have abandoned this garden spot for the country of game and fish to the eastward. In fact, they never have occupied this land to any extent and it is hard to see why they retained it at all when their outlaying lands were disposed of unless it was from some sentimental consideration as being the farthest west of the land wrested from the Sioux, the former lords of the soil, by their warlike ancestors.

At intervals of many miles may be seen hay-thatched log cabins chinked with mud along the north bank of the river; these are the winter homes of the few redmen who venture so far west, but at present they are deserted. The Indian will not live under a roof while a tepee is possible.

The land on the reservation west of Beltrami county is of unexcelled quality, is, in fact, a branch of the world famed Red River Valley, and is practically abandoned by the Indians. This portion contains eleven townships of land and but eighty-three Indians, men, women and children, have their winter homes upon it. As a matter of fact it would be hard to find a baker's dozen of them there at most seasons of the year. When the census enumerator made his count in early spring, he found or heard of sixty persons living on the land, but an agent and interpeter went out under the guise of a hunting party, and by carefully refraining from exciting the suspicions of the reds, found that the true number was eighty-three, as above stated, and that the number of families is less than twenty.

Just think of it. Eleven townships—250,000 acres—1,600 quarter sections—of the best land in the state occupied by twenty families, and absolutely uncultivated by any of them.

"Why," said Commissioner Jones, "this is the best land to be found on any reservation in the United States. Were I to have my choice of 1,000 acres I would cheerfully pay $20 an acre for it as it stands."

Senator Quarles was also convinced that the land was of no use to the red men and expressed himself strongly in favor of settlement by whites at the earliest opportunity.

There now seems little doubt that the long battle which has been fought will end in victory in the near future and that another and important domain will be opened to the wealth producing classes of the bread and butter state.

As for choice, a Wisconsin man remarked the other day, after driving over the ground, "There is no best, it is all good. I would be content to drop out of a baloon and take whatever quarter I lit on."

A Worthy Pair.

George Gervais, under bail to appear before the Grand Jury at the October session, and who, arrested later for assault on Night Watchman Branelle, was given 24 hours to leave the city not to return until wanted by the Grand Jury, had the temerity to come back last week and Monday afternoon got into an altercation with James Campbell, was taken in tow by the sheriff, and now keeps company with his "better half" in the county bastile.

Amiable Lacount, grandfather of Mrs. George Gervais, has decided that he no longer wishes to run the risk of furnishing bonds for her appearence before the grand jury on charge of keeping a house of ill-fame, and accordingly the woman has again been incarcerated in the county jail.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

SCHLEY COURT OF INQUIRY.

Commander Wainwright was the principal witness before the Schley court of inquiry Tuesday. Mr. Wainwright's testimony dealt largely with chart-making. He was for a time senior member of the board of navigators which prepared the official chart showing the position of the American ships during the battle off Santiago. He said he did not consider the positions assigned in that drawing accurate, but that they were given as a record of a compromise of the views of members of the board. Lieutenant Bristol of the Texas was the other new witness of the day. He did not see the loop made by the Brooklyn, the greater part of his testimony turning upon a chart he made, showing, largely according to his memory, the positions of the various ships of the American fleet at different times during the Santiago battle.

In the Schley court of inquiry Wednesday Admiral Taylor related incidents of the battle off Santiago on July 3, including the Brooklyn's famous turn. He said that none of the Spanish ships had made any effort to ram the American vessels when they came out of the harbor at Santiago. Commander Potts' testimony dealt especially with the bombardment of the Colon. Answering a question from Judge Advocate Lemly as to the conduct of Commodore Schley during the engagement he said it was that of a man laboring under great mental excitement and of a man who was anxious to discharge as soon as possible a disagreeable duty. Lieutenant Leiper expressed the opinion that the Spanish shore batteries at Santiago had not been at any time formidable. Schley's attorneys secured permission from the court to introduce as evidence the order of Secretary Long, in which he was admonished against the exposure of the American vessels to the fire of strongly fortified ports.

In the Schley court of inquiry Lieutenant J. H. Holden testified in regard to signing an entry in the Scorpion's log, giving the particulars of the receipt of a message for Commodore Schley from the Eagle, which that vessel had brought from Captain McCalla on May 19, 1898, when the flying squadron, then bound for Cienfuegos, fell in with Captain McCalla's sub-squadron, which had just left that port. The government sought to show that by this message Commodore Schley had been notified that the Spanish fleet was not in the harbor of Cienfuegos. Other witnesses of the day were Commander W. H. Schuetz, who served on the Iowa, and Lieutenant A. W. Grant, who was on the Massachusetts, who testified concerning the general campaign of the flying squadron.

Half a dozen witnesses were examined by the Schley court of inquiry Friday, Captain Chadwick being the most important. He testified concerning the code of signals arranged by Captain McCalla with the Cuban insurgents at Cienfuegos and said he had not informed Commodore Schley because Captain McCalla was to return immediately to Cienfuegos, where Admiral Schley was stationed. Captain Chadwick said he had heard Commodore Schley tell Admiral Sampson after the latter's arrival at Santiago that it was impossible to blockade the Spaniards at Santiago if they desired to come out. Witness also said that he had objected to the telegram of congratulation which Admiral Sampson had sent to Commodore Schley on May 28, considering it uncalled for by the circumstances.

In the Schley court of inquiry Saturday Lieutenant Commander Staunton was called and related the particulars of his securing information of the presence of the Spanish fleet at Santiago. He had received the information on the morning of May 20 from Captain Allen at Key West. The next morning the fleet started to blockade Havana and the admiral forwarded his dispatches to Commodore Schley by the Hawk. The next dispatch containing positive orders to sail for Havana was sent to Commodore Schley May 27. In a discussion between the attorneys the fact developed that the commodore did not get the dispatch until June 10. After Lieutenant Commander Staunton finished his testimony a lively tilt occurred between the judge advocate and Mr. Rayner. Mr. Lemly insinuated that Schley's attorney was making inaccurate statements, to which the latter vigorously protested to the court. Mr. Lemly explained and the incident closed.

The house of bishops of the Episcopal convention at San Francisco adopted, by a vote of 37 to 21, canon 36, which relates to the solemnization of marriage. Section 4 forbids the marriage of persons divorced for any cause not existing before marriage. "For any cause not existing before marriage" is understood to refer to such causes as insanity, inability to execute a contract, the existence of a living wife or husband, or like reasons which practically render the marriage null and void.

TERREBONNE ITEMS

Correspondent Tells of the Doings Of This Lively Burg.

Good health has come back to the home of Charles Kankle.

A new store is being put up here. Business is promising.

O. Tessier and wife were visitors of Father Roy of Lambert Tuesday.

Threshing is about over in Terrebonne and returns are satisfactory.

Jos. Payment and father of Garnes were here Monday on their way to the county seat.

An auction sale is to take place on Dr. Tessier's farm next Monday, with free lunch at noon.

Chas. Cyr has bought a lot adjoining the church grounds and will soon put up a fine residence.

Miss Rose Morvic, who has been staying with her sister, Mrs. C. O. Kankel, has returned to Fertile.

The store building being erected by O. Tessier is nearing completion and will soon be ready for occupancy.

A. Morvick of Fertile has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. C. O. Kankel, who is convalescing from a serious illness.

Ovide Moreau, formerly of this place, and now running a large store at Mentor, was in Terrebonne yesterday on business.

Mrs. C. O. Kankel has been seriously ill this week but under the efficient care of Dr. W. O. Tessier she is steadily improving.

Dr. W. Tessier and wife paid a visit to the Red Lake Falls dentist on Monday and Mrs. Tessier thinks Dr. Argue an expert.

Richard O'Duy, of Adrian, Nobles county, was here last week, a guest of D. F. Ufford, looking up some real estate which he is interested in.

Louis Mathews has sold his farm and all his stock and machinery. Mr. Mathews' many friends will be glad to learn that he has decided to remain with us.

Father Pujot on Thursday received the sad intelligence of the death of his father which occurred that day at Montreal, and left immediately to be present at the funeral. In consequence there was no service here Sunday.

Love's Martyr

By
P. J. TANSEY.

Copyright, 1900,
By P. J. Tansey.

So Grace Ackley had come back! Through the little London world that knew her name and history, a little world of some 20 souls in all, the news was thoroughly spread on the very first morning of her return. John Willis heard it among the rest and called to his attendant to guide him at once to the old Ackley mansion, where he used to be a daily visitor until Grace closed it and went away, telling no one why or whither, five years before.

Save for the fact that there was neither light nor expression in his eyes of deep blue, John Willis would have held high rating for manly beauty. Tall and shapely, brown haired, with features of exquisite modeling and with small hands and feet, his was a personality that never failed to excite admiration, just as his affliction, made so clearly manifest by the constant presence of the attendant who led him about, never failed to compel pity. He was 21 years of age on the very day that Grace Ackley returned, and never in all those years had he seen the light of God's day.

LET HER EYES BE FOR HIM.

Physical affliction had not spared Grace Ackley. Her face, winsome in her babyhood, had been made hideous by a burn received through falling into an open fire when she was 6 years old. She was now 23, angular, small, pale, slender, flaxen haired and as sweet voiced and sweet souled as in her girlhood. But where had she been all these five years? the gossips were asking that morning.

The father and mother of John Willis had spent nearly all their fortune in vain bribes to science to undo the chains which had bound their only son in darkness since his birth. They lived in the "old city" of London, in the big house next to that of the rich brewer who was the bachelor uncle and guardian of orphan Grace, and the two children so terribly stricken by the hand of a pitiless fate were playmates from babyhood. John was strong, and it was his favorite amusement to take little, slight and sickly Grace on his back and let her be eyes for him as he would be feet for her. The pathetic and yet ludicrous picture which the two made as John rushed about fearlessly and even gleefully under her guiding was well remembered in the neighborhood years after conventional propriety had vetoed the continuance of the pastime. But even up to the day when Grace so mysteriously went away, after inheriting all her uncle's wealth, John used to call her "Eyes" in fun, and she used to designate him by his nickname of "Feet."

Oh, how often had she wished, when the full, swelling soul within her frail frame began first to feel the sweet, sympathetic influences of womanhood's springtime, that she had a fortune to spend on poor, blind John Willis, as that of his parents had been spent! She might succeed, she thought, albeit they had failed. Daily she pitied the boy more and more, and there was no one to tell her how dangerous a thing is pity for a handsome youth when a maiden's heart harbors it. So strong grew her desire to do something for his sightlessness that sometimes, in spite of her, would arise for a moment the impious wish that her aged uncle might—but 'twas too horrible, and she always prayed it down. It was during one of these struggles with herself that she realized the truth; she was in love with John Willis—she, the slight, scarred, ugly weakling, was possessed of a love passion ardent as that consuming the soul of the most beauteous heroine of olden or new romance.

And John? Love begets love. He had no eyes to see the blushes mount to the wan spaces between the dreadful broad scars on her cheeks nor the fire that burned in her deep blue eyes when he came near. But he had the keen ears of the blind, and even a dull ear could discern the tenderness in her voice when she sweetly spoke to him. He had also the fine touch which penitent nature gives to such as he in part compensation, and he had read her heart again and again in the trembling of her gentle hand clasp.

They had talked of it joyously and had pictured a gladsome and beautiful life path down which they should journey hand in hand, he the feet and she the eyes. And the little world of their acquaintance knew it all.

Who then could blame the male cynics for their sneers at woman's fickleness when little Grace, after her uncle's death, with the long longed for fortune at her disposal, locked up the old house and disappeared without a word to John, without a word to any one? Poor John! He did not know it until he had been groping about the closed doors for a full hour.

And no wonder that the news of her return quickly sped among that score of acquaintances and that speculation was busy as to where she had been, what she would say in explanation to John or to any of them or whether she would deign to remember him or them at all.

John's parents had died while she was away. He had sold the old house and was living in humble lodgings and supporting himself by the composing of speeches for public men, a calling which he originated and which is more generally followed than an admiring public supposes. He dictated the speeches to an amanuensis, a fair girl whose face had glory celestial in it, whose form the classic divinities might envy and whose every movement was grace. Of her perfect beauty, alas and heigho, her handsome, sightless employer knew nothing! Jennie Tasker was her unromantic name.

"He's gone out, sir," said Jennie Tasker when Willis, in his office on the morning of Grace's return, called for Richard, his boy guide, to lead him to the old Ackley mansion. "I—I'll go with you if you wish, sir," she added timidly.

"If you don't mind; I'll be very grateful, for I'm impatient to meet Gracie again, and her letter intimates that she won't be home after 11." In a few minutes they were on the street, she leading him by the hand.

Half an hour later John Willis climbed the well remembered steps of the Ackley porch, accompanied by Jennie Tasker. A servant opened the door and ushered them into the parlor, John having insisted that Jennie must stay and be introduced to his friend, as he styled Grace.

A slow, light step was heard in the hall, and presently the most repulsive looking woman that ever Jennie Tasker beheld entered the room, calling out in a voice which Jennie had to admit to be sweet: "Oh, John, dear, how you have grown! You are to forgive me now for running away. I know you will when you learn why I did it, dear John." She caught the hand which he held out in her direction, and she pressed it between both of hers.

Jennie Tasker had suspected it all morning, but now she knew it. The lovelight in the eyes of the disfigured little creature and the smile of joy on the face of John Willis told the story. Naturally gay hearted, the contrast between the two would have provoked her mirth, but somehow a pang in her heart left no room for frivolity. She long had known that she liked her employer, but the exact nature of her affection for him she did not know until now.

Miss Tasker was introduced as a dear, good friend, and the two women went through the conventionalities with a coldness which astonished John Willis. The amanuensis presently begged leave to take her departure, explaining that she had a few purchases to make in the shops and promising to send Richard for Mr. Willis at any hour he should set. But John Willis demurred, pointing out that Miss Grace evidently wished to go out at 11, and that, while Miss Grace declared that the 11 o'clock outing had been postponed, she could do no less than to urge Miss Tasker to remain.

JENNIE LEADING HIM BY THE HAND.

A vague mixture of fear and jealousy urged Jennie much more strongly than the words of either to stay where she was. So she agreed to remain and was seated. The lovers, sitting on adjacent chairs in the deep bay window, with hands joined together, at once became oblivious of her to all appearances. John asked the little woman why she had gone away, where she had been and why she had not even written.

"The last first, dear John," answered she. "I wanted that your love for me should have a fair test. You had never met another young woman, and you did not know your own heart. I did not mean to be away so long, but perhaps it is as well. You have had all the better opportunity of transferring your affection to a new love."

"I have not done so," said he, with honest earnestness, reaching for her other hand and clasping it. She uttered a little cry of joy, a little cry, but big enough to drown the small sigh which arose from a distant corner of the parlor.

"Now I'll tell you why I went and where, as I would had your affections been elsewhere placed. I read in the days of our child love, when I was reading everything that bore on blindness, John—oh, you forget that your hands have grown stronger, sir—I read of a Buddhist monastery in the Himalaya mountains where many occult arts are studied, among them that of giving sight to those always blind, the suspension of animation and many other wonderful things. I would not tell you or any one lest I should be dissuaded. I went with a hired companion. There I have studied—I have mastered the art—I have experimented successfully"— She extricated her hands from his and arose. She jerked out the broken sentences in a gasping, hysterical crescendo. Jennie sprang to her feet and saw John's lips parted in astonishment and John's face upturned to the hideous priestess of Buddha. "And now"—higher rose the shrill voice —"you will not need me for eyes, for, dear John, this minute you shall see!"

She had pulled a little vial from her bosom, and as she screamed forth the last word she dashed the contents into the great, blank, blue eyes so deadly staring toward her. With a sharp cry of pain and a face contorted in deepest agony, he sprang from the chair. Grace, exhausted, threw herself back on hers. Jennie, horrified, stood undecided. John Willis stood in the middle of the floor, with his hands to his face. Presently he took away his hands, turned his face from side to side with no expression of bewilderment and blinked again and again as he faced the windows.

"He sees! He sees!" joyfully cried the scar faced creature. "This is paradise!"

He turned a smiling face toward her, and, behold, there was light in the eyes that sought her and found her! He looked at her. He recoiled. Disgust and horror stood forth in the attitude of every limb and were plainly penciled on every line in his face. He turned his head away quickly from the dreadful creature in the chair, who regarded him in silence and with a look of woe, stony and despairing. He turned his head away and started when his gaze met the sunshine in the golden locks and the love glow in the angel face of Jennie, then advancing to him without knowing wherefore, but advancing with arms outstretched and a dead moan on her beautiful lips.

WITH A SHARP CRY OF PAIN HE SPRANG FROM THE CHAIR.

He rushed to her; he caught her in his arms; he kissed her, madly crying out between his kisses:

"Gracie, Gracie, how can I ever repay you? And how unworthy and feeble was my grandest imagining of your brilliant beauty!"

There was a low groan from the bay window. There was a heavy fall. Jennie extricated herself from the arm of Willis and ran to the aid of the woman on the floor. She was dead. In her right hand was a little paper with a remnant of white powder in it.

Spoiled the Sermon.

I was stationed in the town of P. during my earlier ministry and was profoundly impressed from what I saw that I ought to preach against the rebellion against God's law. I selected for a text Isaiah i, 2, "I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me."

I had formally introduced the subject and repeated the text that the audience might see the connection between it and the first proposition, when my little 2-year-old boy slipped out of his mother's arms and, taking his stand directly in front of the pulpit, gave such a scream of defiance as to startle the entire audience. It is needless to say that this, following immediately the quotation of the text, destroyed the solemnity of the sermon so far as the audience was concerned.—Homiletic Review.

The Gospel of Keeping Young.

Never give up your youth. The glory of the Greeks was their glory in their youth. It is a gracious manner that keeps a heart young. To do strenuous work court the open air and never neglect your daily exercise and as the years creep on practice it twice, and thrice—yea, many times—a day if need be. Above all, remember the beauty of mind and character. Don't let anything hurt your mind. By that I mean particularly don't worry.—W. G. Ward, A. M.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER
—BY—
PHIL. A. KAUFER.

Published weekly, Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the post-office at Red Lake Falls.

THE WOOD PULP INDUSTRY.

Water power, a sufficient supply of raw material and pure water—these three essentials in the wood pulp industry, Red Lake Falls and its tributary country are peculiarly fitted to supply.

H. H. Ayres, writing on this subject says: There are now about 1,000 paper mills, which turn out 6,000,000,000 pounds annually. In wood-pulp making the advance has been especially rapid. The first patent was secured in 1844 by Keller in Germany and in 1858 improved by Voelter in the United States.

The field once opened, endless patent appliances for grinding and digesting wood lay at the choice of the manufacturer, especially in America, and here unquestionably the industry has led, and the American manufacturer has little to learn of European methods. Here, too, one has in our remaining primeval forests, and in the possibility of our non agricultural lands, interesting fields for pulp making. In choosing a site for such work, power, accessibility, water and wood supply are very important. Water power is, of course, best, and in Minnesota we have it. Accessibility by lake and established rail routes cannot be rivaled elsewhere. Pure water can be had in abundance and for a supply of raw material in northern Minnesota are found the greatest properties of desirable pulp woods in the United States, probably in the world, and its suitability for growing these woods, combined with the nonagricultural character of much of the land, promise to develop the industry into great importance.

If we are wise we will make it a perpetual and not a transient industry. The cultivation of forests for pulp wood is a much simpler matter than the growing of log timber.

The important points are location, transportation, a stand of desirable species and protection from fire. In our state is no lack of ground from which transportation is facilitated by stream or rail. Stands of poplar are indigenous, and are even hard to prevent, while white and black spruce are among our hardiest trees. We may in a few years even hide the stumps of our former pine forests by a valuable new growth of pulp wood if we keep out the fire—and that is a pretty serious "if."

THAT RAISE.

The effort being put forth to make political capital of the action of the state board of equalization for doing its duty is tiresome in the extreme. It has so happened that Red Lake county was among those getting a share of the raise. Of this we have nothing to complain. The duty of the state board is to equalize, and if it fails to do that it fails in its duty. Equalization that equalizes is what the taxpayers want. Any act of the board in harmony with right principles can not be condemned by honest citizens, even if it strikes home. The sleeping picket who should be on guard is not admired by the enemy who breaks through the cordon by virtue of his dereliction, while the alert soldier on outpost duty instils a feeling of respect in the scouts whom his vigilance nonplusses. Had Red Lake county personal property valuations been placed higher than that of other sections there would be ground for complaint. But this is not alleged.

YOU ARE AGAIN REMINDED.

This is the month in which to pay the balance of your real-estate taxes of which you paid one-half last spring. There will be a penalty of 10 per cent. added to the unpaid balance November 1st.

L. E. George, who sold the Fertile Journal last year, has repurchased the plant.

AS VIEWED BY OTHERS.

Gov. Van Sant and State Auditor Dunn are by virtue of their offices ex-officio members of the state board of equalization, and were both in attendance at all of the important meetings of the board, and by their general and intimate knowledge of the details of value conditions, were enabled to render valuable assistance, especially in the adjustment of the valuation of the large property owners. As a result of the work of the board, $7,600,000 was added to the state valuation, which falls mainly upon the mining, lumber, street railway and other large corporations which have heretofore to a large extent escaped their equitable proportion of taxation.

If these officials are obliged to stand or fall upon this part of their record of public service, the voters of this state will see to it that their valuable services are retained as long as possible.—Crookston Journal.

The action of the state Board of Equalization in increasing the valuation of property in Red Lake County is to be commended. The valuation in this county is now absurdly low, so low that the ten per cent. tax limit seriously cripples both Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls. There is no reason why this city should not be able to issue water works bonds if the assessments were where they should be on both real and personal property. The only benefit derived from a low valuation is a slight decrease in the state tax while the hardships are very real and heavy especially in a growing city such as this.—Thief River Falls Press.

We all remember how a few years back—two or three years at most—farm lands in Red Lake County were a drug on the market. Now there is a great demand with prices away up. Thus Red Lake Falls' water power will one day be appreciated, and its true value fixed. Then will the city's untowered progress dawn.

During 1900 145 people were killed and 631 injured on railroads in the state

The mill hands of Thief River Falls have taken up a subscription which now amounts to nearly $200, for the benefit of Leon Bourque, the young man who got his finger cut off in the lath mill.

Wm. M. Woolridge, industrial agent of the Great Northern at Hinsdale, Mont., says flax straw is now selling in Eastern Illinois for $7 to $8 per ton, whereas before the establishment of the paper mills there the seed was kept and the straw burned up.

The Duluth News-Tribune says: "Andrew Grindeland is just now picked for the Republican nomination to congress ar the Ninth district primaries. Those primaries are far in perspective, and there's no telling what dark horse will canter into the fore-ground yet."

Grand Fork is rejoicing over the probable erection of a threshing machine factory in that city. The president of a Wisconsin concern, with their plant located at LaCrosse, has been in the Forks for sometime concerning the advisability of locating a plant there for the manufacture of threshers and other farm machinery.

The marriage of Rev. J. A. Maggraph of Red Lake, and Miss Charlotte Jones of White Earth, Minn., occurred last week at Fargo. Dean Burleson officiated at the ceremony and the newly married couple left the city on a short tour to be taken before settling at their home in Red Lake where the reverend gentleman has a pastorate in an Episcopal Indian mission.

"Aunt" Betsy White, an aged colored woman living near Lynnville, Tenn., deposited $9.85 in "Shinplasters" in the Lynnville bank the other day. The paper bills were in 50, 25 and 10 cent pieces, neatly rolled and in and excellent state of preservation. The old negress claims she had the money hid away for a rainy day since 1863, over thirty-seven years.

Mrs. Hetty Green, of New York, reputed the wealthiest woman in the world, has always shown a liking for young men, and such she is always ready to advise and encourage. "Don't be satisfied to begin life as your father did," she says. "Begin where he left off. Work hard and you will succeed. Men who can be relied upon are always in demand. The scarcest thing in the world is a thoroughly reliable man."

Until recently Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls and Fosston were the gateway cities for the Red Lake country. Many now go via Tenstrike. The Tribune of that place says: The first lumberjacks of the season arrived in Tenstrike, last Friday. They were 23 in number and stopped at the Richards over night, and the next morning left for the Red Lake country to commence operations.

An ignorant man cares nothing for a newspaper and he does not see that it is his duty to supply his wife and children with his local paper. But every intelligent and mentally well balanced citizen takes some local paper. You can visit about in the country and pick out the intelligent farmers by the fact that they read their home paper. If ignorant or careless farmers read at all they generally select publications furthest from home and which are the least value to them.

H. W. Anderson went to St. Paul Monday to visit with the home folks, and at the same time to look after the purchase of a holiday stock. Miss Lillie Buse has charge of the jewelry store during his absence.

Little Lornine, daughter of Banker and Mrs. J. A. Duffy, celebrated her 6th birthday anniversary yesterday by inviting a number of little tots to her home, where Mrs. Duffy had provided a most tempting array of goodies.

J. S. Crawford, the Crookston baker, was in the city Monday enroute home from Red Lake where he has been enjoying a vacation. Mr. Crawford is no mean artist with the camera and has some fine photographs taken at the lake.

John Carver, of Collins, Ia., has just purchased from the Elwood Land Co., a half section of land in Gervais township. His son will come up to run the farm. Half of the land purchased was the property of Champoux Bros. Carver also owns a farm in Terrebonne.

Miss Newton's friends who called on her one evening last week and played a few games, on their own motion, desire The Gazette to state that the impression that she entertained is erroneous. There was no invited party, but Miss Alice made it pleasant for those who come as is her wont.

Omer Bushea was in from Poplar River Saturday before U. S. Commissioner L. C. Simone proving up on a valuable claim, which he estimates to be worth, at present values, $3,000. Mr. Bushea had as witnesses Ferdinand Turgen and John. Plant, of Lambert. The gentlemen are old Gazette subscribers and made this office a pleasant call.

L. C. Simons returned Saturday from Minneapolis. Mrs. Simons will remain there to study instrumental music under her aunt, Miss Agnes Lewis, who has been one of the leading music teachers of Minneapolis for seventeen years. Mrs. Simons has exceptional musical talents, and much may be expected of her.

Mayor Watson, Manager C. F. Johnson, of the Red Lake Falls Milling Company, Oscar Thomas, head push at the Great Northern depot here, and Joe Gray, retired farmer, went to Crookston Tuesday to enjoy the quiet of that suburb, as a rest from the incessant noise and bustle of this hustling city. They returned the following day, Agent Thomas driving in to be here ahead of the Cannon Ball.

Arrival and departure of mails at Red Lake Falls postoffice. Mail arrives daily at 12:05 p. m. and departs at 4 p. m. except Sundays. Mail leaves office Sundays at 1 p. m. Mail from Lambert, Brooks and Terrebonne arrives daily, except Sundays at 12 a. m. and departs at 1 p. m. Office hours from 8 a. m. until 7 p. m. Sundays from 12 a. m. until 1 p. m. Our mail will arrive and depart on train hereafter and continue to receive mail on Sunday by stage.

E. A. Moran returned Saturday from a business trip out near Wanke and Gully. Ed says the crop over there, especially in the district lying south of Gully, is very fine this year, but threshing has scarcely begun—retarded on account of the wet weather. Richard Ohm's flour-mill is doing a splendid business and the Wanke and Gully editors are waxing phat on final proof notices. The opening of the Lost River channel is eagerly awaited, as it will reclaim a vast amount of splendid land that is now worthless, besides benefiting the fine farms already opened.

LITERARY WORK.

The program to be given by the Spartans next Friday, October 18, is as follows:

Song by School, page 106.
Humorous recitation, Clara Marchand
Reading, Bertha Lafreniere.
Vocal solo, Marguerite Kans.
Original serial story, "Summer in the Country," Chapter 1, Beatta Hagn.
Composition on Columbia and Shamrock yacht race.
Instrumental Solo, Eleanor Findeisen.
An Essay on Anarchism, Henrietta Hennemuth.
Song by the School, Page 54.

The debate for October 25 will be on this question—Resolved that strikes are a justifiable means to compel employers to grant the demands of the employees. The debaters have been chosen and will be announced later.

The committee on judges will be around after judges for the debate. It is hoped that if you are called upon you will not refuse to act. The High School can not prosper without public interest.

PERSONALS.

Ole Gjerberg entered upon the High School course Monday morning.

INCIDENTS.

One of the H. S. pupils is still wondering at the mysterious disappearance of some refreshments which were put in the owner's desk, but which evidently refreshed some friends during the absence of said pupil.

It is to be hoped that the girls will make it a point to rise a little earlier in the morning to prevent tardiness.

Some cute (?) remarks have appeared on the board during the past week, which were looked upon by the Athenians as poor attempts at witticisms.

SCHOOL IN GENERAL.

It is desired to call attention to the irregular attendance on the part of some pupils. The best work is accomplished by regularity. We, therefore, urge regular attendance.

Foot ball is being practiced by the "kids" of the H. S.

A bulletin board has been placed in the hall on the second floor of the High School building.

The last Physics test was not satisfactory to the instructor of this study. The class is required to take another soon.

CONTRIBUTION.

Athletic sports in educational institutions in general and in the High Schools in particular have apparently come to stay. It would not be at all to the purpose of those who are in authority to shut their eyes to the matter and say that since they have a personal dislike to athletic sports, therefore the students under their individual control shall take no active part in them. Athletics are quite a solid reality. The effect of these games when properly conducted is beneficial to the players and to the student body at large. The mental and physical energy called forth by a good clean game is valuable, and will prove in after years to be easily applicable to the greater problems of real life. Athletic training thus becomes an actual factor in modern education.

Fraternal Doings.

SOCIAL ITEMS, GOOD OF THE ORDER AND RECESS GOSSIP OF INTEREST.

The total membership of the Catholic Order of Foresters is [illegible] 685, a gain of 102 in September.

Alex Van Praag, than whom there is no better known Oddfellow in Minnesota, was mixing business and pleasure in the city Saturday.

W. A. Case, head consul of the Modern Woodmen for this district, who has been spending some time hustling up new recruits for the Crookston camp has returned to his home at St. Hilaire.

Joan of Arc Court, Women's Catholic Order of Foresters have received word to the effect that the claim on the $1,000 policy of Mrs. Delia Lachance has been allowed. Mr. Lachance is named as beneficiary.

The greatest blessing that ever came to the common people of this country was the inception and organization of our beneficial system. Its blessings can never be tabulated. Its praises can never be sung, sing we ever so well. Its history is written over the doorways of the homes it has saved, the firesides it has brightened, the widows' hearts it has comforted, and the orphan children it has educated. Fraternalism has done all this and more.

Grandpa Bourdon Passes Away.

At 4:30 Wednesday afternoon the Angel of Death entered the home of J. W. Bourdon, when Nelson Bourdon, aged 86, breathed his last.

Since the amputation of his leg, 2 weeks before, he had been gradually failing, and the end came peacefully after he had been well prepared and the last sacraments of the Catholic church administered.

The funeral will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m.

MURDER IS CHARGED

NICOLLET COUNTY COUPLE ARRESTED FOR KILLING WOMAN'S FIRST HUSBAND.

Minneapolis Grand Army Men Abandon Fight for Next Encampment. Former Governor Pillsbury Dangerously Ill—Minnesota Leads in Prizes at the Pan-American Exposition. General State News.

St. Peter, Minn., Oct. 13.—Sheriff McMillan of this city, accompanied by T. J. Coleman, a detective, went to Lafayette and caused the arrest of Frank Tanke and his wife, Amelia Tanke, charged with the murder of John Wellner of Lafayette.

John Wellner, a prosperous farmer, was murdered on the night of Jan. 1, 1899, at his home. The murder was a shocking one, and at the time caused quite a sensation. Governor Lind, on behalf of the state, offered a reward of $750 for the capture of the criminals. Mrs. Wellner supplemented this with an offer of $500, and neighbors added $300 more, making a reward of $1,550.

Suspicion was directed against Frank Tanke, a hired man employed by Wellner, but no proof was found to base the suspicion upon. Mrs. Wellner and Tanke were supposed to have been intimate, and suspicion attached to her as well as Tanke. Later Tanke and Mrs. Wellner were married. Not long ago Mr. Coleman, the detective mentioned, began work on the case. He secured employment at the home of Tanke and at other places in the vicinity. He secured evidence which he says is positive, and proves that Mrs. Wellner murdered her own husband, and that Tanke was an accomplice to the crime.

BUSINESS MEN OPPOSE.

Minneapolis Will Not Seek the Next Grand Army Reunion.

Minneapolis, Oct. 11.—Minneapolis will not seek the Grand Army national encampment of 1902. That fact was determined at a meeting of commanders and past commanders of local posts held at G. A. R. headquarters in the Lumber Exchange.

This action comes as very much of a surprise. The idea had prevailed that the Grand Army was decidedly in favor of trying to get another national convention of the organization. The reason for the change of opinion is due to the opposition of business men, who were interviewed, to contribute the necessary cash.

DOCTORS ABANDON HOPE.

Ex-Governor John S. Pillsbury Is in Critical Condition.

Minneapolis, Oct. 15.—Practically all hope has been given up for the recovery of ex-Governor John S. Pillsbury. He is suffering with Brights disease and during the past week he was unconscious the greater portion of the time. He was weaker during the day than at any time during his present illness and it is believed that the end is not far away. Mr. Pillsbury is 73 years old and has not the vitality necessary to fight the disease.

MINNESOTA IS FIRST.

Captures More Prizes at Buffalo Than Any Other State.

St. Paul, Oct. 11.—Minnesota is at the head of the list of states receiving awards at the Buffalo exposition for state and private exhibits.

The state awards are three gold, four silver and six bronze medals, with numerous honorable mention diplomas.

Private exhibitors secured five gold, one silver and one bronze medal, and one honorable mention diploma.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT.

Duluth, Oct. 11.—James King, who was convicted of murder in the second degree for killing William Carlson, a bartender at Hibbing, on Aug. 24, was sentenced to life imprisonment in the state prison at Stillwater by Judge Dibell. He was indicted for murder in the first degree, but the jury, after having been evenly divided between first and second degrees, reached a verdict of murder in the second degree. King is a woodsman, 44 years of age, was drunk when he killed Carlson, and has spent two years in Stillwater prison for counterfeiting.

TRUANT OFFICER WANTED.

Superintendent of Rochester Schools Asks for One.

Rochester, Minn., Oct. 10.—The superintendent of the city schools of this city has urged upon the school board the appointment of a truant officer, as provided for under the recent state law, to look after children who persist in staying away from school. There are quite a number of that sort here, and the action recommended by Superintendent Overholt seems the only possible solution of the prevention of the increase of a lawless class in the city.

COUNTY AUDITOR MUDDLE.

Mixup at Bemidji Causes Considerable Trouble.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 10.—The auditor question is still absorbing public attention. David Sylvester, the original appointee, is holding the office by virtue of an injunction issued by Judge McClenahan against Theodore Welte, the other contestant, until their legal status is finally determined. Mr. Sylvester's bond has not been approved by the commissioners and the county treasurer is much in doubt about cashing county orders with the former's signature.

Land Sale a Big Success.

Detroit, Minn., Oct. 9.—The land sale today was the most successful ever held in the county. One section appraised at $7 per acre sold at prices ranging from $20 to $27.50, and other lands at proportionate prices.

SHOOTS HIMSELF IN SCHOOL.

Fourteen-Year-Old Boy Fires a Pistol at His Breast.

Minneapolis, Oct. 10.—Harry Poses, the 14-year-old son of Rabbi Poses of the Congregation of Mizro Kozesh, shot himself during the afternoon while in a class room at the Jefferson public school, Seventh street and First avenue north.

Young Poses caused consternation in the class room by drawing a 22-caliber revolver and discharging it at his right breast. The bullet penetrated the clothes, but made only a slight flesh wound.

The shot was heard in the other rooms, and the excitement was so great the teachers had difficulty in controlling the pupils.

The boy was taken to his home at 400 Thirteenth avenue north. In his desk were found several notes, one reading "Despondency will be the cause of my death."

TRAMP WAS VIOLENT.

He Stabbed a School Teacher, but She Escaped Him.

Luverne, Minn., Oct. 10.—Miss Violet Whittaker, a young lady school teacher, was attacked by a tramp at her school near Sherman, S. D., on the west edge of this county, and seriously wounded by a stab in the arm. It was the first day of school, and, as the day was a rainy one, no pupils were present. While Miss Whittaker was alone the tramp appeared and demanded money. Upon her statement that she had no money, the tramp attempted to assault her. The young woman resisted successfully, but in the struggle was stabbed in the arm. She finally escaped and went to the homes of neighbors, where she gave the alarm. Searching parties were organized, but so far the tramp has eluded pursuit.

PRISON CONGRESS DELEGATES

Governor Van Sant Appoints Those to Represent Minnesota.

St. Paul, Oct. 10.—Governor Van Sant yesterday appointed as delegates to the annual congress of the National Prison association of the United States, which will be held at Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 9 to 13, inclusive, Messrs. S. W. Leavitt, W. E. Lee and O. R. Gould, the members of the state board of control; Henry Wolfer, warden of the state prison, Stillwater; C. E. Faulkner, superintendent of the Washburn Memorial Orphan asylum, Minneapolis; Frank L. Randall, superintendent of the state reformatory, St. Cloud; J. W. Brown, superintendent of the state training school, Red Wing, and Frank A. Whittier, state agent of penal and refractory institutions, St. Paul.

TOOK HIM FOR A DEER.

Hunter Who Killed a Man Is in a Serious Fix.

Duluth, Oct. 11.—John Peterson of Buhl was accidentally shot this week by Axel Ahlstrom. The latter thought Peterson was a deer, and shot him dead. The county officers gave notice a year ago that they would push to the utmost any man that killed another by mistake for a deer, and the penalty is manslaughter. They will make the case against Ahlstrom as strong as possible. As Ahlstrom was shooting in the closed season, there is still another charge against him that will also be pushed by the state authorities, and they have announced that they will try to make an example of these illegal deer shooters who kill men.

FIRST DEGREE MURDER.

Mantorville, Minn., Oct. 14.—The grand jury of Dodge county has indicted Charles C. Hartley of Dodge Center for murder in the first degree. Hartley has been proprietor of the Dodge Center Transfer House, which was destroyed by fire one night last June. On that night he met and escorted to his hotel Miss Bertha Pelton, a school teacher of Kenyon, who was on her way to her home in Wisconsin. It is the theory of the state that Hartley killed the girl and then set fire to the hotel. Robbery is alleged to have been his motive.

COAL PRICES LOWER.

Duluth Firms Selling at Reduction of Fifty Cents Per Ton.

Duluth, Oct. 10.—There has been a cut in coal prices here of 50 cents a ton. A hardware firm at the west end advertised coal of good quality at $6.75 for commercial sizes and $5.75 for pea, the regular prices being $7.25 and $6.25, respectively. The companies are said to be meeting this price on the quiet, though they are not willing to give it out. They are said to be much surprised at the price at which the west end concern is selling. Some of them intimate that the weights are not right, but this is indignantly denied.

Want Professor Shaw.

Brookings, S. D., Oct. 14.—Professor Thomas Shaw of Minnesota has been elected to the chair of animal husbandry in the state agricultural college, which also carries with it the directorship of the United States experiment station at this place. Professor Shaw enjoys a national reputation and is a leader of his profession in this country and Canada.

WHEAT MAY SPROUT.

Heavy Rain Storms Cause Damage to Flax and Wheat.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 13.—Another heavy rain storm visited the entire northern portion of the state Thursday night and Friday. The ground is thoroughly soaked and it is feared that the unthreshed wheat will sprout. The damage has been severe to the flax and wheat north and west of this place.

His Head Torn Off.

Forman, N. D., Oct. 8.—The threshing engine of Ashley Brothers, operating near Brampton, was blown up during the evening. Edward Ashley, one of the proprietors and engineer of the machine, was struck in the head by a piece of iron, knocking his head clear off his shoulders and killing him instantly.

GRAVE DANGER

CONFLUENT SMALL POX MAY RESULT FROM EXPOSURE TO VARIOLOID.

ONLY SAFETY LIES IN STRICT ENFORCEMENT OF QUARANTINE.

There is now in the county pest house one of the worst cases of smallpox that has ever come to the attention of the physicians of Grand Forks, says the Herald. It is what is known as confluent smallpox, and the patient is a sight to behold. He is so bad that three of the attendants quit their job and last evening one of them said that he would not stay with the patient another day if he was to receive $100 a day for his services. This too, was a man who had just had the smallpox and who was therefore immune but for all this, he stated that the odor was so repulsive and the appearance of the man so terrible to behold that he could not be induced to attend him under any circumstances. In speaking of the matter last night Dr. Taylor said that those who think the form of smallpox that is prevalent in this section of the country amounts to nothing, should "take a look" for their own benefit at the patient that is now in the detention hospital. The patient referred to has been hovering between life and death for the past week, and at the present time has but a fighting chance for his life. It has been contended from the start that while the usual form of smallpox that has appeared was not of a virulent type, still it was possible that a virulent form of the disease might result from the more common form at any time. Dr. Taylor at the time stated that in his opinion Dr. Duegan was entitled to great credit for the manner in which he had attended to his duties in connection with the smallpox situation during his term of office as superintendent of the county board of health, and that he had done his work in a most thorough manner at all times as far as he could judge, both in the manner of attending to the needs of the patient and thorough disinfection afterwards.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

Electrical Energy Transmitted Without the Use of Wires.

London, Oct. 19.—Messrs. Armstrong and Orling profess to have made what may prove to be the most important discovery since the days of Stephenson. They say they have found the secret of freely transmitting electrical enegry without wires. The members of the press have been invited to witness a series of demonstrations of apparatus for the reception and transmission of electromagnetic impulses without the use of wires, together with the control of the steering mechanism of torpedo and other submarine engines of destruction by means of electrical radiation from a distance without wires or material connection.

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N.Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a few days the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider this a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by W. A. Schreiter.

LARGEST IN THE WEST

MINNESOTA'S SCHOOL ATTENDANCE BASED UPON POPULATION.

There are over 406,000 pupils attending school in Minnesota at the present time, an increase of 7,000 over the enrollment of last year, according to reports made by the county superintendents.

Considering the population of the state, the showing is the best made by any state in the west. In 1860 there were but 25,000 pupils in the public schools. The increase in forty-one years has been over 380,000, an average of over 9,000 a year, or an increase of 1,524 per cent.

Since 1890 there has been an increase of 126,000, or an average increase of over 11,000 per year. The school population has increased in much greater proportion than has the population of the state.

The 750 schoolhouses in 1860 have increased to 8,000 in 1901: the number of teachers, from 700 to 12,000, and the average salary of teachers, from $16 to about $39.

Southern Minnesota Land Values.

Blue Earth, Minn., Oct. 19.—John Merrick and August King, old residents of Blue Earth, have sold their farms adjoing town. The former sold 240 acres for $9,600, the latter 160 acres for $8,000.

In years past farmers of this section have been accustomed to ship in cattle in the fall as feeders for the winter. But this year the dry summer produced such a shortage of crop that this will not be done. The hay crop is probably one-half the ordinary yield, and the corn crop hardly that.

Best Sale of the Year.

From the Fosston Thirteen Towns.

The E. J. Master's farm situated 1½ miles north of Fosston, and known to be one of the finest farms for its size in this immediate neighborhood, was sold last Monday through the Bank of Fosston to O. M. Thompson, from Granite Falls, this state, for $7,700 cash. The farm consists of 240 acres and is supplied with excellent buildings. This is the best price paid for any single farm of this size in the Thirteens Towns this year, but Mr. Thompson gets full worth of his money.

Little Canada, Bouquet of Town.

Editor Gazette:

Nels Benoit bought M. A. Lecompte place on tuesday and intend to improve it and rent it. There is several buildings in way of construction in little Canada and more are expected this fall if the weather permit. The fact is that little Canuda is booming and several lot seekers were looking little Canada over picking up lots while there is some for sale—prazing that part of the town as beeing the very best for residence in acc of the good water and being high and clean ground anyway since Dan Doran has decided to erect one of the nicest cottage there is in red Lake falls it did settle it Little Canada will be the bouquet of our fast in creasing town.

Yours truly.

N. Y. Z.

Town of Wheelock.

From the Crookston Journal.

This is the name of W. F. Street's new town on the line of the Fosston extension, at the junction of the Walker logging road. Mr. Street evidently thought it high time that Joseph Wheelock should get into the nomenclature of the state and perhaps considers it a good name to exorcise with. Mr. Walker's road is being built of standard guage under the supervision of Great Northern engineers and will probably become at once a part of that system. It will necessarily cut off a large slice of the trade-territory of Shevlin and Solway, midway between which two towns it makes the junction.

But Mr. Street had other matters in view when he made up his mind to make a town on his land, and he is confident now that Mr. Hill will build northward from Wheelock toward Roseau, across the Red Lake reservation, thus developing the northern portion of the western half of Beltrami county, and giving Roseau direct rail communication with the Twin Cities and Duluth, for which traffic Wheelock would be the transfer point. He is quite confident his line will be built next year.

DEATH OF A PIONEER

JOHN B. BEAUDRO, WHO CAME TO RED LAKE FALLS IN 1877.

TOOK A HOMESTEAD AT LAKE COMO, ST. PAUL, IN 1848.

John B. Beaudro died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. P. N. Bourdon, Saturday morning last at 7:30, after an illness of several months, superinduced by old age.

Deceased was one of Red Lake Falls' pioneers, coming here in the fall of 1877 in company with two sons-in-law. He was born in Sarell, P. Q. 77 years ago, and married an estimable young lady, Miss Elenore Danot. The family moved to St. Paul in 1848 when there were but five log cabins in the future capital city, and the Sioux Indians formed the greater portion of the inhabitants of the entire Northwest. Eight days after their arrival Mrs. Beaudro gave birth to a girl baby—the first white child born in St. Paul—Mrs. Theophile Lefalve, formerly of this city, now of Two Harbors. In 1850 he took a homestead on Lake Como, St. Paul, and six years after sold the farm for $100 an acre, a price which he considered munificent. When in 1877 the French colony was settling about Red Lake Falls, he decided to join the movement, and was among the early comers, but five families having preceded him—Isiae Gervais, Pierre Bottineau, John Raiche, X. and EliCyr. He has during the greater part of the time since made his home here. His surviving children are Mrs. Henry Gervais, Mrs. P. N. Bourdon, Mr. J. B. Beaudro, of this city; Mesdames Rock Lizee and John Genois and Mr. Jos. Beaudro, St. Paul: Mrs. L. H. Gervais, Monarch, Mont., and Mrs. Theo. Lafaive of Two Harbors.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon, having been delayed to await the arrival of relatives from other parts.

Important Notice.

On order of Judge Watts, the petit and grand jurors for the October term of the district court will not convene.

The court cases will be called and heard so far as it is possible for the attorneys and litigants to prepare for them.

His Visions Materialize.

From the Hallock News.

About ten months since, the News made the statement that "before long the Great Northern would rebuild the spur between St. Vincent and Emerson" and that "that road would again be a through line between Crookston and Winnipeg." Some of our friends down the line picked the item up and commented favorably with us, while others thought we saw visions—spooks—etc. The Stephen Leader caught on to the truth, and commented on it, and the Crookston papers thought he (Sam) had 'em.

The New Era fell in line with us, and the Crookston Times thought the venerable old editor had water on the brain. But now, since the grading of the spur has commenced, and the rails are being shipped in, we are inclinded to think that some of the newsy journals down the line don't known it all—quite, and the "spooky" editors turn the tables with a laugh.

The spur connecting the Great Northern with the Canadian Northern will probably be completed in a month's time and before the dawning of 1902 we will enjoy the advantages of a real "flyer" and as Sam says, we will be able to roll in at Hallock or Stephen and wake up in the morning at St. Paul—or China. The "all wise" papers are invited to explain.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our heartfelt gratitude to the loving friends who did so much for us during the illness and after the death of Grandpa Bourdon. The many deeds of kindness will ever be as a silver lining to the clouds of life.

J. W. Bourdon and family.

THETA DELTA GAMMA

RECEPTION BY THE FRATERNITY SATURDAY EVENING.

One of the prettiest social events of the season took place Saturday evening last, when the Theta Delta Gamma Fraternity entertained at the home of Mrs. W. T. Spillane, Third street. Everything showed that strenuous efforts were put forth to make everything as pleasant as possible for the guests.

The house throughout was beautifully decorated with plants, cut flowers and drapings of yellow and black, the colors of the Fraternity. In the parlor over the front windows the Greek letters Theta Delta Gamma in black were set in a soft back ground of yellow, which was tastefully decorated half way around both sides of the room. To the right of the window was a mantel, draped in yellow and laden with plants and vines, which fell down upon a couch, invitingly piled up with pillows. In the corner opposite stood a screen, above which was an immense fern, some of whose leaves almost reached to the ceiling while others fell down gracefully over the screen. In the reception room the book case held several beautiful plants, on one side was a cosy corner naturally one of the attractive features of the evening. In the other corner was a booth, formed of yellow and black drapings which fell from the ceiling to the floor. Right in the corner stood a beautiful oleander in full bloom. It was banked about with other plants and at one side stood a large fern.

In the entrance room the secretary was covered with plants and on the piano stood a large jardanier of pink and yellow roses.

The dining room probably showed to the fullest extent the artistic taste of the young ladies.

At the farther end over a yellow screen plants were banked to the ceiling, at the other end the side board decorated with pretty pieces of linen held a few choice plants and two large vases of chrysanthemums and carnations, and at one end a large palm and fern. In the center of the room stood a square table with a lunch cloth worked in pink roses over the table linen. From the chandelier in the ceiling yellow and black ribbons were caught at the four corners of the table. In the center of the table was a large vase of pink and white roses and on the cloth were scattered yellow and black pansies.

Plants, ferns, palms and cut flowers were in profusion everywhere

Japanese lanterns were hung about the porch and to the gate.

At eight o'clock the soft strains of the mandolin and guitar struck up and the guests began to arrive. They were met at the door by the patroness of the fraternity, Mrs. Spillane and ushered to the respective rooms by two little maidens dressed in pink and white, Miss Mary Cadieux and Miss Anna Robillard. These little ladies then showed them to the room where the members of the fraternity received formally in a body. They welcomed the guests and made them acquainted with the new members. Then lemon punch was served by Miss Katherine Spillane. The reception lasted till about nine o'clock, at that time partners were taken and the guests formed in line to march to the dining room, where luncheon was served till ten by the six senior members of the society. On returning to the parlors the guests proceeded to trace up the mysterious cords which were fastened at the chandelier in the parlor and were woven and inter-woven about the rooms. The ladies each took a black cord and the gents a yellow one. They began to wind following up their cords over pictures, under chairs, rugs, screens, down stairs, up stairs, outside and everywhere to find at the end an appropriate or unappropriate piece of advice, as for instance, "Don't eat with your fingers" was found near the dining room table. "Don't drink" was traced to the water pail on the porch, and "Keep off the grass" to the front lawn. Good laughs were elicited by others, as "Don't snore in church," "Don't be a prude," "Don't make goo-goo eyes," Kiss and make up," "Don't walk as if you owned the earth," "These little girls don't cry," "Don't try to be the whole cheese."

11,858.34 Acres of Red Lake County State School Lands Bring the Princely Sum of $122.760.00.

Total No. Acres sold.......... 11,858.34

Total amount paid $122,760.00

Average price per acre.......... 10.35.

This is the story in a nutshell of the sale of state lands conducted in this city Friday afternoon by State Auditor R. C. Dunn. It was a swift piece of business, this selling of $122.760 worth of land in two hours—something over one thousand dollars worth a minute while he was at it, and we would like to know where this record could be beaten.

Something over 25,000 acres of lands had been advertised for sale, and when at two o'clock the state auditor called for order, the court room was literally jammed with a nervous and eager crowd of land hungry individuals, representing the farmer with his ambition to add to his holdings, to the millionaire land shark who has followed up the land sales in every county where they were held this year. The squatters who from some misguided motive, settled on school land were also in evidence, and the State Auditor listened to their tales of woe and heard no competitive bids when their lands came up.

After rapping for order, Auditor Dunn explained that the law provides that only 100,000 acres of school land may be sold in one year, and although he had not touched the list in Red Lake, and two other counties, the limit was nearly reached, and he could not sell half of the 25,000 acres in this county and none at all in the others remaining. He had sent a deputy up to Roseau and had just heard from there. The amount of land sold had surprised him, and was running him close to the limit, which he would not exceed. He believed in living up to the law. He was besides, in no great haste to sell, since the school fund would benefit by the rise which was surely coming, and he was working for the school fund. 15 per cent. of the purchase price must be paid down. The county auditor would furnish a statement and this would be taken to the county treasurer who receives the funds and issues receipts. Interest has been 5 per cent. but last year was reduced to 4 by legislative enactment. He didn't say it was on his recommendation but that is pretty well known to his credit anyway.

The auditor emphasized that every one who buys school land should see to it that the interest is paid regularly, as there is a penalty of 12 per cent. on payments that lapse. This is best for all. The interest goes to the state current school fund, and is distributed in March and October of the same year to all the districts in the state. The principal is the permanent fund, and this is never touched—to provide for the future, when the state will have sold all of its lands. Thus it is to the interest of every citizen to do all in his power to protect it, and as for him, the sale today would be entirely in the interest of the state school fund. He would help out squatters to-day, but warned them to expect no mercy from him in the future. They are trespassers pure and simple, and it must be distinctly understood that [illegible] settling on school lands.

The first piece put up was N.E.¼ of 16-150-42, Poplar River, and the bidding was spirited enough to suit the auditor and too much so for the would-be buyers. Jos. Pigeon was the first bidder, and J. B. Hebert the second. The price was run up to $16.25 and sold to Pigeon, who divided equally with Arthur Laniel, according to a previous understanding. Eight pieces were sold in Poplar River and the price kept up close to the first figures obtained.

The highest price paid was for a 20 acre tract in Rocksbury township, which was sold for $30.25 per acre. The lowest figure was $7 per acre.

THE 1898 SALE.

At the sale in this city three years ago, 1,618 acres were disposed of, the total amount realized being $9,801, an average of $6.065 per acre. Nothing could better demonstrate the advance in farm land values than a comparison of the 1898 and 1901 prices.

Following is a complete list of lands disposed of Friday, together with names of purchasers and price per acre:

Public Examiner Finds Discrepencies in the St. Paul City Accounts—Liabilities of the St. Paul and Kansas City Grain Company Over $800,000. Lumbermen Must Pay for Illegal Cutting of Timber—General State News.

Duluth, Oct. 17.—Nearly 1,000 men gathered about the banquet board in the armory here to formally say farewell to Charles A. Towne, who shortly leaves for New York, to take up his residence there. There were representatives from all parts of the state, and especially the old Sixth district, while fully 500 ladies were present in the galleries to hear speeches by William J. Bryan, Mr. Towne and others, after the discussion of the menu.

The affair was non-partisan and carried out the intention of the promoters to make it a testimonial to Mr. Towne's personal popularity among his friends and neighbors.

Mr. Bryan was the principal speaker of the evening. Referring to Mr. Towne he said:

"Some may be disposed to stamp the word 'failure' upon the political career of our distinguished guest, but he has set an example that must wiegh heavily upon the side of civic virtue. He has faced without flinching a fire as hot as evere came from cannon's mouth and he has won a victory greater and more glorious than ever crowned the life of one who fawned at the feet of power or bartered away his manhood to secure an office."

C. D. O'Brien, St. Paul; Sidney M. Owen, Minneapolis; L. A. Rosing, Cannon Falls; Senator C. O. Baldwin, Duluth, and Mr. Towne were the other speakers of the evening.

Duluth, Oct. 22.—Former Senator Charles A. Towne finally took his departure from Duluth during the afternoon and a large number of political and personal friends assembled at the depot to see him off. He will stop in Chicago for a few days and then continue to New York, where he will remain permanently.

EXAMINER CLAIMS FRAUD.

Discovers Irregularities in St. Paul City Accounts.

St. Paul, Oct. 16.—Rank Examiner Pope, in overhauling the city accounts of St. Paul, claims to have discovered certain irregularities which compromise John F. Gehon, bookkeeper for City Engineer Claussen. The method is said to have been to draw checks payable to men for more than was due them. Two checks, one for a smaller amount than another, were said to have been made out, the employes would draw the larger one, representing their wages, while the smaller one would be given to those in the deal and they would have it discounted by one "E. A. Dickson."

The legal order and the signature made the matter easy. The irregularities were discovered by the discrepancy between the sums drawn from the city treasury and the reports of expenses incurred by street commissioners. Mr. Gehan denies that there was any crooked work on his part.

ITS DEBTS ARE HEAVY.

St. Paul and Kansas City Grain Company owes More Than $800,000.

Minneapolis, Oct. 17.—The schedules of assets and liabilities of the insolvent St. Paul and Kansas City Grain company, which have just been filed, show that the company's liabilities amount to $844,699.33, and assets $807,509.47.

The heaviest creditors of the firm are the Van Duzen-Harrington company of Minneapolis and F. C. Van Duzen and C. M. Harrington. The company is a creditor to the amount of $100,000 loaned on an unsecured note and the individuals are creditors for $50,000 cash.

The largest St. Paul creditor is the First National bank, which holds an unsecured note for $75,000.

The largest debtor of the company is the firm of J. Q. Adams & Co., who owe the grain company $176,000. Mr. Adams was the president of the grain company.

MUST PAY FOR TIMBER.

Lumbermen Will Be Obliged to Put Up for Green Pine.

Washington, Oct. 17.—Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock has ordered that Captain Mercer, acting Indian agent at Leech Lake, Minn., be instructed to ascertain the exact amount due the government as a result of the lumber contractors cutting green pine when their contracts provided that only dead and down timber should be removed.

The instructions to Agent Mercer further stipulated that in case these contractors fail to pay the amount decided upon he shall immediately commence proceedings against them in the courts.

AUTOMOBILE MAIL SERVICE.

Postoffice Department Makes a Contract for It in Minneapolis.

Washington, Oct. 18.—A contract for automobile mail service in Minneapolis, an experiment which may result in the extension of such service generally, was made by the postoffice department during the day. It gives the Republic Motor Vehicle company $17,313 for carrying the mails between the postoffice, postal stations and substations and collections from some of the letter boxes in the business section of the city from Jan. 1, 1902, to June 30, 1903.

Monster Land Sale.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Oct. 21.—County Auditor Lincoln finished his computations relative to the state land sale which Auditor Dunn conducted in this county, Saturday, and finds that there were 21,097.46 acres of land disposed of at the sale, and that the total amount which this acreage brings will be $147,401.40, or almost $7 an acre.

DIED AT A BANQUET.

Isaac C. Seeley Responded to a Toast and Expired.

St. Paul, Oct. 20.—Isaac C. Seeley, a prominent real estate dealer of Minneapolis, was stricken with a fatal stroke of apoplexy at the Ryan hotel just as he finished responding to a toast at the banquet of real estate men, in which he predicted the uniting in time to come of St. Paul and Minneapolis as on municipality.

"I shall not live to see it, but here at the center of the continent will rise the metropolis of the West," were his last words.

Upon resuming his seat he was seen to clutch his throat; then fall to the floor unconscious. In spite of the efforts of several physicians he died 40 minutes later. He resided in Minneapolis 30 years and leaves a wife and two children.

GREAT NORTHERN ROBBERS.

St. Paul, Oct. 18.—The capture of the bandits who held up the Great Northern overland express at Wagner, Mon., July 3, securing $43,000 in bank notes, officials of the Great Northern Express company say, has been seriously delayed by the announcement of the capture at Nashville of Annie Rogers, alias Maude Williams, supposed to be connected with the gang. Before her arrest the Pinkerton agency and police officers had laid plans which seemed to assure a speedy capture of the robbers.

Vice President and General Manager Elliott of the express company said that no further news had been received at headquarters and that he did not look for the immediate arrest of the gang.

THE GANG PLANK IS OUT.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Sir Thomas Lipton, in an invitation delivered to him on behalf of the Minnetonka Yacht club of Minneapolis, was informed during the day that the gang plank of that city was out for him.

The invitation was an elegant bit of hand painted vellum. The fo'castle vernacular in which it was worded caused the great English sportsman to smile in amusement and he expressed great admiration for the photographic views of the lake and yachts of the Minnetonka Yacht club, which, between hand painted covers, were bound to the invitation.

Sir Thomas said he could not accept the invitation at present, but would "try to get up there some other time."

MEN ARE ELIGIBLE.

Admitted by Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs.

Owatonna, Minn., Oct. 17.—The Woman's Federation spent most of the day discussing the constitution. In addition to several amendments the federation voted to admit and recognize the so-called "mixed clubs," composed of men and women. Some years ago, in the early history of the state organization, four mixed clubs were admitted to the federation, but the records fail to show any action taken on the matter and since that time it has been held in abeyance.

There was a lively discussion and only after a defeat through a misunderstanding on the part of the delegates and a reconsideration did the question finally carry in favor of their admittance.

STILL A MYSTERY.

Detectives Find No Clue to Disappearance of Young Rose.

Faribault, Minn., Oct. 17.—The disappearance of Francis Rose from Amhurst, Mass., college is as much of a mystery today as at the time of its occurrence, a month ago. A corps of Pinkerton detectives have been employed on the case by the boy's father, Dr. F. M. Rose of this city, but up to date they have been unable to find any trace of him. The doctor firmly believes that his son shipped on a vessel bound for some foreign port, as the boy always had a desire to go to sea. Young Rose is grandson of the late Bishop Whipple, with whom he was a great favorite.

TELEPHONE LINE SOLD.

Winona Company Buys the Phoenix Company's Lines.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 16.—The Winona Telephone company has purchased from the Phoenix Telephone company, of Rushford, its toll lines and exchanges at Rushford, Lanesboro and other places in Fillmore and Houston counties. The consideration named is $15,000. The purchase increases the toll lines of the Winona companies to 700 miles, all of which will be available to Twin City independent companies, when the toll line from there to Winona is completed this fall.

LAMBERT

W. P. O'Brien, of Red Lake Falls, made a business trip here the first of the week.

Louis Falardeau, the new merchant, drove to McIntosh Monday. His store is well patronized.

Mrs. L. Berthiaume, of St. Paul, came up last week for a visit at the home of her son, Alvida Bernier.

P. Lemay, of St. Hilaire, visited relatives here last week. Mr. Lemay intends to leave for Washington soon.

H. Langevin, veterinary from Crookston was here last week examining horses attacked with glanders. Four or five of the animals were killed.

A number of young ladies chaperoned by their most entrancing smiles are now soliciting contributions for the "church fair" which will take place in November.

Most pleasant weather last Sunday: a cloudless sky, a flaming sun—really it would have been difficult to determine from which direction "Jack Frost" was going to come.

Miss Annie Hetu, who teaches the village school is one of the contestants for a watch given by the organizers of the church fair. Being determined to out-run her equally determined opponent, she went to Red Lake Falls, where she expects to extract many a silvery dollar. Before starting, to insure success, she put on her Sunday smile and carefully adjusted Webster's vocabulary on her tongue.

EMARDVILLE.

Emardville is furnishing five jurymen this term.

Several strangers, supposed to be land seekers, have been with us lately.

As a whole wheat and oats gave a fairly good crop in this vicinity this season.

Norman Nilson, who is working in Red Lake Falls, came home on a visit last Sunday.

The sheriff was around last week subpoenaing jurors for the October term of the district court.

Several farmers went to Red Lake Falls last Saturday for nursery stock from the Jewel Nursery Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Odin Jacobson were on a visit to Edwin Jacobson last Sunday. He is seriously ill.

Arvor and Harold Bugge returned home from N. D. last week, where they have been with the threshers.

School district No. 16 started a term of 5 months Monday Oct. 21, with Abraham Johnson as teacher.

Anton Ellingson sold his land in Garnes and Woodside and his store building besides other property, to M. O. Sortedahl last week.

The auction sale at Uhai Desallicre's was well attended and everything brought a good price. Jos. Belair and A. P. Toupin of Red Lake Falls were auctioneers.

By the way, we think that the chairman of each township should look after all those large and small bulls running at large as the herd laws name five dollars fine for each and every bull running at large.

We note that the Gazette says that C. M. Hamma, who was killed by a bull, was from Emardville and that the Red Lake County Courier says he was from Gervais. The farm where the fatal accident occurred is in Wyandotte Township.

BRAY.

Geese are plentiful, also hunters.

John Gunderson made a business trip to St. Hilaire Friday.

P. A. Erickson is building a dwelling house for John Peterson.

A. O. Erickson transacted business at East Grand Forks Saturday.

O. P. Johnson and family visited at O.H. Carlson's at Polk Centre Sunday.

C. A. Nelson went to Thief River Falls Monday, to make final proof on his claim.

LOUISVILLE

Joe Peppin returned from the drive last Saturday, where he has been employed as cook.

Fine weather now and everybody is taking advantage of it by digging potatoes, which are very plentiful in this vicinity.

On the 16th J. B. Huot sold his farm to Crookston parties for $1,800. It is the old homestead where the church stands.

Dennis Lizotte butchered a hog and sold it in Crookston for $25.20. It weighed 360 pounds. Who says there is no money in hogs?

Sometime last week Charles St. Antoine sold his Louisville farm for $1,900 cash, and yesterday he bought another one near Red Lake Falls for $1,700.

Last Monday Sam Bleau, of Parnell, sold three quarter sections of land for $7,700 cash, which is not a very high price considering the improvements on the place, it being the best improved farm in that township.

RIVER FALLS.

A. Shaw disposed of his farm today. He bought this two years ago from a loan company.

Miss Eva Johnson, who has been ill for some time, has resumed her duties as teacher in the Swenson district. The enrollment is 20.

L. R. Bramsness on Monday disposed of seven lots in Bramsness addition to St. Hilaire. Consideration, $150. Thus he parts with his last possessions in Red Lake county.

Arveson Bros who have been threshing on the West Side, crossed the river Thursday and threshed the crop for L. R. Bramsness, showing an average of 10 bushels to the acre.

Dan Linaihan has a dozen teams at work on Wyandotte and River Falls ditch No. 2. They are making good progress and will no doubt finish half the contract this fall, as required.

G. H. Sanden, of Faribault county, who purchased Jonas Lind's farm last summer, paying $4,500 for 200 acres, together with buildings and stock, has just closed a deal for Axel A. Lundeen's 200 acre farm ajoining, for $2,000. They are now erecting a big barn. Mr. Sanden will not occupy the place, but will put in a manager.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

—BY—

PHIL. A. KAUFER.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

ARGUING FROM WRONG PREMISES.

Under the heading "A Significant Appointment," the Willmar Tribune has a learned editorial telling all about why President Rossevelt appointed ex-Gov. Jones of Alabama a federal judge—Jones, an ex Confederate soldier, and a life-long Democrat. Going eloquently into the subject, the Tribune editor is kind enough to tell the President what next to do in order to carry out his alleged policy of breaking up the Solid South. Bro. Lawson gives as the source of this information the Republican press.

Wading through half the essay, we run on to his first deduction:

"Now, if the President ignores the negroes and recognizes the old soldiers of the Confederacy it is figured they will go to the party where they really helong on account of their opinions on national politics. We all remember how a certain ex-everything in this county wept scalding tears last fall over the way negroes were disfranchised in the South. 'What will that class of spouters do now when Roosevelt joins hands with the ex Confederates to keep the negro out of politics?"

The day after this assault on his man of straw, editor Lawson could have had the pleasure of reading an account of Booker T. Washington's dinner at the White House. Poor man of straw, vanished now like a a phantom before the light:

For the first time in the history of the United States, a negro dined last night at the White House as the guest of the president. Bonker T. Washington, well known as the head of Tuskogee Institute of Tennessee, was invited to come and talk with him about the educational, industrial, social and political conditions of the colored race. Like others who have been asked to come, Mr. Washington was bidden to dinner. About the only time when the president can have an uninterrupted visit is during meal hours, and he meals with all callers from whom he wants to get information. In the years since the civil war there have been many colored men in congress but until this time no president has so far overcome the social prejudice as to dine with one of the African race. The white people of the south feel very strongly in this matter and last winter there was quite a fuss over the fact that Congressman White, colored, was accidently invited to a dinner given to members of a committee of which White was a member. The dinner had to be called off. It is understood that the president intends in his message to discuss matters touching the colored race.

A MUNICIPAL JUDGE.

The Thief River Falls city council has voted to create the office of municipal judge and will after January first next have a municipal court where cases involving amounts not exceeding $500 can be tried.

This is not exactly good news to the county seat but it will certainly fill a long felt want for the warring braves up the river who have always figured very prominently in the district court of this county; and who will find it convenient to have a justice mill of some pretensions at home.

Among the candidates for the position of municipal judge is Attorney Frank Hibner, and although there are other equally worthy aspirants, none of these are lawyers and this is one of his strong points. If the people elect a lawyer as judge it will benefit Thief River Falls, because those having cases will have confidence that the incumbent is competent to administer justice in important matters, and the business will stay at home. Therefore The Gazette, while recognizing Mr. Hibner's ability and fitness for the position, which ought to be recognized by the electors there even were there no other considerations, yet realizes that it would be better for the county seat to have one of the other aspirants win, so that the important cases would continue to come here. Mr. Hibner has been fighting winning battles for Thief Rixer Falls ever since the city was incorporated and has the confidence of the entire community and of the local bar.

PHILIPPINE TIMBER.

Some figures given out by Capt. George P. Ahern, ninth infantry, who is at the head of the Philippine Bureau of Forestry, serve to show the value of these islands as a source of timber supply and also the good judgment and economy that have so far been exercised by this government in the premises.

The forest land of the Philippines is now being treated in the same manner as the forest reserves in this country, the timber being cut under government supervision and along scientific lines, and sold to private individuals at "stumpage" prices. The total receipts from the sale of timber for the last fiscal year amounted to $100,000 and the total expenses to $25,000, leaving a net profit of $75,000. The last year under Spanish rule, with gross receipts of $75,000, the net profit was only $5.000. It is estimated that there are about 50,000,000 acres of public forest land in the Philippines, an area equal to the forest reserve in the United States. No estimate can be placed on the eventual income from the sale of timber but when it is considered that the forest lands of Germany yield an annual income of $181 per acre with expenses at about 60 per cent. of the gross income, and that under American administration expenses can probably be held down to less than 50 per cent. some idea can be formed of the vast source of revenue we have in the timber of these islands alone.

Crowell and Croker, the landmen of Minneapolis who have owned around 40,000 acres of choice wild land along the Minnesota & International railway, have increased their investment to over 60,000 acres. Their new purchase is mostly all north of Walker and south of Bemidji, and is nearly all poplar and hard wood lands.

"Killed by a loaded gun," is the way an exchange heads it. Was the gun loaded when the man was killed, or was it the load in the gun that killed, or was the killing done by an empty gun?

The village council of Bemidji in appropriating a salary direct to the leader of our band has done a wise act. The Bemidji band must be encouraged in every way, as it is an organization to be proud of. So says the Pioneer.

A new advance in wireless telegraphy is recorded. The Daily Telegraph of London says that Marconi has succeeded in transmitting messages through air for nearly 350 miles, which is far greater than the maximum distance hitherto reported..

Mr. Kruger has received a report from Mr. Schalk-Burger that the greater part of Cape Colony is in open rebellion, says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Brussels, and that the Boers have armed 15,000 Afrikanders within the last three months.

Minnesota ranks first in the number of bushels of wheat raised in 1900; third in the number of bushels of barley; first in the quality of flax; eleventh in the number of bushels of oats, and nineteenth in the number of bushels of corn produced.

W. A. Case, of St. Hilaire, who has organized nearly every Woodman camp in the old Seventh district, received word last Friday that he had been appointed head consul of the Eastern district of New York, with headquarters at Albany. Mr. Case left for Albany Friday.

Sam Fullerton, executive agent of the state game and fish commission, has given instructions to county auditors to issue no license this year to minors for shooting deer, moose or carihou. This is done to minimize accidents, which are more likely to happen from the careless handling of firearms by boys.

Says the Blackduck Times: There has been a beer famine in town this week, for the reason that the brewing company has not supplied its customers. P. S.—The stringency would have been relieved two days sooner, but it is alleged that the teamsters got drunk at Tenstrike and could not get in with the beer.

The Crookston Lumber company have purchased a tract of land near their mills there, and will erect cottages for their workmen. They have let to Hans Morberg, of that city, the contract for building fifteen of these cottages, the work to be completed by spring. The cottages will contain four and five rooms, and will cost about $1,000 each.

Carl Munch, of Crookston, one of the best known young men of that city, suffered the amputation of the left leg at Bethesda hospital Thursday. He had been suffering from scarcoma of the bone, a disease which causes the bone to decay. Much sympathy goes out to the family, this being the fourth brother to suffer the loss of a limb.

Hon. Joseph Leicht, publisher of the "Westlicher Herald", Winona, one of leading German papers of the Northwest, was in Red Lake Falls Thursday and Friday of last week. He will tell his readers all about that land sale, and Red Lake county will get a good send off, as he appreciates us.

E. D. and Hector Bray drove to Crookston Sunday to meet Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bray, who had just arrived from Blackduck. Mrs. Bray was, on this trip, initiated into the Walking Sisterhood, which numbers all ladies along the M. & I. in its membership. She walked 16 miles in one stretch Friday night.

Thos. Carver and Peter Lower arrived from Marshalltown, Ia., this week, and are lining up work on their recently acquired farms in Terrebonne and Gervais. Mr. Lower says it is his intention to raise corn and pork and he has not the slightest misgivings as to his success. He sold his Iowa farm for $55 an acre before coming here.

The N. P. has decided to be good too, and has put on a daily train, which gets in here at 8:45 from Fertile, going through to Grand Forks. Then returns to the city at 5:30 and leaves for Grand Forks at 5:50, making connections with the train for St. Paul. This is a very fine service and Agent Mizen is to be congratulated on the innovation, which will no doubt be appreciated by the traveling public.

For sprains, swellings and lameness there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Try it. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

W. H. Norris, of Fargo, resident representative of R. G. Dunn & Co's commercial agency, visited Red Lake Falls Thursday, to re-rate the city. Mr. Norris was very much pleased with the conditions here and said that our business firms were in splendid standing. Further than this he could not speak for publication but it was evident we had his ear.

Zotique Bray and family have moved in from the farm near Dorothy, and it seems like old times to see Zotique around. J.M.Bray and wife are contemplating an extensive trip in a few weeks and he will have charge of J. M's. business interests during their absence. Mr. and Mrs. Bray will visit all the principal cities of Canada, and may be gone several months.

M. E. Todd was in from Terrebonne Saturday, sorting out the immense shipment of trees and shrubs just received from the JewelNursery Company, which he as agent has sold to farmers all over this portion of Red Lake county, the amount paid for them aggregating over $500. The shipment included fruit trees, current and raspberry bushes and ornamental trees. One bunch of black walnut trees for Ludolph Jaeske was noticed, this being the first invoice of that kind received here. Mr. Todd in stocking the country with these useful adjuncts of civilization is doing a good work—and incidentally receiving a snug remuneration. He has been an employe of the Jewel Nursery Co. for twenty-five years.

Alex Wolfe, the well known Wyandotte farmer, was in the city Tuesday telling of his great loss by fire last Saturday night, which destroyed nine stacks of wheat, calculated to contain 700 bushels. Mr. Wolfe saw a fire in the distance, and concluded to test the grass near his stacks. He lit a match, but the grass seemed damp, and failed to burn. Another match had fallen to the ground, and fearing that some one might accidently ignite this by stepping on it, or in some other way, he picked it up, and lit the match thinking thus to destroy its effectiveness. Scarcely had he thrown it down, supposing it had been extinguished, when flames shot up all around; he had to run for a place of safety, and soon the stacks were ablaze. It is truly a hard thing to thus lose by a scratch the fruits of a year's toil and Mr. Wolfe who is one of our best known and most popular farmers, has the sympathy of all.

High School Notes.

Edited by The Athenian Society.

LITERARY WORK.

The debate for Oct. 25th, as announced last week will be as follows: Resolved: That strikes are a justifiable means of compelling employers to grant the demands of employees. Lots were cast for the different sides and resulted in the Athenians having the negative side and the Spartans the affirmative. The Athenian debaters are: Leland Healy, Katie Berthiaume and Olga Kretzschmar. The Spartan debaters are: Den Johnson, Ned Taylor and Bertha LaFreniere. The judges have been "captured" by the committee but their names will not be announced until the afternoon of the debate.

A method of marking the value of each program has been adopted. By this, each class of literary productions can attain a certain maximum number of credits. Judges of these programs have been appointed and it is their duty to record the number of points scored by each society and then compare at the end of the year to see which society has done the best work.

The H. S. members were very glad to see so many visitors at last Friday's program and hope that there will be a great increase on the next occasion.

The Spartan's program last Friday was very successful. The program came near reaching the standard of perfection.

SCHOOL IN GENERAL.

Just before handing the notes to the editor, we learn that school will be closed for two weeks. Of course we are all very sorry.(?) The debate so announced will therefore be postponed and its date will be announced after school reopens.

The teachers' formal reception "went off" last Saturday night. It was reported that the ice cream also went off rather informally.

The High School Notes, as they appear in both papers, will be posted each week in the High School room.

PERSONALS.

Ole Gjerberg has been chosen as a member of the Spartan society. The membership of the two societies is now even.

Tam McNerthney returned to school Monday. We are all glad to see Tom's smiling face back again.

INCIDENTS.

One day last week the high school was startled by a scream from the recitation room. On inquiring for its cause it was found that one of the members of the class had thrown a minnow in a certain girl's lap.

The class in Physics has discovered a novel and convenient method of washing the face. Any information on the subject can be secured from Bertha LaFreniere.

Two of the H. S. girls came to school Monday morning wearing broad smiles, their feeling apparently having been changed since the night of the surprise party.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

SCHLEY COURT OF INQUIRY.

Lieutenant Commander James H. Sears was the only new witness of the day in the Schley court of inquiry. He gave a detailed account of the entire campaign, including the blockade of Cienfuegos. He declared the Brooklyn had no information regarding the signals with Cuban insurgents until after the arrival of Captain McCalla. During the cruise to Santiago the weather was boisterous, he said, and the fleet was delayed by the smaller vessels. Regarding the bombardment of the Colon, May 31, the witness said the commodore's announced intention was to simply develop the strength of the land batteries. Describing the engagement of July 3 he told of the signals of the fleet displayed on the Brooklyn by order of Commodore Schley. The Brooklyn's loop, he said, was a necessary movement. The commodore's conduct under fire, he declared, was worthy of emulation at all times.

The officers of Admiral Schley's flagship, the Brooklyn, occupied the attention of the Schley court of inquiry all day Wednesday. Captain Cook and Lieutenant Commander Sears were recalled, and they were followed in succession by Commander N. E. Mason, who was the executive officer of the Brooklyn; Lieutenant Edward McCauley, Jr., who was signal officer, and Lieutenant Charles Webster, who had charge of the forward gun deck battery during the battle off Santiago. Commander Mason and Lieutenants McCauley and Webster all gave accounts of the engagement of July 3. Mr. McCauley recited in detail the signals made in connection with that historical event at the instance of Commodore Schley. When asked if Commodore Schley had said anything during the battle for the encouragement of the men, this witness replied that he had several times said: "Give 'em hell, bullies!" All these witnesses testified that the conduct of the commodore when under fire was cool and courageous.

The presentation of Admiral Schley's side of the controversy was continued before the Schley court of inquiry Thursday, eight witnesses being examined. Of these five were ensigns, and the entire eight had served on board the Brooklyn with Admiral (then commodore) Schley. All the witnesses told of the coolness of Admiral Schley under fire and described at length the blockade of Santiago and the battle of July 3. Ensign Marble stated that he had heard Captain Sigsbee tell Commodore Schley, when he came aboard the Brooklyn on May 26, that the Spaniards were not at Santiago. Dr. Paul Fitzsimmons, chief surgeon of the flying squadron, observed the battle of July 3 from the gundeck of the Brooklyn, and said that it seemed to him at the time that the Brooklyn was fighting the battle entirely alone. He thought the Brooklyn kept the Colon from getting away.

Eight witnesses were examined Friday in the Schley court of inquiry. Lieutenant Commander Reginald F. Nicholson, who was navigator of the Oregon, told the story of the battle of July 3 as he saw it from the deck of the Oregon. He said the movements of the Oregon had not been controlled by signals from the Brooklyn and he expressed the opinion that the Oregon was nearer the Colon than the Brooklyn was. Captain J. L. Hannum, engineer of the Texas, said that the port engines of the Texas had not been stopped during the battle of July 3. B. W. Wells, Jr., who was Commodore Schley's flag lieutenant during the Cuban campaign, gave a detailed account of the entire campaign, beginning with the departure from Hampton Roads, the stay at Cienfuegos, the cruise to Santiago, the retrograde movement, the blockade of Santiago, the bombardment of the Colon and the battle off Santiago.

The court of inquiry held no session Saturday.

AUDITOR'S NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF PETITION.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake. } ss.

Whereas, the petition of S. A. Swanson and others, bearing date the 4th day of October, 1901, and on file in my office, praying for the establishment of a public ditch along the route proposed therein, has been filed in my office.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the said board of County Commissioners, at their special session to be held at the auditor's office in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county, on the 25th day of November, 1901, at 1 o'clock p. m.

A true copy of said petition is as follows, to-wit:

To the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for the expense of, the construction of the ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a ditch along the following described route in the towns of Poplar River and Terrebonne in the said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows:

Commencing at a point at or near the southeast corner of southeast quarter of section thirty-two (32) township one hundred fifty (150) of range forty-two (42) thence running along the following route:

In a northerly and westerly direction over and across the east half of section 32 aforesaid and the northeast corner of NW¼ said Sec. 32 thence in a like direction over SW¼ Sec. 29, SE¼ Sec. 30 and SW¼ 30, to south line of NW¼ 30, thence following the south line of said NW¼ 30, to the southwest corner of NW¼ 30, thence running north on the line between Township 150 Range 42 and Twp. 150 Range 43 along west line of sections 30 and 19, 150, 42 to a point where said course intersects with a large cooley or ravine and terminating in said cooley or ravine as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred and Fifty-eight (258) of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1901, and subsequent amendments thereto.

FACING AWFUL DEATHS

Hazardous Vocation Of the Lumbermen of the Alsatian Mountains

News comes from Strassburg, in Alsace, Germany, of another cruel accident in the Vogesen mountains by which a shlitteur, missing his footing, was crushed by his sled laden with lumber. The labor of the Alsatian shlitteur, or sledder, is unique, and no other method of lumbering compares with it for drudgery and danger of a most appalling nature.

Almost all the lumbering in the Vogesen mountains is done at great heights, for the best trees grow near the peaks. So steep are the inclines down which the felled lumber must be brought that no mountain torrents are available for transporting it. Owing to the fact that the only paths are winding ones, no shoots can be built to facilitate the work. It has to be done by sheer bodily labor of individuals. These men are called sledders, or shlitteurs. Coarse black bread, salt pork and potatoes form their only fare.

When the shlitteurs reach the scene of their labors, their first task is to build the track for the sleds. This is work demanding experience, talent and great strength. The entire region must be studied minutely and the declivities measured with an eye that does not make mistakes. The roadway or track must be laid so that it will form a regularly sloping path that the heavy sleds will not need to be pulled and yet will not suddenly get an accelerated motion owing to too sudden an incline. Therefore it is necessary often to lay it in all kinds of roundabout ways. Every precipitous place must be avoided. Mountain torrents and chasms must be bridged.

BRACING HIS MIGHTY LOAD.

As soon as the line has been laid out the laborers begin with the building of it. Huge trees are laid end to end and spiked together to form the side rails; crosspieces are fastened to them at about the same distance apart from each other as are the rungs of a ladder.

The sleds are made of strong but light wood, as the shlitteurs must carry them up the mountains on their backs after they deliver their loads in the valley. The runners of these sleds are covered with thin layers of wood which has to be changed frequently, because it takes fire often and chars owing to the heat engendered by the enormous friction.

As these sled roads often are from four to eight miles long, it is essential that as large loads as possible be transported on each trip. Owing to this fact the shlitteurs pile the lumber up in incredible quantities. Then, when the sleds have as much as even a shlitteur dares to pile on them, he braces himself in front of the immense load, a comrade gives the sled a shove, and the huge mass begins to slide. There is no appliance of any kind to act as a brake. All the braking must be done by the man in front, and he needs the strength of an ox to prevent his juggernaut from beginning to race.

Step by step he moves forward, never moving one foot until the other is braced tightly against a rung. Even the least slip means that the vast load will drive down irresistibly on the shlitteur and crush him. Let his knees weaken for an instant, let his heel falter as he feels for the rung, and the ponderous thing behind him is ready to grind him to pieces under it.

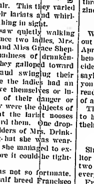
There is no chance of escape for the shlitteur. He cannot run down the rude track as fast as the loaded sled behind him. If he fails to hold it back, he is a dead man, for even if he should not be killed outright there is little hope for him, as it is impossible to get medical aid in the Vogesen, and what little rude surgery can be performed by the shlitteurs themselves is not of much use when limbs are torn clean from the body or internal organs are crushed. And these are the common injuries.

Most of the accidents happen so suddenly that the mates of the victim can do nothing to avert them. Shlitteurs have been killed without even having been run over. The load behind them, starting forward suddenly, has actually compressed them so fiercely that they succumbed to internal injuries brought on by the terrific strain and by the twisting which their bodies underwent in the effort to hold the load steady. Sometimes sudden turns in the track throw the sled out of balance, and it topples over into the abyss. Usually the shlitteur goes with it, as he is so firmly interlocked with his load in order to guide it safely that he cannot break away in time.

The traveler through the Vogesen will see many black wooden crosses along almost every mountain path and even on the sides of what seem impassable declivities. Each one commemorates a shlitteur who died in the course of his hazardous work.

Mexican Cowboys Lasso a Woman

Three Mexican half breeds came riding into the little town of Corona, that lies about 23 miles south of San Bernardino, Cal., a few days ago. They were cowboys. It was pay day for them, and they were on pleasure bent. They laid in a foundation of hard liquor and then started in to shoot up the town. Galloping wildly from end to end of the street, they flourished their revolvers and fired them in the air. This they varied by unwinding their lariats and whirling them at everything in sight.



Suddenly they saw quietly walking along in the distance two ladies, Mrs. T. P. Drinkwater and Miss Grace Shepard. With the madness of drunkenness upon them they galloped toward them, whooping and swinging their lariats, and before the ladies had an opportunity to save themselves or indeed were aware of their danger or conscious that they were the objects of the wild onslaught the lariat nooses came singing toward them. One dropped over the shoulders of Mrs. Drinkwater, but the big hat she was wearing saved her, and she managed to extricate herself before it could be tightened around her.

Miss Shepard was not so fortunate. The lariat of the half breed Francisco Quevas caught her. As soon as he saw it drop over her head he gave a shout, put spurs to his horse and set off at a gallop, utterly careless of whether he was dragging her to death or not. Fortunately for her the loop did not catch around her neck. It fell over her body and tightened about her knees, and she caught it and held it in such a manner as to protect her head as she was dragged along. For several hundred feet she was thumped and scraped along the rough street until her screams and the indignant cries of the people who saw the outrage so frightened the fellow that he dropped the lariat and galloped away.

This was more than the townspeople could stand. A posse was made up and soon captured the cowboys. Francisco Quevas is now serving two years in San Quentin prison.

Amateur Road Builders.

The average country road builder turns out an article that looks well in dry weather. A rainy season, especially in the spring, when the snow is melting and all earthwork is loosened by thawing frost, speedily develops the amateur character of the work. Many a piece of roadway on which township or road district officials have expended days and weeks of thought and work has been washed away because it was a dam in the path of spring waters seeking the lowest level, and the portions left have been turned into quagmires because insufficiently drained.

Grain Moved In Streams.

Nowhere in North America will you come on a more thrilling night scene than the fresh water cargo tank unloading at Buffalo, says Rollin Lynde Hartt in The Atlantic. Here she lies beneath the towering grain elevator, which thrusts a long pumping pipe (called the "leg") down through her hatchway. Mount the gangplank, dodging the spinning ropes that make your head reel, stumble about on the dark deck, look down, down, down through the open hatch, and, zounds, what a sight! The hold glows with electricity. It is misty with blown dust. It roars with mechanical activity.

An enormous steel "shovel," big as the inside of a house and manipulated by countless flying ropes, charges back and forth through the whole length of the ship, pitching the yellow grain before it and heaping it up where the leg can get hold of it to whisk it into the bin that is somewhere up in the sky. Beneath, in the hold, an army of blue clad men with wooden "scoops" barely dodge the deadly shovel as they swing the grain into its path.

Observations by Mildred.

"Yes, dearest."

"What did you get, mamma?"

"Cigars, lovey."

"The cheap ones that Aunt Millie told you about?"

Silence from mamma, but a heightened flush on her face that was not entirely the reflection from "dearest lovey's" red velvet hat.

"Mamma, that man over there has on a dreadfully dirty necktie. You told papa the other day that no gentleman would wear a soiled necktie."

"Mildred, stop talking."

Mildred was silent for a little while.

"Mamma, that lady over there forgot to polish her shoes this morning."—London Spare Moments.

All Cheese Is Densely Populated.

Professor Adametz, who devoted considerable time to the study of the fragrant subject, said that the population of an ordinary cheese when a few weeks old is greater than the number of persons upon the earth.

Professor Adametz made some interesting researches dealing with the minute organisms found in cheese. From a microscopic examination of a soft variety of Gruyere cheese he obtained the following statistics: In fifteen grains of cheese, when perfectly fresh, from 90,000 to 140,000 microbes were found, and when the cheese was seventy days old the population had increased to 800,000 in each fifteen grains. An examination of a denser cheese at twenty-five days old proved it to contain 1,200,000 in each gram (about fifteen grains) and when forty-five days old 2,000,000 in the same small particle.

Spiders Are Industrious.

No small insect ever escapes from the web of a spider, a fact which is not to be wondered at when it is considered that an ordinary sized snare may contain as many as 120,000 viscid globules. The spinner is constantly engaged in repairing injuries to the web inflicted by wind, stray leaves or captured insects. Once a day the whole snare is subjected to rigorous examination, and any broken or loosened threads are adjusted.—Cornhill Magazine.

Thunder.

Winter thunder is considered throughout Europe to be of very ill omen, but April thunder is considered to be very beneficial. In Devonshire and other cider counties of England there is a saying that "when it thunders in April you must clean up the barrels"—in readiness, that is, for a plentiful crop of apples.

Chance For Vengeance.

Simson (angrily)—I have sent the editor of The Hightone Magazine forty-two of my poems, and he has returned every one of them.

Friend—Don't send him any more. He might get mad.

"Suppose he should. What could he do?"

Abandoned Cisterns.

An abandoned cistern is often a dangerous thing and should be filled, as stagnant water which may remain in it is a common source of disease. If this cannot be done at once, it is a good plan to throw in proper disinfectants and gradually fill it up with sifted coal ashes.

The Real Bitterness.

Mamma—But, darling, why should you object to taking the good doctor's advice?

Bobby—It isn't his advice, mamma. It's his horrid old medicine that I hate to take.—Chicago News.

Why He Never Attains Her Ideal.

A man who is earning the living for a family doesn't have time to live up to his wife's ideals, and by the time he has made his money he is too old and wants to be comfortable.—Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

To make good tea and coffee the water should be taken at the first bubble. Remember continued boiling causes the water to part with its gases and become flat. This is the cause of much bad tea and coffee.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Thief River Falls.

From the News.

Mayor Kretzschmar went to Red Lake the first of the week on business.

A petition is being circulated to establish a county ditch to drain what is known as the Connelly slough on the East Side.

Mrs. Day F. Stacy and daughter, Mamie, left Tuesday for Kentucky, where they go to visit with Mrs. Stacy's daughter, whom she has not seen for fourteen years.

The Indians up at Red Lake have been threatening to go on the war path unless they received pay for the dead and down logs cut last winter. The money is now on the way from Washington to the Agency and all is quiet.

One of the heavy purchasers of state lands last week was Senator Wm. B. Dickey, of Zumbrato, Minn. Mr. Dickey purchased land west of the city and was up to look over selections Saturday. He will probably remove here next spring and engage in farming.

St. Hilaire.

From the Spectator.

J. S. Dyrhaug, the man who makes and sells brick at Red Lake Falls, was a business visitor here yesterday on his way to Thief River Falls.

The Independent Scandinavian Workman's Association, recently organized here, started in life with 18 members. More are expected to be initiated at the next meeting of the lodge.

W. H. Scribner, who is doing the work of construction on the Wyandotte Ditch No. 1, was in on Saturday and reports the work as progressing rapidly. He expects to have most of the work finished before freezing up time.

Yesterday morning Helm Adams came near losing a valuable horse while doing some scraper work along the private ditch of J. K. Hannay. The horse slipped into the ditch and had to be dug out. The animal was somewhat bruised and strained but will probably come out all right.

Stepped Into Live Coals.

"When a child I burned my foot frightfully," writes W.H. Eads, of Jonesville, Va., "which caused horrible leg sores for 30 years, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured me after everything else failed." Infallible for Burns, Cuts, Scalds, Sores, Bruises and Piles. Sold by W. A. Schreiter, druggist.

SOCIAL ITEMS, GOOD OF THE ORDER AND RECESS GOSSIP OF INTEREST.

A court of the Catholic Order of Foresters was organized Sunday at Gentilly.

Mesdames J. R. Fortier and J. P. Harren have succeeded in establishing a court of the Women's Catholic Foresters at Gentilly.

Brown's Parlor Orchestra is hereby notified that the splendid music furnished Tuesday night is thoroughly appreciated by the members of Joan of Arc Court C. O. F.

The Catholic Knights of Ohio, in annual convention September 11, at Columbus, O., adopted resolutions pledging the 25,000 members of the organization against the American custom of treating to intoxicants.

The reception and ball Tuesday night by Joan of Arc Court C. O. F. in honor of Sisters Elise Suvard and Victoria Fortier and bridegrooms was one of the most successful events ever held here. The sisters in question are among the most popular members of the Lady Foresters, and the affair transpired to be a fitting tribute. Lunch was served at 12.

One of the most important events in the history of Evergreen Camp. R. N. A., transpired this week and the members, especially the ladies, can hardly wait until the next candidate is initiated. All this is on account of the arrival of the camp goat, which came in the pink of condition. She will make her debut at the next regular camp meeting and all members ought to be there.

The Euclid Royal Neighbors are nothing if not original. Members of the order here have received invitations for a "stocking entertainment" to be given at the Euclid Woodmen hall Tuesday evening, Nov. 5th. Inclosed with the old is a cute little silkoline stocking that nicely fits in the envelope without folding, accompanied by the following verses:

This little sock we give to you,
It is not for you to wear
Please multiply your size by two.
And place therein with care,
In dollars, dimes or cents.
Just twice the number that you wear.
(We hope it is immense.)

So, if you wear a number ten
You owe us twenty, see?
Which dropped within this little sock
Will fill our heart with glee.
'Tis all we ask, it isn't much,
And hardly any trouble,
But if you only have one foot,
We'll surely charge you double.

But if the distance seems too great
Our social to attend,
Or care or sickness should prevent,
Just send by some good friend,
Or our good Uncle Sam will bring
The dimes we so much need,
And many thanks we'll vote you,
Who are a friend indeed.

Now if you have a friend quite dear
You'd like to bring with you,
Or if you know some one who'd come
We'll gladly send you two.
So don't forget the place and date—
We'll answer when you knock.
We'll welcome you with open arms—
But don't forget your sock

City Election.

The candidates stand as announced in The Gazette last week except A.M. Sivertson and L. P. Berthon who refuse the use of their names. Thos. Crompe enters in the 3d ward, and W.T. Spillane and Henry Hennemuth are out for alder-men at large.

With the Churches.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

RESIDENT PRIEST FOR UPPER FALLS.

The Rev. Charles Cannon of St. John's abbey, has been assigned to the pastorate of St. Bernard's Catholic church at Thief River Falls. St. Bernard's is said to be in a very flourishing condition. The church is out of debt, a new 2,000 pound bell is en-route, a new altar has recently been installed and a house for the priest is being comfortably furnished. Thus good Father Ansgar leaves a splendid heritage to his successor, the result of arduous labors, which, added to the care of his Red Lake Falls and St. Hilaire charges, entailing work enough for three men, would have long since discouraged a less zealous priest. Father Ansgar will continue in charge of the St. Hilaire congregation.

MISSION AT ST. MARY'S.

The mission, which had been postponed, will be held Sunday, Monday and Tuesday of next week. The Rev. P. Augustine, O. S. B., will have charge, and will open the mission with high mass and sermon Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. There will be regular morning and evening services after the manner of the mission held last year. Rev. Augustine, whose home is at Moorhead, has no peer in the Northwest as a pulpit orator, and his services are much in demand.

The opening of the new parochial residence at Gentilly will take place Sunday next. Posters are out which read "You are cordially invited to attend the dinner offered to the pastor by the ladies of Gentilly parish on that occasion. Every friend of the parish and of the pastor should attend this social gathering. Nothing will be spared to make the occasion a pleasant one. Dinner 25 cents."

Oct. 23 is honored for St. Romain, patron saint of Rouen, in France. He established Christianity in that part of the country, and is styled the Apostle of Normandy. St. Ursula, patroness of young girls, especially school girls, and of educational institutions, is also commemorated on this day.

Owing to the small attendance, the program was not carried out in full at the Presbyterian church Wednesday evening, when the first of a series of lectures was to have been given. The lecture and some of the other good features were laid over until a future meeting.

Oct. 25 is honored for St. Crispin, patron saint of shoemakers. He was a native of Rome, and as he and his brother traveled through France preaching the gospel, they paid their way making and repairing shoes.

The Rev. E. Fayolle announced from the pulpit Sunday that over $1,200 had already been subscribed in the city to aid in the construction of the new parochial school. This week he will solicit in the country.

Some practical and wholesome advice was given by The Rev. E. Fayolle Sunday, as to observing quarantine regulations, which, if followed, would materially aid in stamping out disease.

We, the jury find that the deceased came to his death from heart failure, caused by not taking Rocky Mountain Tea made by Madison Medicine Co. 35c. W. A. Schreiter.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. P. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at W. A. Schreiter's Drug Store.

TERREBONNE PROUD

OF ITS CHEESE FACTORY---AND NOT WITHOUT GOOD REASON.

H. C. CLEMENT THE CHEESE MAKER RECEIVES DIPLOMA SIGNED BY GOVERNOR.

H. C. Clement, the Terrebonne cheesemaker, was in the city Saturday and says he has just received his beautiful engraved diploma, signed by Gov. Van Sant, which testifies that his cheese scored first prize at the State Fair.

W. W. P. McConnell, the state dairy and food commissioner, writes very encouragingly to Mr. Clement, giving him a strong testimonial, and stating his belief that the diploma has been well bestowed.

Mr. Clement may well feel proud of his second victory won in competition with the oldest and best equipped cheese factories of the state. It was only the 3d day of June that this factory was started as a private enterprise and in August he scored first in the monthly contest under the auspices of the dairy and food commission.

The factory has been so successful that the farmers who have been patronizing it have taken up Mr. Clement's proposition to organize a co-operative association, and the institute will be turned over to them and be conducted as such hereafter.

The total output has been about 6,000 pounds of cheese a month, and the patrons have received from 73c per 100 pounds of milk when the factory was first started, to 90c at the present time.

With the small amount of milk required for its successful operation there is no reason why the factory can not be run this winter and the year around.

The Newspaper Blue Book for 1901-2 containing a select list of the best newspapers in the United States, is out. Among the 68 Minnesota weeklies named is the Red Lake Falls Gazette. The merits of the Blue Book's selections may be judged from the following:

From the Tacoma (Wash.) News: The Newspaper Blue Book for 1900 has just been issued. It is the recognized authority on newspapers, and is a great compliment to any newspaper to be listed in this book, as selections are made without the knowledge of the publishers and money, influence and advertising has no weight with it.

From the Albany (N. Y.) Journal: Newspapers which are listed as the best in their territory in the Newspaper Blue Book can rest assured that they are not victims of flattery. The Bureau judges newspapers from the amount, variety and quality of the matter which it finds in them, year in and year out, and lists them strictly according to their merits. It has no favorites, no axes to grind, no ulterior motives. Its judgment is quite without bias.

The Famous Sunbeam.

No writer in recent years has sprung into such sudden and unmistakable prominence as has W. G. Hunt, editor of the Gully Sunbeam, whose rays are lighting up the weird region in the vicinity of the Lost river. The Wanke Herald editor evidently does not appreciate the real art in the Sunbeam's conceptions, and has this to say of its latest apology:

Our neighbor on the south side of the tamarack swamp says he gets his spelling corrected free by a cattle herder on the Lost river. It looks a tree gratis job, but we know of no cattle herder in this vicinity who would be guilty of the eccentricities of that spelling. Perhaps it's the work of a snake charmer.

Suicide at Lumber Camp.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 26.—Erick Mitchell killed himself with a shotgun in his shanty on Turtle river, fifteen miles east of Turtle River village. He had been there all summer watching the camps of a lumber company. Two companions left him a few minutes before the deed. Coroner Newman has gone to investigate.

FREE RURAL ROUTE

ONE TO BE ESTABLISHED ON THE STAGE LINE FROM CROOKSTON.

THIS WILL BE THE FIRST ONE IN THE RED RIVER VALLEY.

The long looked for has come to pass at last. There will be rural delivery along the route of the stage line running from Crookston to Gentilly and Red Lake Falls says the Crookston Times. Strenuous efforts have been made by Congressman Eddy to induce the postal authorities to give the valley a taste of the rural delivery which is being lavished on other portions of the state. So far the agent of the rural delivery department has not reached Crookston, although the city is booked for rural delivery. The rural delivery inspector is at Fargo at present where he is surveying six delivery routes.

This morning Postmaster Eiken received notice from the department that the service on the Gentilly and Red Lake Falls line would be changed. In the future there will be daily service to Gentilly, but the stage will only run to Red Lake Falls on Sundays. Anyone living within eighty rods of the route may have their mail delivered by placing a proper box upon the road and applying to Postmaster Eiken.

Those desiring to make bids on the new route will find specifications in the post-office.

Mr. Eiken has not yet had an answer from the department upon his petition for the establishment of rural delivery routes in this vicinity, but there is little doubt that the department will act favorably and that at least one rural delivery route will be established in Polk county in the near future. The department inspectors who is now in Fargo will probably visit Crookston and investigate the routes which have been petitioned for. The delivery of mail along the Gentilly stage route may be looked upon, however, as the entering wedge of the establishment of free rural delivery in this section.

Mr. and Mrs. Sivertson Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Sivertson on Monday night threw open their hospitable mansion, corner 6th st. and Hamilton av., to receive a party of invited guests in honor of Miss Mable Porter, of Willmar, Mrs. Marshall's guest. Those responding to the invitations were Mrs. E. F. Marshall, Misses Mable Porter, Alice Newton, Lorena Schreiter, Mable Owen, May, Lilie and Alice Buse, Bessie Hunt and Laura Hollingshead; Messrs. J. J. Padden, Ralph Wyer, Harry and Lee Healy, Thos. Germo, Drew Marshall, Dr. Argue and Geo. Hennings.

The guests upon arriving were given cards containing the likenesses of noted persons and these were to be named. Thomas Germo scored highest among the gentlemen and received as a prize a beautifully bound volume of poems. The booby prize, a box of blocks, went to Miss May Buse.

After this progressive cinch was in order, and prizes were awarded as follows: The lady's head prize, by a strange coincidence, went to Miss May Buse, as a companion piece to her blocks—an exquisite china cup and saucer; the next award was the gent's head prize, a blotter with ebony and sterling frame, Ralph Wyer being the recipient. Miss Lorena Schreiter and Lee Healy were in for the booby prizes and each received a package of sen-sen chewing gum.

Lunch was now served and after this was heartily enjoyed, the guests were ushered into the final game of the evening, each being handed a card containing the picture of some animal, with instructions to draw a likeness. The attempts of some of the artists present furnished untold merriment, and the climax of the evening's good time, which will long dwell in the memories of the happy participants.

RAISE IN ASSESSED VALUATION OF RED LAKE CO. OVER LAST YEAR.

THIS APPLIES TO PERSONAL PROPERTY----RESULT OF STATE BOARD ACTION.

The County Auditor has had no little work adjusting the tax rates according to the sweeping changes made in the personal property schedule by the state board of equalization, but has now got caught up, and his books show an increase of $73,000 in the total assessed valuation of Red Lake county personal property over and above the total as it stood after going through the hands of the assessors and the local and county boards of equalization. The raise amounts to 15 per cent. on the county's total valuation, and the increase in revenue as a consequence will amount to $3,145, the average rate being 45 mills. The county levy is 13 mills divided as follows:

5 mills revenue.
1 mill school.
1 mill road and bridge.
2½ mills bond and interest.
3½ mills poor.

The increase in the county revenue will be $975.

The total assessed valuation as it stands on the personal property list as amended by the state board is as follows for each assessor's district:

Hard to Live Without The Gazette.

Revillo, S. D., Oct. 23, 1901.

Editor Gozette:—

Please drop me a card and let me know how much I owe you for the paper. Times are hard but it is harder to get along without The Gazette.

Yours truly,
Xavier Bergeron.

He Was a Noble Man.

From the Alexandria Post-News:

John S. Pillsbury, thrice governor of Minnesota, is dead. Mr. Pillsbury did not leave it to his friends, family or the state to build his monument, he built his own. A home for working girls, a home for children and the aged, a library for his birth town, a library for his section of his home city and Pillsbury Hall on the university grounds are among his monuments. But chiefest and greatest of all is the university itself. A man with meager education and with a feeling of modesty because of this deficiency, he acquired the education of experience, of association, and of great affairs. His brain was large, his heart larger, and his longing for advantages he had not had led him to be the university's greatest and most helpful friend. He saved it in its infancy, nourished it in its youth and loved it in the perfection of its stalwart young manhood. Every man and young woman who has profited or may profit by its advantages will be the better, the stronger, the happier and the more useful citizen because John S. Pillsbury lived.

Bellevue, Wash., Oct. 21, 1901.

Editor Gazette:—

Please find enclosed $1.00 to pay up my subscription another year in advance. I can't get along without The Gazette, and my wife says it is the best paper in the house. To-day I picked six gallons of strawberries out in the open field. So how is this for Puget Sound weather?

ELEVEN DITCHES.

TOTAL OF SIXTY MILES OF COUNTY DITCHES NOW UNDER WAY.

We doubt if our own people realize the extent of the ditch work already completed, now in progress, and that formulated for Red Lake county. With the letting of the six ditch contracts on Sept. 23, forty miles of ditches were provided for. Besides these is the Wyandotte and River Falls Ditch No. 1, against which an appeal has been taken by farmers en route.

The three proposed ditches for which petitions are out, and which will come up for consideration before the board of county commissioners at the meeting on November 25th, will if brought to a favorable consummation add materially to the county's total ditch mileage. The proposed Garnes-Emardville ditch is 13 miles, the Poplar River ditch three miles, and the Terrebonne ditch No. 2 about four miles, long.

When completed these will bring the total ditch mileage close to sixty miles and there are several other propositions which are expected to materialize shortly.

Red Lake county excels in almost every line—cheese, butter, wheat, corn, stock, lumber—and we will soon have one of the best drained counties in the state.

T. B. Walker's New Logging Road.

Frank J. Kline, the veteran lumberman, who has for thirty years been identified with T. B. Walker's interests, has charge of the construction work on the new logging road being built from Wheelock, a point on the Great Northern between Shevlin and Solway, and work is being pushed rapidly. Mr. Walker will dispose of the road to the Great Northern when it is completed, with the exception of that portion as far south as Bear Creek, a distance of sixteen miles from Wheelock. Settlers enroute are hailing the advent of the road as the dawn of a new era of prosperity, and it is conceded that Mr. Walker has run onto a good thing.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Makers of These Products to Meet at St. Cloud Nov. 20.

St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 26.—J. K. Bennett, of Owatonna, secretary of the State Butter and Cheese association, is in the city making the preliminary arrangements for the convention to be held in this city Nov. 20 and 21. It is expected that fully 200 delegates will be present. Gov. Van Sant will be invited to address the meetings. St. Cloud will see to it that the men who are doing so much to make the North Star state famous for two of its most important commodities, are given a warm reception.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. P. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at W. A. Schreiter's Drug Store.

DISTRICT COURT.

THE OCTOBER SESSION LASTED JUST THREE HOURS.

ADJOURNED TO THE FEBRUARY TERM, SECOND MONDAY IN FEBRUARY.

Judge Wm. Watts and Court Stenographer Lohn came up from Crookston Monday, and at 1 p. m. the Judge convened court, notifying the few present at the time that it was his intention of returning to Crookston on the 4 o'clock train, and adjourning the October term to February, when the two terms will be merged into one. The few cases that could be touched in the absence of jury, attorneys and principals, as a result of the notice given last week, were quickly disposed of.

A motion was heard in the case of Wright vs. Meehan, defendant asking reversal of judgment on the ground that plaintiff has not made amended complaint as required by the court. The judge did not give his decision.

The case, State of Minnesota vs. Wm. Brimsness was dismissed on motion of the County Attorney.

The case of St. Hilaire Townsite Co. vs. Dan Patterson will be tried at Crookston.

State vs. Mullarky & Hansen. The County Attorney moved judgment for taxes levied, notwithstanding the answer, on the ground that the assessor does not state a defense against such tax. Motion granted.

Dilly Berthiaume vs. Chas. Lajambe. Judgment of lower court, in favor of plaintiff, to collect for alleged balance of $477 on farm rent deal, reversed, and costs taxed to plaintiff.

Maria Buse vs. Jos. Cyr. Motion of plaintiff to dismiss the appeal was granted.

This settled the business, and the judge promised to return Saturday if thirteen persons or more made a request for citizens papers. It is not likely that many will get together, so we will probably not see Judge Watts again until the February term.

SCARE IS OVER.

Small Pox Situation in this City Entirely Satisfactory.

Last week the quarantine was raised at one place and tomorrow or Saturday the time limit for the greater portion of the cases now on record will have expired. This, taken in connection with the fact that for the past ten days there has only been one new case, indicates that conditions are extremely satisfactory and that the precautionary measures adopted by the local board of health have been very effective in stopping the spread of the disease.

Advertised Letters.

The following letters remain unclaimed in the postoffice at Red Lake Falls for the week ending Oct. 26, 1901:

Mrs. Sudger DeSaurnis, Miss Kate Goed, Miss Emma Johnson, Miss Mosa Patnoda, Mr. S. Su, Mr. Nels Nelson.

If not called for in two weeks these letters will be sent to dead letter office as prescribed by law. In calling for the above please say "advertised."

THE CITY MILLS.

The Plant Will Start up in Full Blast To-day.

Healy & Bourdon have completed improvements to the City Mills, and the plant will start up at once, with Leo Steinert as head miller. The firm anticipate a steady run. The N. P. spur to the mill has been put in fine shape and everything is in readiness for successful operation. This mill under Mr. Steinert's supervision last year turned out flour of the very best quality, and no doubt the output this season will be equally good. A feed mill is run in connection.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

SCHLEY COURT OF INQUIRY

Eight witnesses were examined in the Schley court of inquiry Wednesday. The first witness of the day was James Hare, photographer on the press boat. He stated that Captain Sigsbee of the St. Paul had told the correspondents on board the Smith on May 26 or 27 that Cervera's fleet was not inside the harbor at Santiago. Boatswain Hill of the Brooklyn was the principal witness. He detailed the battle of Santiago at great length and spoke in high praise of the bravery of Admiral Schley during the engagement. During the progress of his story the audience several times burst into applause, which Admiral Dewey promptly suppressed. The other witnesses of the day were Gunner F. T. Applegate and Major Paul St. C. Murphy of the marines, all of whom were on board the Brooklyn during the Cuban campaign; Lieutenant Commander Harlow, who as executive officer of the Vixen made notes of the battle of July 3, and three officers of the Oregon, Lieutenant A. A. Ackerman, Lieutenant E. W. Eberle and Lieutenant R. G. Johnstone.

Admiral Schley took the stand in his own behalf Thursday and described in detail the Cuban compaign to the battle of July 3. He first told of taking command of the flying squadron at Hampton Roads March 28, 1898, and of mapping out a plan of campaign before leaving there. Admiral Schley then told of his orders to go to Key West and of his first meeting with Sampson. Detailing their conversation he said it was the belief of both Admiral Sampson and himself that the Spanish fleet was at Cienfuegos. He then told of his parting with Sampson for his post off Cienfuegos, telling Sampson he would be loyal, absolutely and unreservedly, to the cause they were both representing. After leaving Key West he met Captain McCalla and his squadron returning to Key West, but the latter said nothing regarding the signal code arranged with Cuban insurgents. The fleet arrived at Cienfuegos at midnight May 21 and the admiral told of hearing guns which he supposed was a salute to the Spanish fleet. Regarding the blockade the admiral said the vessels remained about three miles off the harbor in day time and closer to shore at night. He denied firmly the testimony of Lieutenant Wood that he (Schley) spoke disrespectfully of Sampson. On the arrival of Captain McCalla on May 24 communication was had with the insurgents and it was learned that the Spanish fleet was not in the harbor. The flying squadron then left for Santiago, reaching there on the afternoon of May 26. Admiral Schley then related the meeting with Captain Sigsbee, who told him that the Spaniards were certainly not at Santiago. Referring to the retrograde movement, he had, he said, found it impossible to coal at sea. The admiral maintained that there was no disobedience of orders in his act, even if he had originally intended to go to Key West, as circumstances changed and he again turned towards Santiago. The court then adjourned for the day.

In the court of inquiry Friday Admiral Schley was on the stand nearly the entire day and had not completed his testimony when the court adjourned until Monday. In beginning his testimony he referred briefly to the retrograde movement to Key West for coal and said he did not consider it a disobedience of orders. The most of the day was occupied in a description of the battle of July 3. Admiral Schley told the story of this historical occurrence in plain words and in unaffected style, but the narrative was straightforward and to the point, indicating close familiarity with all the phases of that event. He said that the Brooklyn had for a time sustained the fire of all four of the Spanish ships and also the fire of the Spanish land batteries. Explaining the historical turn of his own flagship, the Brooklyn, he said she had not approached to within less than 600 yards of the Texas, and that he never had considered that vessel in the least danger. He also stated, in response to an interrogation from Mr. Rayner, that he had never during the battle engaged in any colloquy with Lieutenant Hodgson, and he had not used the expression attributed to him by Hodgson. This refers to the alleged colloquy in which the admiral is charged with having said, "Damn the Texas." Admiral Schley also gave the details of the reconnoissance of May 31, when the Spanish ship Cristobal Colon was bombarded. In this connection he denied the statements attributed to him by Commander Potts of the battleship Massachusetts.

AUDITOR'S NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF PETITION.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake. } ss.

Whereas, the petition of S. A. Swanson and others, bearing date the 4th day of October, 1901, and on file in my office, praying for the establishment of a public ditch along the route proposed therein, has been filed in my office.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the said board of County Commissioners, at their special session to be held at the auditor's office in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county, on the 25th day of November, 1901, at 1 o'clock p. m.

A true copy of said petition is as follows, to-wit:

To the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for the expense of, the construction of the ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a ditch along the following described route in the towns of Poplar River and Terrebonne in the said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows:

Commencing at a point at or near the southeast corner of southeast quarter of section thirty-two (32) township one hundred fifty (150) of range forty-two (42) thence running along the following route:

In a northerly and westerly direction over and across the east half of section 32 aforesaid and the northeast corner of NW¼ said Sec. 32 thence in a like direction over SW¼ Sec. 29, SE¼ Sec. 30 and SW¼ 30, to south line of NW¼ 30, thence following the south line of said NW¼ 30, to the southwest corner of NW¼ 30, thence running north on the line between Township 150 Range 42 and Twp. 150 Range 43 along west line of sections 30 and 19, 150, 42 to a point where said course intersects with a large cooley or ravine and terminating in said cooley or ravine as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred and Fifty-eight (258) of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1901, and subsequent amendments thereto.

THE LADY OF LYNN

By SIR WALTER BESANT

Copyright, 1900, by Sir Walter Besant

CHAPTER I.

THE HEIRESS AND THE POET.

THE happiest day of my life up to that time, because I should be the basest and the most ungrateful of men were I not to confess that I have since enjoyed many days far excelling in happiness that day, was the 20th day of June in the year of grace 1747.

For on that day, being my nineteenth birthday, I was promoted, though so young, to be mate or chief officer on board my ship, the Lady of Lynn, Captain Jaggard, then engaged in the Lisbon trade.

I will tell you presently how I was so fortunate as to be apprenticed to so fine a craft as the Lady of Lynn. Just now it is enough to set down that she was the finest vessel in the little fleet of ships belonging to my young mistress, Molly Miller, ward of Captain Crowle. There were eight ships, all her own—the Lady of Lynn, the ship in which I served my apprenticeship; the Jolly Miller, named after her father; the Lovely Molly, after herself; the Joseph and Jennifer, after her parents; the Pride of Lynn, the Beauty of Lynn, the Glory of Lynn and the Honor of Lynn—all of which you may take if you like as named after their owner. Molly owned them all.

I have to tell you in this place why one day in especial must ever be remembered by me as the most surprising and the happiest that I had ever known.

I was standing on the quarter deck on duty when the boy came up the companion, saying that the captain wanted to speak to me. So I followed, little thinking of what he had to say, expecting no more than some question about log or cargo, such as the skipper is always putting to his officers.

In the captain's cabin, however, I found sitting at the table not only Captain Jaggard himself, but my old friend and patron, Captain Crowle. His jolly face was full of satisfaction and good humor, so that it gave one pleasure only to look at him. But he sat upright and assumed the air of dignity which spoke of the quarter deck. A man who has walked that part of the ship in command doth never lose the look of authority.

"John Pentecrosse," he began, "I have sent for you in order to inform you that on the recommendation of Captain Jaggard here"—Captain Jaggard gravely inclined his head in acquiescence—"and with the consent of Miss Molly Miller, sole proprietor of this good ship, the Lady of Lynn, I have promoted you to the rank of chief officer."

"Sir!" I cried, overwhelmed, for indeed I had no reason to expect this promotion for another two or three years. "What can I say?"

"We don't want you to say anything, Jack, my lad." The captain came down from the quarter deck and became my old friend again. "Give me your hand. You're young, but there's never a better sailor afloat, is there, Captain Jaggard?"

"None, Captain Crowle; none for his years."

"For his years naturally. He's salt through and through, isn't he, Captain Jaggard?"

"And through, Captain Crowle." My skipper was a man of grave aspect and few words.

"Well, then, let us drink the lad's health." And upon that the cabin boy, who needed no further order, dived into the locker, produced a bottle, opened it and placed three glasses.

"No better Lisbon," said Captain Jaggard, pouring it out. "Goes even to the table of the king, God bless him!"

"Now, gentlemen"—Captain Crowle pushed a glass to me—"first a glass to Miss Molly, my little maid. Jack, you've been her playfellow, and you're now her servant."

"I could ask nothing better, sir."

"I know—a good and zealous servant. Drink it off, a full glass, running over, to Molly Miller."

We obeyed, nothing loath.

"And now, Captain Jaggard, here's the health of your new mate, long to serve under you, your right hand, your eyes open when you are off the deck, your sailing master, the keeper of your log. Jack Pentecrosse, I drink to your good luck."

That was the event which made this day the happiest in my life. Another event of which I thought little at the time was more important still in the after consequences. This was the humiliation of Samuel Semple.

In the evening as soon as I could get ashore I repaired, as in duty bound, to pay my respects to my young mistress. She was sitting in the summer house with some needlework. Beside her sat her good old black woman, Nigra.

"Jack!" She dropped her work and jumped up to meet me. "I thought you would come this evening. Oh, are you pleased?"

"You knew I should come, Molly. Why, have I not to thank you for my promotion?"

She gave me her hand with her sweet frankness and her smiling face.

"I would make you captain, Jack, but my guardian will not hear of it. All in good time, though. I am only waiting. I am proud of you, Jack, because everybody speaks so well of you. I met your father this morning and gave him the good news to rejoice his good old heart. He was too proud to confess his joy. But we know him, don't we, Jack? Well, I confess I shall not be happy till you are Captain Pentecrosse, with a share in every cargo."

"Nay, Molly, the ship is yours, and I am but your servant, though a proud and joyful servant."

And so we sat and talked, while Nigra went on with her work, sitting at the feet of her mistress, whom she watched all the time as a dog keeps one eye always upon his master.

At this time my mistress was 16, a time when many girls are already married. But she was still a child, or a young girl at heart, being one of those who, like a fine Orleans plum, ripen slowly and are all the better for the time they take. In person, if I may speak of what should be sacred, she was finely made, somewhat taller than the average, her hair of that fair color which is the chief glory of the English maiden. If a Lisbon girl could show that fair hair, with those blue eyes and that soft cheek touched with ruddy hue and the velvet bloom of the September peach, she would draw after her the whole town, with the king and his court and even the grand inquisitor and his accursed crew of torturers.

She was of a truly affectionate disposition, her mind being as lovely as her face. In manners she was easy and compliant, in discourse sometimes grave and sometimes merry. As for her great possessions, she was so simple in her tastes and habits, being in all respects like the daughter of a plain merchantman's skipper, that she understood little or nothing of what these possessions meant or what they might bestow upon her.

No one, however, must believe that there was any thought or discourse concerning love between us. I had been her companion and playfellow. I knew her very mind and could tell at any time of what she was thinking. Sometimes her thoughts were of high and serious things. Mostly they were of things simple, such as the prospects of the last brew or the success of the latest cordial. Of suitors she had none, although she was now, as I said, 16 years of age. There were no suitors. I very well know why, because, perhaps for friendly reasons, Captain Crowle had told me something of his ambition for his ward. She was too rich and too good for the young men of Lynn. What would any of them do with such an heiress? She was too rich and too good even for the gentlefolk of the county, a hearty, rough, good natured people who hunted and shot and feasted and drank. What would they do with an heiress of wealth beyond their highest hopes had they any knowledge of her wealth? But I believe that they had none. No one knew how rich she was except the captain. The girl was intended by her guardian for some great man. He knew not as yet how he should find this great man, but he knew that there were very few, even of the noble lords in the house of peers, whose fortune or whose income would compare with that of his ward—his little maid. And I, who knew this ambition, knew also that I was trusted not to betray confidence nor to disturb the girl's mind by any talk of love. Now, the mind of a young maid piously disposed is like the surface of a calm sea, which looks up to the sky and reflects the blue of heaven, undisturbed till Dan Cupid comes along and agitates the calm with the reflection of some shepherd swain and ripples the surface with new thoughts which are allowed by heaven, but belong not to any of its many mansions.

Therefore we talked of everything except love.

The sun went down as we sat talking. The sun went down, and the soft twilight of June, the month which most I love because there is no darkness and a man on watch can discern ahead breakers and ships as well as the vast circle of the rolling sea. And then Nigra gathered her work together and arose.

"Come to supper, honey," she said. "Come, Massa Jack," and she led the way.

Supper over, the captain, instead of turning round his chair to the fireplace, filling his pipe and calling for another glass of October, as we expected, pushed back his chair and rose with dignity.

"Jennifer," he addressed Molly's mother, "the persuader."

Jennifer was her Christian name. She got up and drew from the corner by the cupboard a stout crab tree cudgel, twisted and gnarled like the old tree from which it came. "Be not revengeful, John," she said.

"No, no. I am a justice of the peace. I am captain on my own quarter deck. Punishment I shall bestow, not revenge."

"Well, John, but he is young, and you are old."

Captain Crowle laughed. "Young, is he? And I am old, am I? We shall see."

Some one was going to be tried, judged, found guilty, sentenced and to receive his sentence at once. The thing was not unusual in the house of a justice of the peace.

"Come with me, Jack. It shall not be said that I inflicted this punishment without a witness. All the world shall know about it, if so be the culprit desires. Come with me. Jennifer, keep within, and if you hear groans praise the Lord for the correction of a sinner."

Greatly marveling, I followed the captain as he marched out of the parlor. Arrived at the garden, he looked around. "So," he said, "he has not yet come. Perhaps it is light enough for you to read some of his pernicious stuff." With that he put his hand into his pocket and drew forth a paper. "Read that, Jack. I say, read it."

I obeyed. The twilight gave sufficient light for reading the manuscript. Besides, the writing was large and in bold characters. "Why," I said, "I know this writing. It is Sam Semple's."

"Very good. Go on, therefore"—

At the very first words I understood what had already happened and guessed pretty well what was going to happen.

> "Molly divine! Thy heavenly charms prevail,
> As when the sun doth rise stars fade and pale."

"No need for much more of the rubbish, Jack. Read the last of it. I read it all, and it made me sick."

> "So, matchless maid, thy silence grants consent.
> See, at thy feet, the poet's knee is bent
> When evening roses scatter fragrance faint
> And the sad Philomel renews his plaint."

"Did ever man hear such stuff, Jack? Go on."

> "Within this bow'r, afar from sight of men,
> Tomorrow, Wednesday, at the hour of ten,
> That bow'r, a shrine of love and temple fair,
> I will await thee—Samuel Semple—there."

"What do you think of that, Jack? Samuel Semple, the ragged, skulking, sniveling, impudent son of a thieving exciseman! A very fine lover for my little maid! Ha, will he? Will he?" The captain grasped his cudgel with resolution.

"Sir!" I said, with submission. "What did Molly say to this precious epistle?"

"Molly? Dost think that I would let the little maid see such ranting stuff? Not so. The black woman brought the precious letters to me. There are three of them. Wait, Jack. Thou shalt see. Hush! I hear his step. Let us get into the summer house and lie snug to see what happens."

We stepped into the summer house, now pretty dark, and waited expectant.

Like the captain, I was filled with amazement that Samuel, whom I knew well, who was my schoolfellow, should presume to lift his eyes so high. Alas! There is no bound or limit, I am assured, to the presumption of such as this stringer of foolish rhymes. Yet I felt some compunction for him because he would most assuredly receive a basting such as would cure him effectually of the passion called love, so far as this object was concerned.

Presently we heard footsteps crunching the gravel. "Snug, my lad. Lie snug," whispered the captain. We heard the steps making their way along the path between the gooseberry and currant bushes. Then they came out upon the grass lawn before the summer house. "The grass is as big as a quarter deck, Jack," said the captain. "It will serve for the basting of a measly clerk. I've knocked down many a mutinous dog in the quarter deck."

The poet came to the summer house and stood outside, irresolute. He could not see the two occupants. He hemmed twice aloud. There was no reply. "Matchless Molly!" he whispered. "Divine maid! I am here at thy feet. Nymph of the azure sea, I am here."

"The devil you are!" cried the captain, stepping out. "Why, here is a precious villain for you! Jack, cut him off in the rear if he tries to get away. So—so, my young quill driver, you would poach on the preserves of your betters, would you? Would you? Would you?" At each repetition he banged the wooden post of the summer house with his cudgel.

The poet made no reply, but he looked to right and to left and behind him for a way of escape, but found none, for I was ready to bar his flight, wherefore his shoulders became rounded and his head hung down and his knees trembled. Samuel Semple was caught in a trap. Some young fellows would have made a fight of it, but not Samuel. All he thought about was submission and nonresistance, which might provoke pity.

"Three times, jackanapes, hast thou presumed to send stuff to my ward. Here they are." He took from me the last sheet of doggerel verse and drew from his pocket two more. "Here they are—one, two, three—all addressed to the matchless Molly. Why, thou impudent villain, what devil prompted thee to call her matchless Molly? Matchless to such as you! Take that, sirrah, and that!" They were laid on with a will. The poet groaned, but made no reply, again looking vainly to right and left for some way of escape.

The basting which followed was really worthy of the days when Captain

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MAN.

Is the leavening influence of the English language, combined with the distance-destroying cable and telegraph systems and other means of rapid communication and transit augmenting international sympathy, or is it the advancing civilization which has lifted the human race out of one rut after another, until the halo 'round the life of such a man as McKinly, illumining a nation, glints o'er space, shedding a world-wide lustre, and in its dimming, makes a world wide gloom?

With the death of the late President the clouds of our grief were black and lowering, and yet, through them as they ominously lolled over the storm-swept nation, came the beacon light of sympathy as flashed by the cable from all peoples of the earth. And no evidences of this sympathy could be more striking than that, heretofore unheralded, evidences of which in local papers are at this late date being brought through the mails from far off lands.

When our own nation united in a memorial service, a great people, with hearts beating in unison to the sad dirge-music at Canton, we realized the grandeur of it; but is there not something that appeals still more strongly to our appreciaation in the disinterested, unselfish, spontaneous essence of kindness that prompted in New Zealand "the adjournment of both houses of parliament, both on the day that the news was received and on the day of the funeral, the flying of flags at half mast, the postnonment of a ball which was to have been given at the Governor's residence, the firing of a salute of fifty-eight guns by the Piyitea Battery, the closing of all the government buildings for one hour on the day of the funeral, in fact almost every testimonial of sorrow that could have been shown by an American city?" And again at Buluwayo, the capital of Rhodesia, an open air memorial service attended by over one thousand persons at which the Star Spangled Banner. Nearer my God, to Thée, etc., were sung.

THE INADEQUATE EXPIATION.

Leon F. Czolgosz is no more. His miserable life went out Tuesday morning in Auburn prison as a penalty for the assassination of the late president. What a poor vindication, and the two lives can not even be weighed in the same scale, so great and grand the one, so hateful, so small the other. The very earth that contains the remains of the immortal McKinley will shrink from the contamination of the ashes of the inhuman wretch who has robbed a nation and chastized the human race.

The determination of the prison authorities to cremate his body, together with all his clothing and every other article that might be seized by the morbid and the anarchistic class for relics, is worthy of commendation. Now if the press of the country would act as wisely, refraining from all display and from the use of his portrait, some of their past transgressions and thoughtlessness in dealing with the subject will be forgiven. The manner in which pages containing the likeness of the great and good McKinley and that of his pure and noble wife were desecrated with the portrait of the assassin, given equal prominence, will always cause a feeling of resentment in the minds of thoughtful citizens. Perhaps the very fact that his name and picture would be heralded world-wide, alongside that of the martyred president, might have been an inspiration to the weak-minded wretch, with an imagination distorted and incapable of realizing the difference between world-wide disgrace and fame. Perhaps in his delusions, knowing that his name would go down in history, that his portrait would adorn the same pages as that of the beloved martyr, and that his notoriety would be instantaneous and world-wide, he figured this a recompense for the forfeiture of his own miserable, unnoted existence which he knew would be the penalty. Were it possible to remove from all publications the names of the three assassins, and the portraits; and were it known that never in the future would the pages of our history or our press be blackened with the likeness and exploitation of another assassin, half the temptation for the commission of such crimes would be removed.

WHEELOCK OUGHT TO KNOW.

Swift County Monitor: Congressman Eddy asserted some time ago that he would carry the primaries by a plurality of at least one thousand votes. Mr. Eddy made the mistake of publishing his prediction first. The head statistician for Senátor Young has just come out with figures that make Mr. Eddy look like a counterfeit two-cent piece.

Wheelock's Weekly. Don't fool yourself. We've had Mr. Eddy in this district several years, and have learned something of his ability as a "rastler" when he has on his fighting face. In his tussles with his own party opponents he has always come out looking more like a new dime than a counterfeit 2c piece.

The Crookston Times asks "why doesn't the Republican country press of tnis state have some originality, some mind of its own?" The truth is, it has. And that is one of the bulwraks of the Republican party in Minnesota. Examples are many. They are lying around loose in the editorial columns of the Republican weeklies of the state. Look at the board of control contention. Right or wrong, the Rosseveltian carelessness of personal consequences with which the board and its policy is being shredded by some of the Republican editors is refreshing in the extreme. Then there is the press bulletin matter. The Republican editors insist on substituting their own ideas for the creed that bulletin would have them disseminate—in marked contrast, indeed, to the manner in which Geo. Canfield's encyclicals were adopted.

A New Lumber Yard.

An Opportunity To SAVE!

Having purchased the entire output of the Red Lake Falls Lumber Company's plant, it is our intention to put this lumber on the market and sell to the consumer at wholesale prices.

It does not matter how large or how small your lumber bill is, you get the benefit of our coming, which means a big reduction from prices the local yards have been charging you.

Drink Seaside Hot Clam Bouillion at Allard's.

Hon. Ira B. Mills registered in from Moorhead yesterday.

J. B. Armstrong took the Great Northern Saturday for St. Paul.

Ed. L. Healy drove to Thief River Falls Saturday to nail a land deal.

Mrs. Francis Grenier, one of the most popular members of St. Joseph's parish, is seriously ill.

Sam Hunt returned Friday via Duluth and the lakes from the East, where he spent a three months' vacation.

Osmund K. Runtson, of Hantsville, Polk county, has harvested 400 bushels of ripe corn from an acre and a half.

J. A. Allard's up-to-date confectionery meets the season half way. Fine cold weather drinks and all seasonable goods.

Progress on the Terrebonne ditch has been slow. Work was started last spring and four miles yet remain to be done.

Miss Alice Newton went to Fertile Saturday to visit with Miss Eva LaDue. She returned on Monday morning's passenger.

Ab. Fletcher, Ralph Wyer and Harry Healy heard about the good hunting at Goose Lake and went up yesterday for a few geese.

Will Knight and Mose Belair went to Goose Lake Friday and returned Sunday with nine geese. This is the best haul of the season.

Otto Ittner, the Ives secton foreman, has been promoted, and has succeeded Chas. Sundstrom as Great Northern section foreman here.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES do not spot, streak or give your goods an unevenly dyed appearance. Sold W. A. Schreiter, 10c. per package.

M. A. Hatten, Red Lake county's first treasurer, will shortly leave for a tour of the West, with a view to locating if the climate and other conditions suit.

Olson Kuue, who lines up with the best of 'em in Rocksbury, one of the county's best and most creditable townships, was a business visitor to the city Tuesday.

If the boy who picked up the fur robe on Main street Saturday evening last will return the same to the post-office he will receive reward. Mrs. E. F. Marshall.

J. J. Donahue, D. Stoeeouse and J. L. Bush, three of the leading ones out Equality way, were with us Sunday. We understand they came to attend church.

Jerry Shagnon had the misfortune to dislocate his right shoulder blade Monday afternoon. While attempting to get into a wagon on Fred Schmitz's hill he slipped and fell against a wheel. Dr. Lemieux was called.

G. Kolberg, of Emardville, who sustained a stroke of paralysis, has decided to return to his old home at Norway, and to-day purchased a steamship ticket from Banker Sortedahl. He is a half brother of Lorenz Lee.

Joe Baril has sold eighty acres of his Wyandotte farm. He has 160 acres left and was out there last week trying his hand at fence-building. Joe's crop was fair this year and he is, no doubt, the makings of a No. 1 farmer.

H. H. Zaiser is building a residence on his lots picturesquely located at the corner of Broadway and 8th st. Helmuth says it's for rent, but the young ladies of the city will breathe easier when the lease is signed.

The Gentilly festival and housewarming Sunday was attended by many from Red Lake Falls. Miss Agnes Patnode won the young lady's contest, receiving a gold watch. She brought in $174.00, while her competitor, Miss Kittie Lally, raised $97.00.

Tom Smythe, who secured the contract for the Red Lake Falls and Lake Pleasant ditch, was one of the last ditch contractors to begin work. He started on Tuesday with eighteen teams. Demarais Bros. have taken a subcontract for 1½ mile.

A. O. Watsend, of Grit, who has as fine a farm as is to be seen in that section of Red Lake county, made The Gazette a pleasant call Saturday. Mr. Watsend is an interesting bachelor, and now that he has proved up on his homestead, we do not long expect to see him in this class.

Halloween will be celebrated to-night. The spirit of mischief is given a license to roam at will on this occasion and the average citizen in this home of the free and land of the brave is satisfied if no damage is inflicted on his belongings. One good effect is from the writing on the store and office windows, which occasions a general window washing before the freeze up.

J. B. Armstrong returned from St. Paul to-day.

Mrs. Geo. Ralph arrived in the city from Crookston to day.

Miss Augustn Wantzel is visiting with her sister Mrs. H. F. Krueger.

F. B. Newton made a business trip to Crookston Friday returning Saturday.

J. E. Montague of Crookston registered at the Grand View hotel yesterday.

Ole Tiegen and F. H. Brown were Crookstonites transacting business here Friday.

Mrs. Adelard Boileau died Sunday at Gentilly, of consumption, aged thirty-four years.

Miss Burns, of Thief River Falls, visited with Mrs. J. P. Harran the first of the week.

W. T. Hoover, assistant at the Bank of Red Lake Falls, went to Devils Lake Friday for a three weeks' visit.

S. A. Swanson returned to-day from St. Paul where he was making dates with a party of land seekers.

Mrs. Roosevelt's favorite—Lightner's perfumes. You will use no other if you try them, at Schreiter's drug store.

C. J. Larson, of Black River, is in the city enroute to St. Peter where he will attend Gustavus Adolphus college.

G. W. Blood, formerly of Grand Forks, now located in Wisconsin, is contemplating putting in a steam laundry here.

F. C. Ward has purchased an interest in the Ideal Steam Laundry, a $10,000 stock concern of St. Paul, and left Monday for that city.

James McIntyre was in the city yesterday from Minnapolis visiting Wm. A. McIntyre, the two being college friends. They are not related.

Mrs. H. Sanderson, who has been a guest of her daughter, Mrs. S. M. Sivertson, returned to Atwater yesterday. Mr. Sivertsen accompanied her.

H. T. McAnulty, who has been attending his sick father at Tilden, was in the city yesterday on his way to resume his work as teacher in the Wylie school.

F. F. Freund, the hustling painter, has received the contract for painting the Minneapolis Brewing Company's storage house in this city and at St. Hilaire.

Ernest Buse, Jr. who has been with the threshers in North Dakota, returned Monday. He has accepted a position with M. O. Sortedahl in the Bank of Red Lake Falls.

Nick Helm and Arthur Mercier returned to-day from Fertile, where they did the painting on the brick block constructed there this summer by Contractor L. Johnson.

Dr. I. Lemieux was taken ill Tuesday night with inflammation of the bowels, and was very sick, but at the present writing is resting well and expects to be about again in a few days.

Executive Agent Fullerton of the state game and fish commission will not grant the commissioners of Lincoln Park, Chicago, a license to go to Bemidji to capture two moose calves.

Come in and look over our stock of muffs, collarettes, boas, etc., before buying. We can save you money.

Garceau Bros.

There is no trick in dyeing. You can do it just as well as any one if you use PUTNAM FADELESS DYES. Boiling the goods for half an hour is all there is to it. Sold by W. A. Schreiter, 10c. per package.

Chas. Sundstrom has been offered a choice of some very desirable positions on the Great Northern out west, and may decide to go to Montana. Mr. Sundstrom is one of Jim Hill's most trustworthy boys.

The new N. P. daily except Sunday train service is proving popular. The train arrives via Fertile at 8:45 a. m., going through to Grand Forks. Returning, it gets here at 5:30 and pulls out at 5:50 for Fertile, making connections with the train for St. Paul.

Banker Sortedahl yesterday entertained Prof. A. G. Bjorneby, formerly of St. Olaf college, Northfield, more recently principal of Mt. Horeb Academy, one of the standard institutions of learning, and George Bjorneby, of Grafton. The professor is an old college chum of Mr. Sortedahl, and is at present enjoying a vacation.

Lydick & Coulthurst, the Cass Lake loggers, are making preparations to do an immense amount of logging in Beltrami county this winter. They have taken a contract to get out several million feet of logs for the Thief River Lumber Co. They will operate three camps south of Red Lake, in the neighborhood of Nebish.

J. L. Bush was before Clerk of Court Perrault on Monday and proved up on a quarter section of land in Equality, which he intends to hold indefinitely, pending the inevitable rise in farm land values out in that garden spot of Red Lake county. Mr. Bush was for several years Great Northern station agent at Fosston. He now has a like position at Browning, Mont.

J. W. Bourdon's popular feed store is now on the telephone list.

Theo. LaBissoniere has leased the lower floor of the Freund Third st. flat.

Chas. Ackerlund, of Crookston, has accepted a position at the Bank of Red Lake Falls.

Did you come in on the home stretch with the last half of your 1900 real-estate taxes?

Albert Brunelle and Miss Ded Johnson drove to St. Hilaire Sunday where they visited friends.

Dan Linaihan, who is engaged in ditch work near St. Hilaire, came down on business yesterday.

Garceau Bros.

The Crookston band gross receipts for the past six months were $1,135.41, and there is a balance of $5.80 in the treasury.

Adelard Lemieux took the Great Northern Friday for McIntosh, where he is clerking in Robt. Southmayd's store.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Crompe were called to Terrebonne Sunday by the serious illness of the former's sister Mrs. Surprenaut.

Perl W. Wabey and M. K. Wall, who had business before the court, came from Thief River Falls on the Cannon Ball Monday.

Conductor Steve Withey was in charge of the Cannon Ball Saturday in the absence of Conductor Lockman who was over to his goat farm near Bemidji.

George A. Ralph and Mrs. H. E. Nesne drove up from Crookston Monday to spend the day with their mother, whose condition recently changed for the worse.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Sivigney are making arrangements for a trip to Montreal and Quebec. Mr. Sivigney has brothers and sisters there whom he has not seen for thirty-three years.

The Duluth elevator company has closed its Fisher elevator. Fisher is the only town in the Red River Valley losing ground but its retrocession seems to steadily continue.

J. F. Mathews, who buys wheat and gives right grades at the Dorothy elevator, besides conducting a farm, store and post-office, found time to drop in on his Red Lake Falls friends Friday.

A new town is being plated on section 25, Moose township in Beltrami county, by county Surveyor Stoner. J. W. White and H. McCleran own the land. The town will be eight miles from Wheelock on the Walker Logging road.

Messrs. Krueger and Hayton, of the Grand View hotel, are perhaps the busiest men in the city. The way they have handled their large patronage is eminently to their credit, and they have hosts of friends among hotel faring people.

Barney A. Wall, one of the best known settlers of Equality township, was in the city Saturday, proving up on his homestead. He has lived there five years and has not wasted much time, having so improved his farm that he refuses a standing offer of $1800 for the place. He now has 25 head of stock and intends to push that branch.

County Surveyor P. O. Hagglund was in town Tuesday and told of his loss in the T. M. Roberts bust up. Mr. Hagglund had just shipped a carload of wheat to Roberts before the failure and had not received his pay when the crash came. He is still out the full amount. The moral is plain—give these mail order fakirs the go by and do business with the home dealers.

Peter Huseby of Emardville was in the city Saturday making strenuous objections to the proposed Garnes Emardville ditch, which runs through the swamp that takes up a large portion of both townships. Mr. Huseby thinks the expense of making a ditch adequate to drain this swamp into the Clearwater river will be too heavy a burden on the taxpayers, and advocates draining it into the Lost river by a north and south ditch. While The Gazette does not agree with Mr. Huseby in this matter, we are willing to express his views as requested.

The second hay-rack party of the season was enjoyed by a jolly crowd of our young society people Thursday night. The destination was the farm home of John Dwyer, two miles north of the city, and the party was planned as a surprise to Miss Birdie Dwyer, who received the self-invited guests with that spontaneous hospitality for which she is famed. Pom pom pull away, drop the handkerchief, pussy wants a corner and other old time games were played, while the more dexterous of the guests enjoyed the exhilarating pastime of sliding down hay-stacks, barn roofs, etc. No doubt the lunch as served by the hostess was the red letter event of the evening. Those comprising the party were: Misses Lillie and Alice Buse, Lorena Schreiter, Bessie Hunt, Mabel Owen, Laura Hollingshead, Mabel Porter and Delia Toupin; Messrs. Ralph Wyer, Thos. Germo, J. J. Fadden, Dr. Argue, Henry Anderson, Geo. Hennings, August Mucke and Lee Healy.

With the Churches.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

A new carpet has been provided for the altar steps in St. Marys church.

For the second time the mission at St. Mary's church has been postponed.

Oct. 28 is the day of St. Simon and St. Jude, apostles, who are generally represented together in pictures—Simon with a saw in his hand, emblematical of the death he underwent, being sawn asunder: and Jude with a carpenter's square, or with a boat.

The Prohibition committee of the state of Minnesota have arranged for a series of meetings throughout the state. Rev. Monroe is making a tour under these auspices and will speak in the Presbyterian church on Nov. 7th and 8th.

Nov. 1 is "All Saints' Day," when the Catholic church honors all the saints not otherwise commemorated, the reason given being "because we cannot particularly commorate every one of those saints in whom God's graces have been eminent." Services will be held at both Catholic churches here the same as on Sundays.

Nov. 2 is "All Souls' Day" in the Catholic church, when they commemorate the faithful departed this life, and special prayer is made for those souls which are undergoing, in an intermediate state, a purgatorial cleansing from sin by means of punishment. In many parishes it is the custom on this day to decorate the graves. Requiem masses will be sung at St. Joseph's and St. Mary's churches here.

RETURNS IN A NEW ROLE.

Rev. Wm. E. Monroe, prohibition evangelist, will deliver an address at the Presbyterian church next Thursday and Friday evenings, Nov. 7 and 8.

Mr. Monroe was for several years a resident of Red Lake Falls. He is a son of Mrs. Jos. Staurt, and left here several years ago to study for the ministry. At that time Mr. Monroe was developing strong elecutionary powers, and his many friends here will turn out en masse next Thursday and Friday confident that his reputation as a forceful speaker is well merited. Admission will be free.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

Rev. P. Ansgar, O. S. B. returned Thursday from Moorhead, where he attended the silver anniversary celebration of Rev. P. Augustine, O. S. B. pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church of Moorhead. Mass was read by the good priest who was on this day celebrating the 25th year of his priesthood. Special music with orchestra accompaniment had been prepared by the choir, and the sermon was delivered by Rt. Rev. Bishop Shanley, of North Dakota. In the evening a reception was held, participated in by the people of Moorhead, regardless of denomination, who hold Father Augustine in high esteem. Among the clergymen in attendance was Rt. Rev. Peter Engel, cousin of the celebrant, abbott of St. John's Seminary.

In Justice Court.

Oliver Provost was arrested last night on complaint of Francis Grenier, charged with running a blind pig at Ridge station. Provost was brought before Judge Toupin, plead guilty and fined $25 and costs, which he paid.

On advice of Judge Taylor, the litigants in the case of Skala vs. Schmidt and Gerke got together. Each party pays his own costs and the matter of damages will be arbitrated.

Jerry Shagnon vs. Bruno Toutant, ejectment proceedings by owner against leasee who refused to budge from the leasor's farm, was decided by Judge Taylor Monday in favor of plaintiff. The costs are charged up to defendant.

Patrice Lemay vs. R. J. McKercher, both of St. Hilaire, will have it out in Judge Toupin's court to-morrow. Lemay claims defendant owes him $61.94, while McKercher says he owes only $12.29.

L. C. Simons vs. Louis Alstadt. Simons demands possession of SW¼ 28-151-41 which Alstadt refuses. This will be tried before Judge Toupin Nov. 6.

J. W. Bourdon vs. Gottlieb Gerlach. Case will be called to-morrow at 10.

Fraternal Doings.

SOCIAL ITEMS, GOOD OF THE ORDER AND OTHER GOSSIP OF INTEREST.

The Modern Woodmen record for September was 7,401 new members gained.

It is said that the Modern Samaritans will shortly institute a lodge in this city.

The Royal Neighbor, formerly printed by Park & Chubbie, Beloit, Kan., is now issued from the State Journal office, at Lincoln, Neb. It has always been a well printed paper.

The Masons are about ready to organize a lodge in this city. It has been a matter of wonderment that this move was not made before. Red Lake Falls can never lay claim to being strictly up-to-date until it has a Masonic lodge in flourishing condition.

From a membership of twenty-five, to a membership of seventy is the record of the M. B. A. within the past year and new applications are acted upon at almost every meeting. Business of vital importance to the lodge is to be brought before the meeting on Monday evening Nov. 4th, and it is the request of the President that every member make a special effort to be present on that evening.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well-known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drugs and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Stepped Into Live Coals.

"When a child I burned my foot frightfully," writes W. H. Eads, of Jonesville, Va., "which caused horrible leg sores for 30 years, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured me after everything else failed." SENTENCED TO HANG

ANDREW TAPPER CONVICTED OF THE MURDER OF MISS ROSA MIXA.

Remains of Senator Davis Interred at Washington—Game and Fish Commission Investigating Logging Camps—Westinghouse Company Buys Little Falls Waterpower—Bank of Fulda Burglarized—General News of the State.

Chaska, Minn., Oct. 25.—Andrew Tapper, the convicted murderer of Rosa Mixa, was sentenced by Judge Cadwell to be hanged by the neck until dead. The courtroom was filled with people and there was no cooler person present than Tapper himself.

When asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced Tapper kept silent and without show of malice or bravado listened to the words which ordered him to the gallows. He was cool and collected and went back to his cell in the county jail without a word and as if the impressive scene through which he had just passed was of no personal interest to him. It is almost impossible to believe that he realizes his situation.

The trial came to a close when the jury brought in a verdict of guilty in the first degree, after being out less than one hour.

The facts brought out by the testimony were that the girl was murdered at 5 o'clock a. m., June 3, 1901, her throat being cut. Several wounds were also found on her legs and arms, showing that a terrible struggle had ensued before Tapper succeeded in overpowering her.

The prisoner stood while the verdict was read, but did not seem in the least to realize that it meant death to him.

Upon Governor Van Sant will devolve the unpleasant duty of fixing the date of execution. There may be appeals for clemency, but as Tapper's parents are both dead and his crime was so ferocious and unprovoked that the punishment pronounced by the court is believed here to be none too severe, it seems doubtful if much of an effort will be made in his behalf.

AT FINAL REST.

Washington, Oct. 24.—The remains of the late Senator Cushman K. Davis of Minnesota arrived here during the day and were interred quietly at the Arlington national cemetery in a lot specially assigned for the purpose by the acting secretary of war. Mrs. Davis accompanied the remains from St. Paul, where they had been kept in a vault of the Oakland cemetery. The funeral party was met at the Baltimore and Ohio station by Sergeant-at-Arms Ramsdell and representatives of the quartermaster's department, who superintended the removal of the casket to Arlington. Senator Davis was a first lieutenant in the volunteer army during the Civil war and it was that fact that gave him the right of burial in a national cemetery.

LOGGERS LIVE HIGH.

Minnesota Game and Fish Commission to Look Into the Matter.

Duluth, Oct. 22.—The logging camps of this section are again feeding their men on venison, it is freely reported from a good many directions, and deer and moose steaks are frequently found gracing the tables in the lumber camps. In one camp on the north shore it is claimed that during September the men were fed venison during every day except one for the entire month. The game and fish commission went after the loggers hard a year ago, and it will probably repeat the operation again this year. Little or no attention is paid to the game laws by people who are in the woods some distance from civilization.

BIG WATER POWER DEAL.

Little Falls, Minn., Oct. 24.—A deal has been closed by which the control of the Little Falls water power has passed to a number of capitalists representing the Westinghouse Electric company.

This means great things for this city. The new company announces its intention of commencing work next week upon the construction of an immense plant for the manufacture of machinery used by the Westinghouse company in its Western trade, and promises that its immediate investment will not be less than $500,000, while it is the intention ultimately to invest fully as much more in the consummation of plans already conceived.

BANK BURGLARIZED.

Safe Blown Open With Dynamite and Looted.

Fulda, Minn., Oct. 22.—The vault and safe of the Farmers' bank of this place was blown open with dynamite by burglars and cash and paper to the value of $5,500 stolen.

Indians Will Get Money at Once.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The Indian bureau learned that the Indians at Red Lake have been very fretty because they have not received the money for logs cut on unceded portions of the reservation and so the commissioner had the matter taken out of the regular routine of business and a warrant for $13,700 was forwarded to Captain Mercer. The Indians will receive their money immediately after the receipt of the warrant.

Northwestern Flour Output.

Minneapolis, Oct. 24.—The flour output at Minneapolis last week, according to The Northwestern Miller, was 401,590 barrels, as compared with 299,130 barrels for the corresponding week of last year. Superior and Duluth ground 46,190 barrels, an increase of 35,000 barrels. The output at Minneapolis was the largest on record, the previous high point being 387,185 barrels.

MONEY FOR INDIANS.

Goodly Sum for Those on the White Earth Reservation.

White Earth, Minn., Oct. 29.—United States Indian Agent Simon Michelet and party have left for Wild Rice river to pay the annuity payments to the Indians residing there. It is learned that the sum of $36,000 arising from the proceeds of the sale of dead-and-down timber cut on the White Earth reservation from 1897 to date is now available. The Chippewas of the Mississippi, for whom the White Earth reservation was originally established by the treaty of April 18, 1867, are the only Indians who will participate in the distribution of this fund. It is probable that this money will be paid the Indians in per capita shares some time this fall. There is still due the Indians a considerable sum arising from the sale of dead-and-down timber cut from the White Earth diminished reservation from 1889 to 1897. The segregation of this fund is yet incomplete, but it is expected that final arrangements will be completed so as to pay the Indians the amount found due them from this source early next spring.

WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS.

Minnesota Convention Concludes With Address by Mrs. Catt.

Mankato, Minn., Oct. 28.—The 24th annual session of the woman's suffrage convention closed with a brilliant address by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National Woman Suffrage association. The following resolution among others was passed:

"Resolved, That the Woman's Suffrage association of Minnesota assembled at Mankato in its 20th annual convention protests against the injustice which refuses to extend the suffrage to women and urges the legislature in its special session of 1902 to take such steps as will remove the political disabilities of the women of this state."

TO INSPECT MINES.

Japanese Experts Examine American Methods.

Duluth, Oct. 23.—K. Kimura, manager of the Yoshmnaani colliery in Japan, is here for an investigation of the iron ore mines of this country. He will also examine the methods of handling heavy freight here and at other points on the lakes, and will go to the coal mines of Pennsylvania after leaving Duluth and the mines. There have been here during the past year more than a dozen Japanese, managers of the leading mines and steel works of their country, getting pointers and information of methods of carrying on these businesses under American ideas.

CONGESTION OF FREIGHT.

Impossible for Railroads to Furnish Enough Cars.

Minneapolis, Oct. 28.—The transportation of freight is a question that is being thoroughly discussed by the business men of Minneapolis.

A congestion in this respect that has not been in evidence for years is now apparent. This is due to the vast volume of business being transacted. It is at the present time impossible for the railroads of the state to cope with the demand for cars with which to move grain, flour and lumber. Their capacity in this respect has been taxed to the utmost and today the Burlington road is 1,500 cars short and the Milwaukee 100 cars a day.

PLEADS FOR HER SON.

Alonzo J. Whiteman's Mother Appeals for Clemency for Him.

Boston, Oct. 28.—Alonzo J. Whiteman, once a state senator from Duluth, Minn., was called for sentence on conviction of larceny of $485 in the superior court during the afternoon. In the courtroom was the prisoner's aged mother, who came here from her home in Northern New York to appeal for clemency for her only son. The case went over until the first of the week.

Set Fire to the Minnesota.

Eastport, Me., Oct. 29.—The torch has been applied to the old warship Minnesota, brought here a few months ago to be broken up for the metal in her hull, and the woodwork has been almost entirely consumed. It is said that the old Tennessee will be brought here later to meet a similar fate.

Great Northern's Annual.

St. Paul, Oct. 22.—The report of the Great Northern line, just made public, shows two things: The net income of the system was about $1,500,000 less than last year and the Great Northern, in connection with the Northern Pacific, owns 96.79 of the stock of the Burlington.

FIRE AT IRON RIVER.

Twelve Million Feet of Lumber Goes Up in Smoke.

Iron River, Wis., Oct. 28.—Fire started by a spark from a burner in the lumber yard of the Alexander & Edgar Lumber company in this city at 3:30 p. m. A strong south wind was blowing and the firemen and citizens concentrated their efforts to keep the fire from spreading to the saw mill. It is estimated that 12,000,000 feet of lumber was burned. The loss is estimated at $160,000, fully covered by insurance.

THOUGHT TO BE INSANE.

Wisconsin Man Kills Four People and Himself.

Iron River, Wis., Oct. 28.—Information just brought in from Beechwood, 10 miles west of this place, states that Andrew Israelson shot his father-in-law, mother-in-law, wife, child and himself. He also burned down his home. The sheriff and prosecuting attorney have gone to the scene. It is thought Israelson was insane.

Davenport's Heavy Loss.

Davenport, Ia., Oct. 25.—The Chris Mueller Lumber company's saw mill burned during the day. Loss $110,000; insurance $40,000. This blaze makes the city's fire loss this year close to a million dollars, including two saw mills, one immense lumber yard and three sash and door factories. There is a strong belief that most of the fires were of incendiary origin.

LAMBERT

Mrs. O Tessier, of Terrebonne, was the guest of Mrs. T. Daoust last Wednesday.

Dr. Tessier, of Terrebonne, made two professional trips here last week and as many more in ten or twelve other directions.

A. Bachand will teach the winter term in District 103, the arrangements having been made this week. The term will not open for thirty days.

New buildings continually rise on farms which never have been tilled. If this influx of settlers continues, an addition will have to be platted to the town so as to enable it to hold all its people.

Terrebonne was well represented here last Sunday—by the Misses Rhyer, Lefebvre and Beaudin, with three other happy mortals, who as may be well imagined are stars of lesser magnitude.

It was said that four stores here were too many. It does not seem so, particularly on Sunday afternoons, for two or three hours, whan all the stores are crowded with patrons and sales keep the merchants and clerks busy.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. Phipps, of Poteau, Ark. "It cured me of bloody flux. I cannot speak too highly of it." This remedy always wins the good opinion, if not praise, of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects even in the most severe cases makes it a favorite everywhere. For sale by W. A. Schreiter, druggist.

A Pleasant Evening.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Schreiter on Kretzschmar av. was the scene of a brilliant social function last night when Miss Lorena entertained for Miss Mabel Porter, of Willmar.

The evening's pleasures opened with progressive cinch. Partners were found in a novel manner. Little state maps were cut into four parts and pasted on the tally cards, and the four persons holding parts of the same state map were paired. The hunt and comparisons was exceedingly interesting. Miss Mayme McNerthney won the lady's head prize, a plaque, while Dr. Argue couldn't get over his habit of carrying off the gent's head prize; this, a paper-cutter. Thos. Germo received a mouth-organ as a reminder of his deficiency or bad luck at cards during the evening. Refreshments were next served, and it is sufficient to say that this part of the evening's offering was fully up to Miss Schreiter's standard.

Tit-for-tat was then indulged in. The lady guests were instructed to write a poem on the charms of each gentleman present, and the gentlemen were premitted to air their tuneful muses as to the charms of each lady guest. These efforts were then read aloud, and the efforts may better be imagined than described.

Those present were: Misses Mabel Porter, Mabel Owen, May, Lillie and Alice Buse, Alice Newton, Bessie Hunt, Laura Hollingshead, Rachel Taylor, Lizzie Mathews, Etta Zaiser, Mayme McNerthney, Delia Toupin, Agnes Gareau and Messrs. Lee Healy, Geo. Hennings, Wm. McIntyre, Jack Parlden, Dr. Argue, Henry Anderson, Milton Converse, Helmuth Zaiser, Sam Hunt, Thos. Germo, August Mucke.

Astounding Discovery.

From Coopersville, Mich., comes word of a wonderful discovery of a pleasant tasting liquid that when used before retiring by any one troubled with a bad cough always ensure a good night's rest. "It will soon cure the cold too," writes Mrs. S. Himelburger, "for three generations of our family have used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and never found its equal for Coughs and Colds." It's an unrivaled life-saver when used for desperate lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00 at W. A. Schreiter. Trial bottles free.

A thousand things by it are done fur better than most things do one. We refer to Rocky Mountain Tea made by Madison Medicine Co. 35c. W. A. Schreiter.

Great Northern Special

A Great Northern special was in this morning with the following notables aboard:

D. Miller, second vice president; J. N. Hill, third vice president; J. M. Gruner, general superintendent, St. Paul; C. H. Jenks, Supt. Northern Division; E. A. Mills, head carpenter, Jon Laughlin, roadmaster, Grand Forks.

A Fine Red Lake County Farm.

The soil is a rich black sandy loam with a clay sub-soil, the fertile character of which is abundantly attested by the quantity and quality of the large crops including corn and tame grasses which are annually raised upon it.

Mr. Gerlach is an ardent believer in diversified farming and credits his success to the fact that he adopted it [illegible] he impoverished his land by excessive wheat raising, and as a result is annually increasing instead of decreasing its crop producing capacity.

His farm residence is a commodious nine room house arranged for comfort and convenience. Two large barns, a large granary, ample machine sheds, a comfortable hog house, and other necessary out-buildings provide accommodations for his large herds of stock of various kinds, and a wind motor furnishes the power for grinding feed for them.

Mr. Gerlach's stock consists of about 30 head of cattle of all ages, 12 horses, a nice flock of sheep and a liberal number of hogs, the raising of which constitutes an important part of his farming enterprise. Mr. Gerlach declares with emphasis that there is no part of the state better adapted to diversified farming than the Red River Valley. And truly the results secured by him in this direction would seem to justify the assertion.—Crookston Journal.

From the Roseau Times.

Felix Fournet, the old reliable wholesale liquor dealer of Crookston, has deported himself, so to speak, to the frontier. The spirit which inspired him to become one of the early pioneers of Polk county has, no doubt, again prompted him to take up life where he can be in touch with Indians and wild game. Mr. Fournet has taken a homestead in the town of Warroad, and in his primitive log hut will begin life all over again as an advance agent of civilization. He will fell the trees and subject the soil to tillage. Warroad gains a citizen, who as a French lad started at the foot of the ladder with a hod of brick in a new country and a strange land and by industry and pluck has reached a position in financial circles as high as held by any citizen in Crookston. Mr. Fournet is heartily welcomed as a resident of Roseau county and there will be others.

Gully.

From the Sunbeam.

There is some people that would ask you, to build a fence around the earth, if you had the power to make them a preasant of it. The Government makes a preasant of 160 acr's of land to a homesteader, and a good many of of them would ask to have one years tax paid in addition.

And now President Rosevelt has sturred up the hot heads of the south, by enviteing a nigger, to take dinner at the White House. Southeren people do not object to the colored man, having his dinner, but would prefer to have him eat it in a woodshed, instead of the table of the Nations leader.

Among thoes, who helped keep the wheels going this week and pay the expences of publishing a newspaper, by giving theire subscription a lift; were S. Pelka Chas. Failor P. A. Flatland and Peter Fossberg.

Death's Harvest.

Clovis, the 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B Surprenant, of Terrebonne, died Friday, after an illness of but two days with peretonitis. Clovis was the eldest son, and a boy on whom his fond parents had builded; he was universally popular, possessing traits of character that endeared him to old and young alike. The funeral took place Saturday from St. Anthony's church Terrebonne.

Mrs. Surprenant collapsed from the shock and grief of her son's sudden demise, and her life was for a time despaired of, but she has rallied and her recovery is assured.

Mrs. B. Fleury died at 2 o'clock Sunday morning of pluro-pneumonia, leaving a babe six days old, together with nine other children and a husband. Mrs. Fleury was able to sit up during the day preceding her death. She was the night of her death in care of her aged mother-in-law. The old lady went to her bedside to administer medicine at 2 o'clock and found her dead. The funeral occurred Tuesday, the remains being interred in Ridge cemetery.

News was received here Tuesday to the effect that Levi Brouillette, formerly of this city had died Monday at Cass Lake. Mr. Brouillette was an unusually stalwart and healthy man, and the news came as a great shock to his relatives and friends here.

VIC'S LETTER

OUR FAITHFUL CORRESPONDENT IS HOMEWARD BOUND.

SAILED FROM MANILA ON THE FIRST OF OCTOBER--RETURNS VIA THE SUEZ.

Calamba, Sept. 24th, 1901.
Aboard Launch bound for Manila.

To The Gazette:—

It is with pleasure that I take a few moments to drop you a few lines to let you know that we will leave here by the next transport for the U. S. We have received orders to proceed to Manila where we will go aboard the transport McClellan with the rest of the first Battalion of Engineers. We will then return to the United States by way of Suez canal, the Red Sea, etc. We sail from Manila on or about the 1st of Oct. and land in N. Y. on or about Christmas. It will thus give me a trip around the world unless something happens to keep us from going that way. We are all glad to return although several have made application to remain on the Islands, but as for myself I think that the U. S. will be big enough for me in the future. It is rumored that several of the congressmen of the U. S. who are visiting the P. I. will return on the same boat that we go in. In that case we will have a fine trip, making many stops to take in the sights. We will not be crowded as the boat will carry only the 1st Battalion of Engineers and the few cabin passengers. It will be a very sudden change for all of us, to change from a hot climate like it is here to a cold one like N. Y.

Well I think that is all for this time. I will write you a very interesting letter when I reach N. Y. describing our trip.

A Souvenir of Great Beauty.

Woodward & Company, one of the oldest and best known grain commission houses in Minneapolis and Duluth, are sending their customers one of the most attractive medallions we have ever seen. It is a profile likeness of President McKinley, made by the new chemigraph process, done in white, with dark back-ground.

We can but commend the good taste which has kept any advertising matter, even from the margin. If the service of this firm to its customers is as good as their souvenirs are unique and appropriate, they should never lack for patronage.

WE LEAD POLK

SHE HAD LESS FARM SALES THAN RED LAKE IN OCTOBER.

During October 292 instruments were filed for record in the register of deeds' office. Of these 86 were warranty deeds, 63 mortgage deeds and 51 satisfactions. There were 219 farm land transfers.

The pace set by October, Register of Deeds Gibeau says, is being maintained with the prospect that November will eclipse even this good record. Red Lake county is greatly in the lead of Polk county, where 153 farm transfers were recorded for October. This showing is nothing less than remarkable, when the fact is taken into consideration that Polk is three times as large as Red Lake County.

Nothing could indicate more clearly the high standing Red Lake county has attained in the estimation of discriminating home seekers and investors.

Mysterious Horse Disease.

Joseph Laurent, the well known Terrebonne farmer, this morning reports the loss of his eighth horse since August. The animals are sick from 8 to 10 days and Mr. Laurent says he has no idea what the disease is. He has notified the state veterinarian and an investigation will no doubt be made.

SERIOUS AT WYLIE

HORSE DISEASE PLAYING HAVOC IN THAT VICINITY.

STATE VETERINARIAN APPEALED TO PROMISES HIS CO-OPERATION.

Wylie, Minn., Nov. 1, 1901.—Several valuable horses have died in this vicinity lately. Among the losers are M. Draeger, John McKerney, W. K. Scribner and others. There is some mysterious disease that takes the animals off suddenly and if it keeps on at the present rate the farmers will have to turn to the slow-going ox again.

The State Veterinary surgeon has written a letter to Frank Sherrick, chairman of the board of supervisors of the town of Polk Centre that persons having lost horses by this mysterious disease and those who have others seriously sick should personally notify him by telegraph and he will come and make an examination.

Death of Mrs. Smith.

Mrs. Wm. Smith, formerly of this city died at the home of her son at Boise City, Idaho, on the 29th ult., and the sad news reached this city on Saturday. Mrs. Smith was one of the pioneers of Red Lake Falls, coming to this city from LeSueur in 1882. She was one of nature's noblewomen, and held a high place in the esteem and affection of all who knew her. In 1888 her husband was appointed register of the land office at Crookston, and the family moved to that city. For the past eight years Mrs. Smith has lived in the West. The death of her husband, followed by the death of her daughter Anna, were blows from which she never rallied. The immediate cause of death was cancer of the stomach.

It is sad news, especially to those of our people who were here in the early days, and have reason to remember Mrs. Smith's sweetness and loftiness of character.

Quietly Passed Away

From the Cass Lake Times.

Levi Brouillette, aged 34 years, died early Tuesday morning, Oct. 29, 1901, at his home in Cass Lake. He was a man of over 200 pounds, and was feeling well the night before, and when his wife went to awake him in the morning, she found him dead. He was employed as teamster at Neils mill, but he carried no life insurance and was not a member of any lodge, thus leaving the family very destitute. A subscription went around Wednesday to try and raise enough to send the body to his old home at Gentilly, Minn., for burial. His father at Anoka, Minn., two brothers at Red Lake Falls and her folks, Mr. and Mrs. Tripannier, of Gentilly were telegraphed.

J. W. Bailey, the coroner from Walker, came up Tuesday evening and an inquest was held, deciding that death was caused by heart trouble.

The father and mother of the deceased arrived last evening, and two brothers and a sister yesterday noon. The remains will probably be buried here, as it is about impossible to keep him any longer.

The deceased leaves a wife and four small children to mourn his loss, and they have the heart felt sympathy of the community.

PRESIDENT PROCLAIMS THANKSGIVING.

The season is nigh when, according to the time-hallowed custom of our people, the president appoints a day as the special occasion for praise and thanksgiving to God.

This thanksgiving finds the people still bowed with sorrow for the death of a great and good president. We mourn President McKinley because we so loved and honored him; and the manner of his death should awaken in the breasts of our people a keen anxiety for the country and at the same time a resolute purpose not to be driven by any calamity from the path of a strong, orderly, hopeful liberty, which as a nation we have thus far safely trod.

Yet, in spite of this great disaster, it is nevertheless true that no people on earth have such abundant cause for thanksgiving as we have. The past year in particular has been one of peace and plenty. We have prospered in things material and have been able to work for our own uplifting in things intellectual and spiritual. Let us remember that as much as has been given us, much will be expected from us, and that true homage comes from the heart as well as from the lips and shows itself in deeds. We can best prove our thankfulness to the Almighty by the way in which on this earth and at this time each of us does his duty to his fellowman.

Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States, do hereby designate as a day of general thanksgiving, Thursday, the 28th of this present November, and do recommend that throughout the land the people cease from their wonted occupations, and at their several homes and places of worship reverently thank the Giver of all good for the countless blessings on our national life.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and cause the seal of the United States to be affixed.

DONE AT the city of Washington this second day of November in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and one and of the Independence of the United States, the one hundred and twenty-sixth.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

By the President:

JOHN HAY,
Secretary of State.

Worked Over Time.

From the St Hilaire Specator.

Hon. Nat Campbell, Mayor of Crookston, with a few friends, recently spent a few days hunting in the vicinity of Mud Lake. On his return Nat told the Crookston Times man that he had seen a flock of ducks in flight which was about four miles wide and took 25 minutes to pass.

Now the wild duck in flight is estimated to travel 120 miles an hour. At this rate that flock would contain about 200 square miles of ducks or 128,000 acres. That's quite a little bunch of ducks when you come to think of it.

We would suggest to Mr. Campbell that when he next goes up there to hunt that he patronize his home dealer and take his supplies along from Crookston. Evidently the Thief River Falls stuff must have worked over time.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien's Dinner.

On Sunday evening at six o'clock a congenial party assembled upon invitation at the cozy home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. P. O'Brien, on Washington av. The host and hostess received the guests in the reception hall, and when all were assembled, led the way to the dining room, where covers were laid for the party, and a dinner was served in eight courses.

The table was beautifully set with china, cut glass and silver ware, and the host presided at the head. The hostess was assisted in serving by her niece Miss Florence Gervais. Reassembling in the parlor the evening was spent in social converse, with vocal and instrumental music and progressive cinch as entertaining features. This function is the first of a series of dinners which Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien purpose giving to groups of friends during the season, and those who were fortunate enough to have been included on the initial list can testify to the good things in store for those to follow.

Review of the Land Sales.

The recent sales of state school and other lands conducted in the different counties sums up as the most successful ever held in the state. 127,250 acres of land were disposed of at an average price of $10 per acre. Four-fifths of these being school lands, the permanent school fund of the state has been enriched to the extent of about $1,000,000, the annual income from which will be over $40,000.

The prices received were largely in excess of the appraised valuations. The sale was of great advantage too, in causing the payment into the county treasuries of a large amount of delinquent taxes.

The total sale by counties was:

	Acres	Average Price	Total
Wadena	3,875	$7.91	$30,258
Becker	6,300	9.14	37,590
Clay	7,720	14.60	112,740
Otter Tail	21,500	7.31	157,000
Norman	6,745	12.91	87,100
Polk	23,560	11.22	264,143
Marshall	23,160	8.05	186,291
Kittson	8,960	10.98	98,395
Red Lake	11,880	10.60	125,928
Roseau	10,500	8.30	83,000
Beltrami	3,600	7.00	25,200
Totals	127,250	$10.00	1,272,500

We Prove It.

The schools opened this week and this is the best proof to the outside world that Red Lake Falls has purged herself of small pox. A few places are still quarantined, but only a few, and these will soon be let out. The threatened epidemic has succumbed to the skill and persistence of our local health officer.

THE CITY ELECTION

BI-ENNIAL CONTEST PULLED OFF TUESDAY WITHOUT BLOODSHED.

RACE FOR ALDERMAN AT LARGE DEVELOPED CONSIDERABLE WARMTH.

Mayor, Dr. Watson.

Aldermen at Large, Ed. L. Healy, J. M. Bray.

Alderman First ward, W. A. Schreiter.

Alderman Second ward, Fred Borchers.

Alderman Third ward, T. A. Crompe.

Justices of the Peace, A. P. Toupin, S. A. Swanson.

Treasurer, Ovide Emard.

Constable, Ed. Moran.

The biennial city election occurred Tuesday. The day was cold and dark and dreary, but the festive office seeker in his efforts was never weary. There was a hot contest for alderman of the Third ward, where the present incumbent, A. J. Lachapelle, was battling for the retention of his seat with Thos. Crompe. The result was a majority of four for Crompe. No efforts were spared and the voter could await the arrival of a carriage to convey him to the polls, with the assurance that he would not be forgotten.

It was quite different in the First and Second wards, however, where W. A. Schreiter and Fred Borchers had no opposition.

For alderman at large there were five contestants, and the hardest electioneering was done for J. M. Bray, who has elected by a plurality of three.

The officers elected will not qualify until the first Tuesday in January, and they will hold their offices for two years from that date.

Many important matters will come up for consideration during the life of the new council. Among them the electric light and water works questions, the possible application of the Great Northern for right of way through the city and a depot site, when the contemplated extension is made to Dugdale, which will involve a a change of depot location and a new route through the city.

That the members just elected will be fully equal to the discharge of their important duties, in the best interests of the city, there is no doubt.

The vote in detail is as follows:

GILESPIE'S REPORT

U. S. ENGINEER RECOMMENDS 3-FOOT CHANNEL TO RED LAKE.

THE DISTANCE IS 135 MILES FROM THIEF RIVER FALLS TO THE LAKE

General Gillespie, chief of engineer of the United States army, has submitted his annual report to the secretary of war. A considerable portion of the report is devoted to improvements in the Red River Valley and specific recommendations for work on the Red and Red Lake rivers are made.

For the improvement of the Red River of the North, where navigation is confined to comparatively short reaches north and south of Grand Forks, $16,320 is asked, and for completing the existing project, $10,000 of which should be available for next year. The war department desires ultimately to provide an open channel in this river from Breckenridge to the Canadian line, a balance of 395½ miles, and has divided the work into three parts.

Between Breckenridge and Moorhead, 97 miles, the plan is to develop a channel which may be navigated during high and medium stages of water: between Moorhead and Grand Forks, 155 miles, a channel 50 ft. wide and three feet deep at low water, and from Grand Forks to the Canadian line 113½ miles, a channel fifty feet wide and four feet deep at low water.

Incidental to this general scheme the department proposes a three-foot open channel improvement for the Red Lake river and Red Lake from Thief River Falls, a distance of 135 miles.

The total amount thus far expended on the work is $592,741 which is something more than half of the total as originally estimated. Nothing has been done in the way of improving the channel between Breckenridge and Moorhead. The object has been attained between Grand Forks and the Canadian line, and on all but thirteen miles between Moorhead and Grand Forks, but annual dredging will be needed to maintain the depth.

BERTHON SELLS

$9,500 CASH RECEIVED FOR HIS 320-ACRE FARM TUESDAY.

On Tuesday Fred Behn, a wealthy German-American farmer from Gordonsville, Freeborn Co., purchased the 320-acre Berthon farm adjoining the city, paying $9,500 therefor. Mr. Behn will stock the farm with three car loads of stock, and contemplates other improvements in proportion.

Five years ago Geo. LaBissoniere sold this farm with all his stock and machinery, together with 80 acres of timber land, for $4200, to Dr. Pinault. L. P. Berthon purchased the land three years later for $6,000. Now he sells it for $9,500, retains the 80-acre tract and all his stock and machinery.

At Thief River Falls.

Thief River Falls also voted Tuesday. The contest for municipal judge was the feature of the campaign. The different candidates received votes as follows:

  J. W. Wallin, 312.
Municipal Judge:
  N. W. Tarrant, 196.
  W. C. Smiley, 126.
  F. Hibner, 35.
Alderman at Large:
  D. N. Winton, 297.
  C. A. Robbecke, 263.
  Hans Langseth, 101.
Alderman 1st ward:
  C. L. Dobner, 94.
  George Williams, 43.
Second ward:
  Matt Barzen, 57.
  M. C. Harlow, 40.
Third Ward:
  S. F. Staples, 90.
  A. B. Helgeson, 15.

THE LADY OF LYNN

By SIR WALTER BESANT

Copyright, 1900, by Sir Walter Besant

Crowle with his own hand quelled a mutiny and drove the whole crew under hatches.

It was a poor, shrinking, trembling figure full of bruises and aches and pains that presently arose and slunk away. I should have felt sorry for him had he taken punishment like a man. Why, I would maroon any of my crew who would cry and grovel and snivel when tied up for his three dozen. It made one sick and ashamed to see him and to hear him, with his "Mercy, captain! Oh, enough, good captain! Oh, captain, I confess! I deserve it all. Never again, captain. Oh, forgiveness, forgiveness!" and so on. I say it made me sick and ashamed. When all was over, I followed him to the garden gate. "Oh, Jack," he groaned, "you stood by and saw it all! I am a dead man. He shall be hanged for it. You are the witness. I am nothing but a bag of broken bones: ribs and collar bones and skull. I am a poor, unfortunate, murdered man. I am done to death with a cudgel."

"Go home," I said. "You a man? You cry like a whipped cur. Murdered? Not you. Cudgeled you are, and well you deserved it. Go home and get brown paper and vinegar and tell all the town how you have been cudgeled for writing verses to a matchless maid. They will laugh, Sam Semple. They will laugh."

The captain went back to the parlor somewhat flushed with the exercise.

"Justice," he said, "has been done without the cart and the cat. My pipe, Jennifer, and the home brewed. Molly, my dear, your very good health."

A day or two afterward we heard that Sam Semple had gone to London to make his fortune. He was carried thither by the wagon that once a week makes the journey to London, returning the following week. But when Sam Semple came back it was in a chaise, with much splendor, as in due course you shall hear. You shall also hear of the singular gratitude with which he repaid the captain for that wholesome correction.

CHAPTER II.

A NOBLE LORD.

It is three years later. We are now in the year 1750. At 12 o'clock in the morning the anteroom of the townhouse of the right honorable the Earl of Fyllugdale was tolerably filled with a mixed company attending his levee.

Soon after 12 o'clock the doors of the private apartments were thrown open, and his lordship appeared wearing the look of dignity and proud condescension combined which well became the star he wore and the ancient title which he had inherited. His age was about 30, a time of life when there linger some remains of youth and the serious responsibilities are yet with some men hardly felt. His face was cold and proud and hard, the lips firmly set, the eyes keen and even piercing, the features regular, his stature tall, but not ungainly; his figure manly. It was remarkable among those who knew him intimately that there was as yet no sign of luxurious living on face and figure. He was not as yet swelled out with wine and punch; his neck was still slender, his face pale, without any telltale marks of wine and debauchery. So far as appearance goes, he might pass if he chose for a person of the most rigid and even austere virtue.

This, as I have said, was considered remarkable by his friends, most of whom were already stamped on face and feature and figure with the outward and visible tokens of a profligate life, for, to confess the truth at the very beginning and not to attempt concealment or to suffer a false belief as regards this nobleman, he was nothing better than a cold blooded, pitiless, selfish libertine, a rake and a voluptuary, one who knew and obeyed no laws save the laws of (so called) honor. These laws allow a man to waste his fortune at the gaming table, to ruin confiding girls, to spend his time with rude companions in drink and riot and debauchery of all kinds. He must, however, pay his gambling debts; he must not cheat at cards; he must be polite in speech; he must be ready to fight whenever the occasion calls for his sword and the quarrel seems of sufficient importance. Lord Fyllugdale, however, was not among those who found his chief pleasure scouring the streets and in mad riot. You shall learn in due course what forms of pleasure chiefly attracted him.

I have said that his face was proud. There was not, I believe, any man living in the whole world who could compare with Lord Fyllugdale for pride. An overwhelming pride sat upon his brow, was proclaimed by his eyes and was betrayed by his carriage. With such pride did Lucifer look round upon his companions, fallen as they were and in the depths of hopeless ruin.

He was dressed in a manner becoming to his rank. Need we dwell upon his coat of purple velvet, his embroidered waistcoat, his white silk stockings, his lace of ruffles and cravat, his gold buckles and his gold clocks, his laced hat carried under his arm, his jeweled sword hilt and the rings upon his fingers? You would think by his dress that his wealth was equal to his pride, and by his reception of the suitors that his power was equal to both pride and wealth together.

The levee began. One after the other stepped up to him, spoke a few words, received a few words in reply and retired, each apparently well pleased, for promises cost nothing. To the poet who asked for a subscription and proffered a dedication my lord promised the former, accepted the latter and added a few words of praise and good wishes. But the subscription was never paid, and the dedication was afterward altered so far as the superscription to another noble patron. To the clergyman who asked for a country living then vacant my lord promised the most kindly consideration and bade him write his request and send it him by letter for better assurance of remembrance. To the officer he promised his company as only due to gallantry and military skill. To the place hunter he promised a post far beyond the dreams and the hopes of the suppliant. Nothing more came of it to either.

The company grew thin. One after the other the suitors withdrew to feed on promises. It is like opening your mouth to drink the wind. But 'twas all they got.

When they were gone, Lord Fylingdale looked round the room. In the window stood, dangling a cane from his wrist, a gentleman dressed in the highest and the latest fashion.

Yet when one looked more closely it was seen that this gallant exterior arrayed an ancient gentleman whose years were proclaimed by the sharpening of his features, the wrinkles of his feet, the crow's feet round his eyes and his bending shoulders, which he continually endeavored to set square and upright. Hat in one hand and snuffbox in the other, he ambled toward his lordship on tiptoe, which happened just then to be the fashionable gait.

"Thy servant, Sir Harry." My lord offered him his hand with condescension. "It warms my heart to see thee. Therefore I sent a letter. Briefly, Sir Harry, wouldst do me a service?"

"I am always at your lordship's commands. This, I hope, I have proved."

"Then, Sir Harry, this is the case. It is probable that for certain private reasons I may have to pay a visit to a country town, a town of tarpaulins and traders, not a town of fashion." Sir Harry shuddered. "Patience," my friend. I know not how long I shall endure the barbaric company. But I must go. There are reasons—let me whisper, reasons of state, important secrets—which call me there." Sir Harry smiled and looked incredulous. "I want on the spot a friend"—Sir Harry smiled again, as one who began to understand—"a friend who would appear to be a stranger. Would you, therefore, play the part of such a friend?"

"I will do whatever your lordship commands. Yet to leave town at this season"—it was then the month of April—"the assembly, the park, the card table, the society of the ladies— It is possible that the Lady Anastasia may go there. She will, as usual, keep the bank if she does go."

The old beau's face cleared, whether in anticipation of Lady Anastasia's society or her card table I know not.

"My character, Sir Harry, will be in your hands. I leave it there confidently. For reasons—reasons of state—it should be a character of"—

"I understand. Your lordship is a model of all the virtues"—

"So we understand. My secretary will converse with thee further on the point of expenditure."

Then a gentleman in scarlet presented himself.

"Your lordship's most obedient," he said, with scant courtesy. "I come in obedience to your letter of command."

"Colonel, you will hold yourself in readiness to go into the country. There will be play. You may lose as much as you please to Sir Harry Malyus or to any one else whom my secretary will point out to you. Perhaps you may have to receive a remonstrance from me. We are strangers, remember, and I am no gambler, though I sometimes take a card." And he, too, retired.

There remained one suitor. He was a clergyman dressed in a fine silk cassock with bands of the whitest and a noble wig of the order ecclesiastic. I doubt if the archbishop himself had a finer.

"Good, my lord," he said. "I am, as usual, a suppliant. The rectory of St. Leonard le Size, Jewry, in the City, is now vacant. With my small benefices in the country it would suit me hugely. A word from your lordship to the lord mayor—the rectory is in the gift of the corporation—would, I am sure, suffice."

"At small expense considering my abilities, but still at greater expense than my slender income will allow. Am I not your lordship's domestic chaplain? Must I not keep up the dignity due to the position?"

"Your dignity is costly. I must get a bishopric or a deanery for you. Meantime I have a small service to ask of you."

"Small? My lord, let it be great; it cannot be too great."

"It is that you go into the country for me."

"Not to Bath or to Oxford?"

"Not to either; to another place, where they know not thy name or thy fame. Very good. I thought I could depend upon your loyalty. As for arrangements and time, you will hear from my secretary." So my lord turned on his heel, and his chaplain was dismissed.

When the levee was finished and everybody gone, Lord Fylingdale sank into a chair. I know not the nature of his thoughts save that they were not pleasant, for his face grew darker every moment. Finally he sprang to his feet and rang the bell. "Tell Mr. Semple that I would speak with him," he ordered.

Mr. Semple, the same Samuel whom you have seen under a basting from the captain, was now changed and for the better. He wore the dress of a poet. At this time he also called himself secretary to his lordship.

"Semple," said his lordship, crossing his legs and playing with the tassel of his sword knot, "I have read thy letter"—

"Your lordship will impute"—

"First, what is the meaning of the preamble?"

"I have been your lordship's secretary for six months. I have therefore perused all your lordship's letters. I have also in my zeal for your lordship's interests looked about me, and I discovered what I ventured to state in that preamble."

"Well, sir?"

"Namely, that the Fylingdale estates are gone so far as your lordship's life is concerned, but in a word all is gone, and that—your lordship will pardon the plain truth—your lordship's credit cannot last long and that—I now touch a most delicate point to a man of your lordship's nice sense of honor—the only resource left is precarious."

"You mean"—

"I mean a certain lady and a certain bank."

"How, sir? Do you dare? What has put this suspicion into your head?"

"Nay, my lord; I have no thought but for your lordship's interests, believe me."

"And so you tell me about the rustic heiress, and you propose a plan"—

"I have had the temerity to do so."

"Yes. Tell me once more about this girl and about her fortune."

"Her name is Molly Miller. She is an orphan. Her guardian is an honest sailor who has taken the greatest care of her property. She was an heiress already when her father died. That was 18 years ago. She is now 19."

"Is she passable—to look at? A hoiden with a high color, I warrant."

"A cream colored complexion touched with red and pink, light hair in curls and blue eyes, the face and figure of a Venus, the sweetest mouth in the world and the fondest manner."

"Hang me if the fellow isn't in love with her himself! If she is all this, man, why not apply yourself for the post of spouse?"

"Because her guardian keeps off all would be lovers and destines his ward for a gentleman at least, for a nobleman he hopes."

"He is ambitious. Now as to her fortune."

"She has a fleet of half a dozen tall vessels—nay, there are more, but I know not how many. I was formerly a clerk in a counting house of the town, and I learned a great deal—what each is worth and what the freight of each voyage may produce—but not all. The captain, her guardian, keeps things close. My lord, I can assure you from what I learned in that capacity and by looking into old books that she must be worth over £100,000, over £100,000!"

"I can take this fortune without your assistance."

"With submission, my lord, you cannot. I know too much. The girl's fortune when you have it will go the same way as your rents and woods have gone. Provide for me, therefore, before you begin to spend that money."

"I will give you a life position, with £200 a year. The girl, you say, has no lover."

"She has no lover. Your lordship's rank, your manner, your appearance, will certainly carry the day. By contrast alone with the country bumpkins the heart of the girl will be won."

"Mr. Semple," his lordship yawned, "do you suppose that the heart of the girl concerns me? Go and complete your scheme."

The Lady Anastasia was in her dressing room in the hands of her friseur, the French hairdresser, and her maid. She was the young widow of an old baronet. She was also the daughter of an earl and the sister of his successor. She therefore enjoyed the freedom of a widow, the happiness natural to youth and all the privileges of rank. No woman could be happier. It was reported that her love of the card table had greatly impaired her income. The world said that her own private dowry was wholly gone and a large part of her jointure.

LILLO

For the past few days two ladies have been stopping at the Hotel Crookston while making liberal purchases from Crookston merchants, says The Times. The ladies are mother and daughter, and the mother is a bride of less than two weeks standing and under circumstances that are as romantic as a tale of the middle ages.

The two ladies are Mrs. Josie Short and her daughter Miss Minnie, both of whom claim Lillo, Red Lake county, as their legal place of residence. They first came to this city from North Dakota, at the time of the opening of the Red Lake reservation, and through Mr. J. E. Carpenter secured a valuable homestead near Lillo. Seven years ago Mrs. Shorts's husband, Conrad Short, joined the rush to the Klondike. He set his face to Alaska, and the land that was terrible in those days, the land where so many good men gave up their lives, swallowed him up, and months became years, but no words of her husband ever reached Mrs. Short. At last, in despair of ever seeing him again, she applied for and secured a divorce, left her Dakota home, and become a homesteader in Minnesota.

Meanwhile Conrad Short was very much alive. He had struck it rich after many hardships, and while he jingled his gold plentifully in his buckskin sacks he little dreamed that he was single again. He had written faithfully to his wife and daughter in Dakota, but all his letters had gone astray, and no word from home reached him.

After several successful seasons in Alaska he wrote one day to the postmaster at Portal, Washington, asking him to set on foot an inquiry as to the whereabouts of Mrs. Josie Short, his wife. This was easy. Mr. Short had written by chance to no other person than his own brother-in-law, and the quondam husband and wife were speedily informed of each other's whereabouts.

Mrs. Short immediately joined her brother in Portal and Mr. Short reached that place from Dawson on the 18th of October. The following day they were once more made man and wife. After a short honeymoon the bride and her daughter, Miss Minnie, came on to Crookston to attend to business interests here, while Mr. Short went to Hot Springs, Ark., having contracted rheumatism in his gold digging in Alaska.

Mr. Short will join his family here later and in February will return to Alaska, where he has valuable claims. Mrs. Short and Miss Minnie will remain on their homestead at Lillo.

J. Brobman has rented his farm to L. Abbot for five years.

Genuine winter weather made its advent Sunday morning.

Next Sunday the church pews will be rented for another year.

Threshing is no longer agreeable and the moving of the machines still less so.

Pete Olson of Red Lake Falls was among the crowd at the Belair auction sale Monday.

M. Davis, representing the American Book Company transacted business here a few days last week.

A. Tivlerge of Thief River Falls was here a part of last week. He has a farm in this vicinity which he wishes to sell.

N. Swanson received a load of goods Saturday to replenish his stock upon which the demands of a heavy patronage are making inroads.

Mr. and Mrs. A P. Toupin and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Belair were here Monday from Red Lake Falls attending the auction sale at John Belair's farm.

Spreads Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorder of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, run-down man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by W. A. Schreiter, druggist.

The schoolhouse in Dist. 214 has undergone some repairs and is now in better condition for the winter term.

Odin Jacobson departed for Garnes Sunday where he is to teach one month of school in the Norwegian language.

Lorentz Lee drove to Erskine last Monday with his half brother G. Kolberg who now for the third time has returned to his home in the northern part of Norway.

The schoolhouse in Dist. 228 is now finished and is no doubt the finest district schoolhouse in the county. All we need now is a good teacher for the winter term.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well-known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sold reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drugs and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

TRUST-TARIFF ISSUE.

A press dispatch says that President Roosevelt is in great perplexity as to how to treat the tariff and reciprocity, or what is the same, the trust issue, in his forthcoming message to congress.

This is without doubt, from a party standpoint, the most delicate subject he will have to handle, and it will require the utilizing of all the great adhesive qualities of the Republican party to prevent a tremendous split; for the infant industries, some of which have pooled into great trusts, will not see the tariff rates reduced on commodities adversely effecting their interests without a great struggle.

The Republican party as the party of protection, has had the powerful support of the manufacturers. Wm. McKinley, as the greatest living exponent of the protective idea, was twice elected president, and not without the aid of the classes benefited by the protective system.

Is the policy of the party to be changed? Certainly, there never was a greater reversal of policy than that contemplated by the late President, as voiced in his last speech, and yet there is nothing inconsistent about it.

Nothing could have been more fortunate than that the late President himself was permitted to utter these sentiments as to tariff reform and reciprocity. It proved him the master pilot, as well as the fearless leader.

Dauntless indeed must have been the courage of the standard bearer, to face about, because of changed conditions and advocate a reversal of policy. The credit will always be his, and this last testimonial to his genius as a national leader will always stand pre-eminent.

President Roosevelt has taken up McKinley's policies intact. Tariff reform, then, will be advocated by him. All this is on account of the new conditions that have arisen in the past few years.

In this crisis it is fortunate for the Republican party that at this time a leader has arisen who embodies in himself all the elements of success. It matters not under what party name he stands, Theodore Roosevelt represents purity, absolute honesty, resistless progression in public affairs. Perhaps more than any other president since the days of our fathers, he will obliterate party lines, and if he lives up to the record he has made as a public officer, utterly disregarding the crafty wiles of the political machines, he will be swept into office by the votes of an admiring and inspired nation as on a tidal wave.

FORGET EVIL, REMEMBER GOOD.

In his new book "On the Great Highway," which appeared last week, James Creelman, after describing the death bed of President McKinley, says that when he last visited the White House Mr. McKinley said:

"My one ambition is to be known as the president of the American people—I have no other desire than to win that name. After all, no American can harm his country without harming himself.

"This government was created by the people for themselves, and night or day that thought is always in my mind. We are all to-gether in this great political experiment. Some hard things have been written and said of me, but that sort of thing is a necessary incident of popular government. It must always be so.

"My plan is to forget the evil and remember only the good. I never despair of converting an opponent into a supporter. The bitterest critic I have can come to me and find a warm hand to greet him. It is the only way for an American to live."

"So he lived and so he died," adds the author. "Men of all parties will remember him as McKinley the forgiving."

WRONG IDEA.

The subscription list passed around last week for the purpose of raising funds to improve certain roads leading from this city, received liberal contributions from our business men, showing plainly the willingness of the average citizen to help along in a good cause. No doubt we are all unanimous on the proposition that the roads leading into Red Lake Falls are not what they should be, and that a movement for their betterment should receive the undivided support of our citizens. That is where the subject rests. Then some citizen with more than the average share of interprise and public spirit conceives the idea of starting a subscription list.

Even if every business man in the city subscribed, the amount raised would be comparatively small and the burden would fall unjustly on the shoulders of a few. The idea is wrong. All general public improvements should be paid for from the public treasury, so that all who own property receiving a benefit will have no recourse except to pay their pro rata share of the cost, according to the extent of there interests.

This ought to be well understood. It is the only proper way. The enterprise that prompts a public spirited citizen to efforts such as the improvement of high-ways by subscription is in every way indicative of worthy motives. But until some general plan of road improvement is adopted, looking to the systemizing and broadening of the project into township, county and even district scheme, these efforts will prove unavailing.

There is no broader field of usefulness open to the public man of to-day than the sifting out of this road question, and the formulation of some feasible plan that may be formulated into a law.

Township bonding, for road and ditch work in conjunction appears to be a good plan. This, supplemented by a good roads and drainage commission, who would be allowed per diem and mileage the same as county commissioners, might at least be considered a start in the right direction.

It is a subject that should command more attention than it is receiving from legislators.

Land around Moorhead is going up, too. A tract of 220 acres sold for $60 per acre last week.

As near as we can size it up, Judge Ives is for Roosevelt for president in 1904. There are others.

The Fargo Forum says 100,000 acres of land will be thrown open on the Fort Totten Indian reservation.

P. M. Mark, the Fosston medicine man, is extending his sphere of usefulness to the towns along the M. & I.

Dr. Cyrus Brooks, who is over 90 years of age, delivered an invocation at the old settlers' reunion in St. Paul Saturday evening.

A telephone line from Thief River Falls to Roseau is projected. H. Fant, proprietor of the local exchange, is the projector.

Minnesota has 685 newspapers. Only seven states in the Union have more. It's no wonder Minnesota is taking first place in competitive tests. And we have just started.

A would-be assassin made an attempt on the life of the Chinese empress dowager Saturday. So the string fiend says. She seems to be bullet, nitro-glycerine, and strychnine proof. Will she be able to stand the latest?

Ernest Buse's Indian policy is being adopted by the government which has now concluded that the best policy is to put white settlers among or near the Indians, that the latter may learn modern methods of farming.

Is the following from an exchange gratitude or sarcasm? "The editor acknowledges his indebtedness to those of its readeas who have been so kindly bringing the paper to the attention of their neighbors and thus increasing its circulation and influence."

The Roseau-Region didn't make any fuss about it when the old form was discarded and the 5-column quarto size adopted. But no doubt the paper's patrons realize the improvement together with the fact that Editor Sanders is always at the head of the procession.

Maj. Edwards of the Fargo Forum and Geo. B. Winship, of the Grand Forks Herald, are quarreling like two school girls. North Dakota doesn't seem big enough to hold both. The only way out of it will be to send one to Washington as senator, and make the other busy with the duties of the gubernatorial office.

The timid woman who looks under the bed before retiring when hubby is away, is hereby notified to include the phonograph on her scare list. A Sioux City woman, defendant in a divorce suit, was defeated by a phonograph which her wiley husband had placed in the bed room on lodge nights. Her voice was easily distinguishable, so plain was the record.

Over four million of dollars of honest debts have been repudiated in Minnesota alone since uncle Knute's prosperity cure went into effect. We dare say that among those who thus paid their debts with an average of 12½c on the dollar were enough "honest money" enthusiasts of 1896 to make a torchlight parade a mile long.—Willmar Tribune.

If the Tribune editor would blame the administration under which those debts were contracted, rather than that under which they were discharged, he would be one half less unreasonable.

Thos. Smythe reports that in spite of the fight he has had to make with Jack Frost, he has completed one-third of this season's work on the Red Lake Falls-Lake Pleasant ditch.

The Northern Pacific has offered threshers the inducement of a very low rate east later in the season if the men will stay in North Dakota and help finish up the threshing. In a number of cases the men have decided to stick until snow falls.

J. J. Nauman, of Clay Centre, Neb., has purchased through the Ed. L. Healy Land Co. the Mikkelsen farm formerly owned by Tom Belair. Mr. Naumann is a practical farmer and will move here in the spring. His brother has purchased the Prosper Wilmes farm.

Dr. B. B. Ralph, of Kansas City, Mo., answered a telegraphic call to the bedside of his failing mother, and arrived in the city Thursday. Mrs. Ralph's condition improved considerably and he returned Saturday to his home city, where a large list of patients demand his continuous presence.

F. B. Newton and F. A. Grady went to Grand Rapids Tuesday, to look into the feasibility of buying logs in the Beltrami and Itasca county districts to be shipped in by rail. This method of securing log supplies has been adopted by many of the leading lumber manufacturers, and has many advantages over the old way.

Geo. M. Emery, of Northwood, Iowa, who owns two sections of land in this vicinity, came up Saturday with a party of farmers who are selling out their Iowa interests with a view to getting hold of choice Red Lake county farms. The party comprised A. Thompson, K. Lommen, A. A. Stinson, Bert Behn, and Albert Struck, all from the neighborhood of Northwood.

About two years ago Charles Aultman left Crookston, informing his wife that he was called east for a conference with officials of the German government. The conference concerned a gun for shooting nitro-glycerine, which deadly weapon Aultman is alleged to have conceived and partially perfected. Neither Aultman or the gun has been heard of since and Mrs. Aultman has been granted a divorce on the ground of desertion.

August Westfall on Tuesday purchased E. J. Garceau's residence property in the Original Townsite and will move here with his family from Wheaton. Mr. Westfall purchased 1000 acres of school land at the last sale here, and on Tuesday added a half section of Black River land to his holdings, through the Healy Land Co. and has decided to make Red Lake Falls his headquarters so as to be able to give his interests here closer attention than he could at long range.

Dolphis Champoux converted his wheat crop into cash this week and on Tuesday came to town to pay up all his bills. In this he succeeded and after making the rounds and footing up the amount laid out he found it aggregated just one thousand dollars. "I do not owe anyone a cent now," said Mr. Champoux, "and this is the first time I could truthfully say as much. I am a happy man to-day." Mr. and Mrs. Champoux came here twenty-four years ago from Michigan and settled in Lake Pleasant township, on Badger Creek. They had just five hundred dollars all told. But by judicious management they have prospered, and to-day own 500 acres of choice land in Lake Pleasant, Terrebonne and Red Lake Falls townships, besides one of the finest farm homes in the county, and sleek herds of numerous horses and cattle.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

St. Mary's church choir has begun rehearsals for the Christmas music.

The Rev. P. Ansgar went to Thief River Falls Monday to be present at the observance of the Rev. Fr. Charles' namesday.

The Thief River Falls 20th Century Presbyterian church has secured three lots from F. H. Kratka and will erect a building 42 x 52 feet.

Nov. 3 is the twenty-second Sunday after Trinity in the church calendar. This is also St. Hubert's day in the the Roman calendar. It is the formal commencement of the hunting season in France. He is the patron saint of the chase and dogs.

Monday, Nov. 4 is honored for St. Emeric, patron saint of Hungary. His celebrity popularized his name, which in the Italianized form of Amerigo was conferred upon the navigator Vespucci; and as the name American is generally derived from Amerigo, St. Emeric may be looked upon as the eponymid patron of America.

St. Bernard's large church bell, weighing over 1500 lbs, arrived Monday says the Thief River Falls Press. The work on the tower will be commenced this week so that the bell may be hung as soon as possible. On one of the Sundays in November, Rt. Rev. Abbott Peter Engel will officiate at the impressive ceremony of blessing the bell, and the event will be made a solemn and interesting celebration. It is customary that one member of the parish act as sponsor when the bell is blessed. The honor accorded the sponor is never forgotten in the history of the parish. Louis Blair and Louis Seidl are suggested as the possible candidates for the sponsor-ship. Several girls will act as agents to collect votes for these two men and they expect to meet with kindness in their difficult work of soliciting. Either Louis Blair or Louis Siedl will officiate as sponor, the appointment depending on the larger number of votes. When the contest is finished a beautiful gold pen with pearl handle will be awarded to the girl that has gathered the most votes.

Rev. Fr. Grandchamp of Crookston has given this splendid definition of liberty: "Liberty is the privilege to move in good and not be molested." Men are born to certain spheres in life and move in them doing good in the consummation of all liberty. When a man ceases to do good and begins to do evil, he is no longer free, but is a slave of ill-governed passions. Liberty is not a choice between good and evil, but the protection of man in his endeavors to do and be what God would have him.

SOCIAL ITEMS, GOOD OF THE ORDER AND RECESS GOSSIP OF INTEREST.

The Ladies of the Maccabees decided some time ago to meet at the homes of the different members of the order instead of at their hall, for the winter at least, and so far it has proved to be a pleasant change. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Robert Bourdon next Wednesday.

At a special supreme convention of the Modern Brotherhood just held at Sioux City, Iowa, it was decided to move headquarters from Tipton to Mason City, Ia. The people of the latter city through their spokesman, Col. Sorter, offered to pay all expenses incurred in moving the offices, office help and families, also free rent in a new office building provided with a fire proof vault, for a period of five years, ground upon which to erect an office, and an increase of over 500 new members in their home lodge during the next six months. A certified check for $2,300 was filed with the board of directors, to insure the fulfillment of all their promises. Good mail and express facilities can be had at Mason City, to facilitate in caring for the society's business. The reserve fund of which the M. B. A. makes a special feature, was found to be increasing very satisfactorily. After a sumptuous banquet the delegates departed for their homes. The address of welcome by Mayor A. H. Burton was highly enjoyed, as also the response to same in behalf of the order by Hon. Thomas Lambert, of Iowa.

High School Notes.

Edited by The Athenian Society

LITERARY WORK.

The debate, as announced before, will be held Friday afternoon, Nov. 8th. We hope to see a large attendance of visitors on that date.

Be on the watch for the announcement in next week's notes of a good program to be given Nov. 15th by The Athenians.

PERSONALS.

Doretta Mathias returned to school Tuesday morning, having recovered from an attack of small pox

Joseph Helm returned to his work in the High School Tuesday morning. He has been absent during the first two months of this year's work.

Theodore Deforge started work in the H. S. Tuesday morning.

SCHOOL IN GENERAL.

Owing to some misunderstanding among the pupils as to the exact date of recommencing school, the attendance was rather small Tuesday.

On account of the delay in the school work which the forced vacation caused, all pupils must add extra efforts in order to accomplish the year's work.

The school buildings were invaded by some of the small boys of the city on Hallowe'en. The bell of the Washington building lacked a clapper and rope, and things in the High School rooms were in general turned up-side down.

The two weeks during which the schools were closed was a time of rest as well as enjoyment to most of the pupils of the school and all returned with a look of renewed energy.

INCIDENTS.

The quiet (?) of the school room Tuesday noon was interrupted by some terrified shrieks, rendered by two girls, at the appearance of an empty paper bag. Perhaps if the bag had been filled with candy no such shrieks would have been heard. We, therefore, recommend that no empty bags be thrown around.

As a result of the stored-up energy escaping from some of the girls of the H. S. the following rule was brought into play—No one shall sit in any other than his or her seat during intermissions or leave the room but once after entering. No conversation shall be entered into.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

SCHLEY COURT OF INQUIRY.

The cross-examination of Admiral Schley was continued throughout the session of the court of inquiry Tuesday. The progress made was exceedingly slow. Practically the whole day was consumed in questioning the admiral about the cruise from Cienfuegos to Santiago and the motives and influences that governed him in turning back after his squadron had arrived in the vicinity of the latter port. This latter branch of the cross-examination had not been concluded when the court adjourned.

The long ordeal to which Admiral Schley has been subjected ended Wednesday afternoon when his cross-examination was concluded and he was allowed to leave the witness stand. When the judge advocate finished the cross-examination the court propounded to the admiral 34 questions prepared by the members of the court. These questions touched many points of the campaign of the flying squadron, but mainly centered about the difficulties encountered in coaling and the reasons for the retrograde movement. Not one of them related to the battle of Santiago. The judge advocate's cross-examination on the last day covered the retrograde movement, the reconnaissance of May 31, the loop of the Brooklyn and the alleged colloquy with Lieutenant Hodgson about the Texas.

In the naval court of inquiry Thursday a number of witnesses were introduced by Judge Advocate Lemly to testify in rebuttal of the evidence given in Admiral Schley's behalf. The court decided early in the day that no witnesses could be introduced at this stage of the proceedings to give testimony on immaterial points. This announcement had the effect of relieving Lieutenant Commander Grant, Lieutenant Commander Potts and other officers of the Massachusetts, who had been called to testify concerning a conversation with Lieutenant Sears, which is said to have occurred on the Massachusetts just before the reconnoissance of May 31. The witnesses called in rebuttal were Captain Charles D. Sigsbee, Captain Francis E. Chadwick, Captain Joseph G. Eaton, Lieutenant John H. Roys and Chief Quartermaster Neil Anderson, all of whom testified to incidents connected with the campaign of 1898.

But one session of the Schley court of inquiry was held Friday and adjournment was taken until Monday. Sylvester Scovil, a newspaper correspondent, was the only new witness called, and he denied the story told by Correspondent Graham, a witness for Schley. Lieutenant Hood and a number of other officers were on the stand to correct their testimony.

AUDITOR'S NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF PETITION.

State of Minnesota, } ss.
County of Red Lake. }

Whereas, the petition of S. A. Swonson and others, bearing date the 4th day of October, 1901, and on file in my office, praying for the establishment of a public ditch along the route proposed therein, has been filed in my office.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the said board of County Commissioners, at their special session to be held at the auditor's office in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county, on the 25th day of November, 1901, at 1 o'clock p. m.

A true copy of said petition is as follows, to-wit:

To the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for the expense of, the construction of the ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a ditch along the following described route in the towns of Poplar River and Terrebonne in the said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows:

Commencing at a point at or near the southeast corner of southeast quarter of section thirty-two (32) township one hundred fifty (150) of range forty-two (42) thence running along the following route:

In a northerly and westerly direction over and across the east half of section 32 aforesaid and the northeast corner of NW¼ said sec. 32 thence in a like direction over SW¼ Sec. 29, SE¼ Sec. 30 and SW¼ 30, to south line of NW¼ 30, thence following the south line of said NW¼ 30, to the southwest corner of NW¼ 30, thence running north on the line between Township 150 Range 42 and Twp. 150 Range 43 along west line of sections 30 and 19, 150, 42 to a point where said course intersects with a large cooley or ravine and terminating in said cooley or ravine as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred and Fifty-eight (258) of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1901, and subsequent amendments thereto.

In Probate Court,
Special Term,
Oct. 26th, 1901.

Whereas, an instrument in writing, purporting to be the Last Will and testament of Gunde O. Anstad deceased, late of said County, has been delivered to this Court;

And whereas, Asbjor G. Anstad has filed therewith a petition, representing among other things that said Gunde O. Anstad died in said County, on the 9th day of July, A. D. 1901, testate, and that said petitioner is the sole Executor named in said last will and testament, and praying that the said instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters testamentary be to her issued thereon.

It is ordered, that the proofs of said instrument, and the said petition, be heard before this court, at the probate office in said county, on the 25th day of November, A. D. 1901, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when all persons interested may appear for, or contest the probate of said instrument;

And it is further ordered that notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

AUDITOR'S NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF PETITION.

State of Minnesota, } ss.
County of Red Lake. }

Whereas, the petition of A. E. Sorenson and others, bearing date the 23rd day of September, 1901, and on file in my office, praying for the establishment of a public ditch along the route proposed therein, has been filed in my office.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the said Board of County Commissioners, at their special session to be held at the auditor's office in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county, on the 25th day of November 1901, at 1 o'clock p. m.

A true copy of said petition is as follows, to-wit:

To the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for the expense of, the construction of the public ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a public ditch along the following described route in the towns of Emardville and Garnes in said county of Red Lake and that the construction of the same will be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows:

Commencing at a point 31 feet south of the NE corner of Sec. 14, Twp. 151, Range 41, thence west parallel to section line between sections 13 and 12, 11 and 11, 15 and 10, 16 and 9, 17 and 8, 18 and 7 of said town and range thence west parallel to section line between sections 13 and 12 thence south parallel to section line between 13 and 14, 24 and 23 thence west between sections 23 and 26, 22 and 27, 21 and 28, 20 and 29 to a point about 20 rods west and 33 feet north of the NW corner of the NE¼ of section 29 of Twp. 151, Range 42 and terminating at said last named point having for its outlet a coulee.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such public ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred and Fifty-eight (258) of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1901, and subsequent amendments thereto.

FOR WIFE MURDER

REUBEN C. PICKETT OF MINNEAPOLIS INDICTED BY THE GRAND JURY.

Plato Blacksmith Killed by an Unknown Mob—Iron Ore Shipments From Minnesota Break Previous Records—Commissioner Hermann Suspends Land Surveys—Tramps Caught in a Wreck—General News of the State.

Minneapolis, Nov. 4.—Reuben C. Pickett, a well known man about town, has been indicted on the charge of murder in the first degree and is now held at the county jail to await trial. Pickett is charged with having murdered his wife on the early morning of Sept. 28, 1900, at their flat, Eighth avenue south. At the time Mrs. Pickett was supposed to have gone into the bathroom and while there the lamp exploded, setting fire to her clothing, and before she could be reached was so badly burned and suffocated that she died.

It is rumored that Pickett choked his wife to death and to avoid suspicion set fire to her clothing to cover up his crime. He then ran to the nearest fire box and turned in an alarm. When the firemen arrived on scene they found the bathroom door locked and the key missing.

Suspicion rested upon him at the time, but not enough evidence could be produced to warrant an indictment. Later developments have brought out further facts and it is claimed that the state has a pretty strong case against him.

KILLED BY A MOB.

Blacksmith Has His Skull Fractured on His Way Home.

Chaska, Minn., Oct. 30.—F. Knor, a blacksmith residing at the little village of Plato, about 15 miles from this place, was attacked by a mob while returning to his blacksmith shop about 8 o'clock in the evening. He was beaten on the head with a club, his skull being fractured, and he died 12 hours later. The supposition is that his assailants all live in or near Plato, and an old feud had existed between them for some years.

Knor was well known in McLeod and Carver counties, having lived the larger part of his life in Plato. He is a married man and leaves a wife and several children. It is thought that the gang who did the deed will be identified in a short time.

HEAVY IRON ORE SHIPMENTS.

All Records of Minnesota Ranges Have Been Broken.

Duluth, Nov. 3.—Although 20 days of the season remain the shipment of iron ore from Minnesota ranges this year has exceeded all previous records for the full season. Up to Nov. 1 shipments were 10,023,893 tons, or 600,000 tons in excess of the total for the entire season last year. It is the first time the 10,000 000 mark has been turned and indications are that when the season closes over 11,000,000 gross tons will have been taken from the state. It is expected that at the close of the year records will show that Minnesota not only shipped more iron ore but produced more than any other state in the Union. Last year Michigan produced a few thousand tons more.

STATE UNITARIANS.

Annual Conference Closes With Election of Officers.

Luverne, Minn., Oct. 31.—The conference of Unitarian churches of the state concluded its sessions last evening with a sermon by Rev. R. W. Boynton of St. Paul, secretory of the conference. At a business meeting Hon. L. W. Collins of St. Cloud was reelected president; Hon. H. J. Miller of Luverne vice president; Rev. R. W. Boynton of St. Paul secretary; Miss Charlotte Clark treasurer; Rev. J. H. Palmer of Luverne and Rev. Harry White of Duluth members of the committee on missions. Mr. Collins, the president, was unable to be present. The attendance at the conference was satisfactory.

BAFFLES THE HEALTH BOARD.

Smallpox Among the Indians Proves of Serious Concern.

St. Paul, Oct. 30.—The question of dealing with smallpox among the Indians is giving the state board of health serious concern. The disease exists on nearly every reservation in the state, and in some localities it has reached the stage of an epidemic.

The White Earth and Red Lake reservations have given most trouble, and it is reported that the United States government has authorized expenditure of $1,000 at each of those places in the establishment and maintenance of proper quarantine regulations.

SURVEYS SUSPENDED.

Land Commissioner Hermann Says Some Drastic Things in Report.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Land Commissioner Binger Hermann of the general land office in his annual report says that so many of the surveys of Minnesota public lands, under contract, have been unreliable and incorrect that several entire townships have been suspended. Mr. Hermann specifies some of the contracts in townships adjacent to the Red Lake Indian reservation. He is rather caustic in reviewing the work done on the few surveys which have been undertaken in Minnesota during the past year.

TRAMPS CAUGHT IN A WRECK

Four Thought to Be Killed on the Great Northern.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 30.—A wreck occurred on the Fosston line of the Great Northern and 17 freight cars were ditched and smashed into kindling wood. It is reported that four tramps were caught in the wreck and lie buried under the scattered tons of flax. It will take two days to clear the track.

REVOKED THE ORDER.

Indian Children May Be Sent to Sectarian Schools.

Washington, Oct. 30.—Secretary Hitchcock has given assurance to Archbishops Ireland of St. Paul and Riordan of San Francisco that he will revoke the Indian school order of Former Commissioner of Indian Affairs Browning, which held in effect that Indian children must be sent, as far as practicable, to the regular government Indian schools and after the government institutions had been supplied the Indian children might be sent to the sectarian schools. The Browning order, which elicited considerable comment at the time, was recently suspended and the archbishops called to ask that it be entirely revoked instead of suspended. The secretary agreed to this modification.

BIG INSURANCE POLICY.

One for $13,000,000 Executed by the Northern Pacific.

St. Paul, Oct. 31.—The Northern Pacific has received one of the largest insurance policies ever written in the country, but certainly the largest ever given by the company. Its total was $13,400,000, which, in addition to $6,600,000 insured by the company out of its own fund, totalizes $20,000,000.

The insurance covers all property which might be destroyed by fire, rolling stock, warehouses, merchandise in transit, depot buildings, shops, roundhouses, etc. The Northern Pacific insurance fund at the close of the last fiscal year was $578,326, an increase over the preceding year of $52,231.

RAILS WERE LAID.

Opponents to Road Prevented by Police From Using Hose.

Mankato, Minn., Nov. 5.—The Chicago and Milwaukee road Sunday laid rails in the northern part of the city near the knitting mills.

An injunction restraining the road from going over a portion of the mill company's property was issued several days ago, but Judge Cray on Saturday dissolved the injunction and the road has laid its track.

The mill company's management were out in full force during the morning with a large hose to wet down the railroad builders. The police were called in to intercede and the track was laid.

FIRE AT MANITOWOC.

Seventy-five Carloads of Flour and Warehouse and Dock Burn.

Manitowoc, Wis., Nov. 5.—Seventy-three carloads of flour on track and two carloads in the warehouse of the Wisconsin Central Railway company were destroyed by fire, together with the warehouse and dock property of the road. The loss will reach $125,000, covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is not known. It was the fiercest fire in the history of the city while it lasted, and only the combined efforts of the entire fire department prevented the further spread of the flames. The flour was the property of the Washburn-Crosby Milling company of Minneapolis.

ARMED MEN GUARD RECORDS.

Excitement at Lake Benton Over County Seat Matters.

Lake Benton, Minn., Nov. 2.—The town continues very excited over county seat matters. It was reported that a crowd from Ivanhoe were going to attempt to remove the records in the night, so armed men patroled the streets and guarded all the approaches to town, and will do so again tonight. The people of Lake Benton are willing to let go when legally requested to do so, but not before, and as two townships have failed so far to send in certified returns, the county commissioners have been unable to give their decision.

REMOVED BY IRELAND.

Father Tusek of Redwood Falls Is Transferred to Another Parish.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Nov. 1.—A sequel to the Sunday picnic held under the auspices of the Wabasso Catholic church, Oct. 6, as a result of which one John Salfer, who ran a beer stand on the occasion, paid a fine of $100 and costs, comes in the removal of the priest of the parish, Father Tusek, to another parish, and the transfer of Father Stikel of Morgan to his place at Wabasso. This is done by Archbishop Ireland, under whose orders the sheriff of Redwood county made the arrests at the picnic.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Young Man and Seven Horses Killed and Barn Burned.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Oct. 30.—Adam Persyck was struck by lightning and instantly killed at his home in the town of Edna, Monday evening. The young man was assisting his mother in removing some boxes from the cellar, and the bolt came through the open door. He was 21 years old. The mother and younger brother were stunned.

During the same storm the barn of John Welse was struck and burned, seven horses being killed.

WOULD MAKE COMPETITION.

Duluth Mining Men Are In Favor of the New Steel Trust.

Duluth, Nov. 2.—Duluth mining men are greatly interested in the report of the new $2,000,000,000 steel trust and believe if it materializes it will have an important effect on prices of mining leases in this vicinity.

A well posted mining man said that the new combination would probably look to J. J. Hill for Mesaba mining properties, as he controls in the name of the Eastern Minnesota about 50,000 acres, much of which contains iron ore.

Indians May Cut Timber.

Duluth, Oct. 31.—Major S. M. Campbell, in charge of the Lapointe Indian agency, left today for the Grand Portage reservation on the north shore of Lake Superior, carrying authority to that band to cut all the cedar and spruce on their allotments, but they must cut no pine and no timber of any kind on tribal ground. The major will appoint a farmer to exercise a general supervision of the cutting this winte

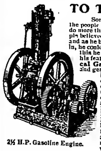
TO THE PEOPLE:



2½ H.P. Gasoline Engine.

Some time ago the "Jack-of-All-Trades" began to tell the people what he could do. He made great claims; promised to do more than ever had been done before, and more than most people believed possible. You all know the success he has attained, and as he became more familiar with the country he was traveling in, he could see the possibilities of greater work, and to accomplish this he has introduced to you a traveling companion. Behold his features in the shape of a 2½ H. P. Geared Base Vertical Gasoline Engine. His specialties are pumping water and general farm use. He is very versatile, and when his time is not wanted for pumping water, by a movement of one of his arms, he can disconnect the gears and his power can be directed for other purposes. He is beginning to travel all over the country from the Canadian Provinces to the Equator, and from the Eastern Coast to the Philippines. He is taking up all sorts of work for all kinds of people, and it is surprising to note the results of his work for the first year.

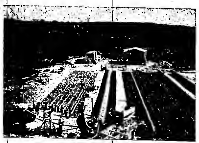
Brick That Beats the World.



Schmitz Bro's. brick yard, a cut of which is herewith given, has this season turned out 550,000 cream sand mould hard brick, the equal of which is perhaps not to be found in any other local product in this section of the state. Schmitz Bros are very fortunate in the quality of the clay they are using, which enables them to compete in quality with the best hard brick manufactured anywhere. Several buildings in the city and country hereabouts have been put up with their brick exclusively and it would be hard to find buildings that present a smoother, evener-colored, finer appearance than these. The fact is recognized that Schmitz brick presents an ideal building material, and many orders are now being filled for outside parties, to whom the brick are shipped.

Eight men were employed this season and since the enterprise was launched at its present location in 1891 the demand for the product has steadily increased

Next year a 40 horse-power steam engine will be put in, and a half dry machine added to facilitate the work.

Bean, Minn., April 17, 1900.

Gentlemen--I am pleased to inform you that Matt J. Johnson's 6088 has done wonders for me. I was taken with a severe attack of muscular rheumatism that confined me to the house for two months. I went to Crocker & Hawley's store on crutches and Mr. Hawley gave me a bottle of 6088 and wanted me to try it, as he knew I had been suffering with rheumatism for the past three years and I would be a severe test for the remedy. I had not taken half a bottle when I went to work and when I had finished the bottle I was entirely free from rheumatism. Thanking you and your agents, Messrs. Crocker & Hawley, for putting me in the way of a cure,

I am yours very truly,

J. H. NEIL.

A FREE TRIAL. We guarantee our remedy to be free from all opiates, salicylates or poisonous drugs. If on taking half the bottle and are not satisfied, return and your money will be refunded.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

E. S. Baker located a clam bed in the river at Stewartville that yielded $50 worth of pearls in one day's picking.

Octavius Church, one of the oldest residents of Southern Minnesota, is dead at his home near Minnesota City. He was born in Virginia 89 years ago.

S. B. Love, a prominent business man of Minneapolis, dropped dead Wednesday of last week. He was one of the city's pioneers and active in politics.

During October 128 building permits were issued in St. Paul, totalizing $406,332, an increase of $203,672, or more than 100 per cent over the same month last year.

Miss Mary B. Livingstone, a relative of the famous African explorer, died at Minneapolis while undergoing an operation for the removal of a bone which had caught in her throat.

Ezra C. Pratt, a pioneer resident of Minneapolis, is dead. Mr. Pratt was born at Wells, Me., and came to St. Anthony in 1855. He had lived 40 years in the house where he died.

Former United States Marshal William M. Campbell is in a serious condition at his home in St. Paul due to the breaking of a blood vessel of the brain, the result of over exertion.

Labor Commissioner O'Donnell believes that more truant officers should be appointed in Minneapolis and St. Paul. He thinks there should be at least two officers of this kind in each city.

Frank Qually was arrested at Luverne on the charge of robbing the safe in the office of his employer. The safe had been opened, the cash drawer unlocked and between $60 and $70 taken, and then relocked.

Attorney General Douglas has ruled that the death of Former Governor John S Pillsbury has created no vacancy on the board of regents of the state university. The opinion was given at the request of Governor Van Sant.

The question of dealing with smallpox among the Indians is giving the state board of health serious concern. The disease exists on nearly every reservation in the state, and in some localities it has reached the stage of an epidemic.

Andrew Tapper, who was condamned at Chaska to be hanged for the murder of Rosa Mixa, adheres to his story that he has no recollection of having attacked the girl. He is in bad health and says he expects to cheat the gallows.

Bishop Knut Henning Gezelius von Scheele, the envoy of King Oscar of Sweden and Norway to this country, spent Thursday in Minneapolis, and was entertained by Swedish-American churchmen and other citizens of Swedish extraction.

Mrs. Elizabeth Green of Duluth, who was shot by her husband, Charles Green, Sept. 6, a 32 bullet entering her brain, has left the hospital and gone home. Her case puzzles the physicians. She retains her faculties, but complains that her vision is affected.

August Anderson, aged about 21 years, was killed by lightning while husking corn south of Frost. The father was husking after another team, and when he saw his son's team run away he drove to the spot from which they started and found his son dead.

Although 20 days of the season remain the shipment of iron ore from Minnesota ranges this year has exceeded all previous records for the full season. Up to Nov. 1 shipments were 10,023,893 tons, or 600,000 tons in excess of the total for the entire season last year.

The Vicksburg commission, created by the last legislature, has decided to recommand to the governor that $25,000 be appropriated for a monument in Vicksburg park to the Minnesota troops who took part in the siege of that city. No recommendation will be made as to the location of the monument.

F. Knor, a blacksmith residing at the little village of Plato, about 15 miles from Chaska, was attacked by a mob while returning to his blacksmith shop about 8 o'clock in the evening. He was beaten on the head with a club, his skull being fractured, and he died 12 hours later. His assailants are unknown.

Two men entered the store of William Gensner, in Lewiston, and, pointing a revolver at the head of the proprietor, remarked that it would be an easy thing to hold up the village. They gave their names as S. E. Stewart of St. Paul, and F. A. Johnson of Belden. Johnson was fined $10 and Stewart was sent to jail for 20 days.

The revenue fund from which the expenses of the state government are drawn is shown by Treasurer Block's raport to be overdrawn $81,051.68; the general school fund $3,072.27, and the internal improvement fund $92.25, making a total overdraft of $84,216.20. This leaves the total cash in the treasury subject to check, $322,057.70.

A Duluth mining man is authority for the statement that the proposed $2,000,000,000 steel corporation, of which H. C. Frick is to be the head, is expecting to obtain much of its ore supplies from lands controlled by J. J. Hill. He says further that a powerful rival to the United States Steel corporation would produce a boom in Minnesota ore properties.

Becoming tired of trailing their skirts in pools of tobacco juice, the ladies of Luverne have begun a crusade against the men who expectorate upon the sidewalks. At the next meeting of the village council a petition signed by almost every lady in Luverne will be presented, praying that an ordinance be passed prohibiting the filthy habit of spitting upon sidewalks.

More than a year ago, in September, 1900, Mrs. Reuben Pickett of Minneapolis, was found dead in the bathroom of the flat where she and her husband lived after a fire had been extinguished. Friday morning her husband was arrested on a charge of murder. The indictment was found by the grand jury at the instance of relatives of Mrs. Pickett. It is the theory that Pickett choked his wife after a quarrel and then set the fire to cover the crime.

Vol. 19. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, NOVEMBER 14, 1901. No 9

REV. WM. MONROE.

FORMER RED LAKE FALLS BOY, NOW PROHIBITION EVANGELIST.

DELIVERED TWO LECTURES AND A SERMON TO LARGE AUDIENCES.

Rev. E. Monroe, Prohibition evangelist, arrived in Red Lake Falls Thursday last according to schedule and gave two lectures at the Presbyterian church—one Thursday and one Friday night. Sunday evening he occupied the pulpit by courtesy of the pastor, Rev. Andrew Walker. Rev. Monroe spent his boyhood days here with his mother, Mrs. Jos. Stuart, and his friends were pleased to find that he has developed into a very forcible and eloquent speaker.

Thursday night he dealt with "the evils of the legalized saloon." Toward the close of this lecture he aimed to show how the saloon keepers were organized to defeat the object of the prohibition party even to the extent of lawlessness and by assault.

Friday night he made a plea for the prohibition party as the instrument for remedying the liquor evil, when he said: "By the ballot the saloons were legalized and by the ballot the saloons must go. Both parties trekked to the saloon vote. The only remedy is to install in power the prohibition party."

Sunday night Rev. Monroe preached to a full house on the subject: "The Galleries of Heaven." The first step was the prophets of heaven who suffered persecution in the early day; the second was the martyrs of the early church; the third, those of our own who have gone before.

A beautiful anthem "Hear My Prayer" was rendered by the choir.

We Lose Our Physician and Mayor.

From the Delavan Herald.

It is with regret that we chronicle the departure of Drs. J. B. and M. J. McNerthney and especially the former, as he has been to many of us a true friend as well as a competent and popular physician for the past two and a half years and by his strict attention to professional duties has been fast gaining a more than county wide reputation and is acknowledged by the medical fraternity to be one of the best in the county. The doctor no doubt during his first few weeks' experience here might not have relished the idea of being alluded to as "the boy physician"—his youthful appearance being often a source of discouragement. However, this little hindrance was soon overcome, and our people found in him one whom they might trust implicitly and he carries with him to his new field their confidence, esteem and good wishes. He has accepted a lucrative position in a hospital at Tacoma, Wash., with a city practice. Dr. McNerthney, dentist, will also locate with his brother, and the two trustworthy young men will add an element of usefulness to the people of Tacoma.

Monday evening the people of Delavan gave a farewell dancing party in honor of Drs. McNerthney. The hall was beautifully decorated in autumn foliage and fully one hundred couple danced to the sweet music of Holt's Peerless orchestra. An excellent supper was laid at the Perrizo hotel followed by extending best wishes to the honored guests.

A HEARTY PARTY

A PLEASANT EVENING WITH MRS. MARSHALL AND MISS PORTER.

"Mrs. Emma F. Marshall, Miss Porter. Tuesday, Nov. 12, Eight o'clock. Shakespeare," read the invitations that called together a large company at the home of Mrs. Emma F. Marshall, corner Kretzschmar av and 6th st, Tuesday night. It was a heart party. The decorations, festoons of vari-colored paper hearts, were gracefully distributed through the rooms, while cut carnations, roses and chrysanthemums in lavish profusion lent their grace. The first feature of the evening was a progressive peanut spearing game. Tally cards were heart shaped, and embellished with pertinent quotations. At each of the nine tables was placed a pan of peanuts and each guest was presented with a dangerously sharp hat pin. The hostess gave just one minute at each bout. Then the two at each table who had made the largest haul, went up, and received a punch on the tally cards. Twenty games were played, and Miss Alice Newton, who had never missed a tally, was accorded the head prize, a sterling silver souvenir spoon, with "Red Lake Falls" artistically engraved in the gold bowl. Miss Agnes Garceau took the consolation prize—a bon bon box filled with peanuts.

Shakespeare was next. Mrs. Marshall read questions, the answers to which were titles of Shakespeare's plays. This game was greatly enjoyed, as puzzle games always are. Miss Hollingshead, Rev. Andrew Walker, J. J. Padden and Abner Fletcher scored the highest, ten correct answers each, and drew lots, Mr. Fletcher winning the prize, which was a friendship heart engraved with a picture of the High School building. The booby prize, a pin tray, went to M. A. Converse. The questions and answers are given below:

QUESTIONS.

1. What was the lover's name?
2. What was her name?
3. In what did they meet?
4. How did their love compare?
5. What won her?
6. What did she say when he proposed?
7. Of whom did she buy her trousseau?
8. When were they married?
9. Who attended the wedding?
10. Who reigned as king?
11. What did the papers say?
12. What was the romance like?
13. What did the rejected lover say?
14. What did papa say?
15. What did mamma say?

ANSWERS.

1. Romeo.
2. Juliet.
3. Tempest.
4. Measure for Measure.
5. A Lover's Complaint.
6. As You Like It.
7. Merchant of Venice.
8. Twelfth Night.
9. Two Gentlemen of Verona and Merry Wives of Windsor.
10. Lear.
11. A Comedy of Errors.
12. A midsummer Night's Dream.
13. Love's Labor Lost.
14. Much Ado About Nothing.
15. All's Well That Ends Well.

Refreshments were next in order. The sandwitches, cake and candies were all in heart shape and completed the charming effect of uniformity in decorations and favors.

The guests were favored with instrumental music by Harry and Lee Healy, A. J. Mucke and Lorena Schreiter.

Mrs. Marshall and Miss Porter were assisted by Mrs. S. M. Sivertson and Mrs. F. B. Newton.

Those present were Misses Laura Hollingshead, May Buse, Bessie Hunt, Carrie Pirath, Lorena Schreiter, Alice Buse, Agnes Garceau, Mabel Owen, Rachel Taylor, Alice Newton, Lillian Buse, Etta Zaiser, Mayme McNerthney, Milvina Allard, Ellie Hamry; Messrs. Ed. Townsend, Joe Koke, Milton Converse, Joe Poullot, Harry Healy, Ralph Wyer, Sam Hunt, Joe Allard, Abner Fletcher, V. M. Higinbotham, Lee Healy, Jack Padden, Stanley Bryant, Geo. Hennings, Thos. Germo, Ernest Buse, August Mucke, Helmuth Zaiser, S. A. Swanson, Dr. Argue, and the Rev. Andrew Walker.

LOOKING THIS WAY

CANADIAN NORTHERN ENTERING THIS FIELD AS A COMPETITIVE LINE.

NORTHERN PACIFIC AND GREAT NORTHERN MUST BUILD TO MEET IT.

Rumors as to what the Canadian Northern railroad intends to do in northwestern Minnesota have been rife for many months, and the road itself has finally made a definite announcement of its intentions, thereby outlining plans which are of great interest says the Crookston Times, to Kittson, Roseau and Beltrami counties and only in a less degree to counties south of these as far as Polk and Norman.

The Canadian Northern now enters Minnesota from Winnipeg, at a point in Roseau county, just north of Warroad, passes through the northeastern corner of that county skirting the shores of the Lake of the Woods, travels through Northern Beltrami to Beaudette at the junction of Beaudette and Rainy rivers, where it crosses the latter to Canadian soil once more. The road now announces that surveys are about to be made for a branch line beginning at Warroad and running south and west to Roseau, thence west and south again to a point near the state line in Kittson county.

The promoters of the new railway are also seriously considering extensions by branch lines south into Beltrami county and southwest into territory now controlled by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern. It is the declared intention of the promoters to break up the absolute control of the northern tier of counties now held by the other lines.

The new railway connecting at Warroad with the Canadian Northern main-line, will afford a direct route to Port Arthur from territory at present without railway facilities. Its projected position is admittedly strong, since it controls traffic to the lake and leaves the Great Northern and Northern Pacific unable to meet competition except via a circuitous haul and by concessions.

The construction planned is in the interests of Port Arthur as a lake port, as opposed to Duluth. An attempt is to be made to divert grain traffic to Port Arthur elevators and docks and to capture a share in the annual movement from the northern counties, annually becoming more important.

The entire route over which it is planned to build has been carefully prospected. A survey will be made during the winter or early spring. It is not yet known how soon construction will begin, but it is stated that the new line will be in operation within eighteen months.

This definite announcement of the intentions of the Canadian Northern will be hailed with great satisfaction by the people of Roseau county, whose great hunger for a railroad has been growing greater with every month.

The construction of this branch will undoubtedly mean at least two railroads for Roseau county, for the Great Northern will not tarry long with its Thief River Falls extension when it is assured that the Canadian Northern is actually beginning to invade the territory which it now controls. A preliminary survey from Thief River Falls north into Roseau county has already been made and the Great Northern is prepared to be running trains through Roseau county as soon as any other road.

The Canadian Northern has been making its foothold sure in northern Minnesota during a number of years past, with the intention of getting a goodly share of business of this section. The announcement of its intention to build through Roseau county and to construct a line south toward this city is evidence that the road now believes itself in a position to go after the rapidly increasing business of the northwest in earnest, and it may safely be said that railroad construction in the counties from Polk north will be more active during the next two or three years than ever before.

FROM WASHINGTON

L. R. BRAMSNESS, WHO HAS LOCATED THERE, WRITES A LETTER.

Rochester, Wash., Nov. 6, 1901.
Editor Gazette,—

As I promised many Red Lake county friends to write my impressions of this country, I pen these lines to The Gazette, rather than to write each one individually, as I know everybody in Red Lake county takes your paper.

To begin with, must express my thankfulness to F. A. Mizen, Northern Pacific agent at Red Lake Falls, for his advice and kindness bestowed upon us, and in fact the N. P. may be proud of a good many of its officials enroute. Upon reaching the main line we took a Pullman sleeper and paid $5 for a double berth, and were placed in care of two of the noblest gentlemen it has ever been our pleasure to meet—E. W. Roberts, Pullman conductor, and W. Clayton, porter. And I am fully convinced that any one who has occasion to accept of their good offices will join in my conclusions.

The scenery through the BadLands and the Rockies, was very different from what we have been accustomed to in Red Lake county. On Thursday morning after a sound sleep through Idaho we entered Spokane, Washington, to see the wheat green in the fields and on through Eastern Washington where new towns are springing up at a great rate along the railway line. But the finest country begins near North Yakima and Ellensburg. From there we crossed the Cascade mountains and arrived in Tacoma Thursday evening. Friday morning we started for our new home and arriving at Rochester early in the afternoon, were met by our friends and relatives.

We find here a state that befits its name—Evergreen. Our best regards to you and all our good friends in the old home.

L. R. Bramsness.

Crookston to be Headquarters.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 13.—The Great Northern has decided to make Crookston the general freight headquarters for both the Dakota and the Northern divisions. The details of the change were settled at a conference held here between Assistant General Superintendent Gruber, Supt. McLaren, of the Dakota division, and Chief Engineer Winney, of the Dakota division. It is estimated that the change will bring about 500 people to Crookston. George Johnson has been appointed travelling engineer for the Dakota division, with headquarters in this city.

ALL HAULED.

Over 130,000,000 Feet of Logs Taken to Brainerd.

From the Bemidji Pioneer.

Silent are the bolsters on both lakes, and the Minnesota & International has completed it season's work of hauling logs under contract with different firms in Minneapolis and Stillwater.

The road has transported in all about 130,000,000 feet of logs, being more by one-half almost than was transported last year. All these logs have not gone to Minneapolis and Stillwater. Train after train load were brought to this city and dumped into the river at Brainerd.

The logging trains and hoisting crews will be at work for a short time now picking up the logs along the way that have fallen from the cars. It cannot be estimated how long this will take, but it is not expected that it will take more than another week.

Advertised Letters.

The following letters remain unclaimed in the postoffice at Red Lake Falls for the week ending Nov. 9th, 1901:

Mr. C.J. Ereckson, John Patenaude.

If not called for in two weeks these letters will be sent to dead letter office as prescribed by law. In calling for the above please say "advertised."

BOYS IN COURT

DOLPHUS MORAN WILL BE COMMITTED TO THE STATE REFORM SCHOOL.

On complaint of Moses Belair, warrants were issued on Tuesday for the arrest of Dolphus Moran, aged 12, adopted son of A. J. Lachapelle, and Joseph Cyr, aged 9, son of Frank Cyr, charged with having broken into and entered the dwelling house of Moses Belair, Moran's uncle. The boys were after some of Mrs. Belair's fine preserves, according to their own statements. On motion of the county attorney the case against Cyr was dismissed, it appearing that he had been led into the deed by Moran without realizing the situation.

It was the recommendation of Judge Toupin that Moran be committed to the state reform school. One of these schools is located at Owatonna, the other at Faribault. The instructions given are very complete and embrace manual training where the pupils are taught useful trades. Commitments are made on order of the district judge, and the papers were to-day forwarded to Judge Watts at Warren where district court is now in session, with County Attorney Grady's strong approval.

It appears that young Moran has been indulging in a series of lawless escapades, and it has been his aim to entice other boys of his age and younger to join his band. Sunday he led four lads in an assault on the High School windows during broad day light and no less than twenty lights were broken. Passers by were hooted at and high carnival reigned.

The authorities announce that very stringent measures will be taken to prevent the growth of this lawless spirit among our boys.

Exciting Times at Ft. Leavenworth.

Editor Gazette:

Leavenworth, Kan., Nov. 7.—A mutiny broke out among the convicts at the new federal penitentiary site at Fort Leavenworth this afternoon and twenty-five escaped. One was killed and another fatally wounded. Shortly before quitting time this afternoon three convicts, led by Frank Thompson, a powerful negro, entered the office of Frank Hinds, the constructing engineer. The convicts commanded the officers to hold up their hands, presenting pistols to their heads. The officers complied, and while two convicts covered the officers the third jerked the telephone from the wall so that no one might send in an alarm. The officers were made to march as shields in front of the convicts, while they approached Tower Guard Hoffman. This guard was commanded not to shoot by Mr. Hinds, who was in danger from two sources.

The convicts seized a heavy timber and broke down a high board gate and called on all to follow. Only twenty-five left the stockade. Much shooting followed after the mutineers got outside. They kept the captured officers with them for a quarter of a mile after leaving the stockade until they seized teams to ride away.

The convicts ran people into their houses, took forcible possession of rigs and anything that suited them. They stopped citizens along the road as far out as ten miles and made them give up their clothing in exchange for the convicts' garb.

Word was finally sent into the main pen at Fort Leavenworth of the mutiny and battle at the stockade and a force of reserve guards hurried to the place. The military authorities were asked for aid and a troop of cavalry was soon in motion. The soldiers, armed with carbines, surrounded the stockade and helped form an armed square in marching the remaining convicts back to the old penitentiary.

No efforts were made to hunt down the escaping convicts until after dark. It required several hours to check up and learn who were missing. The cavalry will assist the guards in capturing the convicts. It is said that the convicts scattered and broke up in small parties after getting out six miles from the city.

GROWS SERIOUS.

MYSTERIOUS HORSE DISEASE CLAIMS MANY VICTIMS.

Donat Lambert was in from Terrebonne to-day and reports the loss of six horses with the mysterious disease which seems to be carrying off horses all over the county at an alarming rate.

Since the report published in The Gazette last week as to the spread of the horse disease and the serious losses entailed by Terrebonne and Polk Centre farmers, we have received advices from several other sections of the county, and it appears that the disease which has carried off nine horses for Jos. Laurent since last August, and six for Donat Lambert in the past three months, has a foothold in Red Lake Falls, Louisville, Wyandotte, Emardville and River Falls townships, and the losses aggregate thousands of dollars. Dr. Reynolds, state veterinarian has been written and telegraphed to but up to the hour of going to press there has been no response.

The situation is one that grows in seriousness.

Death of Grant Lawton.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Lawton were on Monday called upon to part with their son Grant, who was eleven years old last Decoration day. Mr. Lawton having been a soldier of the Civil War with the Union Army, the birth of a son on this day so dear to all old soldiers had a double significance and the boy was christened Grant.

The immediate cause of Grant's death was congestion of the lungs, as a result of falling in the river last week.

The funeral occurred Wednesday, the remains being interred in Oakwood cemetery. Schoolmates sent beautiful floral tributes and words of condolence to the grief stricken parents, whose home has been deprived of its only little one.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawton request The Gazette to say that the many deeds of kindness showered upon them and especially the tributes of the school-children are deeply appreciated.

Cupid Does Big Business.

The past week has been a busy one in the matrimonial line, no less than eight licenses having been issued by Clerk of Court Perrault. They line up as follows:

Myron L. Delomater to Emma Kortgaard, both of St. Hilaire, Thursday.

Emery Dion and Azelie Paquin, both of Poplar River, Friday.

Gilbert Lonson and Ella Voss, both of Thief River Falls, Saturday.

Nels M. Bolstad and Nancy Emelia Egland, both of Gully, Monday.

Julian Jacobson and Julia Josephson, both of Thief River Falls, Wednesday.

Olof Hanson and Helda Clementson, both of Thief River Falls, Wednesday.

G. O. Underdahl and Mrs. Esther Tandberg, both of Equality, Tuesday.

George Mennler, of Lambert, and Tillie Quesnell, of Terrebonne, Wednesday.

A Good Clover Story.

From the Crookston Journal.

In the office of Ed. L. Healy Land company at Red Lake Falls is a sample of red clover taken from the farm of John Stein, who lives on section 32, town of Emardville, that is over four feet long. Mr. Stein has about three acres of this clover which was sowed in 1900, and yielded this year between four and five tons per acre. The land was cleared of timber six years ago and sowed to red-top, and has furnished good crops of that grass ever since. Last year it was sowed to clover with the result stated.

Good Thing.

The Red Lake Falls Athletic Association has reorganized. The boys have rented a room 20 x 40 opposite The Gazette office which is being fitted as a gymnasium. With the advent of cold weather the young men are barred from out-door athletics, and the club will supply the means for amusement and exercise, besides keeping the members from indulgence in less worthy pastimes.

The club has not as yet elected officers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

SCHLEY COURT OF INQUIRY.

The time of the Schley court of inquiry Tuesday was entirely devoted to hearing arguments in the case of Admiral Schley. Mr. Hanna finished his argument in behalf of the department, which had been begun Monday, and Captain James Parker began, but did not conclude, his presentation of the case for Admiral Schley. Mr. Hanna considered the retrograde movement, the bombardment of the Colon, and the charge made against Admiral Schley of disobedience of orders. Captain Parker had only reached the coaling question when the court adjourned. He defended the conduct of his client at all stages of the campaign so far as he went.

The climax of the Schley court of inquiry came Wednesday afternoon when Mr. Rayner, the chief counsel for Admiral Schley, concluded a brilliant argument of over three hours with a peroration so eloquent and impassioned that all within the sound of his voice were profoundly touched. This remarkable trial, he said, sought to condemn the man who had brought to a successful termination as great a naval triumph as was ever won. In vivid colors he painted the picture of the Brooklyn with Commodore Schley on the bridge fighting the entire Spanish fleet until the Oregon appeared out of the smoke. The thunders of the Brooklyn, music for the ears of his countrymen, aroused Admiral Schley's envious foes. He pictured the victorious sailor suffering as few have suffered for three long years while the fires of persecution leaped around him and now awaiting the hour of his vindication in the verdict of the court. "And when it comes," he concluded, "he can, from the high and exalted position he occupies, look down upon his traducers and maligners and with excellent pride exclaim: 'I care not for the venomous gossip of clubs, drawing rooms and cliques and the poisoned shafts of envy and of malice. I await under the guidance of divine Providence the verdict of posterity.'"

After sittings covering 40 days and with a record which when completed will cover about 2,000 pages the Schley court of inquiry adjourned at 3:45 p. m. Thursday. To Captain Lemly, the judge advocate, had been assigned the duty of making the closing argument, and as was the case when Mr. Rayner spoke the attendance was large. Captain Lemly read the speech in clear and distinct tones and was given careful attention. The speech in the main was an analysis of the testimony, but occasionally a conclusion was drawn and frequently there was criticism of the course pursued by Admiral (then Commodore) Schley. Towards the close of his remarks, speaking of Commodore Schley's conduct, Captain Lemly said: "From my knowledge of the man, having served under his command on two cruises, I have never believed, nor do I claim from the evidence that personal misconduct—or, to call a spade a spade, cowardice—was exhibited by Commodore Schley in any part of his career as commander-in-chief of the flying squadron. But I submit with regret that in the passage from Key West to Cienfuegos, while at the latter port, en route to the southward of Santiago without settled destination, in the retrograde movement, in the return to the vicinity of Santiago and in the affair of May 31, the commodore exhibited unsteadiness in purpose and in push and in the failure to obey orders."

UNVEILED AT TOWER

FIRST M'KINLEY MONUMENT TO BE ERECTED IN THE UNITED STATES.

Northern Pacific Station at Brainerd Robbed—Government Lands in Minnesota Rapidly Disappearing—Proposed New Branch of the Milwaukee Road—News of the State in General.

Duluth, Nov. 12.—About 5,000 people assembled at Tower to witness the unveiling and dedication of the first McKinley monument in the United States. Special trains were run from Ely and the towns on the Mesabo range and many prominent men of the county were present. Governor Van Saat reviewed the parade and took part in the exercises. He made a speech eulogizing McKinley and later sent the following dispatch to Mrs. McKinley:

"Today at Tower the first monument in Minnesota, if not in the United States, was unveiled and dedicated in memory of your late beloved husband."

The exercises were preceded by a parade participated in by bands from Ely, Tower, Soudan and various organizations, largely Finnish and Austrian. Besides Governor Von Sant addresses were made by J. Adam Bede, Dr. Robert Forbes, T. J. McKeon of Duluth and Mgr. Buh, the veteran Catholic missionary.

The monument is an iron pedestal 18 feet high and cost $12,000, which was subscribed by residents of Tower and Soudan, largely Finns and Austrians.

ROBBERY AT BRAINERD.

Pay Checks, Vouchers and Other Papers Taken.

Brainerd, Minn., Nov. 6.—One of the boldest thefts reported in this city for some time occurred in the office of Agent W. D. McKay of the Northern Pacific, when some light-fingered individual made a big haul of time checks, vouchers and pay checks, which aggregate several thousand dollars.

The theft was not made public until late yesterday afternoon, and an officer last night arrested a man by the name of D. L. Richardson, a brakeman who had recently been discharged from the Northern Pacific sanitarium in this city. Some of the money and pay checks were found on his person.

LAND GOING RAPIDLY.

Washington, Nov. 10.—The desirable government lands in Minnesota are going rapidly. According to the field notes in the office of the commissioner of the general land office there remain in the state 4,140,193 acres of unappropriated land. Only about half of this is described in the field notes as "good land," the other half being variously described as sandy, timber, brush and prairie, iron, nickel, etc. Of the unappropriated lands 1,967,285 is surveyed, and the remainder unsurveyed.

The greater part of the public land remaining in the state is located in the Duluth land district, which comprises the counties of Aitkin, Carlton, Cook, Itasca, Lake and St. Louis.

MILWAUKEE BUYING PROPERTY

Secures Land for Its New Faribault-Zumbrota Line.

Faribault, Minn., Nov. 6.—E. W. Adams of Milwaukee, an official of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway company, is buying up a valuable strip of land in South Faribault, on which options were secured last week by an Iowa real estate dealer. The purchase price will aggregate in the neighborhood of $40,000. Mr. Adams says the property will be used by the Milwauke road for its new line between Faribault and Zumbrota, which will be built next spring. A crew of surveyors of the Milwaukee road arrived in this city today to begin the preliminary survey of the proposed new line.

BOX FACTORY BURNED.

Loss of $25,000 in a Recent Fire at Duluth.

Duluth, Nov. 7.—The Duluth Box company's factory was destroyed by fire about 2:30 o'clock this morning, and also the dry kiln of the Merrill & Ring Lumber company. The latter company owned the building in which the box factory was located and with the buildings and some lumber burned sustains a loss of about $12,000, with insurance of $6,000.

The box company's loss was about $8,000 on machinery and plant, with $1,500 insurance, and about $1,500 on lumber with $4,000 insurance. It is owned by Pennsylvania people, and was only started in June.

CLERGYMEN AT WAR.

Suit for Alleged Defamation of Character Begun.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 9.—A sensational suit was today begun in district court for Polk county in which John Vik, of Erskine, claims $500 damages for defamation of character. The defendant in the suit is Christopher Dallager, also of Erskine, and both parties are Lutheran clergymen of that place. Mr. Vik claims that on July 21, of this year, [illegible] Dallager preached a sermon [illegible] in which Vik was accused of [illegible] at different times and with different persons. The suit is the result of a personal difference of long standing between the two clergymen.

POSTOFFICE ROBBED.

Burglars Get $200 From a Safe at Rollingstone, Minn.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 5.—Burglars entered the general store and postoffice operated by J. N. Rivera at Rollingstone, blew open the safe and secured nearly $200 in cash.

The safe blowing was done by the use of dynamite in an expert manner. Two strangers who have been hanging around the village are suspected.

AT PORT OF DULUTH.

Business for Current Year Will Not Break Any Records.

Duluth, Nov. 12.—The marine business of the port of Duluth for the season of 1901 will not break records, according to the returns made to the local customs office. The total shipments from the port up to Nov. 5 have been 3,659,257 tons, compared with 4,191,861 tons in 1900, 4.2222,352 in 1899 and 3,047,130 in 1898. With about one month yet to go, as the season ends Dec. 5, due to the prohibitive insurance rates tacked on at that time, it is probable that the shipments for 1900 will be equaled, but not materially exceeded.

The feature of the business has been the lumber shipments, and before the season closes it is expected that the grain shipments will be large enough to be notable. The lumber shipments have already exceeded those of all of last year by 50,000,000 feet, and it is probable that the increase will approximate 100,000,000 feet before the close.

Grain shipments must make up about 3,000,000 bushels before equaling those of last year.

Ore shipments from Duluth during the season have been about average, although the end of the season will show somewhat of an increase.

The receipts for the season to Nov. 5 have been 1,116,830 tons, compared with 1,316,607 in 1899 and 1,115,510 in 1898.

FOR BREACH OF PROMISE.

Redwood Falls Woman Given a Verdict of $750.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Nov. 9.—The jury in the celebrated breach of promise case of Mary M. Birum vs. Isaac Johnson, a well-to-do retired farmer of this county, residing in the city at the present time, returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $750. The plaintiff is 51 years old and is a divorced woman. The defendant is 76 years old and is a widower. He denied ever having made her a promise of marriage, but Mrs. Birum swore positively that he did, and on the evidence of other witnesses to the effect that Johnson was frequently seen with the plaintiff and that he had given her money for a marriage trousseau, the jury brought in the verdict. The amount sued for was $5,000.

BISHOP OF MINNESOTA.

Rev. Samuel C. Edsall Inducted Into Office.

St. Paul, Nov. 5.—Bishop Samuel C. Edsall has been formally inducted into the office of bishop of Minnesota. The ceremonies took place at 11 o'clock in Christ church, "the mother church" of the Minnesota Episcopalians.

Bishop Morrison of the missionary district of Duluth read the office of institution; Bishop Williams of Nebraska read the epistle; Bishop Anderson of Chicago read the gospel. Christ church vested choir, led by R. Nelson Barber, sang the offertory, "Send out the Light." The musical service throughout was elaborate and impressive.

VESSELMEN DESERT.

Prefer Life of "Lumberjack" to That of Sailor.

Duluth, Nov. 7.—The good wages in the woods are proving so attractive to the men that follow the lakes that masters and owners of vessels are becoming distracted. The season on the lakes is growing short, and the weather from now on makes it most uncomfortable and even dangerous to be a sailor. So the men are deserting at all points at the head of the lakes, seeking work in the woods rather than remain on the lakes. It would be possible to follow them up and put them in jail for deserting, but that would involve so much expense, when there are so many deserters, that there is no probability that it will be done.

MORE MONEY SAVED.

Increase in Deposits of Minnesota Savings Banks.

St. Paul, Nov. 12.—The statement of the public examiner of the condition of Minnesota savings banks at the close of business Oct. 31 shows $118,072.29 more on deposit than in September, 1901, and $1,508,505.34 more than in October, 1900. The amount of deposits is $14,017,736.40, compared with $13,899,664.11 Sept. 30, and $12,419,231.06 on Oct. 31, 1900. The number of open accounts Oct. 31 was 58,885, an increase of 728 over the previous month, and 5,715 over October last year.

RAILROAD WINS.

Damage Suit Decided Against Minneapolis Parties.

Mankato, Minn., Nov. 10.—The jury in the case of Seelye C. Gregory and wife of Minneapolis, against the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway company, tried in the federal court, returned a verdict in favor of the defendant. The action was brought to recover $20,000 for alleged injuries received by Mrs. Gregory by falling over baggage on the depot platform at Elwood, Io., and Mr. Gregory sued for $5,000 for the loss of his wife's company during the time she was unable to be about the house.

Faster Time to Chicago.

St. Paul, Nov. 7.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad has withdrawn permanently from the agreement of 12 years' standing governing the time of trains between Chicago and St. Paul. The effect will be the immediate and complete reconstruction of its schedules and the reduction of through time from 13 hours and 20 minutes to about 10 hours.

Minnesota Man Named.

Washington, Nov. 4.—The president has appointed John W. Riddle of Minnesota to be secretary of the United States embassy at St. Petersburg. Mr. Riddle was formerly secretary of the United States legation at Constantinople and is an accomplished diplomatist and linguist.

ROOSEVELT'S OPPORTUNITY.

President Roosevelt is the kind of man whose actions invite criticism. Criticism is forthcoming when one prominently before the public does hings out of the generally accepted order. And President Roosevelt is always making innovations. Had it not been so he would not now be occuping the presidential chair.

When he first assumed the office he seemed to have the united sympathy and cordial support of the nation to a greater degree than had any of his predecessors during the last half of the country's history.

There is a North, a South, an East and a West in the UnitedStates however much we may wish to the contrary. Orators may orate and poets sing of the division that has been mended and of the assimilation of the Blue and Gray, but rot only does the gap remain; there is another developing between the East and West.

The South is still the South: the blood of the barefoot boy tingles in unison with that of the gray haired sire when sound the strains of Dixie; the North is still the North and the conquorer, bold in its feeling of rightconsness and power; the East has its standards and its deep seated conservatism; while the West with aspirations all its own chafes under the dilatory advanee of that era when its dream of sectional ascendency shall be realized. And yet the new president was received with cordial warmth by all sections. The South—was be not of Southern blood?—the North, the South's claim a mere groundless sentiment; the West, had he not lived its life, imbibed its aspirations?—the East, with it, of it.

Now President Roosevelt has lost, irretrievably lost, the South and he has been in the chair but a few days. The East as represented by the trust controlling element, chafes under the mere suspicion of a sentiment for tariff revislon. And so it goes.

What a strain must the hourly, daily, weekly, monthly, yearly pressure, brought to bear upun a president by those seeking to influence his policies, be! Especcially to one like Roosevelt, given to consultations, and setting his iron will against temptations that ambition throws his way, yet listens merely to garner the true metal from the alloy, the right principles from among the chaff of doubtful-charactered expedients; and the wisdom that lies like the pearl, fathom deep.

What Rooscuelt really is, may for the moment be lost sight of, when he has trampled upon sectional prejudices and raised a resultant storm. But the all important question being asked by an appreciative nation is, can he remain as he is? That is all the American people ask of him. Today there are Demo crats by the tens of thousands who would vote for Roosevelt in preference to any other candidate because he represents the ideal president, the highest type of American manhood and the exemplification of the stuff that our institutions can produce.

Let the Roosevelt of tomorrow remain the Roosevelt of today and the nation will say he has lived up to his opportunities. It will forget the storms that are brewed by innovations and be desirous of retaining the ideal

Mrs. Chas. S. Mitchell, wife of the editor of the Alexandria Post-News, died on Thursday last. Bro. Mitchell has the profound sympathy of the entire newspaper fraternity in this affliction. Words are weak; but if there is sustaining influence in the deep-seated sorrow of his brother craftsmen, his grief will be at least tempered with the sweet though inadequate consolation.

NEW INDIAN POLICY.

Since the visit of Commissioner Jones to this st on, there have been several reports as to his advocacy of a new Indian policy which would open all the reservations, after allotments to the Indians. The latest that comes from Washington is considered reliabie, and indicates a coming reform in the Indian policy:

After his interest in the irrigation of the arid lands of the West, the question which, apart from practical politics, of course, is proving most interesting to the President is the Indian. The President has lived in the West and knows of the Indian's character. He also knows the serious defects of the present system of dealing with him and believes that it could be greatly improved. He wants to institute some method by which the Indians can be made entirely self-supporting and he has held a number of conferences with Indian Commissioner Jones, on the subject. Commissioner Jones entertains some of the most radical ideas.

He would give to every Indian a farm of 160 acres and teach him how to farm it. The President appreciates that it would be an immense stride if every Indian could be settled on a farm and rendered capable of supporting himself but he also appreciates that an almost insurmountable obstacle stands in the way which is that the Indian does not wish to become self-supporting, preferring to live as the ward of the government and fondly believing that he is receiving from the government only a very beggarly return for the land which "the pale-face" has taken from him. It is altogether likely, however, that the President's message will contain some unique recommendation on this subject.

KNUTE NELSON AT HOME.

Minnesota in the person of her senior senator furnishes to the nation at large an example of a statesman-political-citizen worthy of emulation. Knute Nelson of Alexandria is known as the commoner of his day and generation, and he has without evident effort and unconsciously earned the title. When the long strain of a session of the United States senate has enervated the bodily strength and taxed near to the point of collapse the mental faculties of those members of the senate who are really in the inner circle of the senate leadership, it is customary for these men to seatter to the various resorts of pleasure and recreation, where weeks are passed in building anew the brain tissue that has been dissipated by work during the session. Knute Nelson, however, returns to Minnesota, and its invigorating climate, and finds his recreation on his farm homestead near Alexandria, Douglas county.

Here a modest frame house on a tract of perhaps 600 acres of tillable land is Mr. Nelson's home. The land is rolling in its nature and quite an area of the farm has only recently been reclaimed from meadows by an extensive system of ditching. It was while this work was in progress that Mr. Nelson was in his element. It was commenced early last summer and the work occupied two months or more. Donning a pair of overalls and a broad-brimmed hat he arose with the sun and spent the entire day with his employes. After an early breakfast the crew and its "boss" partook of a lunch in the field prior to the dinner hour. Another lunch broke the long afternoon and at sundown supper was served at the farm house. Quantities of drain tile have been laid in the new-made ditches and it is probably true that no farm in central or northern Minnesota is now better drained than that of Senator Nelson near Alexendria.

The influence of this quiet, domestic gentleman, whose movements are unheralded, whose home is a synonym for peacefulness and domestic happiness, and whose ability is unquestioned, is perhaps one of the most powerful factors of the political being of the nation.—St. Cloud Journal-Press.

Judge Ives published this prose poem in his Cass Lake Times last week:

Last Sunday morning
Those who were up early
Might have seen the first blasts of winter.
Old Boreas had taken control
Of the forces during the night
And when he awoke
There was a real shiver in the air
And the freshest of breezes
From Dakota
Were piping through the jack pines
And singing the same old tune
That everyone is familiar with.
The chipmunk has gone to his hole for the winter
To feast on the pine nuts
He has laid up
During the last fine weather:
The ducks and the geese
Have followed the crows and the robins
To their winter home; and the muskrat
Who remains with us
To bear the burden of a northern clime
Has gone to his mud hut
Among the marshes
And serenely pokes his head out
While the boreal blasts
Sweep over the land
And grim Ice King holds control
Of the glassy lake where he was wont
To disport himself
On the silvery ripples.
The first snow came a day later
And the boy with his sled
And the youth with his skis and skates
Is gaily gliding over the frozen lakes,
Catching sweet smiles
From the coy miss, whose hand
He is permitted to hold
As they swiftly spin over the glassy surface.
Who would not be a boy again?
Who would not give
The best part of his world's goods
If he could turn back
The years that have silently passed
Over his head just for the pleasure
Of again enjoying the sports
Of the crisp winter's night
With skates and hand sleds on the hill sides
Hand in hand with the girl of his choice?

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Miller, yesterday morning, a son.

Mrs. W. A. Schroiter returned Friday from her Thief River Falls visit.

L. C. Simons returned Tuesday from a weeks' visit with his wife at Minneapolis.

Attorney H. W. Lee and his grip got off the G. N. Monday and tarried with us between trains.

Lou Adams, accompanied by the Misses Bertha and Clara Zaiser, drove to St. Hilaire Sunday.

The last regular Saturday night dance at Maccabee hall was one of the most pleasant events in the series.

J. A. Allard's up-to-date confectionery meets the season half way. Fine cold weather drinks and all seasonable goods.

Paul Beck will give a turkey raffle on his farm Saturday night and he extends his friends a cordial invitation to be present.

Mrs. O. Mikkelsen Saturday enjoyed a visit from her brother, A. Audette, of the land firm of Audette & Co., Crookston.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Demerais left Tuesday for Wetaskinwin, N. W. T., to visit for four weeks with their daughter, Mrs. Peter Patnode.

Albert O. Espe, of Crookston, has just received a patent for a new land roller that is expected to do wonders in the agricultural line.

Joseph Laurent on Monday reported the death of his ninth horse since August. The value of the animals averaged about $100 apiece.

Chas. Liebel drove in from Wylie Tuesday to consult a doctor. Mr. Liebel says his whole family is ill, and the baby quite seriously so.

P. O. Nelson and Albert Fellman of St. Hilaire were city visitors Saturday. Mr. Nelson came down to look after his interests in the divorce suit instituted by his wife.

Miss Theodora Cadieux returned Monday from Grand Forks where she has been visiting with her brothers, L. J. and Z. A. Cadieux. Miss Cadieux will shortly return to the Forks to keep house for her brothers.

Adam Fritz, who has been here this fall giving his son Harry some pointers in farming—and otherwise—left Tuesday for his home in St. Paul. Now if Harry will follow the advice, the girls—but we won't give it away.

Dr. Henry Stuhr came in from Crookston Friday and remained over Sunday visiting with his sisters here. Dr. Stuhr has concluded to locate in Seattle and will go out there in time to take the state board examination in January.

M. O. Ottum, of Fertile, was in the city Monday and purchased from W. A. Riechel the baker's supplies which had been used by Ernest Lefave in the City Bakery here. Mr. Ottum shipped them to Fertile where he will conduct a bakery.

County Attorney Grady says all the Red Lake county prisoners with the exception of "Dotty" are now at liberty. Geo Gervais is out on $300 bail furnished by Mrs. Sophia Busch, while his wife has been given freedom from restraint on her own recognizance.

W. A. Swanson, of Gurnes, has returned from a season's threshing in the vicinity of Park River, N. Dak., and reports crops, and particularly flax, as having been very good in that section this season, some fields having yielded as high as 25 bushels per acre.

Miss Emily Belair, of Thief River Falls, was in the city Monday and Tuesday soliciting votes for her father who is a candidate for sponsor of the new St. Bernard's church bell. The votes are 10 cents apiece and Miss Belair succeeded in corralling a goodly number. She was accompanied by Miss Anna Soards.

D. W. Brown returned Saturday from his fall work in North Dakota with a threshing crew, and says the boys over there have considerable work before them yet. Thousands of Polk, Red Lake, Beltrami and Itasca county settlers have made good wages there this fall, returning to their homes with neat little rolls aggregating in many instances as high as $150.

Zotique Bray has associated himself with his brother Ed. in the dray business, and the firm name will be Bray Bros. On Monday the firm purchased from the Red Lake Falls Lumber Company 1000 cords of wood—600 cords of slab wood, and 400 cords of pick-up wood. This is being sold for $1.25 and $1.00 a cord respectively, at the mill. $1.00 a load is charged for drayage.

Your Eyes Tested Scientifically by an Expert Optician.

Your eyes are a most delicate organ, you can afford to take no chances. All work entrusted to us receives the most conscientious attention.

Henry W. Anderson,
State Graduate.

Attorney W. A. McIntyre went to St Paul Monday.

Drs. J. B. and M. J. McNerthney left yesterday for Tacoma.

L. E. Gossman, the Crookston attorney, was a caller in the city Tuesday.

Miss Mary Lemay, of St. Hilaire, was in the city Monday between trains.

Miss Obeline Morean on Monday returned from Crookston for a visit with her parents.

P. B. Gans returned yesterday from Iowa and says a big wave of immigration is to follow.

When your eyes trouble you go to Henry W. Anderson, Expert Optician, State Graduate.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Little Joe Cyr, a son. To Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Guerin, today, a son.

Mrs. H. J. Kaufer left Monday for LeSuer, called by the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Brahs.

Rev. Monroe left Monday for Spring Valley where he delivered a temperance lecture Tuesday night.

Joe Miller on Saturday opened his new barber shop. He is located in the old Palace Jewelry Store stand.

Mrs. Roosevelt's favorite—Lightner's perfumes. You will use no other if you try them, at Schreiter's drug store.

Chas. Akerlund, who is working for the Bank of Red Lake Falls spent Sunday in Crookston, returning Monday.

Lightner's perfumes—True Pink, Red Roses, Wild Lilly-belle, French Roses. Truly exquisite, at Schreiter's drug store.

Olof Henson, captain of the steamer Marguerite, which plies Thief River and Red Lake when the ice is out, was here to-day on business.

Ben Olson and Frank Halter met at Thief River Falls last week to decide the local wrestling championship and the former won easily.

J. Q. Adams returned Friday from Crookston where he had been in the employ of Odette & Co., land agents, the preceding three months.

A dancing party and a turkey raffle attracted a large crowd to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cyr Saturday night and a fine time is reported.

Webb Langworthy, of Vlasaty, Dodge county, has purchased a farm in Emardville from the Elwood Land Co. and is getting ready to build a house.

P. K. Olson, the McCormick collector, gave his company's patrons in the vicinity of Thief River Falls a chance to square themselves last week. He returned home Friday.

Superintendent Hoverstud, of the Crookston experimental station, will conduct farmer's institutes in North Dakota this fall under the auspices of the Agricultural college.

John Miller, who purchased a farm in Louisville from the Elwood Land Co., came up this week from Vlasaty, Dodge county, with his family, and took possession of his place. He brought with him a carload of stock.

T. W. Hoover returned Friday from Devil's Lake. He has a claim fifty miles west of that place which he has held down for two years. Land in the vicinity of his homestead is now selling at $15 and $25 per acre.

Ole O. Lee, Albert Gaulthier and A. A. Gudvangin of Emmons came up Thursday and were shown about the county by representatives of the Ed. L. Healy Land & Loan Co. They have decided to invest in Red Lake county farm lands.

Louis Albers, deputy state boiler inspector for Polk and Red Lake counties, has about wound up his work for the year. He has made 250 inspections and has a record for competence and thoroughness which speaks well for the judgment of those who saw him appointed.

Alex Sauve, who belongs to the class of Wearie Willies, was arrested yesterday for assault on L. Albert, the baker, and hauled up before Judge Toupin was fined $25 and costs or 30 days in the county jail. He was minus the price of liberty and now languishes in durance vile.

Commissioner J. B. Hebert must be an early riser. Monday morning he drove in from his Poplar River farm, arriving in the city before some of our business men were at their offices. There must be some good reasons for Mr. Hebert's success and an abundance of well directed energy is probably one of them.

Mrs. Josie Short, the details of whose romance were published in last week's Gazette, was in the city Monday, spending some of that Klondike money. She purchased a team of driving horses, a surrey, a set of harness, a two seated cutter, and a goodly supply of dry goods. During the day her purchases amounted to over seven hundred dollars worth and everything was paid for in cash.

Dr. B. E. Dahlgren, who located at Thief River Falls a month ago to practice dentistry, has accepted a position as demonstrator at Yale, with a salary of $4,000. Dr. Dahlgren is an artist at clay modeling. This he will utilize in connection with his work, and this is what fetched the fine place for him. Another dentist has gone up to take his place at Thief River Falls.

With the Churches.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

Nov. 13 is the beginning of the Mohammedan month Shabaan, twelfth of the year, 1319.

A second choir is being organized by the Presbyterian society for Sunday morning services.

Nov. 15 is the anniversary of the birth, in 1615, of Richard Baxter, English divine and writer.

Nov. 15 is celebrated in the Catholic calendar in honor of St. Machatus, bishop of St. Malo, France. He is the patron saint of that city.

Sunday, Nov. 10 was the anniversary of the birth, in 579, of Mahomet, the Arabian prophet, and founder of Islamism: and of Martin Luther, in 1483.

The hours of service at the Presbyterian church will, after next Sunday, taking effect on the 24th inst, change as follows: Morning services, 0:45; Sunday school, 11:45.

The Rev. P. Ansgar has appointed as a committee to look after the Thanksgiving dinner to be given by the ladies of St. Mary's church, Mrs. T. R. Dargan, Mrs. Ed. Enright and Miss Sophia Schusser.

Nov. 13 is honored in the Roman calendar for St. Britius, who succeeded St. Martin in the bishopric of Tours, France. It is also the day of St. Augustine, one of the greatest of the Latin fathers and authors.

The "rummage sale" is the latest for church societies. In Fergus Falls, the Episcopaleans have just cleared $200 on one. Such a sale is the means of putting unused articles into use again. It also adds funds to a good cause.

Nov. 11 is St. Martin's day, in honor of the French bishop of Tours, for whom is named the fine spell of weather known in Europe as St. Martin's summer, and in this country as Indian summer. A similar spell of bright weather prevails in many countries at this season.

At a meeting of the delegates from Rev. I. T. Aastad's congregations held last week to advise him in regard to the call from the Grand Forks church, it was the unanimous advice that he refuse the call. Rev. Aastad has concluded therefore to remain with his present charges at Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls and Wyandotte.

The Presbyterian choir which has recently been organized to render music at Sunday evening service is constituted as follows: Leader, Prof. F. A. Whitley; organist, Mrs. E. F. Marshall; sopranos, Mrs. E. F. Marshall, Miss Owen; altos, Miss Wetzel, Miss Zaiser; bass, Ed L. Healy, H. H. Zaiser; tenor, Prof. Whitley, J. W. Rodgers. This choir is for the evening service only.

A number of Red Lake Falls people this week received invitations from Thief River Falls reading as follows: The members of St. Bernard's Church cordially invite you to witness the solemn benediction of their new church bell, on Sunday, November 17, at three o'clock in the afternoon. The Rt. Rev. Peter Engel, Ph. D., will officiate at the ceremony and deliver the discourse.

Misses Ellen Brady, Mery Betts and Mrs. J. B. O'Brien were down from the Saintly City Saturday on a shopping expedition.

Miss Melvina Allard returned Monday from her tour of the East, which she took as the winner in the Courier voting contest.

Malcolm Campbell, Dan Guerin, Napoleon Guerin and Arthur Ittner went up to St. Hilaire Sunday to spend the day with friends.

Felix Anderson, of Black River, came down on the train Tuesday and made this office a pleasant call. Mr. Anderson says in 1898 he bought his 160 acre farm from the Corbin Banking Co. of New York for $470. Now it is worth $2,000. He has just returned from St. Paul where he went to dispose of a carload of stock. The market is dull there and prices are low. Southern Minnesota farmers who are short of feed this fall are culling their herds and throwing an unusually large beef supply on the market.

Frank Schirrich, chairman of the town board of Polk Centre, was in the city Monday celebrating his 49th birthday anniversary. Mr. Shirrich dropped around to The Gazette office (as he does like a mon, once a year) to pay his subscription. He was No. 20 in the line of paying subscribers, and The Gazette presented him with his dollar back, which he accepted as a birthday present. The list is lining up toward No. 30. Who will be the lucking one? Remember No. 30, or the subscriber whose subscription payment fills out the equivalant of 30 full yearly subscriptions paid, will receive a present of $1.00. Mr. Schirrich is winner No. 2.

Quotations....Burns and Longfellow
Members Athenian Society.
Solo............................Selected
Prof. F. A. Whitely.

The debate last Friday was reported by the judges as very interesting. You ask "Who Won?" The Athenians, of course!

Resolved, That the lands of the Red Lake reservation should be sold in 160 acre tracts to the highest bidders and actual settlers only, rather than be given as free homesteads" is the subject for debate to occur Nov. 22. Rachel Taylor, Della Toupin and Anton Schusser were chosen by the Athenian society as debaters. Eleanor Findalsen, Dollie Mathias and Willie Ittner were chosen as debaters by the Spartan society, and will have the negative side of the question, by choice.

INCIDENTS.

A few changes have been made in the seats of some of the pupils.

Three girls were called into the recitation room where they were told that they must master their emotions before passing through the hall.

SCHOOL IN GENERAL.

Attendance is picking up some since the small pox scare.

The physics class has been reciting in the recitation room during the greater part of the week owing to the low temperature of the laboratory.

PERSONALS.

Miss Marjorie Rodgers has returned to school after a siege of small pox. We are all glad to see her back among schoolmates again.

Joseph Helm was chosen as a member of the Athenian society and Geo. DeForge as a member of the Spartan society.

Tom McNerthney has returned to school after an absence of a week.

We, the members of the Athenian, extend a very urgent invitation to all to attend the program to be given this afternoon.

The members of the Athenian society thank Messrs. King, McIntyre and Toupin for their services as judges in last Friday's debate.

We notice that High School notes were absent in the Courier last week. Of course if it was not laziness on the part of the Spartan committee, it must have been due to unobservance or to utter forgetfulness.

Misses Mabel Porter, Bessie Hunt and Lillie Buse were visitors at last Friday's debate.

J. H. Glass is moving on to his farm in Lake Pleasant township.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Armstrong visited Thief River Falls yesterday.

Chas. Hall, Dan Patterson and K. O. Gigstad were over from the Saintly city yesterday.

Garceau Bros.

A meeting of the directors of the creamery association will be held tomorrow. It is likely that the institution will be closed for the winter.

P. B. Gans says when he left southern Iowa Tuesday they were shivering in the cold wintery blasts with an inch and a half of snow. When he arrived here, 600 miles further north, he found us enjoying Indian Summer weather, and no snow.

Theo. DeForge and sisters Rose, Anna and Eliza returned from Fergus Falls Monday, where they visited their mother who is in the insane asylum. They had not seen her for a number of years and were surprised to see that she knew all of them. If her condition continues to improve Mrs. DeForge will probably soon return home to her family.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. Phipps, of Potean, Ark. "It cured me of bloody flux. I cannot speak too highly of it." This remedy always wins the good opinion, if not praise, of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects even in the most severe cases makes it a favorite everywhere. For sale by W. A. Schreiter, druggist.

SOCIAL ITEMS, GOOD OF THE ORDER AND RECESS GOSSIP OF INTEREST.

The regular meeting of the M. B. A. will be held next Monday evening and it is understood that there will be something interesting on the tapis.

Evergreen Camp R. N. A. will on Friday night of this week give a progressive cinch party, with refreshments. All Royal Neighbors and their escorts are invited and a good time is assured.

On account of the card party given by the Odd Fellows on Wednesday evening the meeting of the Lady Maccabees was postponed until Wednesday evening Nov. 27th, when it will be held at the residence of Mrs. Robert Bourdon.

A class of twenty members were initiated into Golden Rod Camp Royal Neighbors, Crookston, last night. The entire camp of Red Lake Falls Royal Neighbors was invited, but owing to the reception at I. O. O. F. hall here which was largely attended by those interested, none went from this city. A supper and dance followed the initiation.

Last night Clearwater lodge I. O. O. F. held a reception for Bro. Gerhart Didrichson and bride. The committee having charge of the affair were Bros. Whiteley, Riechel and Steibert. Seventy-five were present, and after the formal reception progressive cinch was indulged in until 11:15, when refreshments were served, consisting of raw and escalloped oysters, sandwiches, pickles, coffee and cake. The tables were then cleared away for dancing. The ladies it was noted were out in beautiful evening costumes that lent considerable eclat to the affair, indeed one of the most successful and enjoyable ever given by Clearwater lodge, which has a record for brilliant social functions.

THE LADY OF LYNN

By SIR WALTER BESANT

Copyright, 1900, by Sir Walter Besant

She kept a small establishment in Mount street. Her people consisted of no more than two footmen, a butler, a lady's maid, a housekeeper and three or four maids, with two chairmen. She did not live as a rich woman. She received, it is true, twice a week, on Sundays and Wednesdays, but not with any expense of supper and wine. Her friends came to play cards, and she held the bank for them. On other evenings she went out and played at the houses of her friends.

While the friseur was still completing her head Lord Fylingdale was announced. The lady blushed violently. She sat up and looked anxiously in the glass.

"Betty," she cried, "a touch of red; not much, you clumsy creature! Will you never learn to have a lighter hand? So! That is better. I am horribly pale. His lordship can wait in the morning room. You have nearly finished, monsieur? Quick, then—the last touches! Betty, the flowered satin petticoat! My fan! The pearl necklace! So!" She looked again at the glass. "Am I looking tolerable, Betty?"

"Your ladyship is ravishing," said Betty, finishing the toilet.

Lady Anastasia swam out of the room with a gliding movement, then the fashion, and entered the morning room, where Lord Fylingdale awaited her.

"Anastasia!" he said softly, taking her hand. "It is very good of you to see me alone. I feared you would be surrounded with courtiers and fine ladies or with singers, musicians, hairdressers and other baboons. Permit me," and he raised her hand to his lips. "You look divine this morning. It is long since I have seen you look so perfectly charming."

The lady murmured something. She was one of those women who like above all things to hear praises of what most they prize, their beauty, and to believe what they most desire to be the truth, the preservation and perfecting of that beauty.

"But you came to see me alone. Was it to tell me that I look charming? Other men tell me as much in company."

"Not altogether that, dear lady, though that is something. I come to tell you of a change of plans."

"You have heard that the grand jury of Middlesex has presented me by name as a corrupter of innocence, and I know not what, because I hold my bank on Sunday nights?"

"I have heard something of the matter. It is almost time, I think, to give these presumptuous shopkeepers a lesson not to interfere with the pursuits of persons of rank. Let them confine themselves to the prentices who play at pitch and toss."

"Oh, what matters their presentment? I shall continue to keep the bank on Sunday nights. Now, my dear lord, what about these plans? What is changed?"

"We thought, you remember, about going to Tunbridge in July."

"Well, shall we not go there?"

"Perhaps. But there is something to be done first. Let me confide in you"—

"My dear lord, you have never confided in anybody."

"Except in you. I think you know all my secrets, if I have any. In whom else can I confide? In the creatures who importune me for places? In friends of the green table? In friends of the race course? My dear Anastasia, you know, I assure you, as much about my personal affairs as I know myself."

"If you would always speak so kindly!" Her eyes became humid, but not tearful. A lady of fashion must not spoil her cheek by tears.

"Well, then, the case is this: You know of the condition of my affairs—no one better. An opportunity presents itself to effect a great improvement. I am invited by the highest personage to take a more active part in the affairs of state. No one is to know this. For reasons connected with this proposal I am to visit a certain town—a trading town, a town of rough sailors—there to conduct certain inquiries. There is to be a gathering at this town of the gentry and people of the county. Would you like to go, my dear friend? It will be next month."

"To leave town and in May, just before the end of the season?"

"There will be opportunities, I am told, of holding a bank, and a good many sportsmen—'tis a sporting county—may be expected to lay their money. In a word, Anastasia, it will not be a bad exchange."

"And how can I help you? Why should I go there?"

"By letting the people, the county people, understand the many virtues and graces which distinguish my character. No one knows me better than yourself"—

The lady smiled. "No one," she murmured.

—"or can speak with greater authority on the subject. There will be certain of our friends there—the parson, Sir Harry, the colonel."

"Pah, a beggarly crew and blown upon! They are dangerous."

"Not at this quiet and secluded town. They will be strangers to you as well as to me. And they will be useful. After all, in such a place you need an opening. They will lead the way."

The lady made no response.

"I may call it settled, then?" He still held her hand. "If you would rather not go, Anastasia, I will find some one else, but I had hoped"—

She drew away her hand. "You are right," she said. "No one knows you so well as myself. And all I know about you is that you are always contriving some devilry. What is it this time? But you will not tell me. You never tell me."

"Anastasia, you do me an injustice. This is a purely political step."

"As you will. Call it what you please. I am your servant, you know that; your handmaid in all things save one. Not for any other woman, Ludovick, not for any other unfortunate woman, will I lift my little finger. Should you betray me in this respect"—

He laughed. "A woman? And in that company? Rest easy, dear child. Be jealous as much as you please, but not with such a cause."

He touched her cheek with his finger. He stooped and kissed her hand and withdrew.

Lady Anastasia stood awhile where he left her. The joy had gone out of her heart. She trembled. She was seized with a foreboding of evil. She threw herself upon the sofa and buried her face in her hands, and, forgetful of paste and patch and paint, she suffered the murderous tears to destroy that work of art, her finished face.

CHAPTER III.

GREAT NEWS FOR LYNN.

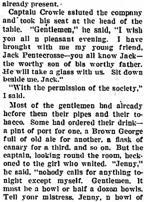
IN the evening of the day before I was to sail Captain Crowle and I were walking through the narrow street they call State lane into the great market place, where stands the Crown inn. The room appropriated to the Society of Lynn, which met every evening all the year round, was that on the ground floor looking upon the market place.

The society or club, which is never dissolved, consists of the notables or better sort of the town, the vicar of St. Margaret's, the curate of St. Nicholas', the master of the school, my own father, Captain Crowle and other retired captains, the doctor, some of the more substantial merchants, with the mayor, some of the aldermen, the town clerk and a justice of the peace or two. This evening most of these gentlemen were already present.

Captain Crowle saluted the company and took his seat at the head of the table. "Gentlemen," he said, "I wish you all a pleasant evening. I have brought with me my young friend, Jack Pentecrosse—you all know Jack—the worthy son of his worthy father. He will take a glass with us. Sit down beside me, Jack."

"With the permission of the society," I said.

Most of the gentlemen had already before them their pipes and their tobacco. Some had ordered their drink—a pint of port for one, a Brown George full of old ale for another, a flask of canary for a third, and so on. But the captain, looking round the room, beckoned to the girl who waited. "Jenny," he said, "nobody calls for anything tonight except myself. Gentlemen, it must be a bowl or half a dozen bowls. Tell your mistress, Jenny, a bowl of the biggest and the strongest and the sweetest. Gentlemen, you will drink with me to the next voyage of the Lady of Lynn."



THE PROSPERITY OF THE SPA.

But then a thing happened. News came which drove all thoughts of the Lady of Lynn out of everybody's mind. That toast was forgotten.

The news was brought by the doctor, who was the last to arrive.

Doctor Worship was a person who habitually carried himself with dignity.

"Gentlemen." The doctor laid his hat upon the table and his cane beside it. Then he took his chair, adjusted his wig, put on his spectacles, and then, laying his hand upon the arms of the chair, he once more looked around the room, and all this in the most important, dignified, provoking, interesting manner possible. "Gentlemen, I have news for you."

Captain Crowle made answer, speaking in the name of the society. "Sir, we await your pleasure."

"My news, gentlemen, is of a startling character. I will epitomize or abbreviate it. In a word, therefore, we are all about to become rich. All you who have houses or property in this town, all who are concerned in the trade of the town, all who direct the industries of the people or take care of the health of the residents, will become, I say, rich."

The doctor pulled out a pocketbook from which he extracted a letter. "I have received," he went on, "a letter from a townsman, the young man named Samuel Semple—Samuel Semple," he repeated, with emphasis, because a look of disappointment fell upon every face.

"Sam Semple!" growled the captain. "Once I broke my stick across his back." He did not, however, explain why he had done so. "I wish I had broken two. What has Sam Semple to do with the prosperity of the town?"

"Mr. Sam Semple," the doctor continued, with emphasis on the prefix, to which indeed the poet was not entitled in his native town, "doth not ask for help. He is not starving; he is prosperous; he has gained the friendship or the patronage of certain persons of quality. This is the reward of genius. Let us forget that he was the son of a custom house servant, and let us admit that he proved unequal to the duties, for which he was unfitted, of a clerk. He has now risen. We will welcome one whose name will in the future add luster to our town."

The vicar shook his head. "Trash!" he murmured. "Trash!"

"Well, gentlemen, I will proceed to read the letter."

He unfolded it and began with a sonorous hum:

"'Honored sir.'" He repeated the words. "'Honored sir.' The letter, gentlemen, is addressed to myself—ahem, to myself. 'I have recently heard of a discovery which will probably affect in a manner so vital the interests of my beloved native town that I feel it my duty to communicate the fact to you without delay. I do so to you rather than to my esteemed patron, the worshipful the mayor, once my master, or to Captain Crowle or to any of those who subscribed for my volume of miscellany poems, because the matter especially and peculiarly concerns yourself as a physician and as the fortunate owner of the spring or well which is the subject of the discovery.' The subject of the discovery, gentlemen. My well—mine." He went on: "'You are aware as a master in the science of medicine that the curative properties of various spas or springs in the country—the names of Bath, Tunbridge Wells and Epsom are familiar to you; so doubtless are those of Hampstead and St. Chads, nearer London. It now appears that a certain learned physician, having reason to believe that similar waters exist, as yet unsuspected, at King's Lynn, has procured a jar of the water from your own well—that in your garden'—my well, gentlemen, in my own garden—'and, having subjected it to a rigorous examination, has discovered that it contains to a much higher degree than any other well hitherto known to exist in this country qualities or ingredients held in solution which make this water sovereign for the cure of rheumatism, asthma, gout and all disorders due to ill humors or vapors, concerning which I am not competent so much as to speak to one of your learning and skill.

"'This discovery hath already been announced in the public journals. I send you an extract containing the news.' I read this extract, gentlemen."

It was a slip of printed paper cut from one of the diurnals of London:

"'It has been discovered that at King's Lynn, in the county of Norfolk, there exists a deep well of clear water whose properties, hitherto undiscovered, form a sovereign specific for rheumatism and many similar disorders. Our physicians have already begun to recommend the place as a spa, and it is understood that some have already resolved upon betaking themselves to this newly discovered cure. The distance from London is no greater than that of Bath. The roads, it is true, are not so good, but at Cambridge it is possible for those who do not travel in their own carriages to proceed by way of barge or tilt boat down the Cam and the Ouse a distance of only 40 miles, which in the summer should prove a pleasant journey.'

"So far," the doctor informed us, "for the printed intelligence. I now proceed to finish the letter: 'Among others, my patron, the right honorable the Earl of Fylingdale, has been recommended by his physician to try the newly discovered waters of Lynn as a preventive of gout. He is a gentleman of the highest rank, fashion and wealth, who honors me with his confidence. It is possible that he may even allow me to accompany him on his journey. Should he do so I shall look forward to the honor of paying my respects to my former patrons. He tells me that other persons of distinction are also going to the same place, with the same object, during the coming summer.'

"You hear, gentlemen?" said the doctor, looking round. "What did I say? Wealth for all—for all. So. Let me continue: 'Sir, I would with the greatest submission venture to point out the importance of this event to the town. The nobility and gentry of the neighborhood should be immediately made acquainted with this great discovery. It may be expected that there will be such a concourse flocking to Lynn as will bring an accession of wealth as well as fame to the borough of which I am a humble native. I would also submit that the visitors should find Lynn provided with the amusements necessary for a spa. I mean music, the assembly, a pumproom, a garden, the hall and the masquerade and the cardroom, clean lodgings, good wine and fish, flesh and fowl in abundance. I humbly ask forgiveness for these suggestions, and I have the honor to remain, honored sir, your most obedient humble servant, with my grateful service to all the gentlemen who subscribed to my verses and thereby provided me with a ladder up which to rise.

"'SAMUEL SEMPLE.'"

At this moment the bowl of punch was brought in and placed before the captain, with a tray of glasses. The doctor folded his letter, replaced it in his pocketbook and took off his spectacles.

"Gentlemen, you have heard my news. Captain Crowle, may I request that you permit the society to drink with me to the prosperity of the spa—the prosperity of the spa—the spa of Lynn?"

"Let us drink it," said the captain, "to the newly discovered spa. But this Samuel; the name sticks."

"We must have a committee to prepare for the accommodation of the visitors."

"We must put up a pumproom."

"We must engage a dipper."

"We must make walks across the fields."

"There must be an assembly, with music and dancing."

"There must be a cardroom."

"There must be a long room for those who wish to walk about and to converse, with an orchestra."

"I will put up the pumproom," said the doctor, "in my garden over the well."

The captain looked on meanwhile, whispering in my ear from time to time. "Samuel is a liar," he said. "I know him to be a liar. Yet why should he lie about a thing of so much importance? If he tells the truth, Jack—I know not, I misdoubt the fellow, yet again he may tell the truth. And why should he lie, I say? Then one knows not—among the company we may find a husband for the girl."

"It only remains," said the doctor, "that I myself should submit the water of my well to an examination." He did not think it necessary to inform the company that he had received from Samuel Semple an analysis of the water stating the ingredients and their proportions as made by the anonymous physician of London. "Should it prove, of which I have little doubt, that the water is such as has been described by my learned brother in medicine, I shall inform you of the fact."

It was a curious coincidence, though the committee of reception were not informed of the fact, that the doctor's analysis exactly agreed with that sent to him.

It was a memorable evening. For my own part, I know not why, during the reading of the letter my heart sank lower and lower. It was the foreboding of evil. Perhaps it was caused by my knowledge of Samuel, of whom I will speak presently. Perhaps it was the thought of seeing the girl whom I loved, while yet I had no hope of winning her, carried off by some sprig of quality who would teach her to despise her homely friends, the master mariners, young and old. I know not the reason. But it was a foreboding of evil, and it was with a heavy heart that I repaired to the quay and rowed myself back to the ship in the moonlight.

They were going to drink to the next voyage of the Lady of Lynn. Why, the lady herself, not her ship, was about to embark on a voyage more perilous, more disastrous, than that which awaited any of her ships. Cruel as is the ocean, I would rather trust myself and her to the mercies of the bay of Biscay at its wildest than to the tenderness of the crew who were to take charge of that innocent and ignorant lady.

CHAPTER IV.

MOLLY AND I.

IT pleases me to recall the tall form of my father, his bent shoulders, his wig, for the most part awry; his round spectacles, his thin face. In school he was a figure of fear, always terrible, wielding the rod of office with justice rhadamanthine and demanding, with that unrelenting alternative, things impossible in grammar. In school hours he was a very Jupiter, a thundering Jupiter. Our school was an ancient hall, with an open timber roof, in which his voice rolled and echoed backward and forward.

As to Molly, she had the misfortune to lose her father in infancy. He was carried off, I believe, by smallpox. He was a shipowner and general merchant of the town and was commonly reputed to be a man of considerable means. At his death he bequeathed the care of his widow and his child to his old servant, Captain John Crowle, who had been in the service of the house since he was apprenticed as a boy. He directed further that Captain Crowle should conduct the business for the child, who by his will was to inherit the whole of his fortune, whatever that might prove to be, on coming of age after subtracting certain settlements for his widow.

It was most fortunate for the child that her guardian was the most honest person in the world. He was a bachelor; he was bound by ties of gratitude to the house which he had served; he had nothing to do and nothing to think about except the welfare of the child. At 19 Molly was a fine, tall girl, as strong as any man, her arms stout and muscular, like mine; her face rosy and ruddy with the bloom of health, her eyes blue and neither too large nor too small, but fearless; her hand and face large, her hair fair and blowing about her head with loose curls, her figure full, her neck as white as snow, her hands large rather than small, by reason of the rowing and the handling of the ropes, and by no means white. Her features were regular and straight, her mouth not too small, but to my eyes the most beautiful mouth in the world, the lips full and always ready for a smile, the teeth

Editor Gazette:

Some time ago I understand that your Emardville correspondent, a specialist in herd laws I think, said something about chairmen looking after the bulls running at large.

Mr. Correspondent, there is not one complaint on file with me against bulls running at large. Do you expect chairmen to run around town looking for bulls?

Nothing about horses running at large in winter time. That does not come in under the herd law?

A Duluth paper is making a trial of a slot machine for selling newspapers. They have been placed on the street cars and 25 papers are placed in each. Two cents or a nickel will work the machine and produce a paper.

William G. Marshall, a prominent citizen of Glyndon, was found dead in a ditch, the top of his head entirely blown off and a shotgun lying under him. The supposition is he drew his gun from the wagon, when the trigger caught.

The new sawmill of the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber company at Scanlon, midway between Carlton and Cloquet, was started for the first time Friday and will be running full blast shortly. It is one of the largest and best mills in the country, and will have a capacity of 100,000,000 feet of lumber a season.

The ceremony of inducting Right Rev. Samuel Cook Edsall into the bishopric of the diocese of Minnesota was celebrated at Christ's church in St. Paul last week. Clerical and lay representatives of the Episcopal faith were present from all parts of Minnesota, and from Iowa, Nebraska and Wisconsin.

The sum of $176,000 was added to the state funds Tuesday as a result of the sale of state timber. The sale took place in the chamber of the house of representatives and was conducted by State Auditor Dunn. Seventy-five lumbermen were present and between them they purchased 35,000,000 feet of state timber.

The state board of control has checked over and verified about half the contracts awarded for the next quarter. Eighty-one per cent of the money expended by these contracts goes to Minnesota firms. The purchases made within the state aggregate $56,611.15, and those outside the state, $13,214.79.

In the office of Agent W. D. McKay of the Northern Pacific at Brainerd some light-fingered individual made a big haul of time checks, vouchers and pay checks, which aggregate several thousand dollars. The time checks, of course, are worthless to anyone, but the pay checks could be cashed by simply committing a forgery.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St Paul railroad has withdrawn permanently from the agreement of 12 years' standing governing the time of trains between Chicago and St. Paul. The effect will be the immediate and complete reconstruction of its schedules and the reduction of through time from 13 hours and 20 minutes to about 10 hours.

After sending money to Sweden to pay his sweetheart's passage to the United States, John Hanson of Albert Lea had his life embittered by seeing her wed another. When he sent her a dun on a postal card, besides writing her letters that were anything but endearing, he was taken before the United States court, charged with sending scurrilous letters through the mails, and was fined $200 and costs.

Sheriff Tanner of Little Falls has arrested Peter Anderson at Brainerd on a charge of starting the forest fires which caused such heavy losses to farmers in Crow Wing and Morrison counties. It is asserted that Anderson endeavored to sell a straw pile to his neighbors before moving. They did not care to buy, and rather than leave the straw for those who would not purchase, it is said he set it on fire and went away. To this beginning the conflagration is traced.

Immigrants are coming in here right along. Last week one family came in with three cars of household goods and farm implements, and moved onto a farm a short distance out of town. They are coming from Iowa, southern Minnesota and other places, bringing with them their horses and stock, prepared for an active part in the settling up of the country. Such are the farmers that we love to welcome here, stock is what is needed to bring the farmers to success.

Lewey Bovair who is looking after the engineering work on the Lost river ditch for state surveyor Ralph has invented a pair of skis to put on his feet to cross soft meadow lands. Andrew Arneson was one of the first to think of the plan and with the assistance of Paul Paulson they soon had the skis ready to attach to the feet of a marsh crosser. Mr. Bovair will thoroughly test the practical benefit to be derived from their use this week and if satisfactory they will be patented.

PENNSYLVANIA ROADS.

Keystone State Highways Contrasted With New Jersey's.

While Pennsylvania is talking about improved roads New Jersey is building them, says the Philadelphia Press. The very able state road commission appointed under an act of the last legislature of this state reports that Pennsylvania is behind other states in road legislation. That was well known before the commission discovered it, but the road legislation is far better than the roads. The latter are primitive, and, except where private or exceptional local enterprise has taken their improvement in hand, the country roads of Pennsylvania alternate between extreme and heavy muddiness and extreme and deep dustiness.

New Jersey, with less natural advantages for good roadmaking than Pennsylvania, is getting her highways in prime condition. The seventh annual report of the New Jersey commissioner of public roads contains a map of the state with 532 miles of improved country roads traced in red lines. It makes a magnificent showing and advertises the state as progressive in spirit and with an intelligent apprehension of what satisfies and gratifies the people and makes a state desirable and attractive as a place of residence. New Jersey's increase in population in the last decade was 30.3 per cent, which is matched only by a few of the states west of the Mississippi. Pennsylvania's growth in the same decade was but 19.9 per cent. We do not attribute all the difference to the stimulation which over 500 miles of improved roads have given to New Jersey, but no one can doubt after reading Commissioner Budd's report that these improved roads are a most important contributor to the present unusual growth and prosperity of that state.

MUDDY IN WET WEATHER.

The New Jersey road law is better than any that Pennsylvania has or is likely to get immediately. It would be a great boon to this state to have the New Jersey road law adopted here bodily instead of patching up our own crude system and preserving its defects. In New Jersey all road taxes must be paid in money. Here we still allow men to "work out" their road taxes, a practice that is entirely incompatible with any scientific system of improved roads. In Pennsylvania the township is the unit of roadmaking. This is wrong. A road is not exclusively for local use, but is generally a highway between distant points. An energetic township may have excellent roads, but because its neighbors do not co-operate that township in bad weather is like an island in the midst of a slough. There should be state roads for through travel, county roads as feeders and for more restricted travel and township roads for purely local traffic. Over all there should be state control, and for all there should be state aid. Those living on or near a good road are benefited, but they are not the sole beneficiaries. The road belongs to the public, and the public should pay a good part of its cost.

This is the New Jersey principle. A township road is improved, made a smooth stone road very much as we have in our public parks, wherever the owners of two-thirds of the land fronting on the road will agree to pay one-tenth of the cost. The township may then improve the road, paying 67 per cent of the cost, and the state will pay the remainder less the 10 per cent paid by the abutting property owners. Under the county state aid law the state pays one-third of the cost of road improvement, and the county pays two-thirds less one-tenth assessed on the abutting property holders. As the county roads usually connect at the county line, they, when improved in several adjoining counties, make long continuous improved roads. In this way New Jersey has a continuous improved road from Camden to the seashore and will soon have roads running up and down and across the state in every direction. The state supervision under a state commissioner of highways gives a unity and harmony to the system which, at its present rate of development, will soon embrace its entire state.

This system is popular in New Jersey. It is liked by the farmers, who do not begrudge paying $1 to an improvement in front of their homes when $9 comes from other sources. The money expended on these roads is not raised by immediate taxation, but by the sale of bonds, the payment of which is distributed over a term of years. The result is there is no complaint on the score of taxation under the New Jersey plan, while the farmers find that the increased comfort which they get out of the roads, the more regular access to markets and particularly the very much larger loads they can draw with the same number of horses make improved roads a profit and a pleasure to them. New Jersey is not prodigal in state aid. The legislature fixes a limit to the amount of money that may be used for this purpose, with the result that there are more claimants for the appropriation than can always be gratified.

Gentlemen—I am pleased to inform you that Matt J. Johnson's 6088 has done wonders for me. I was taken with a severe attack of muscular rheumatism that confined me to the house for two months. I went to Crocker & Hawley's store on crutches and Mr. Hawley gave me a bottle of 6088 and wanted me to try it, as he knew I had been suffering with rheumatism for the past three years and I would be a severe test for the remedy. I had not taken half a bottle when I went to work and when I had finished the bottle I was entirely free from rheumatism. Thanking you and your agents, Messrs. Crocker & Hawley, for putting me in the way of a cure, I am yours very truly, J. H. NEIL.

A FREE TRIAL. We guarantee our remedy to be free from all opiates, salicylates or poisonous drugs. If on taking half the bottle and are not satisfied, return and your money will be refunded.

TO THE PEOPLE:
Some time ago the "Jack-of-All-Trades" began to tell the people what he could do. He made great claims; promised to do more than ever had been done before, and more than most people believed possible. You all know the success he has attained, and as he became more familiar with the country he was traveling in, he could see the possibilities of greater work, and to accomplish this he has introduced to you a travelling companion. Behold his features in the shape of a 2½ H. P. Geared Base Vertical Gasoline Engine. His specialties are pumping water and general farm use. He is very versatile, and when his time is not wanted for pumping water, by a movement of one of his arms, he can disconnect the gears and his power can be directed for other purposes. He is beginning to travel all over the country from the Canadian Provinces to the Equator, and from the Eastern Coast to the Philipines. He is taking up all sorts of work for all kinds of people, and it is surprising to note the results of his work for the first year. Send for information and catalogue.

CHANGES IMMINENT

NEW INDIAN POLICY LIKELY SOON TO GO INTO EFFECT.

WILL RESULT IN OPENING MUCH FINE MINNESOTA LAND TO SETTLEMENT.

In a recent issue of the Minneapolis Journal, Theo. M. Knappen, who has carefully investigated and gone over the ground, writes in part as follows regarding the opening of the Chippewa reservations:

"The idea of Indian Commissioner Jones and President Roosevelt regarding the breaking up of Indian reservations and leaving the Indian to stand or fall by his own efforts, cannot be applied to the White Earth reservation any too soon to suit many, perhaps a large majority of the Indians. Its early application would please also thousands of white men who would like to get possession of some of the fertile land of this magnificent reservation or start up some kind of business in the villages that would spring up along the railroads that would be built the moment the 1152 square miles of this Indian country were opened to settlement or sale."

"The White Earth Indians have reached such a stage of development that the best course to be pursued for them, for the state and the federal government, is to remove the reservation lines and treat the Indians in all respects as though they are citizens of Minnesota amply able to take care of themselves. For years the Indians of the reservation—many of them since 1889—have held their lands in allotments. This idea of giving the Indians their land in severalty is no new one, though there is a little more talk about it at present than usual. For some years now it has been the policy of the Indian commissioners and the government to break up tribal ties, abolish reservations, set the Indians down among the whites and let them work their own destiny, like other Americans. Indeed the Nelson act of 1889, introduced by Senator Nelson of Minnesota, then a member of congress, was designed as the basis of the work of dispensing the reservations in Minnesota, and the lands within the White Earth reservation were designated as the specially favored one for the Indians to take their allotments. Many of them have taken their allotments elsewhere, but about 5000 of Minnesota's 8000 reservation Chippewas now hold title to 80 acres or more in this beautiful region."

What is true of the White Earth is equally true of the Red Lake reservation, and in any event they will both be opened at the same time. The Red Lake reservation consists of the finest agricultural lands in the state and should be opened as speedily as possible. So long as the government keeps on dealing out provisions and paying annuities to the Indians, so long will they absolutely refuse to till the soil or contribute any more than is barely necessary for their own support.

The opening of the reservation would change all this. The Indians would be forced to follow the example of their white neighbors, and with first choice in the selections of lands and such start as the government may see fit to give them, they would be in much better shape than the average poor white settler.

Open the reservation and pay the Indians once for all their just claims, is the logical solution of this problem, of which so much is made by politicians and others, who see in the present system a chance for spoil.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH TAKES UP SUBJECT OF HORSE DISEASE.

SENT REPRESENTATIVES THIS WEEK TO PROBE MATTER.

In answer to letters, telegraphic and telephonic requests sent by The Gazette for state investigation into the horse disease in this county, the state board of health sent Dr. L. B. Wilson, state bactereologist and S. D. Brimhall, V. M. D., director veterinary department of the state board of health, to secure, if possible, a horse afflicted with the disease, for the purpose of holding a post mortem examination, and of taking affected parts of the animal to the laboratories for tests, where animals such as rabbits and dogs are inoculted with the bacteria thus secured, in order to establish a basis to work on, or in other words to "prove" the disease, which is a new thing, dating back but a couple of years at the most, and confined to districts in Red Lake and Polk counties and certain sections of Manitoba.

The equipments at the state university where the investigations are carried on are not sufficiently complete as yet to admit of carrying a research in this line to a speedy and satisfactory conclusion, inasmuch as the final stage of the experiment in a horse disease requires the inoculation of a number of horses, and no facilities are yet provided for this, although a new building for this purpose has been provided for, and will by next spring be ready for use. After that, there will be no delay.

Drs. Wilson and Brimhall explained that there is no such an officer as a state veterinarian in Minnesota, but there is a veterinary department of the state board of health, of which Dr. Brimhall is the head and director. The offices are in the Pioneer Press building and farmers or others who desire to communicate with the state authorities with regard to diseases among cattle and horses, should direct their inquiries to Dr. S. D. Brimhall, Pioneer Press building.

It was the intention of the doctors to proceed to Terrebonne, but they could do nothing practical without a horse to operate on, and none was promised them there. They secured one at Beltrami and another on the farm of P. Trudell in Lake Pleasant township, and then left on their return trip. The specimens taken will be utilized, but nothing definite can come from their investigations until next spring when the facilities for prosecuting the work will have been provided.

In the meantime they are desirous of securing other specimens, and any farmer who is willing to offer one or more of his sick horses for post mortem work, will do well to wire Dr. Brimhall, who will no doubt make haste to respond. Two other diseases have been successfully proven—one a blood disease in cows, for which a vaccine that is an effective preventive, has been found. The other is a brain disease that effects both cattle and horses, and an effective treatment for this has also been offered. In both cases the disease broke out in heards near St. Paul, accessible to the board, and the farmers freely offering their sick animals for experimental purposes, rapid progress was made. Minnesota leads in this work, and when the new buildings are completed, she will present the best facilities of any state in the Union for the prosecution of the desired researches.

The horse disease that has manifested itself in this county seems to abate with cold weather and little trouble is anticipated for the winter.

PROUD OF MINNESOTA

COMMISSIONER DEMANN RETURNS FROM BUFFALO FULL OF ENTHUSIASM.

WAS PROUD OF THE SPLENDID SHOWING MADE BY MINNESOTA.

County Commissioner Demann was in the city Saturday, having on Monday returned with his family from Buffalo. At Chicago Mr. Demann heard that Red Lake Falls was quarantined on account of the smallpox and on this account went home via Dugdale. Upon his arrival he was surprised to learn that the quarantine story was a hoax.

Mr. Demann says he enjoyed the exposition very much, but to him the sight of Niagara Falls was the most noteworthy. "Anyone who has not seen Niagara Falls has missed a wonderful sight, and should plan to rectify the mistake at the earliest opportunity," he said. It was during his stay that the woman went over the Falls in an oak barrel. He saw both the woman and the barrel. She owns a ranch in Montana and was heavily indebted. Being offered a considerable sum to make the descent, she concluded to do so. Attached to the bottom of the barrel where her feet rested was an anvil, the weight of which was calculated to keep the barrel bottom down. Getting into the barrel which was cushioned and padded, her shoulders were strapped, and the barrel's head put on very carefully. True to calculations the descent was safely made, the barrel landing "feet down" and she escaped without injury.

Mr. Demann says that Minnesota never made an investment that brought better returns than the appropriation providing for our state exhibit at the exposition. The state was advertised in such a splendid manner by H. P. Hall and his associates that universal attention was attracted to our vast resources.

Minnesota has secured more honors at the Pan-American exposition than any other state. Its state exhibits get two gold, four silver, six bronze medals and a diploma of honorable mention. The two most prized medals are those for educational and general agricultural exhibits, the former being in recognition of a display that is far ahead of that of any other state. The state gets as much honor as any other in mineral display. The state's private exhibitors also make a good showing in the award of medals, two Minneapolis milling companies getting gold medals for their flours.

Minnesota has undisputed claim to the official designation as the "bread and butter state" and much Eastern money will flow this way in consequence, besides a desirable tide of immigration.

RED LAKE FALLS OUGHT TO BE PROVIDED WITH ONE.

Now that the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railway interests have been finally consolidated, it is in order for the cities affected to make the most of the bad situation.

Red Lake Falls can offer the Northern Securities Company a suggestion at the very outset of its career. Both the Northern Pacific and Great Northern officials are continually bringing up the matter of a new depot location here. Why not solve the problem once for all by selecting some central, convenient point, and putting on the site a union depot?

We have no doubt the city would furnish the right of way if it were asked for through a reasonable route. A fine depot that would be acceptable to the county seat and metropolis of a growing county could be put up, the depot site question finally disposed of, and both the corporation and the city benefited.

Editor Gazette—

Once occasionally I will feel up some little space in your column with some ideas of my own and facts that might pass near me. Of course never be surprised if the corner of the town where I live will always be the most important part of the world for me.

There is nothing like to be able say to everybody just what you think without be afread to get lick for that because I give you a fair warning that should some of victims get ma to it I would right quick put it to your credit and swear to it.

LITTLE CANADA EVENTS

All of our sicks people are completely or fast recovering from illness.

Thos. Thibodeau is finish a good size barn which he need in acc of a deal with Mr. Berthian to cut and haul 500 cords of wood at a distance of 2 or 3 miles from town. T. T. his a ustler and everybody know it.

Dan Doran our genial lumberman has lately move in his new cottage. By the severals load of nice house furnitures and thing with which Master Doran has taken great care to surround his own. It was something that set his friend Capt. Casey to thinking.

Your humble reporter would strongly advise all the bachelor of town to subscribe to some matrimonials paper where there is thousands of ladies that would be glad to say yes.

And you my dear and never very happy bachelors if you are at a lost to know whom one you should choice that could make you happy, well I would say just pick up one good mother and one of his daughter will do.

It is very foolish of you to think that you must wait to have so much wealth and things around you before to make your mind settle up. That is a big mistake.

A good brave girl will love you just as much in a shack as in a castel. All what is necessary is to have a good health and to be a worker. Captain, you and the others can think things over and over again and you will always come to the conclusion that there is a large empty space in your heart that nothing can fill up except a home and familys.

It is said that Mrs. A. Paradis has present his husband with a beautiful 12-pounds boy Sunday morning. Which make our old acquaintance the more happy man than the king of England and the pres. of the United State as he say he has not the Boers or the anarchists, the trusts and such thing to trouble himself with.

Before to close just happen to think that Joseph and Mrs Terrien have return to Red Lake Fall and somebody was assuring us that he has not have a minute of happiness ever since he departed of Red Lakes Fall and Little Canada and returns after having hunt for something better all over the United State and big Canada. The logique of this is never leave Little Canada in search of better heavens or you will be disappointed.

Yours truly,

OPPOSE THE DITCH

EMARDVILLE FARMERS ARE PREPARING TO FIGHT THE PROPOSED CANAL.

ALLEGE THAT NAMES WERE ATTACHED TO PETITION WITHOUT WARRANT.

P. S. Medchell, of Emardville, was in the city yesterday and to The Gazette said the movement among the Emardville farmers who are averse to the construction of the proposed Garnes-Equality ditch, the route of which has been previously described in this paper, have decided to fight the proposition, and a committee has been appointed to engage the services of a lawyer.

Mr. Medchell says that two different petitions were circulated, and many names secured to these, but the promoters failed to secure bonds, and the matter fell through. Finally, he alleges, the third proposition was brought out, but only four signers secured, the many other names appearing in the published notice having he says, been cut from the rejected petition and pasted on the new one. Those whose names are thus used, he says, are wroth, and propose a fight to the finish.

County Auditor Zeh, interviewed on the matter, said: "No objections that can be raised by the Emardville people as to their signatures on the petition can make any difference in the outcome of this ditch matter. The law very clearly indicates that if only two names were attached to the petition that would suffice. 'One or more' is the way the law reads. Two people in a township, under the new law, can get together, sign a petition for a ditch, and if the proceedings on other points are legally gone through, can cause a ditch to be constructed, even if every other person in the township was against it. That is the way the law stands now. The commissioners have no option. The law says 'they shall' and that settles it."

It is evident that A. E. Sorensen and his backers, who are pushing the ditch matter, have the best of it.

GRAIN COMMISSION

EDWARDS, WOOD & CO. WILL OPEN SUCH AN OFFICE HERE.

Geo. E. Squires, of the Edwards, Wood & Co., grain commission firm, Minneapolis and Duluth, was here yesterday and has about concluded that Red Lake Falls would be a good point to open an office. It is likely that the Healy Land Co. will accommodate them with office room. As a rule private wires are in use by the company, but here they will try the experiment of using the telephone service.

Edwards, Wood & Co. have offices at St. Paul, Fargo, Grand Forks, Sioux Falls, Sioux City, and Mankato and are now entering Crookston and Larimore, besides this city.

Harry Healy will be the company's local representative.

OUT IN GARNES.

THE AMBITION OF THAT BERG TO BECOME A CITY IS GROWING.

RESULTS IN A HOT SCHOOL ELECTION --- GARNES WINS.

By the narrow margin of four majority it was decided by the election held at Garnes Tuesday to locate the new school house at the village near the postoffice instead of building it one mile north, "out in the country," as the denizens of the ambitious burg sarcastically remark. The election proved to be a battle royal, and the female population of the district was into the thick of the fight.

Garnes as the coming metropolis of eastern Red Lake county is the ideal set by its citizens, and when the question of location for the fine new school house to be built in that district came up, their duty was plain to them. It was evident at the start that the country members of the district would win—but when the fair ladies of Garnes decided to take a hand their doom was sealed and Garnes village as a result of their heroic work, now sports the spoils of victory.

WARM AT E. G. FORKS

FACTION DEFEATED IN LATE CITY ELECTION ON THE WAR PATH.

A petition has been presented to the board of education of East Grand Forks asking for an investigation of the condition of affairs upon the "Point," the spot where all the houses of ill repute are supposed to be located. It is said that the petition contains the names of over 200 persons, who pray the school board to take action to have all these houses closed at once. The board took immediate action upon the petition and passed a memorial praying Judge Watts to grant an injunction closing the houses. A delegation headed by J. J. Clynch, the recently defeated candidate for mayor, went to Crookston Saturday to present this memorial to Judge Watts.

The entire matter is said to be the outgrowth of the recent municipal election. The accusation is made by the defeated party in that election that the disorderly houses contributed largely to the campaign fund of the successful party, with the understanding that they were to be protected if the election went the right way. On the other hand the successful party claims that the guise of a "law and orderly movement" is a very thin one to conceal the opposition to embarass the new administration. East Grand Forks is quite wrought up over the matter.

Departure of Judge Taylor.

C. L. Taylor left Tuesday for St. Paul, where he will visit with his son John before proceeding to his future home in California. Judge Taylor has a very close millionaire friend out there who insists upon securing his companionship for the remainder of his days, and Mr. Taylor finally yielded to his solicitations. He has lived here ten years, and there is scarcely a citizens who will not see the popular old gentleman's departure with extreme regret. The Gazette wishes him contentment and happiness in his new home. S. A. Swanson who was elected Justice of the Peace at the last election, will no doubt be appointed to fill the vacancy made by Judge Taylor's resignation.

Creamery Meeting.

A meeting will be held in the store building at Clearwater Falls Saturday, Nov. 30th, at 10 o'clock a. m., to look into the matter of starting a creamery. All farmers living within three or four miles of Clearwater Falls (or Plummers) are urgently requested to be present. If 300 cows can be secured within a radius of three or four miles, a creamery will be started.

THE LADY OF LYNN

By SIR WALTER BESANT

Copyright, 1900, by Sir Walter Besant

white and regular: in a word, to look at, as fine a woman—not of the delicate and dainty kind, but strong, tall and full of figure—as one may wish for. As to her disposition, she was the most tender, affectionate, sweet soul that could be imagined. She was always thinking of something to please those who loved her. She spared her mother and worked for her guardian. She was always working at something. She was always happy. She was always singing. And never, until the captain told her, did she have the least suspicion that she was richer than all her friends and neighbors—nay, than the whole town of Lynn, with its merchants and shippers and traders all together.

I recall one day when Molly and I were children. It was in the month of December in the afternoon and close upon sunset. The little maid was about 8, and I was 10. We were together as usual. We had been on the river, but it was cold, and so we came ashore and were walking hand in hand along the street they call Pudding lane, which leads from the Common Stath yard to the market place. In this lane there stands a sailors' tippling house, which is, I dare say, in all respects such a house as sailors desire, provided and furnished according to their wants and wishes. As we passed, the place being already lit up with two or three candles in sconces, the door being wide open and the mingled noise of fiddle, voices and feet announcing the assemblage of company, Molly pulled me by the hand and stopped to look in. The scene was what I have already indicated. The revelry of the evening had set in. Everybody was drinking. One was dancing. The fiddler was playing lustily.

"I THANK YOU ALL."

We should have looked on for a minute and left them. But one of the sailors recognized Molly. Springing to his feet, he made a respectful leg and saluted the child. "Mates," he cried, "'tis our owner! The little lady owns the barky. What shall we do for her?"

Then they all sprang to their feet with a huzza for the owner and another for the ship, and, if you will believe it, their rough fo'c's'le hands in half a minute had the child on the table in a chair like a queen. She sat with great dignity, understanding in some way that these men were in her own service and that they designed no harm or affright to her, but only to do her honor. Therefore she was not in any fear and smiled graciously. For my own part, I followed and stood at the table, thinking that perhaps these fellows were proposing some piratical abduction and resolving miracles of valor if necessary.

Then they made offerings. One man pulled a red silk handkerchief from his neck and laid it in her lap, and another lugged a box of sweetmeats from his pocket. It came from Lisbon, but was made, I believe, in Morocco by the Moors. A third had a gold ring on his finger—everybody knows the extravagancies of sailors—which he drew off and placed in her hand. Another offered a glass of punch. The little maid did what she had so often seen the captain do. She looked round and said, "Your good health, all the company," and put her lips to the glass, which she then returned. And another offered to dance, and the fiddler drew his bow across the catgut. It is a sound which inclines the heart to beat and the feet to move whenever a sailor hears it.

"I have often seen you dance," said Molly. "Let the fiddler play, and you shall see me dance."

I never thought she would have had so much spirit, for, you see, I had taught her to dance the hornpipe. Every boy in a seaport town can dance the hornpipe. We used to make music out of a piece of thin paper laid over a tortoise shell comb—it must be a comb of wide teeth, and none of them must be broken—and with this instead of a fiddle we would dance in the garden or in the parlor. But to stand up before a whole company of sailors! Who would have thought it? However, she jumped up and on the table performed her dance with great seriousness and so gracefully that they were all enchanted. They stood around, their mouths open, a broad grin on every face. The women, neglected, huddled together in a corner and were quite silent.

When she had finished, she gathered up her gifts—the silk handkerchief—it came from Calicut—the sweetmeats Morocco, the gold ring from I know not where. "Put me down, if you please," she said. So one of them gently lifted her to the ground. "I thank you all," she courtesied very prettily. "I wish you good night and when you set sail again a good voyage."

CHAPTER V.

THE SPA.

VENDERS flocked into the town. At the outset, though the pumproom was full every morning and the gardens and the long room in the evening were well attended, the spa lacked animation. The music pleased, the singers pleased, the colored lamps dangled in chains between the branches and pleased, yet the company was dull. There was little noise of conversation and no mirth or laughter; the family groups were not broken up; the people looked at each other and walked round and round in silence. After the first round or so, when they had seen all the dresses, the girls yawned and wanted to sit down.

To me it was amusing only to see the people in their fine dresses marching round and round while the music played, trailing their skirts on the floor, swinging their hoops and handling their fans; for the lack of young men talking to the clergy from the cathedrals and the colleges, and casting at each other glances of envy if one was better dressed or of scorn when one was worse dressed than themselves.

As for the men—"Jack," said Captain Crowle, "I keep looking about me. I try the pumproom in the morning, the ordinary at dinner, the taverns after dinner. My lad, there is not one among them all who is fit to be mated with our Molly. Gentlemen, are they? I like not the manner of these gentlemen. They are mostly young, but drink hard already. Their faces are red and swollen at 25. What will they be at 40? My girl shall marry none of them, nor shall she dance with them. She shall stay at home."

In fact, during the first week or two after the opening of the spa Molly remained at home and was not seen in the long room or in the gardens.

The town was nearly full, many of the visitors having to put up with mean lodgings in the crazy old courts, of which there are so many in Lynn, when the first arrival from London took place. It was that of a clergyman named Benjamin Purden, Artium Magister, formerly of Trinity college, Cambridge. He was a man of insignificant presence, his figure being small and thin, but finely dressed. His head was almost hidden by a full ecclesiastical wig. Apparently he was between 40 and 50 years of age. He looked about him and surveyed the company with an air of superiority, as if he had been a person of rank.

He came to us down the river by a tilt boat from Cambridge and accepted contentedly quite a humble lodging, barely furnished with a chair and a flock bed. "Humility becomes divine," he said in a high authoritative voice. "The room will serve. A coal fire and an open window will remove the mustiness." He was perhaps, though we must allow a good deal to his profession, too fond of preaching. He preached in the morning at the pumproom.

It was presently learned that Mr. Purden had offered to take the services at St. Nicholas' for a few weeks in order to enable the curate to attend the bedside of a dying parent. He undertook this duty without asking for any fee or pay, a fact which greatly increased his reputation.

A day or two after Mr. Purden's arrival came a carriage and four containing a very fine lady indeed, with her maid and her man. She drove to the Crown, the people all looking after her. A large coat of arms was emblazoned on the door of her carriage, with a coronet and supporters. Her man was dressed in a noble livery of pale green, with scarlet epaulets. A little crowd gathered round the door of the Crown while the footman held the door open and the lady spoke with the landlord.

"Sir," she said, inclining her head graciously and smiling upon the crowd, "I have been directed to ask for thy good offices in procuring a lodging. I am a simple person, but a body must have cleanliness and room to turn about."

"Madam," said the landlord, "there is but one lodging in the town which is worthy of your ladyship. I have myself across the market place a house which contains three or four rooms. These I would submit to your ladyship's consideration."

This was an excellent beginning. The lady took the rooms at the rent proposed and without haggling. There were two bedrooms for herself and her maid and one room in which she could sit. The man found lodgings elsewhere. It appeared from his statement that his mistress was none other than the Lady Anastasia, widow of the late Lord Langston and sister of the living Earl of Selsey. It was therefore quite true, as Sam Semple had announced, that persons of quality were coming to the spa

The Lady A[illegible] about 26 ye[illegible] woman still, though no longer in the first flush of her beauty. Her dress as well as her manner proclaimed the woman of fashion. I confess that as a simple sailor, one who could not pretend to be a gentleman and had never before seen a woman of rank, much less conversed with one, I was quite ready, after she had honored me with a few words of condescension and kindness, to become her slave. She could bear herself with the greatest dignity and even severity, as certain ladies discovered who presumed upon her kindness and assumed familiarity. But, while she could freeze with a frown and humiliate with a look, she could and did the next moment subdue the most obdurate and disarm the most resentful with her gracious smile and with her voice, which was the softest, the most musical and the most moving that you can imagine. She had been a widow for two years, and, having now put off the weeds, she was rejoicing at the freedom which the world allows to young widows of fortune and rank.

The mayor bade her welcome to the spa. "Madam," he said, "this town until yesterday was but a seaport and we ourselves for the most part merchants and sailors. We are not people of fashion. We do not call ourselves courtiers, but you will find us honest, and we hope that you will believe in our honesty when we venture, with all respect, to declare ourselves greatly honored by this visit of your ladyship."

"Indeed, worshipful sir and reverend sir, and you, gentlemen, I am grateful for your kind words. I am here only in the pursuit of health. I want nothing more, believe me, but to drink your sovereign waters, of which my physician speaks most highly, and, when my health allows me, to attend your church."

"We hope to offer your ladyship more than the pumproom," the mayor continued. "We have devised in our humble way rooms for the entertainment of the company with music and gardens, and we hope to have assemblies for dancing in the town hall. They are not such entertainments as your ladyship is accustomed to adorn, but such as they are we shall be deeply honored if you will condescend to join them. You will find the gentry and their ladies of the county and others not unworthy of your ladyship's acquaintance."

"Sir, I accept your invitation with great pleasure. These gayeties are indeed unexpected. I look forward, gentlemen, to making the acquaintance before many days of your ladies as well."

So she rose and dropped a courtesy while her man threw open the door, and the deputation withdrew.

In the evening the lady came to the long room soon after the music commenced. Mr. Prappet, bowing low, invited her to honor the evening by dancing a minuet. He presented a gentleman, the son of a Norfolk squire, who, with many blushes, being still young, led out this lady, all jewels, silk, ribbons and patches, and with such grace as he could command performed the stately dance of the fashionable assembly.

This done, the master of the ceremonies presented another gentleman, and her ladyship condescended to a second dance, after which she retired and sat down. The first gentleman then danced with another lady. The second gentleman succeeded him, and dance followed dance. Mr. Prappet presented to Lady Anastasia those of the ladies who belonged to the gentry, and she was presently surrounded by a court or company, with whom she discoursed pleasantly and graciously. The spa had found a leader.

The next arrival from London was Sir Harry Malyns, a baronet and country gentleman whose life was wholly devoted to the pleasures of town. Those who had seen the withered old anatomy carried out of his carriage laughed at the thought of this ancient person still devoted to the pleasures of the town. "Nay," said the varlet, grinning. "But wait till you see him dressed. Wait till he has passed through my hands. You think he is at his last gasp. Indeed I thought so myself when I gave him his sack posset and put him to bed, but he will recover. Sir Harry is not so old but he can still bear some fatigues."

There was another whose arrival caused no ringing of bells or salutations by the horns. This was a certain Colonel Lanyon, who wore the king's scarlet, having served and received promotion in the king's armies. He drank the hardest, he played the deepest, he swore the loudest and he was always ready to take offense. Yet he was tolerated and even liked, because he was good company. He sang songs; he told anecdotes; he had seen service in the West Indies and in many other places; he had passed through many adventures; he assumed, and successfully, the manner of a good sportsman, free with his money, who played deep, paid his debts of honor at once and expected to be paid in like manner.

Last of all came the prince of this company, Lord Fylingdale himself.

Sir Harry Malyns being asked if he knew his lordship, shook his head. "We of the gay world," he said, speaking as a young man, "do not commonly include Lord Fylingdale among the beaus and bucks. There is in him a certain haughtiness which forbids the familiarities common among ourselves."

"Is he, then, a saint?"

"Why, sir, I know nothing about saints. There are none."

Sam Semple showed good sense in going around to visit his old friends. Among others he called upon Captain Crowle, to whom he behaved with singular discernment, in such a way as would please the old man, for on board ship we like a cheerful sailor, one who takes punishment without sniveling and bears no malice thereafter. A ship is like a boys' school, where a flogging wipes out the offense and master and boy become good friends after it, whatever the heinousness of the crime.

"Sir," said Sam, standing before the captain modestly, "you will understand, first of all, that I am reminded in coming here of the last time that I saw you."

"Aye, my lad, I have not forgotten." The captain did not rise from his armchair, nor did he offer Sam his hand. He waited to learn in what spirit the young man approached him.

"Believe me, sir," said Sam, "I am not unmindful of a certain lesson, rough perhaps, but deserved. The presumption of youth, ignorance of the world, ignorance of the prize to which I aspired, may be my excuse, if any were needed. I was then both young and ignorant." It must be admitted that Sam possessed the gift of words. "Indeed I was too young to understand the humble nature of my origin and my position and too ignorant to understand my own presumption. Therefore, sir, before I say anything more I beg your forgiveness. That presumption, sir, can never, I assure you, be repeated. I know at least my own place and the distance between a certain young lady and myself."

"Why, my lad," said the captain, "since you talk in that modest way I bear no malice—none—wherefore here is my hand in token of forgiveness. And so on that head we will speak no more."

He extended his hand, which Sam took, still in humble attitude.

"I am deeply grateful, captain," he said. "You will perhaps before long find out how grateful I can be." Time, in fact, did show the depth of his gratitude. "Well, sir, I am now in high favor with my Lord Fylingdale, on whom you waited this morning."

HE PRESENTED A GENTLEMAN, THE SON OF A NORFOLK SQUIRE.

"I hope his favor will end in a snug place, Sam. Forget not the main point. Well, your patron is a goodly and a proper man to look at. Sit down, Sam. Take a glass of home brewed. You must want it after the ale of London, which is, so far as I remember, but poor stuff. Well, now, about your noble lord. He is a married man, I suppose?"

"Unfortunately, no. He is difficult to please."

"Ah! And I suppose, like most young noblemen, something of a profligate, eh, Sam? Or a gambler, likely? One who has ruined many innocents? Eh?" The captain looked mighty cunning.

"Sir—sir"—Sam spread out his hands in expostulation—"you distress me. Lord Fylingdale a profligate? Lord Fylingdale a gambler? Lord Fylingdale a libertine? Sir—Captain Crowle"— He spoke very earnestly. The tears came into his eyes. He laid his hand upon the captain's knee. "Sir, I assure you, he is, on the contrary, the best of men. There is no more virtuous nobleman in the country. My tongue is tied as his lordship's secretary, else could I tell of good deeds. Truly his right hand knoweth not what his left hand doeth. My lord is all goodness."

"Aye, aye. This is good hearing, indeed."

"Lord Fylingdale a gambler? Why, he may take part at a table, but not a gambler. No man is less a gambler. What doth it matter to him if he wins or loses a little? He neither desires to win nor does he fear to lose. You will, I dare say, see him in the cardroom just to encourage the spirit of the company."

"A very noble gentleman, indeed." The captain drank a glass of his home brewed. "A very noble gentleman, truly. Go on, Samuel Semple."

"Also he is one who— Captain, if there is one thing in the world that my patron abhors it is the man who ruins innocency and leaves his victim to starve. No, sir; his lordship is a man of the nicest honor and the highest principle."

"He has a secretary who is grateful, at least," observed the captain.

"His sword is ever ready to defend the helpless and to uphold the virtuous. Would to heaven there were more like the right honorable the Earl of Fylingdale!"

"Look you, Master Sam," said the captain. "Your good opinion of your patron does you credit. I honor you for your generous words. I have never so far, and I am now past 70, encountered any man who was either saint or angel, but in every man have I always found some flaw whether of temper or of conduct. So that I do not pretend to believe all that you make out."

Sam Semple sighed and rose. "I ask not for your entire belief, sir. It will be sufficient if you learn, as I have learned, the great worth of this exalted and incomparable nobleman. As for flaws, we are all human, but I know of none. So I take my leave. I venture to hope, sir, that your good lady and your lovely ward—I use the word with due respect—are in good health."

So he departed, leaving the captain thoughtful.

And now they were all among us, the vile crew brought together for our un

OUR COUNTRY NEIGHBORS

WYLIE

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison, on Wednesday, a son.

Joh Forsberg was a passenger for Crookston Wednesday.

Mrs. Chas. Adolpson was a passenger for Crookston Monday.

John Fangstrom and John Dargan left for the pineries Monday.

Thomas Hart departed for his home in Goodhue county last Friday.

N. O. Ostrom and family left for their new home at Roseau Monday.

Alfred Lindquist was a business visitor to the county seat Thursday.

A. O. Letvig is at St. Hilaire where he is working at his trade, well digging.

A. M. Hanson left for Koochiching Thursday to take a look at that country.

S. J. Swanson spent Sunday at Red Lake Falls. His recollections are pleasant.

Emil Orthloff returned home from North Dakota Monday where he has spent the summer.

W. H. Schribner came down from his ditch Wednesday to look after some matter of business here.

August Peterson, of Bray, returned home from Crookston Monday after a pleasant visited with relatives.

John Morrison departed for Goodhue county Thursday to prepare a home for his family who will follow later.

William Eckstein who has been at the St. Vincent hospital, Crookston, sick with typhoid fever returned home Monday.

Oliver T. Romsos who had a mild touch of typhoid fever for three or four weeks past, is again doing business at the old stand.

Jessie and Hellen Wylie who have been very ill with typhoid fever for the past three weeks are improving, but on account of the severeness of the disease will not be able to be out for some time.

Mrs. K. F. Sandberg and sons, Chas. and Victor, drove to Crookston Tuesday night, called there by the serious illness of Axel, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. K. F. Sandberg. Mr. Sandberg went down on the train the next day, being himself indisposed at the time they received the message.

Prof. A. H. Gerlach, the Hypnotist, gave an entertainment at the school house Saturday night. On account of the play not being well advertised the attendance was small. The Professor, however, demonstrated to those present that he was well versed in the art and could make his subjects cut all kinds of capers at his bidding.

Erick and August Erickson went to Crookston Tuesday.

Attorney Hayes, of Crookston was doing business here Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Armstrong passed through here Wednesday enroute to St. Hilaire. Mr. Armstrong talked cigars to our merchants during his brief stop.

ROCKSBURY.

The first case of small pox has made its appearance in our town.

A. A. Wassen and family have moved to Thief River Falls where they will make their future home. Success to you.

The supervisors met at the town clerk's office Nov. 18, and transacted current business.

Farm lands are on the boom in our town, lots of new people moving in and not a vacant farm house to be found.

Johannes Benson sold his farm the other day to an Iowa party for a nice wad of money.

Twentieth Century Medicine.

LAMBERT

S. Bernier came back from Crookston last Wednesday.

Miss A. Joll and her brother of Terrebonne attended mass here Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ducbarme of Terrebonne visited friends here the first of the week.

Emery Dion and Miss Azella Paquen were married Sunday. Our congratulations.

A. Hanson, guided by Jules Guerard, was selling Dr Ward's medicines here last week.

G. Lajambe and L. Bernier came back from Dakota last week, where they have worked all summer.

LOUISVILLE

A great deal of sickness prevails in this vicinity.

In spite of the cold weather blackbirds and ducks stay with us, Arthur Huot shot two Mallard ducks yesterday.

Your correspondent expects to go to Blackduck next week, weather permitting, so The Gazette will be short one correspondent for a couple of weeks.

The four year old little daughter of Ferdinand Peppin died last Wednesday of measles, after an illness of two weeks. The remains were interred Saturday in the Louisville cemetery.

BRAY.

Fine weather.

Crist Borgen of Wylie visited with O. P. Johnson Sunday.

J. M. Swanson delivered a sermon Sunday in the schoolhouse here.

August Peterson and daughter Emma left for Crookston Saturday.

A number of Bray farmers went to St. Hilaire Wednesday to meet Mc Cormick and Deering collectors.

The young people at Bray attended a surprise party at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Aug. Peterson Saturday evening.

Messrs. John Fosberg, Chas. Englund and C. A. Nelson left Wednesday for a business trip to Crookston, returning Friday.

A thousand things by it are done for better than most things done. We refer to Rocky Mountain Tea made by Madison Medicine Co. 35c. W. A. Schreiter.

SANDERS.

The Ladies Society of Lanstad's congregation will meet at Mrs. Aaseby's Thursday Nov. 21.

The roads are in good condition for teaming and heavy loads of wheat and other grains are now going to market.

Brings attractiveness to listless, unlovable girls, making them handsome, marriageable women. That's what Rocky Mountain Tea will do. 35c. W. A. Schreiter.

Cornelius Anderson, of Stewartville, this state, who has been visiting with his brother Nels K. has gone to Kittson county to visit his brother Soren. Cornelius may make the Red River Valley his future home if he finds a location that suits him.

Confirmation services were held in Lanstad's church last Sunday by Rev. A. M. Lunde, when three girls and one boy were confirmed in the Lutheran faith and dedicated to the congregation. The Lord's Supper was then served and a large number of members partook of communion.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well-known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drugs and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

GARNES.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Green spent Monday in town.

Ole Lee and Ralph Moen went to McIntosh Monday.

Ralph Rogers and Wm. Sands were visitors in town Tuesday.

Thos. Veitch went to McIntosh Wednesday with a load of grain.

Seventy-five men and forty horses passed through here this week on their way to the pineries.

T. G. Quale, Tom Johnson and Dave Lynch were transacting business at Terrebonne this week.

It is rumored that Garnes will soon have a new store, hotel and livery stable. The more the merrier.

E. K. Gjernes viewed the city of St. Hilaire Thursday and interviewed the merchants of that saintly place.

The Woodmen are preparing for a Thanksgiving ball, to be given in Hughe's hall, Thursday evening, Nov. 28.

Nels Nelson, the blacksmith, is building a very neat residence. We have not yet asked his intentions but will do so in the near future.

Moostrom & Olson are kept busy grinding feed for the farmers (or for their cattle and pigs) and are also threatening dire vengeance on the pigs that are running at large, destroying grain sacks and devouring the grain left at the mill.

Mrs. Short of Lillo passed through here Tuesday with a span of jet black horses, and an elegant two seated phaeton which she had purchased in Red Lake Falls. Our opinion of that city has gone up several degrees since it turned out such a handsome equipage.

What is the matter with the Sunbeam? It has one merit which most of our papers lack, viz—there is not much of it. It would have more merit if there was less of it. But then if Garnes and Gully can stand it, such places as Minneapolis, McIntosh and Red Lake Falls ought to.

EMARDVILLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Odin Jacobson and Mrs. Jacob Waldall were among the Red Lake Falls visitors Friday.

Anton Ellingson came out the other day to look after some of his property which remains unsold and told of the progress of business at Benstike.

Crist Hanson, traveling salesman for Dr. Ward's Liniment and Watkins Medical Company was around Sunday and Monday selling and collecting for medicines.

Pet Ohslund departed for Alberta, Canada, Wednesday last with the intention of looking for free government land for himself, Martin Johnson and Charley Asp.

Peter Medchill had called a meeting for Saturday, Nov. 16, in the Mindrum Bros.' store room for the purpose of ascertaining if there are enough cows in this vicinity to warrant the starting of a creamery. A committee of investigation however reported a lack of cows and the project was declared off for the present.

At the recent creamery meeting A. J. Hemstead took occasion to tell the people that he was opposed to the proposed county drainage ditch and would do all in his power to knock it out. He got a few supporters and it was decided to send a committee including himself and Chas. Asp to Crookston today for the purpose of hiring a lawyer.

NUMEDAL

Bugge Bros. have just finished threshing.

Nels Johnson drove to Thief River Falls Saturday.

H. Olson was in Warren on business last Saturday.

Ole Arneson has left Numedal for Thief River Falls.

Nels Berggren made a business trip to Warren last week.

O. B. Olson made a trip to Thief Lake and return Saturday.

Peter Swanson, who took in the Halling dance at Thief River Falls, reports a good time.

Henry Swanson of St. Hilaire was here this week visiting with his sister, Mrs. Joseph Duchamp and his brother Peter H. Swanson.

Fred Duchamp and O. B. Olson have put a water works system into Mr. Duchamp's barn. It is a work of considerable ingenuity.

To remove a troublesome corn or bunion: First soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it, then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily; rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn for a few days, to protect it from the shoe. As a general liniment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequaled. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Great Luck Of An Editor.

A Terrebonne farmer, after experimenting with an egg food as a hog fattener for fifteen days has given it up. 'Twas too expensive.

Geo. Meunier and Miss Tillie Quesnell were married on Tuesday. They will go to housekeeping in the second story of Chas. Lajeunesse's house.

David Laurent, Wm. Styves and Adelard Champoux started for the lumber camps Wednesday. These young Terrebonne lights will be "missed" very much in the community.

ROADMAKING MACHINERY.

It Has Divested Highway Building of Many Difficulties.

Road building in many sections of the country has never got beyond the gravel wagon and the farmer's shovel. In most states the farmer "works out" his road tax on a day that is most convenient to himself and when there is nothing that can be done on the farm. He runs a scraper up and down the highway, throwing the dirt in mounds, hauls a few loads of gravel, scatters it about promiscuously and the job is done for the year. It is this kind of "road building" which makes many country highways impassable for a good portion of the year.

In no department of mechanical industry has greater progress been made than in the perfection and manufacture of roadmaking machinery. The use of this machinery under the direction of experts reduces road building in any kind of soil to a very simple proposition. A wider knowledge of modern roadmaking machinery among the agricultural classes would divest the problem of many apparent difficulties in the minds of those to whom legislatures must look for the initiative in this matter.

Modern steam power roadmaking machinery, combined with state aid under a state engineer of highways, furnishes the practical solution of the good roads problem in this country.

THE COST TO FARMERS.

How Bad Roads Count In Figuring Profit and Loss.

A potent argument with the farmer when he can be made to listen is the influence of good roads on the marketing of his product. With country roads as they are there are seasons when the farmer could not get his grain to market if he were offered its weight in gold. Unless he has large capital he cannot take advantage of the actual market conditions, but must be governed in selling by the state of the country roads. He cannot sell unless he can deliver wagon load lots at the railroad station.

A consequence is, say students of this question, that the farmers of Illinois could have equipped the state with macadam pavements for the money they have lost through being forced to sell their product when the roads happen to be good enough to permit hauling.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER
—BY—
PHIL. A. KAUFER.

Published weekly, Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

GOV. VAN SANT'S LATEST.

Minnesota is the storm center of the agitation aroused by the gigantic railroad deal, whereby the Northern Securities Company, with a capital stock of $400,000,000 (!) has been launched. Here lives the president of the new concern, Jas. J. Hill, and here are the head offices of both the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads—the seat of life of both great parallel lines which have hitherto lived a separate existence. The gradual assimilation of the two systems has been coming for years, and the people of the Northwest have stood aghast and looked on with universal disapproval. Now the governor of Minnesota has taken the lead in a fight against the octopus. His stand is no doubt a surprise to many. It means a good deal. It will make of Samuel R. VanSant Minnesota's "war governor," and he in person will lead the hosts of the state in an onslaught against a concern, which, unless vanquished, it is feared, has the power to stifle profitable business progress. The fight may be a protracted one. It will not do to swap horses while crossing a stream, and the governor hopes to remain as the chief executive of this state. If he carries out his purpose without faltering, win or loose, he has been the people's champion, and he will be as unpopular with the railroads and as popular with the people as ever was Pingree of Michigan.

Advices from Wall street are to the effect that the announcement of Gov. Van Sant's ultimatum has caused stocks to decline. There is no doubt of the unpopularity of the Securities company. The people are against it. Do the people rule? Has the appeal to "Vox Populi" gone out of date? Is the Securities Company, with its massive legal talent, backed by millions too much for them to grapple with? Hardly. With a governor and attorney general in sympathy, the Securities company might be secure. But with the governor and attorney general to lead the people against it, there will be a rift in the power of the octopus. The people will rule.

Governor Van Sant says:

"The great railway deal in New York having for its object the uniting of two great competing and parallel lines—the Northern Pacific and Great Northern—is a matter of great public interest. There is justly a widespread opposition to it in our state. I do not know if it can be prevented, but it is my intention to ask Attorney General Douglas upon his return, to bring suit in the name of the state to prevent if possible the consolidation of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroad companies. It is clearly in open violation of the plain intent and purpose of the law.

If under existing laws the consolidation cannot be prevented, I feel that I would be justified in calling an extra session of the legislature to take the necessary steps to successfully resist it if it could be accomplished by this means.

"Believing it to be my plain duty I shall leave no stone unturned to prevent this contemplated consolidation. Owing to the great interest of our state and people at stake, it should and will be a fight to a finish. If the will of the people can be trampled upon in this manner, the sooner this fact is ascertained and understood the better."

Congressman Eddy subscribes for the country papers in his district—and pays for them. That is more than the average politician does and the result speaks for itself.

Up to date the thin-muskrat house prophet is slightly in the lead.

EDDY'S COURAGE.

Congressman Eddy has a hard fight on his hands in the new Seventh district, where he is striving for the Republican congressional nomination with foes worthy of his steel. At such a time the average public man in his position would keep his mouth shut on such dainty issues as the Babcock idea of tariff revision. But on the contrary Eddy takes the bull by the horns and defines his position. This is Eddy's way, and it is the policy which has won in his battles heretofore—and all know he has always gone up against a situation that would have had the ordinary man licked before the fray. The people of the Seventh district must admire his courage and sincerity of purpose in his analysis of the tariff issue, which is given below:

Congressman Eddy says that he does not subscribe to the "Babcock idea" of tariff revision but nevertheless gives out an interview in which he analyzes the tariff situation as follows:

The tariff was established for a particular purpose and its objects were stated long ago as follows:

First—to build up our industries.

Second—To protect industries already established.

Third—To create local competition by increasing the number of factories and thus cheapen the finished product.

Fourth—To protect our workingmen, not against the foreign worker but against conditions which exist in nearly all countries abroad.

Now, if that is a correct statement of the case, and I presume it is for it has been engrafted into the platforms of all tariff parties for years, it necessarily follows that any tariff that tends to reduce the number of manufactories and lessen domestic competition, or any tariff upon any industry of which the proprietors are seeking to bring about foreign labor conditions in America, is not a tariff at all in the proper sense of the word.

In other words, any tariff which tends to aid in the consummation of a monopoly, or which tends towards discrimination among American manufacturers, or is utilized to bring foreign conditions into our labor circles is not, in my opinion, a protective tariff.

LAW IN A NUT SHELL.

Not everyone can yet tell the provisions of the new primary law. And a great many would have some difficulty in ciphering its exact meaning from a perusal of the text of the law itself. Hence a brief statement of its provisions, so far as candidates are concerned, will be of interest here. The following concise statement is from the Albert Lea Enterprise, and is the whole thing in a nut shell. Paste it in your hat for future reference: Any person who wishes to become a candidate for the nomination to any office may do so by filing an affidavit with the county auditor and paying a fee of ten dollars, by filing his affidavit with the secretary of state and paying a fee of twenty dollars. No person defeated at the primary election can go on the official ballot at the final election. The primary election will be held on the seventh Tuesday before election, which is also the first day of registration, and any person entitled to register may vote. Australian ballots are to be provided for each party participating in the election, and each voter must declare his party affiliations before receiving a ballot. If challenged the voter must make affidavit relative to his party."

Representative Morris is urging land commissioner Herman to take steps for the immediate survey of several townships of government lands in St. Louis and Itasca counties, for which there is a demand on the part of settlers. The lands in question are of good quality for farming purposes and also contain considerable timber.

We doubt if Lind, Dunn or "Jake" himself could rattle around the arena versus the railroad combine at a livelier gait than that assumed by our governor. Go ahead, Governor. The people are with you.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Chas. E. Lewis, the grain commission merchant of Minneapolis, and who is considered one of the most conservative men on the floor of the Minneapolis chamber of commerce predicts that wheat will sell for 90c within a few weeks.

× ×

The Fertile Journal says Fertile has more brick buildings than any town of its size in the northwest.

× ×

The village of Tower has permanently entrenched herself in the hearts of the American people, by erecting the first public monument in this country to the memory of William McKinley. The monument is of iron—a shaft fifteen feet high high, standing on a base seven feet square and two feet high. The monument was erected by the sturdy miners and lumbermen of that section and the citizens of Tower. The people of Tower may be justly proud of their achievement—and Minnesota shares the honors.

× ×

The Princeton Union is one of the most attractive country papers in the state. It is Bob Dunn's paper.

× ×

John Lawson, of the Owatonna Journal thinks a Mr. Osborne, of Glasgow, knows just how to jolly the Minneapolis reporters. "Why," said he to one of them, "When we rolled up Washington and Hennepin avenues in a carriage this morning, one of my daughters exclaimed. "Why, papa, this is just like Paris." And the reporter swallowed it. Which goes to show that all the gudgeons are not in the sea.

× ×

There were lively times at Hallock last week when a representative of Sexton & Co., of Chicago, who had been selling goods direct to the farmers was arrested. He had violated the pure food laws of Minnesota by selling goods of inferior brands and which were not labeled according to law, and was fined $150 and costs. The goods were returned to Chicago. Moral—patronize your home merchants.

× ×

The Fargo Forum is ten years old—but not as old as the editorial experience of its good Major Edwards, whose great qualities of heart and mind have irrigated the fields of Dakota life these many years.

× ×

Duluth may now go up. The opium dens where "hop smoking" and "hitting the pipe" is indulged in, have demonstrated her cosmopolitanism. As many as fourteen persons were counted entering a local Chinese establishment in one night, which gives some idea of the amount of the vile stuff that is daily consumed.

× ×

This year's output of the Fosston woolen mill will amount to about $75,000. The enterprise is a winner for Fosston. It was located there because the citizens went after it.

× ×

That things are moving on the Fosston line can be seen by this from the McIntosh Times: The Great Northern has added an extra car to the passenger train on this line, making five coaches in all, and yet standing room is at a premium. The service should be doubled by giving us two trains each way every day.

× ×

Geo. B. Winship, in the Grand Forks Herald: Enterprising business men realize the value to a city of a creditable paper. They know that among outsiders the character of a city is measured by the character of its newspapers more than by any other thing, and there are few communities so short sighted as to starve a good paper to death. But people do not like to buy a pig in a poke, and if more publications would make an attempt to demonstrate their usefulness before asking for the pecuniary support of the public there would be less dissatisfaction with newspapers in general.

× ×

The Farihault Journal is proud of the fact that its local flour mill has just shipped forty-one carloads of flour for distribution through the New England states.

× ×

There is a moral in this item from the Hasting's Gazette: The state dairy department is after the box car merchants, particularly a firm from Minneapolis. An analysis of a sample of pepper showed only twenty-three per cent. of the pure article, and baking powder was not up to standard.

× ×

Over at Crookston they have spinster club parties. Here they are called hen parties, and the boys always steal the ice cream.

× ×

The row between the editors of the Crookston dailies is not worthy of the participants. The Crookston dailies out-rank anything in the state outside of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth papers. Their productions are worthy of the highest praise, But their continuous vituperative attacks on one another are discreditable and displeasing.

× ×

Sister Robertson, of the Graceville Phenix, will be getting into trouble with Henri Watterson, Vic Lawson and other notables if she persists in telling the truth in this fashion. She says:

The death of the illustrious Chinaman, Li Hung Chang, recalls the fact of the warm friendship between the Chinese statesman and Gen. Grant. And in this connection one might wonder why a friendship between Booker Washington and President Roosevelt could be any more objectionable than between the two former celebrities.

The Crookston Times says: "Doctors S. O. Brinhall and L. B. Wilson of Minneapolis, members of the State Board of Health, passed through the city this morning on their way to Red Lake county to look after the small pox in that part of the world."

The doctors came up to look into the horse disease here. It isn't small pox. This looks like a horse on the Times.

In a funeral sermon in Kansas a preacher spoke these words: A word to all. Post mortem praises are in the air. People kiss the dead; they hover over open caskets with hysteric sobs, but fail to throw their arms around their loved ones who are fighting the stern battle of life. A word of cheer to a struggling soul in life is worth more than all the roses in Christendom piled high on casket covers. The dead can't smell the flowers, but the living can; scatter them broadcast in their pathway before it is too late.

The Crookston Steam Laundry advertises to do washing for 5c a pound. The ad should be more specific. Are the clothes weighed before or after? This is important. A possible discrepancy of fifty per cent. or such a matter is not to be overlooked.

Minneapolis Tribune: There are four newspapers in Fergus Falls, from reading any one of which you would get the impression that the other three were edited by unhung villains. But the other day the office of one of them, the Free Press, was damaged by fire, whereat Editor Adams of the Journal, and Editor Wheelock, of the Weekly, promptly offered the use of their respective plants to Editor Sawbridge.

Still it ought not to need disaster to bring the brethern to proper appreciation of each other. They should always feel that way, for the world is big enough for all of us to live together in it peacefully.

Minnesota people may feel a just civic pride in the fact that the first public monument to the memory of William McKinley was erected in this state.

This bouquet was "Caught on the Run" in the Duluth News Tribune. Considering its source, the dainty compliment is doubly appreciated: "Phil Kaufer's 'Facts and Fancies' in the Red Lake Falls Gazette are notably clever."

Jos. Gray and wife returned Monday from a visit at Crookston.

Keogh Leroux has been ill since Monday, and confined to the house.

Joe Baril returned today from Fargo where he spent several days this week.

Mrs Gertrude Koke, and Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Sally spent Sunday at Thief River Falls, returning Monday.

James McIntyre who isn't a relative of W. A. McIntyre, has located at Thief River Falls for the practice of law.

Lightner's perfumes—True Pink, Red Roses, Wild Lilly-bells, French Roses. Truly exquisite, at Schreiter's drug store.

Mrs. John Bischoff and son Joseph left yesterday for Springfield, Ohio, where they will spend the winter with relatives.

Mrs. L. B. Eastman returned Monday from Thief River Falls where she had been visiting Mrs. M. C. Harlow since Saturday.

Miss May Buse returned Monday from Crookston where she had been visiting at the home of her cousin L. P. Stranahan.

The Gazette acknowledges the receipt of a 20-pound turkey and a big duck, as a Thanksgiving treat from Charlie Liebel. We are thankful.

D. W. Gauss came up from Pula, Ia., yesterday to visit with his son P. B. Gaass. He will make investments in Red Lake county land before returning.

A. Vanderwald, one of the leading farmers of Durham, Iowa, is here looking over the county with a view to investing. He came up in company with D. W. Gauss.

D. W. Winton, of the Thief River Falls Lumber Company, is in the market for live heavy draft teams. Yesterday he purchased a fine team from Prosper Wilmes.

T. V. Thibodeau, the ice man, has now changed to the water man. He is an ice man in summer and a water man in winter, and in this way succeeds in keeping in line with the wants of his patrons.

The turkey raffle at Paul Rick's Saturday night was attended by many from this city. 22 turkeys, 8 ducks and 1 goose were awarded by the dice route. Franz Freund's orchestra dispensed music for the dance, and a big supper was served

Edward Nelson is at work in the county auditor's office taking notes for a map of Red Lake county, which he expects to publish shortly. He works in conjunction with Chas. Nelson, of Hallock, now state librarian. Although of the same name they are not related.

Geo. Marchildon was in town Tuesday. Mr. Marchildon is one of our bonanza farmers. He came here twenty-three years ago with nothing and now owns 680 acres of land in Lake Pleasant and Red Lake Falls townships, besides a wealth in buildings, stock and machinery.

Tuesday was Will Hunt's sixteenth birthday anniversary. A number of his friends got up a surprise skating party in honor of the event. Will was kidnapped and taken to the river where the party enjoyed skating for a time. Returning to the house they were royally entertained and an elaborate luncheon served.

J. Therien has returned to Red Lake Falls to live. Some months back he sold his farm at Terrebonne for $10,000, and other property for snug rolls, and left with his wife to spend the remainder of his days in Canada. Since leaving he has traveled extensively through all the States. His friends were surprised and pleased to see him back and to learn that he likes it better here than elsewhere.

D. W. Winton, manager of the Thief River Falls Lumber Co., and Joe Crowe, foreman of the yard, were here Tuesday doing a stroke of business in a live town. They purchased three sets of heavy lumber harness from L. A. Kaufer (who has been making all of their harness for several years past) and were looking around for several heavy draft teams.

A. H. Hoagland, of St. Paul, Great Northern chief engineer together with his assistants, C. H. Hickman and J. C. Upton, were here this week making surveys of the cuts with a view to devising a plan for permanent improvements. The company has been put to very heavy expense to keep the cuts open in wet weather, and will no doubt be willing to put in a big bunch of money at one time if it is thought the drain can be stopped once for all.

The county commissioners will meet next Monday, the 25th inst.

Fred Chayer left Sunday for Spokene, Wash., where he will work in a cigar factory.

Mrs. Gerhart Didrichson went to Grand Forks yesterday for a brief visit with friends.

When your eyes trouble you go to Henry W. Anderson, Expert Optician, State Graduate.

Miss Minnie Zaiser and her friend Miss Clara Moeckel, of Crookston, spent Sunday with relatives in the city.

Harry Ives and Chas. Latin they of the Saintly City Spectator, were transacting business in the city Tuesday.

Miss Alice Buse went to Thief River Falls Saturday to attend the bachelor's ball. She is a guest of Miss Curran.

J. A. Allard's up-to-date confectionery meets the season half way. Fine cold weather drinks and all seasonable goods.

Misses Bessie Hunt and Mabel Porter went to Thief River Falls Tuesday to enjoy a visit with Mrs. James Meehan Jr.

We have received another fresh shipment of the celebrated Purina Pan Cake flour to try it is to be a regular uses of it. Garceau Bros.

F. B. Newton drove to Wylie Friday where he took the train for Thief River Falls, going from the upper Falls to St. Paul. He returned Tuesday.

Ed. L. Healy returned Tuesday from the twin cities where he spread the gospel of truth about the Red River Valley as a place to live and make money.

C. A. Brummond, who has been G.N. station agent at St. Hilaire for several years past, has gone to Washburn, N D., to fill a like position for the company there.

A. Dion, of Poplar River, was in the city Saturday. He says the elevator at Erskine is "blocked." The wheat was coming in faster than the railroad hauled it out.

Henry Lachance, of Crookston, a brother of Joseph and John Lachance of this city, has gone to Pleasant Valley, Washington, where he will make his future home.

Jos. A. H. Lemieux, who bought the Lemieux building about a month ago has had the room formerly occupied by J. R. Fortier repaired, and same has been leased by Telesfore Robillard.

Carl Oerlech Saturday presented the editor with a sample of his strained honey. 2,500 pounds was his crop this year. He had 65 swarms, and considers the bee business but a side line.

O. Mikkelsen returned Tuesday from Iowa. Mr. Mikkelsen owns a farm there and while absent put up a number of new buildings, among them a barn to replace the one blown down in the cyclone last summer.

The north bound train on the N. P. was late yesterday on account of heavy freight traffic. A special from Grand Forks came down to take east bound passengers to Fertile to connect with the main line. The belated train handled 32 cars.

H. J. Kaufer has embellished his barber pole with red, white and blue incandescent lights. He is located in the shop opposite the bank and invites his friends to call. Henry will add several improvements to his shop—plate glass front and addition to the rear.

"Sem" Johnson, the newly appointed bank examiner, was making an unofficial visit to our banking institutions and officials yesterday. He had heard of the fine equipments of our banks which outclass those of many larger cities, says the good reputation is well merited.

Joe Gray and O. Mikkelsen have decided to take their heifer case into court. It will be tried Saturday before Judge Toupin. At that time the ownership of the heifer, which is now in dispute, will be decided. Both parties claim the animal, Mr. Mikkelsen alleging that he bought it from J. W. McGinty.

Hens Haaven, one of the bright Garnes farmers, was in the city Saturday. Mr. Haaven and his father and sister live together in a cozy home over there. Each proved up on a 160 acre tract last summer, and they have refused many flattering offers for their land, preferring to make it their home.

Clerk of Court Perrault is having two additions built to his home on the farm, occupied by his father, Chas. Perrault and family. The additions will be 14 x 14 and 12 x 12. Mr. Perrault is also considering the project of putting up a cottage in the city. Our readers may draw their own inference. We are saying nothing.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Garceau last night entertained a few of their neighbors at —oysters and cinch. Cinch came first, but the oysters as prepared by Mrs. Garceau carried off the honors of the occasion. It is needless to say that the guests spent a pleasant evening. It could not be otherwise where Mr. and Mrs. Garceau are host and hostess.

Bargains in ladies' and misses jackets at Garceau Bros.

P. J. Paradis, of the Saintless City, was a visitor here Tuesday.

The Erskine Brick Co. has just finished burning another 480,000 kiln.

A telephone is being put into St. Mary's church parsonage. The number will be 68.

W. A. McIntyre has moved his office to the rooms formerly occupied by Dr. Jules Gendron. His new telephone number is 67.

J. R. Lewis, of Minneapolis, came up Friday for a visit at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. W. Rodgers. He returned Monday.

Theodore Weidecamper who had been visiting relatives in this vicinity the past two months, has returned to his home at Lester, Faribault county.

A gang of tough characters struck McIntosh last week and committed various depredations. They were let off with an easy fine by the local justice.

Chas. Sundstrom writes from Havre, Mont., that he has accepted a position as G. N. yard foreman there, at an increase of $25 per month over his salary here.

Ed. Coenen was down from Thief River Falls over Sunday. He reports the business of the firm of Coenen & Pederson, cigar manufacturers, as flourishing.

Teddy Richard and Elzear Cyr will leave Dec. 1st for Frenchtown, Missoula county, Montana. Mr. Richard's brother Octave, whom he has not seen for twenty years, and Mr. Cyr's brother Elvie, both live there.

Halvor Torkelson was in from Mentor Tuesday with samples of the fine flint corn raised on his farm this year. None of the ears measure less than 12 inches, many more, and the quality is unsurpassed. The yeild was 35 bushels to the acre and he had in a goodly sized field. Corn can be raised in Red Lake county. This is no longer a debatable question. It has long been settled affirmatively. Of course there are unfavorable seasons for corn, the same as for wheat. But there is nothing in the climate to prevent successful corn culture.

T. W Hoover on Tuesday received word that he had been appointed clerk in the United States Land Office at Devil's Lake, and as soon as M. O. Sortsdahl, of the Bank of Red Lake Falls, for whom he has been working the past year, returns, he will leave for his new field of labor. The Ft. Totten Indian reservation, which will no doubt soon be thrown open to settlement, lies in this district. The land is close to thriving cities and good markets, and is very valuable. Mr. Hoover, no doubt, will be glad to supply his friends with information relative to this subject, when he has gotten settled down over there. Several of his sisters are relatives of Devil's Lake, and he looks forward to the change with pleasant anticipations.

From the Spectator.

Donat Boyer, the Crookston attorney, was here Monday on his way to Red Lake Falls where he had some legal business to attend to.

The fire department was called out this morning by an alarm turned in from the saw mill. The boys responded promptly and on arriving at the mill it was found that the burner and tramway leading to it were blazing fiercely. By hard and well directed work the fire was soon under control. The tramway and framework close to the burner was badly scorched but the loss will not be very heavy. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The brick work on the new bank building has been finished for several days and the work of plastering was commenced today. It is expected that it will be ready for occupancy by Dec. 1st.

J. Ulesse Bray, who has been in Klondyke for the past three years as secretary to the engineer of the public works department, operated by the Dominion government, was here yesterday on his way to Red Lake Falls to visit his cousin J. M. Bray. He is just now on his way home from the Klondyke region to Ottawa.

High School Notes.

Edited by The Athenian Society.

LITERARY WORK.

Resolved: "That the lands of the Red Lake Reservation should be sold in 160 acre tracts to the highest bidders and actual settlers only, rather than be given as free homesteads." This debate occurs Friday, Nov. 22. The debaters on affirmative side are Rachel Taylor, Anton Schusser and Delia Toupin; on negative side, Eleanor Fiodoisen, Wm. Ittner, and Doretta Mathias.

It was a very successful program that was given by the Athenians last Friday. The room was prettily decorated with the Athenian's colors, dark blue and gold. The number of visitors greatly exceeded that of any previous program, twenty-one being present.

The Thanksgiving program to be given by the Spartans, will occur Wednesday, Nov. 27.

PERSONALS.

Thrashing season being over, Fred Richard has again returned to school.

Tom McNerthney was chosen as a member of the Athenian society at last Friday's session.

Miss Clara Cyr visited school last Tuesday.

SCHOOL IN GENERAL.

Prof. Whiteley is still reading the "Autobiography of Jacob A. Riis."

Three or four seem to be working on the debate for Friday next. It's going to be a "hot" one. We urge your presence.

Fifty-six pupils are now enrolled in the High School.

Owing to the fact that the foot ball has been returned to its generous owner, a tin can has been serving the purpose of late.

The committee have been around for judges of the next debate. If you have been asked we hope you will respond.

Skating is fine. A number of the H. S. pupils took a rest from their studies Monday night and enjoyed a skate on the mill pond.

On Tuesday evening a party of young folks surprised Will Hunt at his home, after enjoying an hour's skate. Refreshments were served and a good time was reported.

A good deal of yawning was indulged in, on Wednesday morning. We wonder why.

The Athenians and Spartans have chosen their colors,—dark blue and orange, blue and gray, respectively.

INCIDENTS.

Enough "cutting up" has been indulged in, but nothing of note has occurred.

CONTRIBUTION.

"What a Hat Can Say."

There the cap lay and seemed to me telling all about his owner, and these are the words he seemed to say: "In the first place I belong to a careless boy. He bought me with the intention of keeping me for his best or Sunday hat, as he expressed it; but the first thing I knew the thoughtless boy wore me to perform his chores to the barn. He has little consideration for his looks and least, I think, for the feelings of a hat. He crushes me, wears me on the side or back of his head, in whatever way he happens to put me on his head. He is fond of playing and it is during these games I have my worst time, for in his races and foot-ball games he has little thought of a hat and I fall off his head and am stepped upon, or worse fall into some mud hole. I am used badly but I must pardon the boy for he is young and careless, and I have therefore hopes that my followers will fare better with their owner." Indeed the hat looked all he said and I think had the boy been there he would have been ashamed of the reputation the hat gave him. It was crushed and smeared with dirt, and it was with difficulty one could guess it had once been gray.

From the News.

Mrs. Herman Bischoff, of Red Lake Falls, arrived in the city last Friday and is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bourque.

The Crookston People's Press announces that Mayor Campbell will be the candidate of the "reform" forces in this district next year. Nat has done good work in reforming Crookston.

Dr. B. E. Dahlgren, who was recently located here in the practice of dentistry, has accepted a position as demonstrator at Yale college with a salary of $1,000 a year. Dr. Dahlgren was an artist in wax modeling.

H. W. Lee left Monday for Wisconsin, where he gives testimony in his case against the Winnebago Indians. The case will be decided this winter, and Mr. Lee feels confident that he will receive the amount he asks—$64,000.

The newly elected officers will be installed at the first meeting in January by District Deputy Mabel Owen.

Clearwater Lodge I. O. O. F. will hold its regular semi-annual election of officers Saturday night, and a full attendance is greatly to be desired.

Members of Evergreen Camp R. N. A. are reminded that the semi annual election occurs Friday night of this week. A very warm time is anticipated and no Neighbors interested in the welfare of the camp can afford to be absent.

At the regular meeting of the M. B. A., held last Monday evening it was unanimously decided to have a series of parties for the winter. Preparations have already begun for the first one which will be held immediately after Advent.

Evergreen Camp R. N. A. has been regarded as a leading society factor here, and the Neighbors have enjoyed so many social pleasures through the camp that a very bright and interesting membership has been the result. The latest event was the progressive cinch party Friday night, with seven tables in use. Coffee and cake were served. Royal Neighbors and their escorts only attended, and the camp has decided to give these card parties every two weeks, during the winter months.

The dance and banquet of the Crookston R.N.A. last Wednesday was a most enjoyable affair. Some 20 new members were initiated and a large number attended from surrounding towns. The banquet was a sumptous repast and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by those who attended.

BRITISH-BOER WAR NEWS.

Within the past few days the Boers have approached still nearer to Cape Town. Sixty men of the commando last seen at Hopefield have penetrated south of Darling, 48 miles north of Cape Town.

In a speech in London Mr. Brodrick, the British war secretary, said Great Britain now had 42,000 Boers in custody in the concentration camps and on various islands, and that 11,000 more had been killed or wounded or had left the country on parole. He added that he believed the number of Boers now in the field was about 10,000.

One hundred and eighty Cape Colony mounted troops, composed largely of Dutchmen, with their arms and horses, surrendered to Smut's commando. The district troops fired most of their ammunition at long range and then refused to fight further. Captain Thornton, their commander, believes their surrender to have been prearranged.

WERE TIRED OF LIFE

MINNEAPOLIS WOMAN AND HER 24-YEAR-OLD SON DECIDE TO DIE TOGETHER.

Both Take Morphine and the Mother Is Dead and the Son in a Critical Condition—Quartette of Skating Disasters—J. E. McLean of Minneapolis Accidentally Killed While Hunting. News of the State in General.

Minneapolis, Nov. 19.—With hands clasped together Mrs. Sarah Nordeman and her son Knut Birger Nordeman each took a dose of morphine in their room at 256 Thirteenth avenue south. Both were weary of battling with the world and had decided to die.

The son has been removed to the city hospital, where he is in a serious condition. The mother died 24 hours later.

The story of the two is a peculiarly sad one. Knut Birger is 24 years old and well educated. He had studied four years at the University of Texas. The mother is 63 years old and has been a widow 18 years. The two came to this country from Sweden five years ago. They have been in Minneapolis but four weeks.

In their eyes society as constituted presented too great an obstacle in the matter of making a living. Both had high ideals. They had studied society in all its phases, and had decided that it opened no avenues to them. There was too much material greed in the world to suit this mother and son, and so they decided to die together. They hoped that the next world would be more perfect.

FOUR SKATERS DROWNED.

Chapter of Tragedies Throughout the Northwest.

Lowry, Minn., Nov. 19.—George Peacock and James Campbell were drowned here while skating. Peacock was the only son of Robert Peacock, a prosperous farmer living here. Campbell's family lives in Heatherton, Mich.

Rib Lake, Wis., Nov. 19.—Miss Hattie Alhaugh of Brownville, Minn., who was employed in the photographic car of John A. Ennor, was drowned in Rib Lake while skating.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Nov. 19.—Miss Alma Liebenguth, a popular 16-year-old girl of this place, was drowned while skating on the Redwood river.

MISTAKEN FOR A DEER.

J. E. McLean of Minneapolis Killed at Koos Landing, Minn.

Duluth, Nov. 15.—J. E. McLean of Minneapolis was accidentally killed while hunting near Koos Landing, in Lake county, and the shot that tore through him came within a foot of killing Attorney General W. B. Douglass of Minnesota, who was present. McLean and several friends were hunting and were joined by General Douglass. Other members of the party strayed off and Douglass and McLean sat on a log to rest. While talking George Jentsch, a settler, came along in the woods, and, mistaking McLean's fur cap for a deer, shot and killed him. McLean's body was brought to this city on the steamer Argo and will be taken to Minneapolis.

MONEY FOR INDIANS.

Large Suma to Be Paid to Minnesota Chippewas.

White Earth, Minn., Nov. 17.—It is announced here that the sum of $365,000, arising from the cutting of dead and down timber on the White Earth diminished reservation, from 1897 to date, has been directed to be paid to the White Earth-Mississippi Chippewas, by order of the commissioner of Indian affairs.

The amount arising from the cutting of the same class of timber from 1889 to 1897 is now being aggregated, and when this is completed the money found due will probably be paid in the early spring.

ATTACKED A JAILER.

Escape of a Prisoner From the South St. Paul Lockup.

St. Paul, Nov. 15.—A prisoner named McManns, in the lockup of South St. Paul on a charge of theft, escaped last evening. In doing so, he attacked the jailer and made him prisoner.

Jailer James I. Kennedy had entered the cell in which McManus was locked. He had just entered, when the prisoner brushed him to one side, at the same time giving him a severe blow in the head. The prisoner closed the cell door on Kennedy, and the jailer then became the prisoner. McManns passed out of the building and to the woods. He has not been rearrested.

TOOK CASH AND GIRL.

Argyle Farm Hand Not Satisfied With One Treasure.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 13.—The 17-year-old daughter of P. Boudenu, a builder of Argyle, yesterday disappeared from her home, and at the same time the hired man and $180 in money were found to be missing. Mr. Bouleau is in Crookston in search of his daughter. The missing couple were betrothed and were to have been married soon, with Mr. Boudeau's consent.

Careless Fire Builder Convicted.

Little Falls, Minn., Nov. 15.—Peter Anderson has been convicted of carelessly setting fire during the dry weather of the latter part of October which spread into several townships in Morrison and Crow Wing counties. He paid a fine of $50, together with costs, which amounted to $54, and in lieu of payment may be imprisoned in jail 60 days.

Two Trainmen Killed.

Correl, Minn., Nov. 12.—In a rear-end collision on the Milwaukee road Engineer Dover and Brakeman Bird were killed.

MUST PUSLISH RATES.

Decision Against Ore Carrying Roads in Minnesota.

St. Paul, Nov. 12.—By a vote of 2 to to 1 the state railway and warehouse commission has decided against the ore carrying railroads in the case which has been pending for nearly a year past, holding that the roads must file a tariff of freight charges for state ore shipments and submit to the jurisdiction of the commission in so far as such state shipments are concerned.

Chairman Mills files a dissenting opinion, in which he gives it as his view that the railways are correct in all their contentions, saying that no part of the shipments of ore from the mines of this state is state business or subject to the jurisdiction of the commission.

Commissioner Staples and Miller, in making the order of the commission, direct that the roads must file tariffs with the commission not later than Dec. 3 next, and post published copies of the rates in all their stations. They dismiss all previous orders made by the commission upon the subject.

This decision is the preliminary to the real fight which will now begin. The roads will doubtless carry the case to the supreme court of the United States, and therein is said to lie the great value of the attitude assumed by the commission in making this order. Had the order been in favor of the roads the state would not have had the privilege of taking an appeal.

NEW TELEPHONE LINE.

Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa Men Organize a Company.

Milwaukee, Nov. 15.—The Great Western Telegraph and Telephone company has secured the approval of an ordinance to enable the company to do business in this city.

A meeting has been held by some of those interested and was attended by W. T. Black, president of the United Telegraph, Telephone and Electric Light company of Chicago; Charles Webster, vice president and general manager of the same company, in Minneapolis, which owns and operates 1,200 miles of telegraph, telephone and toll lines; J. F. Cass, president of the Bank of Sumner of Sumner, Ia., and vice president and treasurer of the Cedar Falls Rapid Transit company; W. I. Carpenter, capitalist, of Minneapolis; S. H. Barnes, banker of Hawkeye, Ia.; L. S. Cass, president and general manager of the Cedar Falls Rapid Transit company.

The company wishes to build and operate a telephone exchange and long distance lines to Chicago, Madison, La Crosse and Minneapolis. A Chicago trust company has agreed to take the bonds.

BLOCKADE IN GRAIN.

Twelve Million Bushels Awaiting Shipment at Duluth.

Duluth, Nov. 13.—There is now said to be a grain blockade at Buffalo, to add to the troubles of Northwestern shippers, who have been up against a car famine and flour blockade there for some time. There are probably 12,000,000 busbels of grain to go forward from this city yet this fall, and though some considerable portion of it can go and remain in ships till unloaded the blockade will have a very serious effect. The Eastern roads seem to be very short of all sorts of equipment this year, though they have been building cars and terminals at a great pace the past few years. It is said that several million dollars will be spent the coming winter in increasing the terminal facilities for Lake Superior commerce at Lake Erie ports, in which case there will be no trouble for a year or two.

COAL TRADE BRISK.

Receipts Will Be More Than Any Previous Year.

Duluth, Nov. 17.—There have been received in to Lake Superior this year so far 700,000 tons of hard coal, and the movement is still brisk. This compares with total receipts of last year of only 515,000 tons and of the year before of 841,000 tons. In that year there was much coal left over, which supplied the trade during the slack season of 1900. It is evident now that the receipts for the present year will be more than has ever been consumed in any one year in the territory normally tributary to the head of the lakes, but that there will be an increase in consumption this year is generally understood. It is probable, however, that plenty of coal is sure for the winter, and that there need be no fear of an anthracite famine in the Northwest.

SURETY COMPANY WILL FIGHT

Failure of Sewer Contractor May Cause Endless Litigation.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 14.—Webber & Lees, who represent Jackson & Bokorny, sewerage contractors, and the surety company on their bond, the Fidelity and Guaranty company of Maryland, state that the demand of the city of Winona for $20,000 for failure of the contractors to complete their sewerage contract will not be complied with, and that the case will be fought in the courts. A district court decision will not be satisfactory to either side, and an appeal to the supreme court is almost certain, with a prospect the litigation may continue for several years.

SHOT THROUGH THE HEART.

Fatal Hunting Accident Reported From Aitkin, Minn.

Duluth, Nov. 14.—A special to The News-Tribune from Aitkin, Minn., says: County Commissioner J. C. Jones was accidentally shot and killed between McGregor and Libby. He had been hunting with a party of hunters from Chicago. While one of the party was removing the shells from a rifle he accidentally shot Jones through the heart. Death was instantaneous. The body was taken to Libby to be prepared for shipment to Cleveland, O., his former home.

Fell Over a Hundred Feet.

Duluth, Nov. 14.—Fred Holderson fell from the top of the Peavey elevator, upon which he was working during the afternoon, and was killed. The [illegible] 106 feet. He came here from Ge[illegible], Wis.

SAD NEWS

A. G. GROSHONG HEARS OF THE DEATH OF HIS BROTHER.

The many friends of A.G Groshong are sympathizing with him on account of the sad intelligence received yesterday—of the death of his brother Charles, who was fireman on the logging train running from Bemidji to Brainerd.

Mr. Groshong is unable to learn particulars, although he has made every effort. His brother had been railroading for ten years.

With the Churches.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

Last Sabbath was the 24th Sunday after Trinity in the church memoranda for 1901. In the Roman Catholic church calendar this day is honored for St. Hugh, a Frenchman, but famous in England as the bishop of Lincoln, and builder of the cathedral of London. This day was also formerly celebrated in England as the anniversary of the ascension of Queen Elizabeth to the throne in 1558.

Rt Rev. Peter Engel; Rev. P. Ansgar and Rev. Fr. Charles came down from Thief River Falls Monday, Rev. Engel being on his way back to Collegeville, after having presided at the exercises incident to the blessing of the new St. Bernard's church bell

Nov. 19 is the day of St. Elizabeth of Hungary. Many stories are current concerning her work as a Christian worker. She is the patroness of an order of nuns known by her name.

Nov 20 is honored in the Roman Catholic church for St. Edward, a martyr king of the East Angles. His shrine is memorable as the place where the barons banded together to obtain Magna Charta from King John.

Ed Enright, one of the trustees of St. Mary's church, attended the blessing of the bell at Thief River Falls Sunday, upon invitation from Rev. Fr. Charles. He was accompanied by his wife.

Nov. 21 is the anniversary of the founder, in 1800, of the Order of the Sisters of the Sacred Heart, a Catholic sisterhood, with schools in many places.

Nov. 22 is St. Cecilia's day, and formerly a popular anniversary in England. Dryen, Pope and other poets wrote odes in her honor. As the patroness of music she is usually represented in pictures with musical instruments of some kind. She was a native of Italy, and was put to death for her activity as a Christian.

Nov. 23 is honored for St. Clement, patron of the blacksmiths, the third bishop or pope of Rome, who is believed to be the Clement spoken of by Paul in Philippians iv., 3, as his fellow laborer. He was the author of an epistle to the Corinthians, which in the early ages was read in the churches.

Nov. 23 is also the day of St. Felicitas, patroness of male heirs. She and her seven sons were put to death for being Christians. Each son was tortured in her presence, and encouraged by her not to recant. In art she is represented as a veiled widow.

Astonnding Discovery.

From Coopereville, Mich., comes word of a wonderful discovery of a pleasant tasting liquid that when used before retiring by any one troubled with a bad cough always ensures a good night's rest "It will soon cure the cold too," writes Mrs. S. 6088

[Sixty Eighty-Eight.]

Matt J. Johnson Co. Dean, Minn., April 17, 1900.

Gentlemen—I am pleased to inform you that Matt J. Johnson's 6088 has done wonders for me. I was taken with a severe attack of muscular rheumatism that confined me to the house for two months. I went to Crocker & Hawley's store on crutches and Mr. Hawley gave me a bottle of 6088 and wanted me to try it, as he knew I had been suffering with rheumatism for the past three years and I would be a severe test for the remedy. I had not taken half a bottle when I went to work and when I had finished the bottle I was entirely free from rheumatism. Thanking you and your agents, Messrs. Crocker & Hawley, for putting me in the way of a cure,

I am yours very truly, J. H. NEIL.

A FREE TRIAL. We guarantee our remedy to be free from all opiates, salicylates or poisonous drugs. If on taking half the bottle and are not satisfied, return and your money will be refunded.

IS ONE OF THE LEADERS

The Red Lake Falls Milling Company's Plant in This City one of the Best in the Northwest.

Below we give a few interesting facts and figures relative to the Red Lake Falls Milling Company: Its officers are, Mareus Johnson, President, Mrs. E. F. Marshall, vice president; S. M. Sivertson, Secretary and treasurer; C. F. Johnson, manager. Mr. Johnson has general supervision of its line of elevators. Mr. Sivertson is also secretary and treasurer of the Red Lake Falls Electric Light Co. and of the Johnson & Marshall Land Co., a kindred corporation under the same ownership, and has charge of the business of those concerns. The office force consists further of Mr. G. G. Kinseth who has charge of the bookkeeping, which with the mill's large export business in addition to the home trade and the wheat business at its many elevators entails a great deal of work, and Mr. J. J. Padden, stenographer, who is occupied with the important voluminous correspondence which this large business concern has daily to transact.

Mr. Geo. C. McConnell, head miller, has brought the mill up to a very high standard of efficiency, which is gaining for its flour a well merited reputation not only in this country but in the foreign markets. Mr. McConneil is ably assisted by Arthur Zaisef, second miller, and Peter Lundquist, 3rd miller. H. C. Hanson has charge of the mill elevators and warehouses and oversees all shipments. Mr. Hanson and Mr. Kriel who has charge of the flour packing, have records for long services having both been in the employ of the Red Lake Falls Milling Company for over twelve years. Henry Hennumith is mill-wright. In addition to these the mill constantly employs a force of fifteen to twenty men in the different departments so that the pay roll of the Red Lake Falls Milling Co. together with the Electric Light Co. numbers monthly over thirty.

Having a water power of 2500 horse power under a 14 foot head, and utilizing 450 to 500 horse power at the mill and electric light plant, the mill has a capacity of 1000 barrels per day, and is equipped with the Plan-sifter and Reel system: having been fully overhauled and re-diagramed in the last six months, and is up to date in all its equipments, including passenger elevator for the convenience of the employees, speaking tubes and call bells on each floor, and is lighted throughout with electricity. The head miller's office is fully equipped with complete paraphernalia for testing flour. One of the novelities is an electric oven for baking bread, where bread can be baked for testing at any time. All products of the mill, including all grades of flour, bran, shorts and screenings, etc., are weighed up at 5:90 o'clock every day, and the result reported at the main office.

VARIETY OF PRODUCTS.

The brands of flour are "Mascot" which received a gold medal at the World's Fair, Chicago, and one at Trans Mississippi and Omaha, "General Bobs," "Favorite" also Graham flour and the celebrated "Mascot Breakfast Food." An immense amount of bran, shorts and other mill feed is also produced but they are still unable to supply the demand.

In regard to their screenings which is no small item in so large a mill, the company is adopting a new plan. Instead of selling them in district markets they are now buying and shipping in several thousand head of sheep to fatten and propose to utilize their screenings in this manner. This will no doubt prove a profitable venture and add still more to the developments and business enterprises of this locality.

The Red Lake Falls Milling Company in addition to its large local patronage does a very large flour sale and exchange business at each of its many elevators which are located as follows: One at the Great Northern depot, this city in charge of T. A. Crompe; St. Hillaire, Wm. Sorsoleil agent; Thief River Falls, Joseph Johnson agent; Wylle, S. J. Swanson agent: Crookston, A. E. Sandberg agent: Euclid, T. E. Bievar agent; St. Vincent, T.T. Curran agent; Benoit, Fred Benoit agent; Dugdale, O. H. Camp agent. They are also operating one at the Northern Pacific depot, this city, with W. T. Spillane as agent.

In addition to the home trade the mill enjoys a splendid trade in the larger cities of the state, also in eastern cities, Chicago, Philadelphia. New York and Boston are the chief distributing points for eastern trade. The export trade is a large share of the mill's business. England, Scotland and the Netherlands are all good customers, England, of course, taking the larger share. "Genenal Bobs" brand is a great favorite there. Considerable quantities of this flour have been forwarded to South Africa.

The Red Lake Falls Electric Light Plant is owned and operated by the same parties as the Milling Co. and has the same officers. It utilizes the same water power. In addition thereto a large steam plant has this past summer been installed for use in case of emergency or when making repairs in water power. A large brick dynamo room and power house has also been erected. A splendid new dynamo and connections have been put in in addition to the one formerly used. All the machinery is first-class and of the latest designs, making the plant of the Electric Light Company one of the newest and best equipped in the northwest, and one that our city may be justly proud of.

The new dynamo has a capacity of 120 kilowats equal to 4600 16 c.p. lights. It is pronounced by experts to be one of the best dynamos made.

Hon. Mareus Johnson is president and head of these institutions, and to whose business capacity and remarkable push and energy and last but not least large resources, our city is indebted for the development and extension of this large enterprise. In addition to his large investments here, has varied interests in other parts of the state.

He is president of the New London Milling Company which has a large mill at that place, together with thirteen elevators with a capacity of about 300,000 bushels daily, and three lumber yards situated on the Breckenridge Division of the Great Northern and on the W. & S. F. He is also president of the Atwater Milling Co. which owns a new steam mill at Atwater, Minn., together with elevators. He is also largely interested in the Johnson & Larson Lumber Company and in the firm of Johnson & Walen, general merchants, at Atwater, Minn., and in the Raymond Mercantile Co. dealers in hardware, machinery and lumber. Also in the bank of Fisher.

He is president of the Johnson & Marshall Land Co., and the Johnson & Sivertson Merc. Company, both concerns having large land holdings in several counties in the northern part of the state.

With his large interests here and his connection with the other milling plants and lines of elevators it will be seen that there are perhaps but few men in the State who are more extensively engaged in the grain handling and milling business than he, a fact which keeps him in close touch with the best markets for the out-put which means a great deal for the successful operation of the business. He is a firm believer in expansion. We doubt not that as opportunities offer he will extend still more his grain handling business in this part of the state with consequent benefit to the central plant—the mill here—which large enterprise has in the past done so much for the up-building of our city and surrounding country and will be in a position to do more in the future.

RASTUS AND THE TURKEY.

A Thanksgiving Poem

There's a big fat gobbler, I knows where—
Git behin' me, Satan!
An' he look so temptin' roostin' there—
Satan, git behin' me!
Foh I wants to keep mahself from sin,
But de turkey's fat an' I is thin,
An' Ize 'fraid de tempter's boun' to win—
Git behin' me, Satan!

There's a big fat gobbler, nice an' sweet—
Git behin' me, Satan!
An' I can't control mah waywa'd feet—
Satan, git behin' me!
An' by force dey takes me thu de dark
To dat mean ole white man's turkey park,
But I doan' like how dat bulldog bark—
Git behin' me, Satan!

When a big fat gobbler's roasted right—
Git behin' me, Satan!
He's a bird dat's simply out o' sight—
Satan, git behin' me!
An' it's hard to tread de narrer way
When yo' knows it's neah Thanksgivin' day,
Foh yo' wants to go an' ought to stay—
Git behin' me, Satan!

There's a big fat gobbler on de roost—
Git behin' me, Satan!
An' be shu an' give dis chile a boost—
Satan, git behin' me!
Foh dis chile am short, an' roost am high,
An' I'll need dat fat bird by an' by,
So boost me hard 'fore de turk done fly—
Push behin' me, Satan!

Death of Rose Lacoe.

Rose Lacoe, aged 13, died on Saturday, after a brief illness with lung trouble. The funeral occurred Monday from St. Joseph's church. Rose was the eldest daughter at home, and is said to have been an excellent housekeeper, and a very good girl. The mother left her home several weeks ago for parts unknown while Mr. Lacoe was in North Dekota with a threshing crew, and Rose did very well in keeping house and looking after the smaller children. When she could spare time from her other household cares she would apply herself diligently to knitting stockings and mittens for the younger children and is said to have been well along with the winter supply. The day before her death she sent for the one man in the city who is said to know of her mother's whereabouts and begged of him to tell her, that she might send for her. The man was abdurate, and the girl's desire to see her mother was ungratified.

She was well prepared for death, having remained uncontaminated by influences that certainly would have sullied the average, and her one great sorrow was her anxiety for the welfare of the unfortunate sisters and brothers left behind

The case is one of peculiar pathos.

There are Others.

Up in Kittson county they have small pox and kickers too. Most of them (not the kickers) are mild cases, but there is an occasional serious one. The county physician says that since there has been so much exposure there is bound to be some break out that will be of the extremely dangerous kind and those people who are kicking at the action of the county physicians may learn it to their sorrow.

The fine for violation of the quarantine law is not less than $5 nor more than $25, but when a health officer neglects his duty, the fine imposed is not less than $25 nor more than $100. So it may be readily seen that the health officers are bound to, and will, enforce the law whenever called upon to do so, regardless of the "kickers."

AS A FRUIT STATE

COMMISSIONER DEMANN SAYS WE SURPRISED THEM AT THE EXPO.

FORT SNELLING DONE IN APPLES WAS AN EYE OPENER.

County Commissioner Demann, who was in attendance this week at the board meeting, tells many interesting things anent his recent trip to the Pan-American Exposition, especially as to the important place held by Minnesota.

From the beginning of the Exposition, Minnesota displayed an enterprise that has put to blush many of her sister States. She was early in the field with a beautiful building containing an elaborate educational exhibit, the largest made by any State at the exposition. The model of the new $3,000,000 State Capital at St. Paul in the Dairy building, sculptured in butter, was the wonder and admiration of thousands of visitors, and the Minnesota booths and exhibits in the various buildings all attracted favorable attention.

The crowning feature was the reproduction in fruit of the original historic Fort Snelling, built in 1820, at the junction of the Mississippi and Minnesota rivers, six miles above St. Paul.

There has been a popular impression that the climate of Minnesota is so severe as to preclude the production of fruit, but the idea is now being rapidly dispelled by results. Minnesota has an active horticultural association which is not surpassed by any State of the Union and that stimulates fruit production. At the annual meeting a few weeks ago it was shown that over 1,000,000 bushels of apples were raised in Minnesota last year and the quality of the fruit is unsurpassed anywhere. Plums, grapes and many other fruits are raised in profusion and at no distant day Minnesota will be as famous as a fruit State as it now is as the Bread-and-Butter State.

The Jewell Nursery Co. of Lake City, Minnesota, started over 30 years ago, is one of the pioneers in the production of fruit. It now has about 600 acres in trees and plants and is supplying to the rest of the Northwest trees which have been practically tested and known to be adapted to the climate. The enterprising proprietor, J. M. Underwood, displayed at the recent State fair at St. Paul a reproduction of the original Fort Snelling in apples and this was also reproduced at the Pan-American Exposition. John Nordine, who has been connected with the nursery for many years, was the designer of the piece.

Mr. Nordine can be properly termed a horticultural-architectural genius

The fort was built around an erect pivotal piece of timber upon which it rests with braces, the whole face of the fort being covered with apples. The circumference of the fort was 29 feet and 3 inches, the diameter 9 feet and 8 inches and the height from the floor 18 feet.

While the face of the fort was largely covered with Wealthy apples, a variety for which Minnesota is justly famous, there were over 50 varieties of apples display in the entire exhibit.

At the top of the fort there was a cornice or frieze made of crabapples, several bushels being used for that purpose.

The entire display required 90 bushels of apples for one setting and 200 were shipped from Lake City to Buffalo, the surplus was kept in cold storage to replenished the fort with fresh fruit as needed.

On each projecting corner of the platform at the base of the fort there were placed large glass jars containing a fine assortment of choice apples, plums, strawberries, raspberries and gooseberries. These are preserved by the French process and will keep for years and, on being taken out and cooked, cannot be distinguished, by the taste, from fresh fruit.

At the four corners of the piece were elaborate Minnesota banners and at the top an American flag was flying over the announcement that Minnesota is "The Bread-and-Butter-State."

Mr. Demann is himself a successful horticulturist, and this year raised over 30 bushels of fine large apples, besides a supply of crabapples.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well-known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sold reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drugs and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

Matt J. Johnson Co. Dean, Minn., April 17, 1900.
Gentlemen—I am pleased to inform you that Matt J. Johnson's 6088 has done wonders for me. I was taken with a severe attack of muscular rheumatism that confined me to the house for two months. I went to Crocker & Hawley's store on crutches and Mr. Hawley gave me a bottle of 6088 and wanted me to try it, as he knew I had been suffering with rheumatism for the past three years and I would be a severe test for the remedy. I had not taken half a bottle when I went to work and when I had finished the bottle I was entirely free from rheumatism. Thanking you and your agents, Messrs. Crocker & Hawley, for putting me in the way of a cure,
I am yours very truly, J. H. NEIL.

A FREE TRIAL. We guarantee our remedy to be free from all opiates, salicylates or poisonous drugs. If on taking half the bottle and are not satisfied, return and your money will be refunded.

THE TURKEY'S DOWNFALL.

THERE'S a melancholy gobble from the coop
Where the turkey is now forced to humbly stoop,
And the feathers oft uplifted
By the bird that seemed so gifted
On the floor of his small prison sadly droop.

An appealing look is noticed in his eye
As he meekly gazes at each passerby.
Little time he spends in pecking,
For he's often rubbernecking,
Vainly hoping that some rescuer is nigh.

Now and then he stands with eyelids tightly closed,
But the turkey isn't sleeping, as supposed,
For instead of calmly snoozing
He most mournfully is musing
O'er his downfall since upon the roost he dozed.

And he thinks of how he used to strut about,
With his tail and other feathers all spread out,
But he now is sorely humbled,
Foe from heights of pride he tumbled,
And no more he'll see the drakes and roosters pout.

'Tis a change that he must sadly contemplate
From a barnyard to a coop so low and straight;
In his prison he is quaking,
And with dread he's often shaking
As he thinks of his approaching cruel fate.

This once haughty bird is in a woeful plight,
And it's useless now to think of stealthy flight,
For the weapon of destruction
Has been whetted for the ruction,
And the humbled turkey's finish is in sight.

Creamed Lobster. [illegible] Crackers.
Roast Turkey. Cranberry Sauce.
Potatoes a la Duchesse. Spinach.
Broiled Quail. Celery.
Sweet Potato Croquettes.
Lettuce Salad with Mayonnaise.
Cheese. Crackers. Olives.
Pumpkin Pie.
Fruit.
Coffee.

A plain but very substantial and satisfactory dinner may be arranged according to this menu:

Chicken Soup.
Roast Turkey without Stuffing, Jelly Sauce.
Boiled Sweet Potatoes. Slaw.
Chicken Salad. Celery and Grated Cheese.
Hot Crisped Crackers.
Pumpkin Pie. Fresh Fruit.
Coffee.

Turkey without stuffing is an innovation slow to win the approval of conservative housewives, but it is claimed by the best authorities on cookery that turkey, like game, should never be stuffed if its finest flavor is to be preserved. Dress as usual and place a large spoonful of butter upon the breast. Put in a very hot oven for thirty minutes that the outside may sear over at once and retain the juice. Diminish the heat and baste often with the butter and fat that cooks from the fowl, allowing twenty minutes' cooking to each pound of turkey, not counting the first half hour. Should it be necessary to turn the turkey while cooking use a towel. Never stick it with a fork or allow the juice to escape. Sprinkle with salt when nearly done.

For the gravy put the gizzard, heart and liver on the fire in a quart of water and cook until tender; then remove and chop finely. When the turkey is done, remove it to the serving dish, pour all but a tablespoonful of fat from the pan, add a tablespoonful of flour and cook for three minutes; then add the water in which the giblets were cooked, of which there should be a pint. If less, add water, stir until smooth and add the chopped giblets. Serve in a gravy boat.

Don't ask me to, I beg.

THANKSGIVING DINNER.

How the Good Housewife Prepared It In Olden Times.

Thanksgiving dinner in the olden times made unusual demands even upon the most efficient housewife, and the serving of a dinner to a family party of from twenty-five to fifty persons in a large kitchen of the old fashioned farmhouse was no light task for the mistress. But the result was worth all the trouble entailed in the getting up of such a dinner, and the recollection of the roast turkey, chicken pie, baked Indian and rice puddings, pumpkin and mince pies baked in the old fashioned brick oven, with the other accessories of the Thanksgiving dinner, has proved powerful enough to bring back year after year to such a homestead the sons and daughters, the grandchildren, the aunts, uncles and cousins who had gone forth from it to enter into the larger life of the great cities. The brick oven has practically disappeared, but the culinary skill of the New England housewife has not, and Thanksgiving dinner is much the same as of old. Even city folks who prefer a course dinner 364 days in the year really welcome a return on Thanksgiving to the older style of serving dinner, and it is this way which generally prevails on this day.

When He's Wanted.

The man who sharpens knives comes by,
Week in, week out, with doleful cry,
But when Thanksgiving day is near
No one e'er knew him to appear.

A Day of Reunions.

Thanksgiving is a great day for family reunions and great dinners, where roast turkey, pumpkin pie and the like are always to be expected. Boys and girls anticipate the coming and welcome it with delight, for who in all the wide world has more to be thankful for than have the young folks of America?

President Lincoln and Thanksgiving.

It was President Lincoln who restored Thanksgiving day. In 1863 the regular Thanksgiving custom began, and the last Thursday in November has since been one of our national holidays.

GIVE THE POOR MAN A CHANCE.

The growing scarcity of desirable public agricultural lands, and the rapid rise in farm land values, which makes the average farm a prize well worth striving for, has given rise to agitation for the repeal of the homestead law, or for special legislation which shall make its provisions non-effective as to the Indian reservation lands so located as to borrow value from the work of civilization and advancement instituted by contiguous thrifty white settlers.

No doubt much of the influence tending toward a change comes from the East, where they do not expect any direct benefits from the further operation of the homestead law, and are desirous of increasing the revenues of the government by the sale to the highest bidders of the remaining agricultural lands in 160 acres tracts. The principal opposition encountered by Congressman Eddy and his supporters to the Free Homes bill, came from the East, for as Senator Clapp says "none can appreciate a situation without understanding it or having experienced it." The sale of government agricultural lands to the highest bidder would be a move purely in the interests of the speculative class, as against the poor, and this was clearly not the purpose of the framers of the original homestead law. Under its wise and beneficent provisions, a poor but thrifty citizen has opened to him a broad era of promise; the rainbow of hope spreads out before him, and encourages him to look for a competence and the contentment that he knows comes to the husbandman who pursues the even tenor of his ways in honest and well directed effort.

No less than fourteen of our twenty-five presidents were sons of planters or farmers, and he can turn from the discouraging situation of a hand-to-mouth existence in the city to the enchanting picture of a farm, with all the inspiring part it has played in our national life—and all his as the result of a little effort and early self sacrifice.

However, repeal the homestead law, throw the land on the market for a scramble by the wealthier classes, and the poor man can look on without hope of benefit.

The Northwest should protest most emphatically against change in the homestead law.

Let the poor man have a chance.

THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE.

The Minneapolis Times recurring to history of the Louisiana purchase —what it was and its possibilities:

With its twelve states and two territories, inhabited by nearly 15,000,000 wide awake Americans and possessing an agricultural, mineral and forest wealth so vast that the figures representing it tax the imagination and must be carefully analyzed in order to comprehended, the region purchased from France for a trifle of $15,000,000 in 1803 is well worthy the grand celebration to be given at St. Louis in honor of its acquisition two years hence.

The story of the negotiations between Napoloen and President Jefferson beginning in 1802 and ending with the treaty of cession April 30, 1803, is a familiar one. On the 20th of December of that year the formal transfer was made and the Province of Louisiana became the property of the United States. This transaction was "expansion" indeed for the territory of the United States was more than doubled. A domain seven times as large as Great Britain and Ireland and four times as large as Germany and France was added. A home for many millions of future Americans was provided. After a century's growth there is still room for millions more. With irrigation the so-called deserts alone will some day have a prosperous agricultural population greater than that now supported by the fertile soil of the west and the vast treasure houses of mineral wealth in the mountains will honor the drafts of centuries.

Now eat your turkey with a relish.

If the earnest good wishes of a host of satisfied and admiring constituents in the old Seventh could do Congressman Eddy any good in his canvass for nomination in the new district, he would have no trouble landing the prize. There is sufficient leaven left, in the old counties, to work a lot of good, though.

Halvor Steenerson's supporters point to the fact that his law practice has made him acquainted in all parts of the district. There are generally as many soreheads as friends left in his wake, however. Acquaintance does not always mean friendship any more than notoriety means fame. We are not saying by this that Mr. Steenerson is not a strong candidate with many points in his favor, but merely giving the facts as we see them.

In 1850 stage coach communication was established between the two cities, and in 1862 it was carried by the St. Paul & Pacific railroad, now a part of the Great Northern system.

For Twenty-one Years

1880 The Old Reliable Drug Store 1901

Has been SANTA CLAUS HEADQUARTERS. He has been here, and left an immense stock of Holiday Goods for 1901, and as he filled the order he remarked that W. A. Schreiter's stock is the best in Red Lake County and by far the best ever seen in the city before AND SANTA CLAUS KNOWS. There is a splendid assortment surely, and down below we give just a hint as to variety this year:

Christmas China and Glass

A visit to our China and Glass Section cannot fail to suggest many appropriate and useful holiday gifts. Our resources are exceptionally complete, many tasteful new things are shown, and the values given are liberal—prices the very lowest.

Choice Table Glass: Goblets, Decanters, Oil Bottles, Clarets, Water Bottles, Sherbet Cups, Oyster Cocktail Glasses. We are closing out odds and ends of table glasses, water goblets, wine glasses, liqueur glasses, etc., at greatly reduced prices.

China Cups and Saucers: Large special assortments of China Cups and Saucers are now on exhibition. All are excellent pieces, most of them beautifully decorated in gold and floral designs. Many very attractive Cups, with gold handles, and Saucers, among them especially charming French and German China, decorated with a spray of flowers, and two shapes in a thin China of soft pure white.

Exceptional values of choice China in various effects—as representative may be mentioned: An extra large size coffee cup of Haviland China with floral decorations, edge prettily finished in a green vine.

Candelabra: Candlesticks, Candelabra, holders, etc., are shown in great and well-chosen varieties. As appointments for receptions and other society events, and as Christmas gifts, the many handsome effects are most appropriate.

Christmas Statuary

Something very new. Beautiful heroic busts in rich oriental effects, for mantel or piano ornaments. This is something especially attractive.

Christmas Perfumes

Our high grade, popular priced imported perfumes in beeautifully decorated bottles are always desirable gifts. Among our very large assortment are LIGHTNER'S Perfumes. Mrs. Roosevelt's favorites.

Christmas Books

Fancy bindings. Standard authors. Complete sets and individual books. Toy and picture books for the little tots.

Christmas cut glass

We are making a specialty of cut glass, and have a splendid assortment, including water sets, cream sets, vases, etc.

Christmas Toys

Wooden toys, chairs, rockers, burcans, bed steads, cradles, drums, games, iron toys, etc. Our complete and dizzling assortment is bound to please.

Christmas Miscellany.

French plat toilet mirrors, brass frames. The latest Brunswick and Haviland China pieces in great variety. Something artistic and swell. Egg holders, chocolate sets, Vinegrettes, Pitchers, Match cases, Mantel and Piano vases. English China pieces, the newest creations and ideally beautiful. Albums, pocket books, toilet sets, fancy combs, sterling silver pieces, Christmas gift pen holders, cigar jars, Manicure sets.

Dolls

This is Doll Headquarters. From 5c up to $5. The finest line ever shown in Red Lake county.

Shell Ornaments

At prices that agree with the slimest purse. Shells cut for beautiful, lasting, useful ornaments, in pin trays, etc., etc.

Holiday buying has begun much earlier this year than last. You'll find our isles filled every day with discriminating shoppers who have been taught the value and convenience of early selection. In anticipation of doubling the volume of our holiday trade of one year ago we have arranged for you choosing the choicest gathering of holiday merchandise from foreign and domestic marts ever shown in Red Lake county, at prices absolutely the lowest. Visit our holiday bazaar,—everything for gift giving arranged for your convenience.

We make many glowing statements, but they reflect the truth and that's what interests you. We would rather err on the side of conservatism than exaggerate. But when we have a good thing which you will recognize as a good thing and thank us for the telling, we are going to be outspoken. We want you to buy little things here as well as big ones. It's not what we make on a single transaction that concerns us, it's rather your permanent patronage.

Lowest Prices is not a meaningless phrase with us. When you think another house undersells us, in simple fairness compare the qualities. We never want to carry over any part of our holiday stock and our prices are made to sell the goods. Our prices are the lowest in Red Lake County. But our goods must be seen to be appreciated. From the little tot to the great grand-father our great variety reaches and you will find here something to please everyone.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

NOVEMBER'S COME.

HEY, you swelled up gobbler feller,
Struttin' round so big and proud,
Pretty quick I guess your beller
Won't be goin' quite so loud.
Say, I'd run and hide, I bet you,
And I'd leave off eatin' some,
Else the choppin' block'll get you.
Don't you know November's come?

Don't you know that grandma's makin'
Loads of mince and punkin pies?
Don't you smell the goodies bakin'?
Can't you see 'em? Where's your eyes?
Tell that rooster there that's crowin'
Cute folks now are keepin' mum;
They don't know how fat they're growin'
When they know November's come.

'Member when you tried to lick me;
Yes, you did, and hurt me too.
Thought 'twas big to chase and pick me;
Well, I'll soon be pickin' you.
Oh, I know you're big and hearty,
So you needn't strut and drum;
Better make your will out, smarty,
'Cause, you know, November's come.

"Gobble, gobble!" Oh, no matter!
By and by you'll change your tune;
You'll be dead and in a platter,
And I'll gobble pretty soon.
If I was you, I'd stop my puffin',
And I'd look most awful glum.
Hope they'll give you lots of stuffin'.
Ain't you glad November's come?

—Joe Lincoln.

Mrs. Blake's Thanksgiving

"Oh, dear me, suz! If that hain't too bad!" Mrs. Betsey Blake cried in almost tearful vexation as she stepped backward from the stove and with a rueful face regarded a thin stream of water trickling from a crack low down on the side of the wash boiler and sputtering into a cloud of steam on the hot stove. "John," she called in a voice full of trouble, "the b'iler's leakin' like mad, an' it looks as if just nothin' short of a tinker could stop it."

Her husband came into the kitchen from the woodshed at a leisurely pace and with an air of confidence in his ability to cope with any number of leaky boilers. But as he examined the irregular fissure his face took on a puzzled and then a more serious expression.

"Maybe you might stick a rag into it," he suggested.

"No, not in such a shaped hole as that," she said decisively and began dipping the water out into a pail. "You've got to take it to the village an' have it soddered, an' that's all there is about it. It'll just spoil the day, so I can't wash afore tomorrow, an' that'll put back my Thanksgivin' work. Hain't it too bad? Dear me, I most wish we hadn't asked father an' mother an' Abigail to come."

"Well, I'm sorry it's happened so, but never mind. You'll fetch things round all right. You gen'ally do," said he, so confidently that her spirits rose above the present disappointment.

"I can do some of tomorrow's work today an' be so much ahead," she said, and before he was on his way she had half a pumpkin pared and stewing in the place of the boiler.

Next morning the mended boiler was reinstated. By noon the delayed washing was completed, and Betsy Blake looked out complacently from her belated dinner upon the long array of spotless clothes fluttering from the swaying line like triumphant banners.

In the afternoon a part of the ironing was done, and the next morning she arose refreshed and with a sense of relief from one great labor of the week.

"TWO WHOLE DAYS AFORE THANKSGIVIN' TO GIT GOOD AN' READY IN."

"There!" she exclaimed, sitting down for a moment's rest after clearing the breakfast table, washing the dishes and sweeping the kitchen. "Thank goodness, washin' day is over an' some of the ironin' done, an' now it's only Tuesday, with two whole days afore Thanksgivin' to git good an' ready in."

"Hey? What?" John asked abstractedly, with his eyes on the columns of the last paper, absorbed in an editorial on the Philippines.

"Two more days afore Thanksgivin'," Betsey repeated.

"Why, yes; so there is," said he, looking up at the clock as if for confirmation. "I was kind of thinkin' this was Wednesday, but couldn't make it seem just right."

"Of course it's Tuesday, for I washed yesterday," said she, with convincing assurance. "An' now I'm goin' to make my cramb'ry sass an' my mince an' apple pies. I shall leave my pumpkin pies for tomorrow, for I want 'em fresh. This arternoon you'd better kill the turkey an' dress him, so't he'll have a good long spell to hang. They're heaps better so than they be to fly into the oven. An' then tomorrow you can git Silas an' go arter your load of wood. Mebby you can git two."

As John Blake drove his lumber wagon along the road the next morning on his way to the wood lot he noticed that an indolent atmosphere seemed to pervade the few farmhouses which he passed, but it only impressed him as a rather early sign of the coming holiday.

He found Silas Day cutting firewood at his door, looking somewhat surprised at his appearance and more so at the request to go to the woods.

"Why, yes, I s'pose I can go an' help you a spell," he answered, "arter I cut Phebe a speck more wood. She'll want consid'able today."

"Yes, gettin' ready so for Thanksgivin'. Betsy is, too; busy as a bee in a tar barrel."

Presently they were jolting over the rough byroad, too much shaken for comfortable conversation until they came to a halt in the quiet of the bare November woods.

"I don't hardly see how you come to put off gittin' your wood till today," said Silas, looking up through the netted branches at the climbing sun.

"Well, I had a lot of things to tend to an' couldn't get roun' to it. I s'pose I might ha' waited till arter Thanksgivin', but thought I might as well git it afore."

Silas stared at him and muttered, "Runnin' pretty clus' to the wind, I should think."

After they had plied their axes awhile John stuck his into a log and, going to his coat, drew a package from a pocket.

"I always did relish victuals in the woods, an' so I fetched along some bread an' meat. Let's set down an' take a bite."

"Well, I can most always eat," Silas assented as he took his allotted share and sat down beside his companion, munching the bread and meat and letting his eyes rove about as people are apt to do when eating out of doors.

A company of chickadees were busy gathering their slender fare on a low branch before him, and on a higher one a red squirrel began rasping a butternut.

"Eatin' their Thanksgivin' dinner," Silas said, nodding at the little banqueters.

"Make 'em a tolerable long meal if they keep it up till tomorrow arternoon. Hush! What be they ringin' the meetin' house bell for?" John asked excitedly as the mellow tones of a church bell were wafted to their ears.

"Why, don't they always?" Silas asked, glaring curiously at his companion.

"Why, Silas, you know they don't never, only Sundays an' fast days an' Thanksgivin', except funerals, an' there ain't nobody dead, not as I know of."

"Look a-here, John Blake," said Silas, "be you crazy or be you foolin'? You act all the time as if you was makin' b'lieve this wa'n't Thanksgivin' day, sot by the gov'nor an' bein' kep' by everybody but you an' I. Now, quit your nonsense an' let's hurry up, for I want to git home. We hain't got no turkey, but Phebe had three as neat chickens as ever you see all ready to go into the oven when I come away, an' the children's all goin' to be there, an' I want to be on hand to rights."

John's face grew blank. His eyes stared, unseeing, into space.

"Good gracious, Peter! If Betsy an' me hain't done it!" Then, springing to his feet: "Hurry up! I should say! Most noon Thanksgivin' day, Betsy's father an' mother an' sister a-comin' an' the turkey a-hangin' up in the cellar, if she's kep' a-dreamin' as long as I have. It all came of that plaguey ole wash b'iler springin' a leak Monday, so she couldn't wash till Tuesday, an' we counted from that. Never mind the tarnal wood. Unhitch the ho'ses an' let's scoot."

Five minutes later the team was tearing down the road, the bounding wagon sending far and wide its thundering echoes that brought forth alarmed inmates from many a farmstead, while Silas hung on for dear life, as disjointed pleas and protests were jolted from him, all unheeded by the reckless driver.

Deacon Adams in his Sunday suit, less the coat, was standing in the midst of his Sunday dressed household with an open letter in his hand and disappointment on his face that was repeated in various degrees in the faces of his family. Hearing the unwonted din, the deacon rushed forth to ascertain the cause.

"Stop, stop! Hold on!" he cried, running out into the road, and John, impatient of delay, drew rein.

"What on this livin' airth, John, is the matter? Is somebody sick or have you bin takin' more'n you'd ought to?"

"No; there hain't nobody sick, an' I hain't bin a-drinkin'," said John, and he rapidly set forth the awkward situation.

"You wait a minute, and I'll fix you up right as a rivet," said the deacon, still restraining his impatient neighbor. "I'll lend you a turkey all roasted and ready to go ont' the table. I'd liveser'n not, and so would Mis' Adams. You see, we invited my brother Iry and all his folks, and we'd got two rousin' big turkeys int' the oven and half roasted, when there come a letter from 'em sayin' how Iry'd up and broke his leg, an' they couldn't none of 'em come. I don't want to be eatin' cold turkey for a week after Thanksgivin', and it's providential 'at yourn missed fire."

Suitable provision was made for the safe transportation of the hot turkey the short distance, and John Blake went his way with it relieved in spirit.

Meanwhile Betsey had spent half the forenoon leisurely preparing for the morrow's festivity, glad to be unembarrassed by the presence of man folks and uninterrupted by any visitors until a timid rap called her to the door, and she opened it to Silas Day's little daughter.

"Why, Mandy, is this you? Is there anything the matter to your house?" Betsey asked in evident surprise.

"No, ma'am; yes, ma'am, I mean, some matter," Mandy stammered. "The cat got int' the buttry an' eat up a whole punkin pie, all but the crust, an' ma wants to know if you can't lend her one, 'cause there ain't enough left to go round."

"A punkin pie? Come in an' set down. Why, I hain't got none baked. Wa'n't goin' to till this arternoon. Your ma can have one tomorrow, an' I s'pose that's what she wants it for."

"WHY, MANDY, IS THIS YOU?"

Mandy stared at her, round eyed and open mouthed. "No, ma'am, she wants it today."

"Well, she can't have it of me afore night. How comes it you hain't to school?"

"The' hain't no school today."

"Hain't no school? Is the schoolma'am sick?"

"No, ma'am; she went home to Thanksgivin'."

"What! Lose two whole days for Thanksgivin'? That's ridic'lous," Mrs. Blake declared with emphasis.

"Why, no; she's comin' back tonight or in the mornin'."

"An' not keep Thanksgivin' in her own home? That's ridic'louser."

"Why, Mis' Blake, she's keepin' it today at her own home," said Mandy, staring with still wider eyes at her hostess. "This is Thanksgivin' day!"

"It hain't!" Mrs. Blake made this assertion stoutly, but she was beginning to feel sickening qualms of doubt.

"It sartin is, Mis' Blake, 'cause ma's roastin' three chickens an' we're all to home, an' oh, my, you'd ought to smell it to Deacon Adamses as I come by!"

"My land o' goodness!" the poor woman gasped, sinking into a chair in complete collapse as the mistake became undeniably evident. "I've skipped a day, I do b'lieve. It all come o' that mis'able b'iler leakin' so't I couldn't wash Monday."

The rumble of wheels caught her ear. She cast an appalled glance out of the window. "And there, if there hain't mother an' father an' Abigail 'a-drivin' up this minute, an' the turkey not singed nor the stuffin' made nor a punkin pie made! Thank goodness, 'tain't his folks! There's mince an' apple pies enough. Mandy, you git one of each kind an' take 'em home. But what shall I do?"

She put on a brave face to mask her mortification as she went out to meet her guests, whom she wished to see away in spite of her longing to see them. But when she invited them into the unready house and tried to make a joke of her mistake and saw the look of disappointment steal over the faces of her sharp set travelers her feigned laughter broke into genuine sobs.

Just then John Blake suddenly appeared in the midst of the depressed group bearing the borrowed turkey which in the nick of time made a joke of the mistake and turned fasting to feasting.—Forest and Stream.

Thanksgiving.

Who murmurs at his lot today?
Who scorns his native fruit and bloom
Or sighs for dainties far away
Besides the bounteous board of home?

—Whittier.

Mr. Turkey's First Appearance.

The real origin of Thanksgiving as a day specially set apart for prayer and rejoicing must be attributed to Governor Bradford, the first governor of Massachusetts colony. In gratitude for the plenteous harvest in 1621, following upon a period of great depression,' he proclaimed a day of thanksgiving to be observed on Dec. 13 (old style) of that year. Four men were sent out in search of game. They returned loaded down with wild turkeys. Thus did the great American bird make his first appearance.

Chestnut Stuffing.

Chestnut stuffing is made of a quart of large French chestnuts. Put them in hot water and boil until the skins are softened, then drain off the water and remove the skins. Replace the blanched nuts in water and boil until soft. Take out a few at a time and press them through a colander or a potato press. They mash more easily when hot. Season the mashed chestnuts with a tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful of salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper.

CHAPTER VI.

AN ABDUCTION.

It was the custom with some of the high fliers, or the bucks, as they were called, when the cardroom was closed to go off together to a tavern, there to finish the night drinking, singing, gambling and rioting the whole night through and long after daylight. Truly the town of Lynn witnessed more profligacy and wickedness during this summer than all its long and ancient history had witnessed or could relate.

The assembly was held twice a week, on Thursday and on Friday. It was on Thursday night that a certain statement was made in a drunken conversation which might have awakened suspicion of some dark design had it been recorded. A small company of the said high fliers, among whom were Colonel Lanyon and a young man named Tom Rising, marched off to the tavern most frequented by them after the closing of the rooms and called for punch, cards and candles. Then they sat down to play, with the ungodly and profane discourse which they affected. They played and drank, the young man drinking fast and hard, the colonel, after his custom, keeping his head cool.

Tom Rising's estates lay near Swaffham. He was well known as the best and most fearless rider in the whole county. He was the keenest sportsman. He knew where to find fox, hare, badger, ferret, stoat or weasel. He knew where to put up a pheasant or a covey of partridges. He could play at all manly sports. He was a wild, fearless, reckless, debauched young fellow, whom everybody loved and everybody feared, always ready with a blow or an oath, afraid of nothing if he set his heart upon anything. You shall see that he set his heart upon one thing and failed. Tom lost heavily and drank deep.

"I will play till I have stripped every man among you to the very bones," he said. "Why do I say this? Because, gentlemen, after tomorrow night I shall be the richest man in the county. D'you hear? The richest man in the county. You don't know how? Very well. Do you think I'm going to tell you? Ho, ho! When you hear the news, you'll say 'twas only Tom—only Tom Rising—had the courage to venture and to win."

"He means the hazard table," said the colonel.

"No, not the hazard table," Tom went on. "Oh, I know the table and the woman who keeps the bank and pretends to weep when you lose. I know about her. I've heard talk about her. What is it? Don't remember. Tell you tomorrow."

"He should stop talking," said the colonel. "We must not listen to his wanderings."

"Richest man in the county," he repeated. "Colonel, I like your company. You lay down your money like a man. In a week, colonel, I'll have it all. There shan't be a guinea left among you all. Richest man in county—make—guineas—fly." His head sunk down again. He was once more speechless.

His friends looked from one to the other. What did Tom Rising mean?

"Gentlemen," said the colonel, "he has been drinking for many days. He has some kind of a fit upon him. After a sleep he will be better. Just now he dreams of riches. I have known men in such a condition to see animals and think that they are hunted by rats and clawed by devils."

Again Tom lifted his head and babbled confusedly.

"The richest man—the richest man—in the whole county. After tomorrow night—not tonight—after tomorrow night. I have found out a short way to fortune. The richest man in the county."

So they left him sleeping in his chair, with his head on the table among the glasses and the spilt punch.

The next was the night of the assembling, and Molly was present.

After dancing with his lordship, who then offered his hand to a lady of the county, she stood up with Tom Rising, who was by this time as sober as could be expected after such a night. He, in the hearing of everybody, loaded her with compliments of the common kind, such as would suit a milkmaid, but were not proper for a modest woman to hear. To these, however, Molly returned no reply and danced as if she heard them not. She then rejoined Lady Anastasia and with her retired to the cardroom, whither many of the young men followed her. She stood beside her ladyship and obliged the young men by choosing cards for them, which they lost or won. Tom Rising followed her and stood beside her with flushed face and trembling hands. It was remarked afterward that he seemed to assume the care of her. He kept gazing upon Molly with fierce and ravenous looks like a wolf who hungers after his prey and lives to wait for it. He played the while, however, and lost during the evening, I believe, some hundreds of pounds, but for reasons which you will presently hear he never paid that money.

Molly next had a second dance with his lordship. After it had been finished he offered her the refreshment of wine or chocolate, but she declined, saying that the captain now would be wishing her to go home and that her chair would be waiting.

So his lordship led her to the door, where indeed her chair was waiting, but no captain, and, bowing low, he handed her in and shut the door, and he returned to the assembly, and Molly's chair was immediately lifted up and borne rapidly away, she sitting alone, thinking of the evening and of her great triumph, suspecting no evil and thinking of no danger.

A minute later the captain came to the door. There he saw Molly's chairmen waiting with her chair. He looked about him. Where was Molly? He returned to the assembly; the girl was not there. He looked into the cardroom; his lordship was standing at the table, looking on. "My lord," said the captain in confusion, "where is my ward?"

"Miss Molly? Why, captain, I put her into her chair five minutes ago. She is gone."

"Her chair?" The captain turned pale. "Her chair is now at the door with her chairmen."

"What devilry is forward?" cried Lord Fylingdale. "Come with me, captain. Come with me."

The chair into which Molly stepped without suspicion and without even looking for the captain, who should have walked beside her, stood, as I have said before, at the entrance of the long room. Outside the trees were hung with colored lamps; the place was as bright as in the sunshine of noon. One would think that nothing could be done in such a place which would not be observed. There is, however, one thing which is never observed—it is the personal appearance of servants. No one regards the boatman of the ferry or the driver of the hackney coach or the postboy or the chairman. The chair, then, stood with its door open opposite to the entrance of the long room. The chairmen stood retired, a little in the shade, but not so far off as to need calling, when Lord Fylingdale handed in the lady. This done, he stood, hat in hand, bowing. The chairmen stepped up briskly, seized the poles and marched off with the quick step of those who have a light burden to carry. No one observed the faces of the chairmen, or indeed thought of looking at them; no one remarked the fact that Tom Rising walked out of the long room directly afterward and followed the chair. Within Molly sat, unsuspecting, excited by the triumphs of the evening. The chair passed through the gardens and its gates. Instead of turning to the right, which would lead into Hayman's lane, the chairmen turned to the left and so through the town gate and beyond the wall and into the open fields. Yet Molly observed nothing. I think she fell asleep. When she came to herself, she looked out of the window. On the right and on the left of her were open fields.

It was a clear evening. Toward the middle of May there is no black darkness, but only a dimmer outline, with deeper shadows. Molly, who knew the country around Lynn perfectly well, understood at once that she had been carried outside the town; that she was no longer on the highroad, but on one of the cross tracks—one cannot call them roads—which connect the villages, so that there was very little chance of meeting any passengers or vehicles. And by the stars she saw that they were carrying her in a northerly direction, perhaps to South Wootten.

She perceived, therefore, that some devilry was going on. Now she was not a girl who would try to help herself in such a deserted and lonely spot by shrieking, nor did she see that any good purpose would be served by calling to the chairmen to let her out. She sat up, therefore, her heart beating a little faster than usual, and considered what she should do.

Molly, though not a woman of fashion, understood by this time her value, especially in the eyes of the adventurer, and she also understood quite clearly at this moment that she had been carried away without the knowledge of her guardian and that the intention of the abduction was nothing more or less than a forced marriage and the acquisition of her fortune. "Jack," she told me afterward, "I confess that I did wish, just for a little, that you might be coming along the road with a trusty club, but then I remembered that I was no puny threadpaper of a woman, but as strong as most men, and I took courage. Weapon I had none except a steel bodkin, gilt, stuck in my hair—a small thing, but it might serve if any man ventured too near, and I thought, besides, that there would be a hue and cry and that the country round would be scoured in all directions. They would most certainly grow tired of carrying me about in a chair; they must stop somewhere and put me into some place or other. I thought also that I could easily manage to keep off one man or perhaps two and that it would be very unlikely that more than one would attempt to force me into marriage. Perhaps I might escape. Perhaps I might barricade myself. Perhaps my bodkin might help me to save myself. I would willingly stab a man to the heart with it. Perhaps I might pick up something—a griddle would be a weapon handy for braining a man, or even a frying pan would do. Whatever happened, Jack, I was resolved that nothing, not even fear of murder, should make me marry the man who had carried me off."

HIS LORDSHIP LED HER TO THE DOOR.

There are found scattered about the byroads of the country many small inns for the accommodation of persons of the baser sort.

It was before such a wayside inn that the chairmen stopped. Molly knew it very well. It was at a place called Rikley's Spring. The name of the house was the Traveler's Rest, and it stood just two miles and a half from Lynn and one mile or so from the village of South Wootten. It was a small house, gloomy and ill lighted at the best. There was a door in the middle. The diamond panes of the windows were mostly broken in their leaden frames; the woodwork was decaying; the upper floor, projecting, darkened the lower rooms. In the dim twilight, when the chair stopped, the house looked a dark and noisome place, fit only for cutthroats and murderers.

The poles were withdrawn and the door thrown open. Molly, looking out, saw before her, hat in hand, her late partner, the young fellow they called Tom Rising.

"Oh," she cried, "is it possible? I thought I was in the hands of some highwayman. Is this your doing, sir? I was told that you were a gentleman."

He bowed low and began a little speech which he had prepared in readiness.

"Madam, you will confess that you are yourself alone to blame. Fired with the sight of so much loveliness, what wonder if I aspired to possess myself of these charms? Sure, a Laplander himself would be warmed even in his frozen region by such"—

"Sir, what nonsense is this? What do you mean?"

"I mean, madam, that your lovely face and figure should be sufficient excuse not only in the eyes of the world, but in your own eyes, for an action such as this. The violence of the passion which"—

"Sir, will you order your fellows to take me back?"

"No, madam; I will not."

"Then, sir, will you tell me what you propose to do?"

"I intend to marry you."

"Against my consent?"

"I have you in my power. I shall, however, ask your consent. If you grant it, we shall enter upon married life as a pair of lovers should. If you refuse, I shall be the master, but you will be the wife."

Molly laughed. "You think that I am afraid? Very well, sir. If you persist, you shall have a lesson in lovemaking that will cost your life."

"Everything is fair in love. Come, madam, you will please to get out of the chair."

"What a villain is this!" said Molly. "He is in love with my fortune, and he pretends it is my person. He thinks to steal my fortune when he runs away with me. You are a highwayman, Mr. Rising, a common thief and a common robber. You shall be hanged outside Norwich castle."

Tom Rising swore a great oath, calling, in his blasphemous way, upon the Lord to inflict dire pains and penalties upon him if he should resign the lovely object of his affection now in his possession. You have heard that he had the reputation of a reckless daredevil who stuck at nothing, was daunted by nothing and was like a bulldog for his tenacity.

"Understand, madam," he concluded this declaration, "I am resolved to marry you—resolved. Bear that in mind."

"And I, sir, am resolved that I will not marry you—resolved. Bear that in mind."

"Never yet did I resolve upon anything but I had it. No; never yet."

"Mr. Rising, you think you have me in your power. You shall see. Once more I ask you, as a gentleman, to send me back. Remember, I have many friends. The whole town, high and low, will be presently out after me, scouring the country in every direction."

"In an hour you will be at Wootten. The parson hath promised to await us there. You shall be my wife within one short hour."

"You waste words, sir."

"You will have to alight, madam. The post chaise is here to carry us to Wootten, where the parson waits to marry us. In an hour, I say, you shall be my wife."

Molly looked out of the other window. The post chaise was there with its pair of horses and the postboy waiting at the horses' heads. She would have to make her stand at once, therefore. To get into the post chaise with that man would be dangerous, even though she was as strong as himself, and, since she was not a drinker of wine, she was in better condition.

"I looked round at the house," she told me afterward. "I thought that if I could get into the house I might gain some time—perhaps I could bar the door, perhaps I could find that griddle or the frying pan of which I spoke. Or if it came to using the bodkin there would be more room for my arm in a house than in a chair or a chaise. So I had one more parley in order to gain time and then slipped out."

"Sir," she said, "I give you one more chance of retaining the name and reputation of gentleman. Carry me back or else await the vengeance of my friends. I warn you solemnly that murder will be done before I marry you; understand, sir, murder of you or of your confederates or of myself."

She spoke with so much calmness and with so much resolution that she aroused all his native obstinacy. Besides it was now too late. The news of the abduction would be all over Lynn; he must carry the thing through. He swore another loud and blasphemous oath. Heavens! How he was punished! How swiftly and speedily!

Molly stepped out of the chair. Tom Rising, his hat in hand, again bowed low. "Madam," he said, "you are well advised. Pray let me hand you into the chaise."

She made no reply, but, rushing past him, darted into the house. She stumbled down one step and found herself in a room where the twilight outside could not penetrate. It was quite dark. She closed the door behind her and bolted it, finding a bolt in the usual place.

Then she waited a moment, thinking what she could do next. A rustling and a footstep showed that she was not alone.

"Who is there?" she cried. "Is there no light?"

She heard the striking of flint and steel; she saw the sputtering yellow light of a match, and by its flickering she discerned an old woman trying to light a candle—a rushlight in a tin frame, with holes at the sides.

Molly looked quietly round the room. A knife lay on the table. She took it up. It was one of the rough clasp knives used by rustics when they eat their dinners under the hedge. She stepped forward and took the light from the old woman's hand.

"Quick!" she said. "Who is in the house?"

"No one except myself. He said the house was to be kep' clear tonight."

"Can they get in?"

"They can kick the house down if they like; it's so old and crazy."

"Is there an upper room?"

The old woman pointed to the far corner. Molly now perceived that the place was the kitchen, the taproom, the sitting room and all. A table was in the middle; a settle was standing beside the empty fireplace; there was a bench or two; mugs and cups of wood, pewter and common ware stood on the mantelshelf; a side of bacon hung in the chimney. In the corner to which the old woman pointed was a ladder. Molly ran across the room. At the top of the ladder there was a square opening large enough for her passage. She went up and found herself by the dim rushlight in an upper chamber the floor of which was covered with flock beds laid on the boards. There was one small frame of glass in the roof, a window which was not made to open. The place reeked with foul air worse than the orlop deck or the hold after a voyage.

Down below she heard her captor kicking at the door. Apparently the old woman drew back the bolt, for he came in noisily and swearing horribly. Apparently the old woman pointed to the ladder, or perhaps the glimmer from the room above guided him. He came to the ladder and tried persuasion.

"Molly, my dear," he cried, "come down, come down! I won't harm you. Upon my honor I will not. I want only to put you into the chaise and carry you off to be married. Molly, you are the loveliest girl in the county. Molly, I say, there is nobody can hold a candle to you. Molly, I will make you as happy as the day is long. Molly, I love you ten times as well as that proud lord. He will not marry you. There isn't a man in all the company I will not fight for your sake. Don't think I will let any other man have you. Confound it, Molly, why don't you answer?"

For now she kept silence. The more he parleyed the more time she gained. But she found one or two loose boards that had been used for laying in trestles for the support of the flock beds. She laid them across the trapdoor. There was, however, nothing to keep them down.

Then Tom Rising began to swear at the old woman.

"You fool! You blundering, silly, jenny ass of a fool! What the devil did you give her the candle for?"

"I didn't give it. She took it."

"Go get another candle, then."

"There are no more candles, master," said the old woman in her feeble voice. "She's got the only one."

"Molly, if you won't come down, I shall force my way up."

Still she kept silence.

He took two steps up the ladder and lifted the boards, showing the fingers of his left hand. Molly applied her knife gently, but dexterously; but it touched the bone and taught him what to expect. He drew back with a cry of rage.

"Come down," he said; "or it will be worse for you. Come down, I say."

He had not reckoned on a knife and on the girl's courage in using it.

"You have no food up there," he went on. "Your window is only a light in the roof looking away from the road. No one from Lynn will come this way. If they do, they will see nothing. You had better come down. Molly, I shall

THE HARVEST HOME.

THANKSGIVING IN OLD ENGLAND IN THE LONG AGO.

Bringing Home the Last Load of Grain—Songs and Pranks of the Harvesters—Old Scottish Customs. The Harvest Queen.

In the old simple days of England, before the natural feelings of the people had been checked and chilled off by Puritanism in the first place and what may be called gross commercialism in the second, the harvest home was such a scene as Horace's friends might have expected to see at his Sabine farm or Theocritus described in his "Idyls," says the Montreal Star. Perhaps it really was the very same scene which was presented in ancient times. The grain last cut was brought home in its wagon, called the hock cart, surmounted by a figure formed of a sheaf with gay dressing, a presumable representation of the goddess Ceres, while a pipe and tabor went merrily sounding in front and the reapers tripped around in a hand in hand ring, singing appropriate songs or simply by shouts and cries giving vent to the excitement of the day.

Harvest home, harvest home,
We have plowed, we have sowed,
We have reaped, we have mowed,
We have brought home every load.
Hip, hip, hip, harvest home!

So they sang or shouted. In Lincolnshire and other districts hand bells were carried by those riding on the last load, and the following rhymes were sung:

The boughs do shake, and the bells do ring,
So merrily comes our harvest in,
Our harvest in, our harvest in,
So merrily comes our harvest in.
Hurrah!

Troops of village children, who had contributed in various ways to the great labor, joined the throng, solaced with plum cake in requital of their little services. Sometimes the image on the cart instead of being a mere dressed up bundle of grain was a pretty girl of the reaping band, crowned with flowers and hailed as the "maiden." Of this we have a description in a ballad of Bloomfield's:

Home came the jovial hockey load,
Last of the whole year's crop,
And Grace among the green boughs rode,
Right plump upon the top.

This way and that the wagon reeled,
And never queen rode higher;
Her cheeks were coloured in the field
And ours before the fire.

In some provinces—we may instance Buckinghamshire—it was a favorite practical joke to lay an ambuscade at some place where a high bank or a tree gave opportunity and drench the hock cart party with water. Great was the merriment when this was cleverly and effectively done, the riders laughing while they shook themselves as merrily as the rest. Under all the rustic jocosities of the occasion there seemed a basis of pagan custom, but it was such as not to exclude a Christian sympathy. Indeed the harvest home of old England was obviously and beyond question a piece of natural religion, an ebullition of jocund gratitude to the divine source of all earthly blessings.

In the north there seemed to have been some differences in the observance. It was common there for the reapers on the last day of their business to have a contention for superiority in quickness of dispatch, groups of three or four taking each a ridge and striving which should soonest get to its termination.

In Scotland this was called a kemping, which simply means a striving. In the north of England it was a mell, which, I suspect, means the same thing (from French melee). As the reapers went on during the last day they took care to leave a good handful of the grain uncut, but laid down flat and covered over, and when the field was done the "bonniest lass" was allowed to cut this handful, which was presently dressed up with various sewings, tyings and trimmings, like a doll, and hailed as a corn baby. It was brought home in triumph, with music of fiddles and bagpipes, was set up conspicuously that night at supper and was usually preserved in the farmer's parlor for the remainder of the year.

The bonny lass who cut this handful of grain was deemed the harvest queen. In Hertfordshire and probably other districts of England there was the same custom of reserving a final handful, but it was tied up and erected under the mane of a mare, and the reapers then one after another threw their sickles at it to cut it down. The successful individual called out, "I have her!" "What have you?" cried the rest. "A mare, a mare, a mare!" he replied. "What will you do with her?" was then asked. "We'll send her to John Snooks," or whatever other name, referring to some neighboring farmer who had not yet got all his grain cut down.

This piece of rustic pleasantry was called "crying the mare." It is very curious to learn that there used to be a similar practice in so remote a district as the Isle of Skye. A farmer having there got his harvest completed, the last cut handful was sent, under the name of goobhir bhacagh (the cripple goat), to the next farmer who was still at work upon his crops, it being, of course, necessary for the bearer to take some care that on delivery he should be able instantly to take to his heels and escape the punishment otherwise sure to befall him.

Advantage of his foe,
Who never deemed a fellow man
Dishonest till the facts began

I saw him buried yesterday;
There was no weeping crowd;
No mourners lingered on behind.
Ah, but the county still was kind!
It furnished him a shroud.

ON THE THROW OF THE KNIFE

A Story In Which an American Girl and an Indian Girl Are Rivals.

By GWENDOLEN OVERTON.

By all the laws of true romance she should have felt upon opening her eyes a premonition that this was to be a day of destiny, but she merely felt that the engines had stopped, that the ship was at anchor and that therefore it was moistly, insufferably warm. The curtains across the stateroom windows did not so much as move. She came down from her berth and pulled them aside. The coast of Guatemala was before her and the port of San Jose.

There had been rain in the night, a tropic shower. The clouds were lifting away. They were massed in white and gold behind the two volcano peaks that had sent forth the one fire, the other water, in their time, and the peaks themselves were side by side, two cones of glowing pink.

They were miles inland, many miles, and the thick, lush tropic green was between, reaching to the curve of the sand. There were some white houses by the beach, white with red tiles. They made the port of San Jose. But the ship was anchored well out in deep water, and there were no craft in sight, save a rowboat or two drawn up on the sand and one that was starting out from the pier across the faint blue water that showed back the clouds of white and gold. The wake and the oars glistened in the new sunlight.

The girl leaned her bare arm on the sill and stood looking out. She had seen many beautiful things in her life, but nothing so lovely as the coast and volcano peaks of San Jose de Guatemala at the break of day.

The rowboat came near, and she saw that the quarantine officials sat in the stern, but by the time she was dressed and came on deck they had long since gone. There was no one at all in sight either aft or amidships, but when she was forward of the bridge she saw some one standing near the bow. He was a new passenger. He turned and looked at her.

There was a breeze, the faintest south sea morning breeze, that rippled her thin white gown and moved the loose tendrils of her hair. He raised his straw hat civilly and turned back to his consideration of the shore. Presently the purser joined him, and he stood talking, his hands jammed into his sack coat pockets and his tan shod feet wide apart on the deck. Then he went into the saloon.

That was all Miss Strathmore saw of him, but she described him to her mother accurately nevertheless.

"He's the only Latin I ever saw who looked as though he could do things—and not talk about it afterward. His skin is very white, and his jaw shuts hard, and, moreover, though his eyes are brown, they are neither sparkling nor soft." She objected to both. "They are level and hard. That he may speak English is my fondest wish."

He did. He was put beside her at breakfast, and the captain presented him. His name was Merida.

"You saw me this morning," he said, "when I was looking back upon 'my house, my home, my heritage, my lands.'"

"And 'the laughing dames in whom you did delight?'" she followed it up.

He gave it a quick look. "Perhaps," he said and turned short about to talk to the man on the other side, a little Chilean whom Miss Strathmore did not like. They talked Spanish together, and she could not understand. So she ate her breakfast and wondered why the Guatemalan should have objected to having his quotation finished out. Had she hit some nail too neatly on the head? He had risked that. But he knew Byron apparently, and his English had not so much as an accent. If there was to be any further conversation, it lay with him to begin it. He did so presently, but he kept to generalities and refused to be drawn out about himself.

The captain was more communicative on the subject later on. He belonged to the general sea dog type. "Better make up to young Merida, Miss Elizabeth," he advised, coming to a stop in front of her steamer chair. "He owns about everything in sight over there." His arm swept the view of dense green from the beach curve to the mountains far away. "Half Guatemala belongs to his brother and him. The other brother is married—to a Spanish princess, too—but he's not, and you'll do the best two weeks' work you ever did in your life if you catch him between here and Frisco bay."

The captain liked the topic evidently. He drew up a stool and sat down to pursue it further, growing from the jocose to the serious.

He could recommend Matcho Merida. He wasn't like the rest of the "black and tans."

"He's made this trip with me six times now, and I've watched him close. He don't go in for the things that most of his breed do—cards and women and wine." Miss Strathmore thought of her quotation. "We've got the chance to see things on these ships, you bet, but I've never seen Merida do a foolish thing yet. It may be because he's been to school in England and runs the New York end of affairs for their fincas, but why ever it is it's so. And edicated!" he added awe inspiredly. "Why, that fellow speaks four languages as well as he does his own and has got something to say in all of them. You mind what I say, Miss Elizabeth. I knew your father when I was a boy, and the best I could wish for his daughter would be to marry young Merida." He stood up and started off. "Get him to tell you how he and the other young bloods held the governor's palacio against a revolutionist mob for a day and a night. Make up to him."

Which—the advice and the strategy—had the natural effect of rendering Miss Strathmore more than barely civil to Merida when he stopped to speak to her. He had changed the suit in which he had come on board and was in white flannels now.

"He's not handsome," she decided, remembering the regular features of other Spanish blooded males she had known, "but he's quite the most swagger individual I ever saw."

He pulled up a wicker chair beside her, and they began to talk. It was 10 o'clock then. They were still talking when the luncheon gong sounded at one. They went down together and talked through the meal.

If Miss Strathmore had been stupid, she would have stayed on deck the rest of the afternoon. As it was, she went to the cabin for a nap and then devoted herself—the least in the world obviously—to her mother until dinner time. But there was the evening after that. They spent it together in the bow and talked—of the phosphorus and things.

It was not until after a good many nights that they got to anything much more personal. Then it came all at once. Merida stood wedged into the extreme point of the bow and Miss Strathmore sat half overhanging the black ocean when the prow cut into gold light. She was holding fast to a stay. She could just see Merida's face in the starlight, and his eyes were on her steadily. There had been a stop in speech.

"Was I uncivil when you finished my line for me that night?" he asked.

"Rather," Miss Strathmore answered him.

"And you didn't know why, I suppose?"

She admitted that she did not.

"Well," he explained, "it's just this: I get so sick of having people go on the basis that all men down here are—devils of fellows, Don Juans and all that. We get so deucedly much of it."

She reminded him that he had laid himself open to it.

"I know I did, but one doesn't expect an American or an Englishman to know his poets, if you don't mind my saying so. I never thought about you going on." There was a pause. "And I don't go in for women and flirtations," Merida said. "I have never cared for any girl except you."

It was sudden certainly, so sudden that she let go her hold on the stay. His hand went out to steady her instantly. Then he took it away.

"I suppose you are surprised," he said. "I am myself. But it's true."

Miss Strathmore's self possession had weathered many experiences, but it foundered at this. She did not think of anything to say.

"I don't want to bother," he told her, "and I don't expect you to like me yet, but I hope you will before long." Then he went off to other things, but conversation was not a success.

They were at anchor off Mazatlan the next day, some two miles beyond the bar. Merida put in his appearance at breakfast in shore clothes.

"I'm going to land," he told Miss Strathmore, "if the captain will have a boat whistled for me."

"It's rough," she tried to suggest.

"I know it is," he answered, leveling his eyes straight on her for the benefit of all who might choose to see, so that she flushed very pink. "If it were not, I should ask you and your mother to go too." They had done it at Acapulco and Manzanillo before.

"I will not go," observed the Chilean. "It is too dangerous."

Merida caught Miss Strathmore's glance of contempt and nearly smiled.

Toward the middle of the morning a rowboat whose owners were courageous responded to the signals and ventured out to the ship. Merida went down the Jacob's ladder. The captain watched him.

"You'll come to grief, Matcho, if you don't watch out. See that your men aren't tequila drunk when you start back. It's pretty bad now, but it'll be rolling like fun then. We h'ist anchor at 3," he added warningly.

Merida watched his chance to jump. He caught it expertly, and the boat pulled away.

It was 2 o'clock when it reappeared, coming slowly, hidden in a hollow, climbing a crest, flung about through the frothing bar. Miss Strathmore and the captain and a good many others were watching it. Miss Strathmore had been shooting at driftwood and at a big turtle that was floating on its back in the sun. The captain had been watching her. The turtle was a shifting and difficult mark, but she had hit it three times, and then a boat had put out to bring it in.

"We'll have turtle steaks tomorrow," said the captain. "You're a pretty good shot."

But she had had enough of the amusement, and they were leaning idly against the rail. The captain reverted to Merida.

"Matcho tell you about the palacio?" he asked.

"He won't," she answered. "He says he's forgotten it."

"He isn't much on the talk," he said approachingly. "Hasn't told about the girl down below on the spar deck either, I suppose?"

She shook her head.

"Well," said the captain, "she's a little Indian from one of his plantations down there—pretty little devil too. Seems she's in love with him and he won't look at her. So what does she do but go and scrape the money together somehow and take steerage passage and follow him. She came on at San Jose, but he never knew she was aboard until after we got off the Guatemalan coast. She's a shy one, and sharp. Then one day when he was down with the doctor looking at the hospital she showed herself, clasped his knees and wept and all the rest of it—made the dickens' own row. He acted very well, but it put him in a ticklish kind of place. Of course we won't let her up here, and he's mighty careful to keep off the spar deck now. He's going to ship her back from Frisco, he says." He pointed to the back of a black haired head that appeared over the side directly below them. "That's her." Evidently the eyes of the head were watching the boat too.

"She's seen you with him, and she don't like you a little bit," the captain chuckled. "She calls you names."

Miss Strathmore did not think it amusing at all. The rowboat was near. Miss Strathmore met Merida's eye.

"He'll have a scramble of it getting up," the captain opined.

The ship was rolling heavily.

"And his Mexicans," said the captain, uneasily—"by heaven, they're half drunk too! Look at their eyes."

Whether it was that or not, it was certain that they could not seem to manage to keep the boat alongside long enough for Merida to catch the platform when the ship rolled down.

"Take your time, Merida," the chief engineer called to him—"take your time."

Apparently the word suggested something to Merida. He put his hand to his watch pocket, and then his face changed. There were three Mexicans in the boat, but only two of them had rowed. The other had been sitting near him in the stern, steering occasionally with an oar. Merida said something to this one. The fellow looked too innocent and shook his head. Merida caught the mozo by the arm, and that began the fight. The rowers shipped their oars and, urged by the excitement and the tequila, joined in. The boat pitched and plunged.

"They'll kill him!" the captain called out. "Lower away a boat!"

"If they've no knives"— began the purser, but as he said it a knife was thrown, and by the little Indian girl on the deck below.

The captain swore one oath. "They'll do him now—sure," he said.

Merida had his man by the throat, but he was down, and all three were on top of him. One of them jumped up and caught the knife by the handle, as it came, dexterously. He gave it to the man who had Merida under him, and the other two drew back. A splendid brown arm, with its hand grasping the knife, rose high and poised above Merida's breast. Then it fell, but uselessly, limp from the shoulder bone. There was smoke in the muzzle of the revolver in Miss Strathmore's hand.

Merida threw the wounded Mexican off, bent over him, felt in his sash and drew out his own watch. The rowers had resumed their oars. "Now," said Merida quietly, "you take me alongside."

The little Indian on the spar deck had watched it eagerly, hanging out far over the side. She turned now, twisting around lithely upon her back, her face upturned. Her dark eyes glowed, her lips were apart. Miss Strathmore, the revolver still in her hand, was straight above. The Indian threw back her head, further still, and laughed. Her right hand went to her forehead and came away again with a sweep in mock salute—the salute of the matador who has missed his stroke and forsakes the ring.—Argonaut.

Took Her Hand With Her Fortune.

A young solicitor got a verdict for a client of considerable riches, but little beauty. Shortly afterward, in due course of business, he sent her a somewhat formidable account. On the following day his client called on him and asked him if he had been serious in his proposal.

"Proposal? But I have not proposed," replied the solicitor, somewhat aghast.

"What!" replied the fair client calmly. "You have asked for my fortune! I should have supposed that you would at least have had the politeness to take me along with it."

The next day she received a revised account as follows:

"Miss B., debtor to Mr. C. for legal business performed."

Then in place of "£ s. d." was "Total amount, Miss B."—London Telegraph.

Old Theater Checks.

In Wilkinson's "Londial Illustrata," 1810, there are twenty-four illustrations of the checks and tickets of admission to the public theaters and other places of amusement, among others the Red Bull theater, which flourished from about the middle of the reign of Queen Elizabeth until some time after the restoration—a check for the "Upper Gallery." For Drury Lane theater there is one "For the First Gallerie, 1671," on the obverse the head of Charles II., and another with the bust of James II. and Maria d'Este, his queen, dated 1684. There is also another "For the First Gallerie" of the Queen's theater, bearing the same date. The remainder are modern and comparatively of recent dates.—Notes and Queries.

THANKSGIVINGS OF LONG, LONG AGO

BY M. K. RUTLEDGE.

Copyright, 1901, by F. L. Pollard.

THE turkey in all its all round greatness was capering on the campus of man's joy long before Thanksgiving day became one of the country's gladdest and most glorious institutions, and it is quite likely that the gobbler of that remote period often shook his head and wondered what he was ever put upon the earth for, for in those slow, humdrum days the natives had not so much to be thankful for as we have in these times of wireless telegraphy and politics, fishless fishballs, jokeless jokes, Pasteurized tea biscuits and other luxuries that would have been regarded as the result of witchcraft at that time. It is the opinion of many deep and profound thinkers that the only thing the natives of the early colonial period had to be thankful for was that they had been able to escape the tomahawk of the aborigine that was frequently projected not entirely in the interests of artificial baldness. And it is likewise believed that this thankfulness and all round gratitude that filled the hearts of our worthy ancestors were the combination that led to the appointment of a certain day for a general feasting and thanksgiving. In short, a reward was made to fit the heartfelt gratitude. There is a great deal of difference between feeling thankful for simply being alive and grateful for that condition of joy that takes possession of and camps out on one's soul when one suddenly gathers an unlooked for and unbanked on legacy.

How could the early settler have been thankful for that which he had not? The early settler had not an automobile to make his heart overflow with thanks, which it would have done, as the vehicle in question would have enabled him to glide gracefully away from the hand painted savage, who would have found it more difficult to decorate him with an arrow when flitting awheel than when traveling afoot.

And then the people of that long ago historic time didn't have bridge whist to while away the evenings, and they didn't have tennis as a sport or means of social advancement. They hadn't even dreamed of such a game as baseball, with all its attendant attractions, such as sliding for home on the eyeballs and the utter demolition of the umpire's facial beauty. And their farms had no real value at the time, as they were only available for purposes of agriculture and not as golf links, because golf had not yet been imported from Scotland. And instead of chasing the whistling gutta percha sphere across the twinkling green they chased the piebald equine that was held down on the earth securely by the plow, while they discoursed dainty melodies on his flanks with a hickory stick that had the desired effect of keeping him moving athwart the field in the pristine ragtime of that airy period.

And how could the antique spinster with the corkscrew curls have felt so very thankful while working at the spinning wheel that was not a sewing machine and, besides, had no value whatever as an æsthetic ornament? How could she have been thankful when she had a harpsichord instead of a grand piano and had to play on it with her hands instead of playing it with a machine that is worked by foot? And then she knew no such exhilaration and excitement as are supplied by the department store that serves a table d'hote dinner for 7 cents, with music thrown in to aid digestion.

There were no continuous performances in those days except the continuous performance of such duties as put sole leather palms on the hands and caused the anatomy to ripple in a wild undulation of miscellaneous lumps. They had no Wall street in which to take a flier—in fact, all the flying they did was when they flew from the hawk (the tomahawk) with might and main to get through the front door in time to slam it again at the Romanesque proboscis of the hostile red man.

And what had they to be thankful for in the way of a roof garden when the starry summer nights were upon them and the cabbage leaf had withered in the broad brimmed hat? There was no such resort, with up to date music and songs, with jugglers and acrobats, domestic and imported, to while away the moonlight hours, and there was no long refreshing summer drink to take the cobwebs of care out of their throats. They hadn't bicycles from which to be thrown in favor of the surgeon, and there was not a trolley to whirl them along at the highest rate of speed allowed by law, and, without all these things which we have to day, they didn't have a general day of thanksgiving before 1620 or 1621. The turkey strutted about without a penalty on his head. He could roost in peace without being plucked from the bough like a watermelon, and so he lived all unruffled, in the full knowledge of the fact that he would always be likewise unruffled. And whenever he was eaten the diner was thankful, and it was all he had and yet quite enough to be thankful for. And when we think of all the things that we have to be thankful for in the way of every kind of all round blessing we think it would take twenty or thirty Thanksgiving days a year to enable us to properly offer up the thanks that blossom in our hearts, while we admire and wonder at the gratitude of our time honored ancestors who were quite as thankful as we, although they didn't live in the enjoyment of progressive euchre and bargain counters, each of which is a veritable fairy dream unto itself.

A Silver Lining.

No tongue or pen can even faintly express the gloom into which the people of the nation were plunged but two months ago. No individual soul, however deep the personal grief, could measure the weight of sorrow provoked by the assassin's bullet. One needed to witness and to share in the public grief in order to comprehend the emotions of a whole nation aroused and outraged. And yet, through the unspeakable darkness which prevailed when William McKinley was borne to his tomb, there streamed a light of inextinguishable glory. In all the land there was not one discordant note; no voice was heard but the voice of devotion; no song uplifted but the anthem of woe.

So strange and impressive was this universal mourning that the sad event, perhaps more than any other in the last generation at least, gave cause for national thankfulness and congratulation. Stirred to their depths, the hearts of fourscore millions throbbed in unison. This noble tribute, then, to a martyred president was also a tribute to the living, who thus nobly made manifest an earthly sorrow and a heavenly faith.

It is easy to overeat and difficult to recover from the effects.

ILLINOIS HIGHWAYS.

Money Annually Wasted Would Soon Build Good Roads.

Hard roads statisticians have figured that Illinois now spends and has been spending for years more than $2,500,000 annually on its road work — more than it is proposed to raise from both state and township taxation under the Curtis bill. This money goes for the pay of the county and township and road district officials, for roadmaking tools, for labor, and where farmers work out their road tax the allowance to them is figured in.

This sum, it is estimated, would be sufficient in a dozen years to equip every township in the state with a north and south and an east and west macadam road of first class quality, yet this enormous sum is annually spent for nothing—dumped into the mud, literally as well as figuratively, through lack of scientific skill applied to road building.

Advocates of good roads legislation are not all sticklers for macadam, which is usually meant when "hard roads" are mentioned. Gravel, slag, "gumbo" and many other cheap materials can be used. It is even admitted that a fair quality of road can be made of ordinary prairie soil, but it must be scientifically constructed.

The Clerk Spoke English.

The ambitious attempts of the foreign tradesman to speak English to his American customers have been described by Mrs. Gillespie in "A Book of Remembrance" as part of her amusing experiences in Berlin.

Supplies of linen were to be bought, and we went again to the shop where we had essayed to speak German and the shopman had answered us with effort in English.

We found him affable as before, and, although we told him in German that we wanted to look at towels, he brought out some and said:

"I have found it very difficult to become such a towel as this."

We agreed with him and then asked for some other articles which he was obliged to look for in some distant part of the store. He bowed and said:

"Execute me in an instant."

My companion, Looll, bought twelve dozen children's napkins, and the young man said:

"Have you, then, so many young sisters and brothers?"

Power of Pigeons on the Wing.

The power of pigeons on the wing is proverbial. All trained birds of this species have two qualifications in a marked degree. The first is speed, the second long and sustained powers of flight. This proposition can be amply demonstrated, and the following is one of the most remarkable records: On Oct. 6, 1850, Sir John Ross dispatched a pair of young pigeons from Assistance bay, a little west of Wellington sound, and on Oct. 13 a pigeon made its appearance at the dovecot in Ayrshire, Scotland, whence Sir John had the pair taken out. The distance direct between the two places is 2,000 miles.—Cornhill Magazine.

The Problem He Solved.

"Ah," he said to himself as he finished the last paragraph of his magazine article, "I think the world will have cause to thank me for this. In these pages I have worked out a reasonable solution of the servant girl problem. After this there can be no"—

"Henry," his wife cried as she rushed excitedly into his room, "Hannah has just notified me that she's going to leave, and here we have the Buchanans coming from New York next week. What on earth shall we do?"

He fell back helpless in his chair and gave it up.—Chicago Herald.

Friendship.

Friendship is as delicate and timid as a dove. She must be approached softly and allured gently; but, once taken, how faithful she is and how she fills all life with her grace and beauty! Do you know what attracts her? Good will and affability, obscure little virtues, one of which does not see or at least does not look at the defects of others, and the other of which attracts by a hidden charm pervading one's hearing, one's smile, one's words—little virtues which cost little and are of great value.—Selected.

The Coming Country Boy.

The life in the country is being more and more appreciated, and the income is sure. The young educated farmer is the coming man. Irrigation and forestry are bound to reclaim what is now arid land for the use of the farmer, and the broad prairies of this country will continue to invite our best young men to a calling more desirable and remunerative than pushing pens and pencils by the glare of a gas jet.—Janesville (Wis.) Gazette.

BLACK AND RED ANTS

TWO COLONIES IN A FIERCE BATTLE TO THE DEATH.

Human Warfare Paralleled In This Conflict Between the Vicious Insects—Three Days' Fighting Before Victory Came to the Reds.

Was it the attempted application of the doctrine of territorial expansion? Was it a case of forcing a higher order of civilization upon an energetic and unwilling race? Was it retaliation for real or fancied insult to national honor? Was it perhaps because of an interest in the slave trade or a gold mine or a diamond mine? Was it any or none of these reasons that led to the terrific and decisive battles of which I was an interested witness some years ago? It will perhaps never be determined what were the causes underlying a struggle of three days' duration, marked by carnage, feats of strength and deeds of valor such as are rarely the lot of the historian to record.

I was sitting one summer afternoon in the shadow of my cottage near a stunted lilac bush when my attention was attracted to a horde of large black ants crossing a narrow roadway which lay between my house and that of a neighbor in the same yard. Their objective point, I soon perceived, was the foot of the lilac, the ground around which had been honeycombed by little red ants less than half as large as the others.

There seemed to be an unusual excitement here. Possibly a sentry or scout had brought news to the colony of the approaching army. At least they were not being attacked unawares. The invaders were met near the foot of the bush, and the war was on. The battleground was confined to a space perhaps three feet square, but here among the hillocks and ravines in miniature all the tragedies and triumphs of war were enacted.

There were at first arrangement and order when van met van, but the conflict soon resolved itself into a general catch as catch can encounter. Woe to the red ant luckless enough to get into the jaws of its larger foe! One closing up of those powerful instruments, and a crushed, helpless mass was flung aside. The smaller, however, had the advantage both in numbers and agility and fought in pairs or triplets. Thus while the black ant generally killed one or more of its antagonists it was itself doomed. The duration of a battle varied from five to fifteen minutes, ceased by the disappearance of the invaders, to be suddenly renewed later.

It was pathetic during these periods of truce to note the casualties and the movements on the fateful field. Busy little army surgeons or possibly members of the Red Cross corps hurried from one mangled body to another. Sometimes a feeble response on the part of the wounded soldier to the anxious inquiry of the relief was noticeable. The solicitous and universal sympathy of the unharmed for their less fortunate companions was a sight never to be forgotten. The ground was strewed with bodies in all stages of dismemberment—legs gone, antennæ missing, head severed from the body, the body itself sectioned. Here and there one mortally wounded dragged itself slowly and painfully to some obscure spot to die. Others were helped away to a place of security, but in such condition that it is safe to infer they passed their remaining days in a hospital or some home for the disabled. For three days, in at least as many battles each day, the conflict raged. Each day witnessed a perceptible thinning out of the ranks, but the vigor and spirit of the contest kept up till near the close.

Desirous of knowing what effect the presence of strange surroundings would have on the combatants, I procured a large glass dish and captured several of both species. This I repeated at various times. Invariably, while at first trying to escape, upon becoming aware of each other's presence they grappled and fought to the death. Valor, honor, hatred, revenge—what was it?—dominated entirely over fear.

Against the stubborn resistance and greater numbers of their antagonists the invaders could not hold out. A panic finally seized the survivors such as comes upon human warriors—an unutterable, unreasoning fear—and, thoroughly defeated in their object, whatever it might have been, for days after hostilities ceased any unusual noise near their dwellings would send each individual hurriedly to shelter as if an avenger were at its heels.—Scientific American.

Pigeons Wreaked Vengeance.

A remarkable story of the vengeance wrought by pigeons is told by a paper at Zurich, writes a correspondent. Two pigeons built a nest in a tree situated in a well stocked garden of flowers and vegetables and there raised a brood of which they were very proud. The other day the old birds left the nest, and in their absence some one captured the young ones. On their return the female was much upset at her loss. The male, however, went and fetched about fifty other pigeons, which actually devastated the garden, the vegetables and flowers being destroyed in wholesale quantities.

A Monstrous Tide.

The bay of Fundy forms a cul-de-sac at which the Atlantic ocean seems to have taken a special spite and at regular intervals pours into it an enormous amount of water. Take the harbor of St. John's as an illustration of what this mighty tide must be. In most parts of the world a tide of ten feet is considered something abnormal, but at St. John's it rises twenty to twenty-four feet in good weather. In stormy weather the monotony is varied by the high water mark being pushed up even ten or fifteen feet higher.

The first course, of soup, will be partaken of at the home of the Misses Buse, followed by one at the home of each of the others, until the dinner is completed.

"A Merry Minister" will be given at the Opera house Tuesday night. It is one of the best, brightest and cleanest farce comedies ever written. A farce with a plot. Not the usual "rot" found in the so called farce comedies of to-day but pure, wholesome fun. "Consistency thou art a Jewel." You will find everything in "A Fool for Luck". Consistent. No horse play.

Nels Hakinson, Iver Bell and August Larson, of Garnes, have located at Blackduck, where they will run a planer, shingle and lath saws and moulding machine. The gentlemen are prominent and popular citizens of Red Lake county, and from our experience with them the people of Blackduck will be satisfied in their dealings with the new firm. The Gazette wishes them success.

Louie Weis, of Lake Pleasant, who just escapes by the length of his farm the misfortune of living in Polk county, was in Tuesday and made this office a pleasant call. Mr. Weis says when people talk of the "possibility" of raising corn in this county he is amused. For the past twenty years he has averaged 200 bushels of flint corn annually. This year he had in five acres which yielded 200 bushels.

A charming social event this week was the party given by Mrs. O. Thomas Monday night in honor of Miss Alma Mizen, before her return to Tiffany, O., after a pleasant visit at the home of her brother F. A. Mizen, the popular N. P. station agent. Only ladies were invited, and those present report a most agreeable evening, Mrs. Thomas having spared no pains to make the pleasure of her guests complete.

Rev. Father Grandchamp officiating. The wedding will be solemnized at half past eight in the evening and the doors of the church will be open at that time to receive the bride and groom and those friends who are interested from years of acquaintance with them, though no special invitations have been sent out for the ceremony. And so it is that on Wednesday next we will gain one more fair bride to take her place in the social circle of young matrons.

LITERARY WORK.

The following program was given last Wednesday by the Spartans. It was as ably rendered as it was well selected.

1. Song....................School.
2. Essay, "Origin and Customs of Thanksgiving...Etta Garceau.
3. Quartet: Pauline Nieland, Maggie Kaus, Marjorie Rodgers, Bertha LaFreniere.
4. "The Pumpkin"....Alice Newton.
5. Instrumental Solo,............ ....Eleanor Findelsen.
6. Chapter II "Original serial Story" ....Verne Healy.
7. Song..............Spartan Boys.
8. Reading..........Theo. DeForge.
9. Song....................School.

The Athenians had a special meeting Tuesday after school to consider their financial affairs and adopt a yell. It appears elsewhere in Notes.

On Friday Dec. 6, the question, "That Cuba should be annexed to the United States as a State," will be debated. Affirmatives: Norman Schreiter, Lulu Fletcher and Drew Marshall. Negatives: Pauline Nieland, William Peppin and Margaret Kaus.

SCHOOL IN GENERAL

Shinny "on foot" has replaced foot-ball as the prevailing pastime among the "kids."

A Spartan program was rendered on Wednesday afternoon.

We wish to remind the worthy Spartans that the Athenian "blue" was shown in the High School room before that of the Spartans.

You missed it—the display of live stock Wednesday afternoon, also the Spartan program, which was ably rendered.

Did you see the decorations in the H. S. room at the occasion of the Spartan program? However, this does not count in points.

A bit of advice—Spartan brothers don't quarrel among yourselves "Unity is strength."

All are glad of the two days' rest from school during Thanksgiving festivities.

The fine evening and the good ice saw a crowd of High School pupils skating Tuesday night. Consequently the following morning saw poor lessons.

The Athenian yell:
Athenians! Athenians!
How we cry!
Hip-ta-ma-li-ga
Zip-ki-yi!
V-i-c-t-o-r-y.
Athenians! Athenians!
Do or die!

During the past week special meetings of the Spartan society were too numerous to be healthy.

Did you notice the zimmering, simmering, tack hammering, buzz-saw yell of the Spartans in their last week's notes?

According to the groans issued in the Cicero class last Friday, one could tell that monthly "exams" were about to occur.

It was reported that some of the Spartans went without their dinner last Wednesday.

PERSONALS.

Emma Wagner is detained from school with an attack of the measles.

Fred Richard was chosen a member of the Spartan society Friday. Membership is now even.

Charlie Brady has returned to school after a two months' absence.

Miss Olga Kretzschmar went home Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving.

CONTRIBUTION.

"LOST IN A DEEP WOOD."

One beautiful morning in August when all nature seemed rejoicing, two of my friends and myself started for the country. A friend living about three miles out of town had invited us to spend the day with her and we had planned to pick cranberries.

We had no means of getting there except by walking so we resolved to "foot it" by the cut road, although none of us knew the way.

Filled with thoughts of the good time in store for us, we started at seven o'clock and followed the railroad for about three miles, then we crossed a river. After we had stumbled down a steep hill we cut into a very dense wood. I volunteered to act as guide, and advised taking the road on the right, but after having started on that road took a fancy that it was wrong, and said we would follow the river.

The sun had now risen high in the eastern sky, the birds were singing sweetly, and the very thought of Nature's beauty filled one with gladness.

We followed the river for about half a mile and then thought we should go deeper in the woods. Many obstacles had to be overcome, a fear of being alone in the woods came over us. The underbrush was so thick that every few minutes one of us would get tangled up and come down with a thump. Still we journeyed on until the trees became so thick we could not see the sky overhead. We had been walking for nearly two hours and were very tired. An old oak tree spread its branches so as to form a canopy, and under this we rested. The stillness was intense and unconsciously our thoughts turned to "The Babes in the Woods." We realized that we were lost, but did not sit down and cry, although I know that I for one felt very much like giving way to my sorrow. After a short rest we started on our way again, resolved to reach that farmhouse or die in the attempt.

We had walked for about half an hour after our rest, when we struck what we felt sure was the right road. So we plodded on for another half mile when we came to the main road. To our sorrow however we found we had still a long way to go.

On and on we journeyed until at last, worn out but triumphant, we reached our destination.

Our friends in the country had a good laugh at our expense, because it had taken us three hours to accomplish what could have been done in one.

After a long rest and a hearty dinner we started for the woods and berries. We found more berries than we desired, and accomplished what we attempted.

I'd leave my happy home and cross
the deep blue sea,
Rather than be without Charley and my Rocky Mountain Tea.

Spreads Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorder of the stomach, liver kidneys and bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, run-down men or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by W. A. Schreiter, druggist.

A DAY OF THANKS IN THE OLD HOME

BY H. E. REALE.

Copyright, 1901, by R. A. Brown.

OLDER than the Fourth o. July by nearly a century and a half and in some respects nearer and dearer to the American heart, Thanksgiving day occupies a place all its own. The harvest is finished, the mows are full of hay and there is a conical stack or two in the meadow near the old barn.

There are turnips and potatoes and luscious bleached celery and big fat onions and gnarled squashes in the cellar.

There's mincemeat galore in the crocks and rubicund pumpkins on the barn floor ripe and ready for the pumpkin pie that mother used to make and, thank heaven, is still making.

The corncrib is chock full of red and yellow ears, the boy has come home from the city or town or from the faraway Philippines, the married daughter and her husband and the baby are visiting the old folks and the old farm, and pretty sister Sue and her beau are wearing out the haircloth sofa in the front parlor, which is wide open, light and in use for the first time in months.

There's a roaring, sparkling, snapping hickory fire in the old fireplace, and every man, woman, child, cat and dog around the dear old home has a monstrous appetite for the turkey, and the mince pie, and the pumpkin pie, and the cranberry sauce, and all the other good things that mother has prepared.

> For long round the table the dear soul has hovered;
> Each phase of the feast has been lovingly planned.
> With food fit for princes the table is covered,
> For mother outcooks any chef in the land.

Then gather about the table and let father say grace, and say it quickly, for the turkey is crisp and brown and juicy and must not be kept waiting a moment longer than is necessary.

Thanksgiving day is the greatest of all home days, and "there's no place like home"—like the old home on the village street, with the garden and the little barn behind it, or like the old home on the farm, where the trout stream still wanders through the meadows even if the trout have long been but a memory of the past and even if its song today is but a frozen song—

Where the wood lot, now sadly depleted, perhaps, recalls memories of a sturdy, red checked boy, who swung an ax all day, slept all night without even turning over and ate three square meals that made the hired man turn green with envy—

Home from the Philippines.

Where the doves coo in the dovecot on the wagon shed and the swallows (now far away, alas!) play hide and seek and tag and follow my leader around the old barn and under its eaves—

Where the red squirrels—lazy, improvident rascals—steal corn from the crib each sunny winter's day and spotter shrill invective and squirrel billingsgate at any one who tries to drive them from their loot—

Where the clean, gleaming milk pans and milk pails sun themselves on the bench near the kitchen door, and where the same patient, cud chewing cows (or are they the doubles, counterparts, bovine facsimiles of other patient cows long since gone to their reward?) are condemned to the stocks night and morning in the barn and, despite this treatment, give milk that is never watered and that is good for an inch of cream when the sun gets up—

Where the popcorn and the cider and the maple sugar taste better than they taste anywhere else on earth, and where father and mother, with wrinkled faces, white hair and work worn hands, with gleaming spectacles and glistening eyes, perhaps, have the warmest sort of welcome for the returning prodigal.

What though bedtime be 8 p. m. and getting up time 5 o'clock in the morning, the day of thanks is here and we're home again, home again!

If there were an aged minstrel on the old place like the Scottish minstrels who lived again and twanged the tuneful harp at the beck of Sir Walter Scott; if we could but summon some bent and hoary farm hand who had long outlived his usefulness as wielder of scythe and hoe and instructor of the half weaned calf that must be taught to draw his future lacteal sustenance from a pail—if there were such a bard who was merely retained because he could extract melody from a lyre, lute, harp or plain, everyday guitar, banjo or fiddle and compose reminiscent poetry in unlimited quantities at a moment's notice, he should at once be led in to sing the praises of the farm, the home, the harvest and the day of thanks.

Not that roses are the sole output of a farm. There are weeds, weeds, weeds that seem to grow with the speed of Jonah's gourd and must be discouraged by the man with the hoe. There is hard work a-plenty from early morn to dewy eve. There are endless fields to be plowed and harrowed and planted and mowed, and there are the same old cows—such a number of them—that must be driven in from pasture in the meadows or sought for in their hiding places in the woods and milked morning and night, night and morning, over and over again. There is the winter's wood that must be cut and corded and left to dry for other winters yet to come. There are horses to be fed and groomed and doctored and pigs to be catered to and butchered. There are orchards to be pruned and grafted and endless fences to be built or repaired. There is apparently something to be done every minute, some bug or worm or beast or bird to be fought with, or the coveted crops will come to naught.

The married daughter and her husband.

And yet God bless the farm for its pure food, for its pure, bracing, health-giving air; for its nights of sound, dreamless, invigorating sleep; for its springs of cool, clear water; for its brooks that "go on forever" and its trees that shade the brow and rest the eye, for its simple, primitive, natural, common sense life and its religious, moral atmosphere; for its bounteous crops and for the bone and brawn ' endurance it gives those who toil in its fields!

So lead in the aged hired man, the bard of Ceres—after the dinner has been disposed of, of course, for music always sounds better when it isn't delaying the play of knife and fork. Let him tune up his lyre, and to the accompaniment of its sweet strains awaken the happy memories of life on the farm—memories that are dear to a boy even if he has deserted the farm at an early age for the glare and glitter of some great city, memories that call him back to the old home when Thanksgiving day has come again. There's a time for play as well as a time for work on the farm, there are roses as well as weeds, and the bard of Ceres will strike a responsive chord on the heartstrings of the farm bred boy when he sings of the old swimming hole in a bend of the brook where a deep dive meant a bump on the brow that would make a phrenological professor enthuse, and where an ardent swimmer could swim at least four feet before he struck the grass fringed bank. In fancy I can hear the bard's lyre and brief snatches of his song:

Sister Sue and her beau.

> I sing of the brook, where as boys we went swimming,
> The brook in the mead where we paddled and dove,
> Where after a rainstorm the green banks were brimming,
> Where Sol threw off heat like the top of a stove.
> I sing of the brook and its waters so cooling
> To hot, dusty limbs and to lips that were dry;
> I sing of sweet hours of skylarking and fooling,
> Of well knotted shirts, oh, so hard to untie!

There is a change in the tune and the subject, and the ever cool, ever faithful spring of boyhood days now inspires the bard:

> I sing of the spring and its barrel deep sunken,
> The spot which we sought on a hot summer's day;
> I sing of the spring and the nectar we've drunken
> In spare moments stolen from work and from play.
> How clear and how cold was the water upwelling,
> The water that came from the heart of the hill,
> As, bending, we drank of this fountain thirst quelling,
> As tipping its bosom we drank to our fill!

Was there ever such a healthful, refreshing, invigorating drink as that? May the water sprite who dwells in the "heart of the hill" never get tired or lazy or take a day off for ages to come! The fetters of winter are making a futile effort to close about you today. O spring, and the thirst of November is not the thirst of July, but your charm is so potent that months hence we shall forget the day of thanks is not a midsummer day and shall come back to the old farm again to quaff your waters. And, though July may not be November, that day will be a day of thanks indeed.

The turkey is crisp and brown.

Once more the old bard sings, and as we listen we do not even glance through the window across the snow covered road, for in fancy we can see the towering maples and smell the smoke of the sugar bush fire:

> I sing of the maples that stand on the hillside
> Knee deep in the drifts that the winter winds raise;
> I sing of the maples that rise from the rillside
> And send forth their sweetness on sunshiny days.
> The bright, gleaming buckets with sap are o'erflowing,
> The saccharine sap that such fine sugar makes;
> The fires 'neath the pans in the bush are all glowing;
> There's sirup a-plenty for new buckwheat cakes!

What fun there was in the old sugar bush as we plowed through the snow after the sap buckets, at times scaring a cotton tailed rabbit from her loafing place in the brush, or as we dropped the new sugar in the snow to cool it for the feast so eagerly anticipated! How sweet the sap was as we would tip a bucket now and then and drink, drink, drink, and how we enjoyed the stories the hired man and father would tell when the dark came and we hugged the fire, looking apprehensively over our shoulders, about pirates and ghosts and murderers and heroes of the Revolution who always whipped or outwitted the British and never got whipped or caught themselves! A place well worth remembering and singing about is the old sugar bush.

And yet again the bard sings of the haymows filled with soft, sweet scented hay, in which we play hide and seek and tumble to our hearts' delight; of the great swamp near by in which we hunted the great blue heron, of the willows where the woodcock hid and of the wide stretches of forest where the partridge drummed upon a log and the gray squirrels scampered among the leaves or darted up the trunks of great trees—the trees carefully and annoyingly interposed between them and the boy with the gun.

Stories about pirates and ghosts.

And as he sings of these and other happy scenes of boyhood on the farm we know why it is that the old place is such a magnet to those who have left it, why with potent and tender but invisible fingers it draws us back when the harvest is over, when the fields are under their blankets of snow, when that greatest of all home days, Thanksgiving, is with us once more.

TO FIGHT COMBINE

GOVERNOR VAN SANT COMMUNICATES WITH OTHER STATE EXECUTIVES.

Determined Effort to Be Made to Prevent Railroad Consolidation—Red Wing Sewer Pipe Plants Form One Big Company—Three Duluth Young People Drowned—News of the State in General.

St. Paul, Nov. 22.—Governor Van Sant has sent out to the governors of North Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Washington letters stating the facts so far as he has ascertained them, with regard to the attempted consolidation of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads, and asking for their opinion as to what action should be undertaken.

Should the other governors be favorable to united action, it is probable that a conference will be called for an early date, and it will very likely be held in St. Paul, although it is possible that it might be called at Helena, since that is about half way between this city and Olympia or Boise.

RED WING PLANTS COMBINE.

Will Have Largest Sewer Pipe Works West of Ohio.

Red Wing, Minn., Nov. 20.—By the consolidation of the John H. Rich Sewer Pipe company and the Red Wing Sewer Pipe company, Red Wing becomes possessed of one of the strongest institutions financially in the state, as well as the largest sewer pipe works west of Ohio and works which few in the country exceed and excel.

The corporation was formed at a meeting of the stockholders of the two companies.

The new company starts without a cent of indebtedness and with a capital stock of $500,000.

It is the intention to enlarge the Rich works to double their present capacity in the spring, in accordance with original plans, which will make the capacity of the entire plant 3,500 cars per year. Both the Rich works and the Red Wing works will be run to their full capacity. The stoneware companies are not affected by the changes in the sewer pipe companies.

SKATE INTO AN AIR HOLE.

Three Young People at Duluth Find a Watery Grave.

Duluth, Nov. 20.—Miss Belle Woods, aged 25, Charles P. Vallencey, aged 26, and Stanley McLeod, aged 24, skated into an air hole in the St. Louis bay about 10 p. m., and were drowned. The three were friends and were skating together and did not see the hole until too late. Efforts were made to save them by the few persons in the vicinity, but the icy water cramped the unfortunates and they sank from sight within a few moments.

Vallencey was a clerk in the Marshall, Wells Hardware company, the young woman worked for the same concern, and McLeod was a clerk. It is said he and Miss Woods were engaged to be married. The bodies have not yet been recovered.

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE.

Ex-Governor Merriam of Minnesota Slated for the Place.

Minneapolis, Nov. 22.—A special to The Times from Washington says:

Soon after congress opens Senator Nelson of Minnesota will introduce a bill creating a new cabinet office, to be called secretary of commerce or secretary of commerce and industries.

President Roosevelt had it in mind to make this recommendation in his message and the action of the reciprocity convention in recommending such a cabinet department decided him.

It is said that if congress takes favorable action on the recommendation and creates the cabinet office, former Governor Merriam of Minnesota, now director of the census, will be made the first secretary of commerce by President Roosevelt.

FLOUR MILL DESTROYED.

Loss on Mill and Public Plants Will Amount to $100,000.

Lake Crystal, Minn., Nov. 20.—Graif Brothers' big flour mill was destroyed by fire at 1 a. m. Along with it went the electric lighting plant, the waterworks power and the telephone system.

The fire started in an upper story of the mill, probably from spontaneous combustion, as a loud explosion gave the warning. When the waterworks power was crippled, little could be done to save property and the flames simply burned themselves out.

The loss on mill and machinery is $60,000; on grain and flour, $15,000. The total insurance on the plant is $24,000.

The loss on mill and public plants is $100,000 or more.

DEVOURED BY WOLVES.

Body of a Man Is Found Near Cass Lake, Minn.

Cass Lake, Minn., Nov. 19.—Frozen to the ground and partially devoured by wolves, the body of Ira Reynolds of Ferris was found about a mile from this place.

One barrel of a shotgun found nearby was empty.

Foul play is feared, a friend of Reynolds' being suspected.

MINNESOTA BUTTERMAKERS.

H. T. Sondergaard of Litchfield Is Re-elected President.

St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 22.—The delegates to the state butter and cheesemakers' convention this afternoon elected the following officers: President, H. T. Sondergaard of Litchfield; vice president, D. K. Slater of Wilberg; secretary, J. K. Bennett of Owatonna; treasurer, B. D. White of St. Paul.

A suggestion was heartily indorsed that shippers to points outside the state brand the packages "Minnesota butter."

CAUSED A LOSS OF $150,000.

Big Storage Warehouse at St. Paul Destroyed by Fire.

St. Paul, Nov. 2[illegible].—Fire in the People's Storage company's warehouse in the Sherman block, a 5-story brick building at Ninth and Wabasha streets, wrecked the building and caused damage amounting to $150,000.

The greatest loss is sustained by the people that had furniture stored with the People's Storage company, which occupied the four upper floors. There were about 400 of these owners, many of whom do not live in the city. The total of their loss is estimated at $100,000, and is said to be covered by insurance. The People's Storage company claims a personal loss of $10,000. The building is owned by the Boardman estate of New York, and the damage to the structure is estimated at $40,000.

The Eisenmenger block, which adjoins the Sherman, was damaged to the extent of $5,000. Several tenants in this building sustained losses ranging from $200 to $1,000.

MAXIMUM IS REACHED.

Lumber Output From Duluth Will Decrease From Now On.

Duluth, Nov. 24.—"Five years more will witness the end of lumber manufacturing in large quantities at the head of the lakes," said W. C. McClure, one of the most prominent lumbermen of the Duluth lumber district. He says that this year the maximum season output at this end of the lake has been reached, and from now on the product will diminish rapidly each year. Ashland is in worse shape, and her log supply will disappear in a very few years. Mr. McClure does not believe that the maximum price for stumpage in Northern Minnesota has been reached. He suggests that Duluth should begin planning something to take the place of the lumber industry, which will make a large hole in her resources when all of the logging and sawing is done and the ax and saw are still.

BLUNDER IN COAL STATISTICS.

Big Difference Between Duluth and Soo Canal Figures.

Duluth, Nov. 22.—It seems that a huge blunder has occurred somewhere in the announcement of the amount of hard coal received at the head of the lakes to Nov. 1 this year. The figures given out by the United States engineer's office here, 748,254 tons, are greater than the total of hard coal passing through the Sault canals for this period. The question arises whether the error is here or at the Sault. According to the Sault report the total of hard coal passing the canals to Nov. 1 was 657,147 tons, or about 91,000 tons less than the head of the lakes is credited with having received. As the head of the lakes, according to the coal men, receives only about 81 per cent of all the coal coming into Lake Superior, the discrepancy is all the more remarkable.

COLD WEATHER DOES IT.

Adds to the Number of Smallpox Cases in the State.

St. Paul, 22.—A considerable increase in smallpox cases is noted in the fortnightly report of the state board of health. The number of new cases the past two weeks was 216, as against 144 cases the two previous weeks.

The disease is prevalent in 34 counties and 66 localities. The previous report showed 42 localities.

Red Lake county tops the record with 51 new cases; Pope coming second, with 18; Otter Tail third, with 17.

Dr. Bracken states that the increase shown is only what might be expected with the approach of cold weather and the consequent shutting up of homes and poor ventilation.

WILL DIG DITCH.

Improvements to Be Made in Freeborn County.

Albert Lea, Minn., Nov. 22.—The county commissioners yesterday decided to proceed with the proposed big ditch in the townships of Riceland, Moscow and Geneva, and appointed J. W. Davenport of Taylorville, Ills., as engineer.

The ditch will be about nine miles in length, and will cost from $50,000 to $75,000. It will affect fully 15,000 acres of land.

A second ditch was ordered in the township of Bath, to drain a pond known as Skinner lake, the ditch to be about four miles in length. F. H. Fisk is to be engineer. It will affect several hundred acres of land.

Northwestern Flour Output.

Minneapolis, Nov. 21.—The flour output at Minneapolis last week, according to The Northwestern Miller, was 339,280 barrels, compared with 191,775 for the corresponding week of last year. Superior and Duluth ground 40,700 barrels, an increase of 25,000 barrels over the same week in 1900. There was considerable improvement in flour sales last week. Domestic buyers took nearly the entire output at full prices and foreigners bought rather more freely of the lower grades than for several weeks.

Convicted of Manslaughter.

Duluth, Nov. 26.—Patrick Rivers, who has been on trial for killing Thomas Hogan in a saloon row on Sunday, Oct. 13, has been convicted of manslaughter in the second degree. The case went to the jury Saturday morning, but it was not until 7 o'clock Sunday night that a verdict was reached. Under the court's charge, manslaughter was the least crime for which he could be convicted.

Will Meet in Minneapolis.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 25.—The executive committee of the National Educational association has selected Minneapolis for the next annual convention, July 7 to 11, 1902. The railroads of the Western Passenger association have granted the usual rates and ticket conditions.

Will Be Tried for Treason.

London, Nov. 26.—Colonel Arthur Lynch, the newly elected member of parliament for Galway, has been informed that if he comes to England he will be tried forthwith for treason.

NEW GIRLS ON A YACHT.

Said Mr. Sherwood to the crew of the Perry, "I'll bring down some swell new girls Saturday evening."

Said the crew of the Perry to their girl friends: "If you come down Saturday, wear your good clothes for a change. We are going to have some swell new girls on board."

Then answered the girls, with much dignity, "Are you going to lay aside your old sweaters and duck trousers and dress up for those new girls?"

"Never!" responded the crew as one man.

"Then why should we sacrifice ourselves?" asked the girls.

"Because we want you to make a good impression. We can do that without dressing up."

"You are even more conceited than we thought," replied the girls.

"Well, if you cannot dress up, stay at home," said the ungallant seamen.

"We will," the girls responded with emphasis.

Saturday night came. So did the swell new girls.

"This is the crew of the Perry," said Mr. Sherwood as the girls stepped aboard the yacht.

"Glad to meet you," said the crew.

But the swell new girls said nothing. They only nodded carelessly and went to the bow, leaving the crew in the stern.

"They don't seem so dreadfully pleased to meet us," commented the skipper, sailing off on the port tack.

"It is my turn to talk to the new girls," said Eddie. "You had your innings with the last ones."

So Eddie rolled up the sleeves of his striped shirt, which was evidently a relic of former grandeur, and started in to fascinate the new girls. Jack followed. Then the men in the cockpit wished for the girls who usually sailed with them.

In a few minutes Jack came back. "It's your turn, Chet," he said. "I have a chill."

New girl No. 1 was talking earnestly with Mrs. Sherwood.

New girl No. 2 was talking at Eddie.

New girl No. 3 did not look very approachable, but Chet went forward, determined to entertain her, for she appeared lonesome.

"Do you like sailing?" he asked, wishing to say something original.

"Yes," answered the girl, adjusting her glasses and staring at Chet's duck trousers, which had seen whiter days.

"We have had lovely sailing weather," remarked Chet.

No answer.

"Don't you think we have?" persisted Chet.

"I don't know, I am sure." And the girl lifted her eyebrows.

Chet murmured something about taking care of the jib sheet and sneaked back to ask the boys for an overcoat.

In the meantime Eddie was enjoying himself immensely. New girl No. 2 had examined him critically as if he were a species of animal. Then she had said sympathetically:

"Don't you get dreadfully tired on the boat?"

"No. Why?" Eddie spoke in a surprised tone.

"Oh, it must be awful to go out in all kinds of weather and risk your life. But then," she added, with an engaging smile, "a sailor has to be very brave or he wouldn't choose that calling."

Eddie, being a lawyer, was about to remark that he knew of things which took more courage than sailing, but he did not have time, for the girl asked:

"Are you well paid for running the boat?"

"No," answered Eddie sadly as he thought of the money he was paying for the privilege of sailing.

Then she advised him to join the Downtrodden Employees' association and said seriously, "Do you drink?"

Eddie's first impulse was to say: "No. Do you?" Seeing, however, that she was anxious to do some reforming he answered, "Yes."

She then talked to him of the evil effects of liquor and the dangers of a sailor's life and begged him to promise not to drink any more. Then as the boat landed he looked into her eyes and said earnestly, "I'll promise ye, miss, and I want to tell ye I'll not forget ye."

The new girls left the yacht well satisfied with their conduct. As they crossed the viaduct new girl No. 3 said, "Two of that crew were very presumptuous, but I squelched them."

Mr. Sherwood looked amazed. "Why, I never knew those boys to be anything but gentlemen," he said.

"The one with whom I was talking," interrupted girl No. 3, "knew his place perfectly, and he seemed quite intelligent."

"Quite intelligent!" shouted Mr. Sherwood. "He ought to be. He is a graduate of a university, an ex-member of the legislature and may be president of the United States some day."

"Why," said new girl No. 2, "I thought he was a sailor and tried to make him promise to go to the mission and told him his clothes wouldn't make any difference. I got him to give up drinking too."

"That is rich. He is one of the most exemplary young men in society and a millionaire."

The girls voted that in future they wouldn't judge men by their clothes, and the men voted to stick to their sailor girls.—Buffalo News.

TURKISH BATHS IN TURKEY

Nearest Approach to Them Is Known as the Hammam.

"Is the Turkish bath known in Turkey?" This curious question is not infrequently put to travelers from the east by people in this country. It is true there is not much resemblance between the external appearance and management of the so called Turkish bath in England and those of the hammam in Turkey.

Outwardly the hammam usually presents something of the appearance of a domed sepulchral edifice. Of the little domes or cupolas which arise from its roof that in the middle is the highest and is set with many small windows for the purpose of lighting the bath. The massive walls that form the sides of the hammam have no windows, and it is thought that if the walls were pierced the outside air would penetrate into the interior and cause variations in the evenness of temperature which it is held desirable to maintain. The interior thus often becomes very close, as ventilation is slow, being only through the opening by passers to and fro of the double doors of the passage which leads to the cool entrance hall. Every now and then the attendants burn frankincense in the interior of the bath, with the idea of purifying the air.

The great warm hall under the central dome has generally three large niches as well as two little chambers. Each of these niches and chambers has a roof in the shape of a half hemisphere, which contains a few tiny glass apertures and which is joined to the central dome roof. In all these niches and chambers there are, according to the size of the bath, one, two or three marble basins, which are fixed in the low part of the wall, each basin being provided with hot and cold water taps. Around these basins people sit on marble or wooden seats, which are raised about five or six inches above the floor, and seated thereon they have their bath. The little chambers can be engaged for private use on application.

The entrance hall is square shaped and has galleries running along on each side, in which are many beds. The bathkeeper is always to be seen in his place close to the door, smoking his pipe or nargile and saluting the customers who come and go. In the middle of the entrance hall is a fountain, the pure and cold water of which is ceaselessly splashing into its marble tank. In this water fresh fruits and bottles of lemon squash are kept cool in summer time for the use of customers. Near it a man may be seen always busy making coffee on the charcoal fire, for most people are ever ready to take a tiny cup of coffee at almost any time of the day.

Many of the Turkish baths are built double, one portion being assigned for the use of ladies. In some places ladies go to the baths only on certain days of the week, which are consecrated to them. Certain baths, again, are used by them every day until 7 o'clock in the evening, after which they are made over for the use of men. The charges are very reasonable. A man can have a complete bath and may stay on the premises or the establishment as long as he pleases by paying about 1s. 8d. Ladies pay much less than this sum. Their expenses can hardly be much over sixpence, as they take all their own soaps, towels and clogs with them. What they pay is really the water fee and a penny or two for the attendant.

A new feature which has been introduced into the old Turkish bath is the cold water douche, which it is becoming customary for the people to take after their hot bath.—Review of the Week.

Good Roads Difficulties.

The chief difficulty in the matter of good roads is the ignorance of the farmers in many sections as to their construction. They build them carelessly or improperly, and the new roadway soon goes to pieces. The farmers lose heart and come to the conclusion that it hardly pays to construct roads which last so short a time. The first thing to be done, therefore, is to show the farmers how to construct and maintain roads. This is easy. The roads are not expensive, and when once properly constructed they can be maintained at a minimum of cost. This has been the experience wherever the National Good Roads association has been at work.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Squaw's Remarkable Journeying.

In the last century a Chinook Indian woman known to Father Huc, a great traveler and missionary of that period, while he was with the Indians on what we now call the Pacific coast, was many years afterward met by him in Asia. Through many vicissitudes and strange experiences she had passed from tribe to tribe and place to place, always moving northward, until she reached Bering strait, and there, having gone out in one of the large canoes used by the seafaring Indians of that region in a great storm they were driven across the strait to wreck and death to all save her, and she wandered on until she met Father Huc in the interior of Asia. She had not sought to return; but, following the spirit of adventure bred in her by her strange experience, she went on to see new lands.

To Magnetise a Knife.

Take a pocket or table knife and lay its blade flat upon the back of a fire shovel. With a pair of tongs held firmly in the hand rub the blade vigorously and always in the same direction from point to base. Turn the blade over now and then, so that the friction may be applied to both sides. After a rubbing of from forty to fifty seconds the blade will be magnetized and will be capable of lifting a needle with which it is placed in contact, point to point. The magnetization will last a long time. This experiment, which is not put down in works on physics, is very interesting and worthy of study.—Nature.

Russian Superstition.

The widow of a church beadle died in a village in the government of Penza, having expressed the desire that her remains be put by those of her husband. When the grave of the latter was opened, the coffin was not found. On investigation it was discovered that the peasants of the village had stolen the body of the dead beadle and sunk it in a swamp. There had been a drought in that district last year, and the peasants believed that if they sank the body of a righteous man in water rain would come. This superstition is said to be prevalent among the common people in that region.

Portraits of Christ.

There is no portrait of Christ which can be pronounced authentic. The Jews were forbidden by their law to make likenesses, and so art, as we understand the word, scarcely had among them an existence. There are, however, two portraits which have the merit of extreme antiquity and were both probably made at some time in the first century. The one is cut on an emerald, the work purporting to have been done by command of the Emperor Tiberius. The jewel was preserved in the treasury of Constantinople, but in some way fell into the hands of the Turks before that city was taken by them and about 1483 was given by the sultan to Pope Innocent VIII. as a ransom for the sultan's brother.

The other portrait is on a fine brass medal discovered in Anglesea, Wales, in the year 1702. The workmanship is that of the first century, and a Hebrew inscription on the reverse declares the portrait to be that of the prophet Jesus. The two portraits bear a close resemblance, and it is altogether probable that both are ideal and that each followed the description of Christ given in the well known but not well authenticated letter of Publius Lentulus. The napkin portrait called St. Veronica's is much more modern and is probably a copy of the emerald likeness.

Advantages of Broad Tires.

We see much talk of good roads, but they will never be made permanent until wide tires are more universally used. It is not, however, on the public highway that wide tires are most advantageous. It is on the fields, through the lanes and about the barnyard where they prove of the greatest value. The State Agricultural College of Missouri found that on blue grass sward 3,248 pounds pulled as easily on three inch tires as 2,000 pounds on 1½ inch tires. In a part of New York state wide tires reduced the cost of hauling 20 per cent, but the saving of draft is not the only advantage of the wide tires, for narrow tires cut ruts that can be seen across the fields for a whole season, and each one of these ruts serves as a ditch, which after each rain carries off the soluble part of all manure and other fertilizers.—National Stockman.

BILL'S THANKSGIVING.

He Thought He Had a Great Deal to Be Thankful For.

"Waal, Bill, what hev ye got to be thankful fur today?" asked Grizzly George as he ran across Wild Bill in the Prairie Dog saloon on Thanksgiving day.

"What hev I got ta be thankful fur?" echoed Bill, looking at the others in astonishment. "Why, fur lots of things in course, an' I should think ye orter know it too. Hain't the sheriff at this minit got a warrant fur me in his pocket, but's afeard to arrest me?"

"Yaas, I reckon that's so, Bill."

"Waal, then, hadn't I orter be thankful to hev sich a reputashun as a bad man? Then look at my record, will yer? I've held up forty-two stages, bin sent to jail fifty-six times, escaped twenty-one times, shot four sheriffs, licked scores of galoots an' robbed more stores in the state than ye kin count. Hain't it sunthin' to be thankful fur to be alive today to enjoy sich a grand reputashun an' own sich a bewtiful record?"

"Yaas, that's so, Bill—that's so."

"Then take a look at my fam'ly, will ye? Thar's my son Joe, who's sarvin' five y'urs fur hoss stealin'. Hain't it sunthin' to be thankful fur to be the father of sich a promisin' boy?"

"It sartinly ar', Bill," agreed Grizzly George.

"Ye bet it ar'!" went on Wild Bill enthusiastically. "Then thar's my two other boys, Lem an' Hank. Lem takes arter me an' ar' a nacheral born robber, while Hank takes arter his ma an' ar' a nacheral born liar. Why, he kin steal a hawg right in front of yer nose an' then lie about it till ye believe some one else did it. Wouldn't ye feel ye had sunthin' to be thankful fur if yer fam'ly wuz as good as mine?"

"Yaas, Bill, I would [illegible] no mistake."

"Why, in course ye wo[illegible]—in course! One of my nearest relat[illegible]s ar' goin' to be hanged tomorrer, an' my darter Mary got engaged to Texas Jim, the hoss thief, last night. HOW TO COOK THE TURKEY

Some Practical Advice Given by a New York Chef.

There is a chef in one of the large hotels of New York who is famous for his roast turkey. Turkey under his hands comes out not only a beautiful brown, but of a delicious flavor quite different from any other turkey that ever was seen. The turkey meat is positively rich, and even the white meat that is generally dry has a moist, spicy taste. This is his recipe for roast turkey:

Clean the turkey with as little handling as possible and rinse with water in which a little baking soda has been dissolved. Now break up about half a pint of bread crumbs, and into the crumbs chop two links of pork sausage. Stuff the turkey with this mixture and just before putting into the oven bind salt pork on the breast of the turkey. Remove the pork just before the turkey is taken from the oven. When the meat is carved, its flavor will be found very superior. This is particularly to be recommended for the Thanksgiving turkey, which, with so many other dainties rivaling it, must be very appetizing to be enjoyed.

Too Much Turkey.

Weary—Wot? More turkey? Why, I've e't so much dis week dat I gobbles in me sleep! Dat's right.

Thanksgiving Bounty.

Oh, favors every year made new!
Oh, gifts with rain and sunshine sent!
The bounty overruns our due;
The fullness shames our discontent.
—Whittier.

The Thanksgiving Dinner.

A contrast between the Thanksgiving dinner of half a century ago and that of the present time will be found more in the details of the table decoration than in the menu itself. Although some favorite dishes of the present time have been added to the list and perhaps one or more of those familiar to previous generations omitted, the dinner in the main is the same, with roast turkey, cranberry sauce, pumpkin and mince pie as essential dishes.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE PERIODICALS

The Northwestern Agriculturist is the leading farm, live-stock and home paper in the West. It appeals to every member of the family, being filled with instructive reading matter from beginning to end. Its various departments are under the charge of practical men, who have made a success themselves in the particular line on which they write. Among the department editors, who contribute regularly to The Agriculturist, are Prof. Thomas Shaw, Professor of Animal Husbandry at the Minnesota State Agricultural College, editing the sheep, beef cattle and horse departments; A. X. Hyatt, a dairyman known all over America as a practical and experienced dairy writer; Forest Henry, editor of the swine department, a man who has paid off mortgages by raising swine in Minnesota; A. K. Bush, in charge of the horticultural department, State Lecturer on Horticulture at the Minnesota Farmers' Institutes. These are only a few of the more important departments of the paper. Sample Copies will be sent free to all who are interested. The Northwestern Agriculturist is published semi-monthly, and already reaches over 50,000 farm homes twice a month. Subscription price, fifty cents a year.

Success is the great illustrated Home-Magazine of Inspiration, Progress and Self-Help. It is bright, cheerful and optimistic. In thousands of ways—direct and indirect—it tells people of all ages, classes and callings, how to achieve success in life. It's contributors include the best known names in literature, also business men of the highest standing, who write for no other periodical.

The Cosmopolitan covers every branch of human interest with timely, suggestive, well-written, and finely illustrated articles by the best authors.

Leslie's Illustrated Weekly is the popular, up-to-date pictorial and literary record of stirring events at home and abroad.

The New England Magazine paints with loving touch the landmarks of New England; tells of her history and traditions, and of the achievements of her sons throughout the world.

The Household is a supreme authority in home-work and decoration, table-equipment, nursery-lore, etiquette, photography and offers a very high class of poetry and fiction.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly is one of the great modern monthlies whose articles and illustrations are the highest expressions of magazine art.

With the Churches.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

Thanksgiving day will be observed at St. Mary's church by high mass this morning at the usual hour—10:30.

Nov. 30 is the day of St Andrew, apostle and patron saint of Scotland. He is supposed to have suffered death on a cross in the form of an X, thence known as St. Andrew's cross.

The ladies of St. Mary's church are giving a Thanksgiving dinner and supper in the Kaufer building, one door north of the Racket store. Meals 25 cents.

Nov. 25 is the day of St. Catherine, the patroness of Venice, of philosophy and belles-lettres, of maidens and against the diseases of the tongue. She was a queen of Egypt who became a Christian, and was martyred.

Pastors, church societies and committees are urgently invited to hand in items for this column.

English sermons will be given every Sunday evening during the winter months at St. Joseph's church, beginning with next Sunday.

The international Sunday school lessons used in the various denominations throughout the civilized world named Nov. 24 as temperance Sunday with lessons appropriate for the day. The world's Women's Christian Temperance Union is responsible for instituting this. A considerable number of denominations have adopted this Sunday to teach and preach in the interest of temperance.

The hour for high mass on Sundays at both St. Joseph's and St. Mary's churches will be 10:30 until further notice.

Nov. 28 is Thanksgiving day, in accordance with the proclamation of President Roosevelt. The first presidential recognition of a day of thanksgiving was when President Washington named Jan. 1. 1795. The custom of giving thanks in the autumn of the year for the blessing of the harvest goes far back in the early history of mankind. The first thanksgiving proclamation issued in America was by the Pilgrims at Plymouth, Mass., in 1603, on which Nov. 25 was named, the same being Thursday.

Members of Catholic organizations and Catholic communities generally throughout the country are much interested in the approaching convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies of the United States, which will open in Cincinnati, Dec. 1. They regard it as a history making event for the church in America. The federation has the approval and co-operation of the most distinguished prelates in the United States. Bishop McFaul, of New Jersey, was one of its most earnest promoters, and is now its spiritual director. Preparations for the organization of the new movement have been under way for a long time, but it was not until August 1 st, at Long Branch, that an organization was finally effected. It is believed the convention will number over 1,500 delegates, and the city of Cincinnati is making elaborate preparations to receive and entertain them. Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, Ohio, Maryland, Kentucky, Illinois and Indiana will in particular be largely represented. The most distinguished Catholic laymen and churchmen in the country will be among the delegates and speakers. There will be an orator of the West and an orator of the East. The former will be District Attorney P. H. O'Donnel, of Chicago, and the latter will be either Bourke Cuckran, of New York, or Michael J. Ryan, of Philadelphia.

The convention will be attended by an elaborate street parade of uniformed Catholic Knights of America and other similar societies It will be inaugurated by a pontifical mass at the Cincinnati cathedral at which Archbishop Elder will be celebrant, and the sermon will be preached by another prominent bishop of the country. It is expected the convention will make some positive declarations upon matters of current national interest, such as the position of the church in the Philippines. It will effect a permanent organization for future work, and its officers will probably include some of the most prominent and conspicuous Catholics in the country.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Green were transacting business in Red Lake Falls last week.

Thos. Veitch and James McCall were visitors in Red Lake Falls the first of the week.

J. D. Hughes has remodeled the front of his store building, giving it a very neat appearance.

We understand there is some dissatisfaction over the recent decision on the site for a schoolhouse—but then we cannot all be suited.

Chas. Heakinson is at home from Freeborn county and is trying to secure a tenant for his homestead one half mile from this village.

Mr. LaFave of Wyandotte has been in town during the past week securing subscriptions for some excellent books for which he is agent.

The raffle and dance at Hughes hall last Saturday night was a very enjoyable affair and the strains of the violin only ceased at the dawn of day.

Who will agitate the question of a telephone line to Garnes? Don't all speak at once, but remember in this part of the world the hustler gets the trade.

The Thanksgiving ball by the Woodmen in Hughes hall is to be THE event of the season. Music by McCall Brothers and Miss Hughes. Supper at Hughes hotel.

John Dempsey has decided to move further west and will go with his family to the state of Washington. We will lose a good neighbor and society will miss the merry young people.

It is rumored that a new firm under the name of Heakinson, Larson and Bell will soon engage in business at Blackduck. These gentlemen are well known in this vicinity, and Blackduck is to be congratulated on securing a trio of enterprising young men.

While indulging in a quiet smoke with the counter of the corner grocery store for a resting place we overheard the following monologue: "Now that is just like The Gazette; throwing bouquets at the ladies of Garnes for getting the site for the schoolhouse in the village; (the sarcasm was excruciating) and not even an onion top or cabbage leaf is spared for us poor men, who hustled around and rustled those women out, and hustled them off in a hurry to the polls to give them a chance to vote for anything in this country. Oh, yes let the women get the credit." We turned aside and brushed away a tear of sympathy, but our feeling for a fellow sufferer was too deep for words.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

State buttermakers met at St. Cloud last week.

Mrs. Robert Pratt, wife of ex-Mayor Pratt of Minneapolis, is dead.

The state board of control has placed insurance for $3,500,000 on state institutions.

The state is preparing to double the size of the workshop at the St. Cloud reformatory.

James Nolan, a veteran of the Civil war and one of the first settlers of Kent, is dead.

A third interurban line between St. Paul and Minneapolis will be in operation next year.

Christian Sorenson of the firm of Pederson & Sorenson, and a prominent business man of Appleton, is dead.

State Auditor Dunn recommends that the royalty on ores taken from state lands be fixed by constitutional amendment.

The secretary of the state board of health reports that smallpox is increasing in Minnesota as the weather grows colder.

Fire which started in the warerooms of the People's Storage company at St. Paul caused a loss of $150,000 to that and adjoining property.

The Vienna Neue Frie Presse prints a report that Queen Draga of Servia has been killed in Belgrade. Another rumor is that she committed suicide.

M. E. Humphrey of Winona has been appointed to the position of inspector of meats in the department of agriculture, with headquarters in St. Paul.

At a special meeting of the Luverne village council that body granted the petition of the ladies of Luverne and passed the much-talked of anti-spitting ordinance.

An important discovery of ore is reported from the Mesaba. A very large deposit of good quality is said to have been found a short distance out of the Cincinnati mine and east of the town site of Biwabik.

A peculiar disease has been prevailing among the horses in Red Lake county and other portions of the Red River valley during the past month that has proven fatal in a great number of instances.

Word has been received of the death at Los Angeles, Cal., of the wife of former state auditor, Captain W. W. Braden. The family moved there eight years ago, and Captain Braden died three years ago.

Graff Brothers' big flour mill at Lake Crystal has been destroyed by fire. Along with it went the electric lighting plant, the water works power and the telephone system. The loss on mill and public plants is $100,000 or more.

Thefts of chickens at Winona have become so numerous that the authorities have taken the matter up, and four thieves were apprehended. They gave the names of Frank Ratza, Loyal Nichole, Sam Anderson and Thomas Blagic. All pleaded guilty and were fined.

John Wyant, who has been selling agent for several years at Montevideo for the Singer Manufacturing company, is charged with being short in his accounts nearly $300. He has been arrested and bound over to the next term of the district court.

The executive committee of the National Educational association has selected Minneapolis for the next annual convention, July 7 to 11, 1902. The railroads of the Western Passenger association have granted the usual rates and ticket conditions.

A move has been made looking to the construction of an electric line from Mankato due north to St. Cloud, a distance of 100 miles, to follow the route of the proposed Duluth, St. Cloud Glencoe and Mankato railroad, which has seemingly passed out of view.

All sewer pipe interests in Red Wing have consolidated under the name of the Red Wing Sewer Pipe company, with a capital stock of half a million. The capacity of the several plants will be increased to 3,500 cars annually and will be the largest concerns west of Ohio.

The state capitol commission will hold a meeting Tuesday, Dec. 3, to consider the contract for the concrete flooring of the new capitol. A number of contracts will let after Jan. 1, and during all of next year there will be a large force of men at work on the building.

G. O. Miller, who owns over 100 miles of telephone line in Goodhue county, has made application to the Red Wing city council to enter that city. Mr. Miller's line extends through Featherstone, Vasa, Belle Creek, Leon and Cannon Falls. He connects with the Northwestern Telephone line.

The first steps in impeachment proceedings against Alderman J. C. Huot of the Eleventh ward, St. Paul, have been taken by the board of aldermen of that city for his address at a meeting of the St. Paul Commons in which he charged that "the city railway company has a working majority in the city council."

Wolves are unusually numerous in Washington county this winter. Charles Johnson, one of the rural mail carriers, had a lively experience one day last week. At a point a few miles north of Stillwater a couple of wolves attacked his horse. He called for help, and farmers brought their Winchesters into play, but did not get the wolves.

Of all the towns that are candidates for the location of the new state training school for girls, but one has submitted a formal proposition to the state board of control, as requested. That is Hutchinson. The offer is a free site of 173 acres adjoining the platted portion of the town. The site is adjacent to both the Great Northern and Milwaukee roads.

The case of Pearson against the Great Northern Railroad company is on again in the Ramsey county district court. The plaintiff seeks to recover $1,000,500, which he claims is due to him for services rendered. According to the story of the plaintiff, he was sent out by the Great Northern to prospect among the hills of Washington and Montana. He claims that he discovered valuable coal fields, for which work, he alleges, he should have received the sum of $1,000,500.

WIDDER KILLEM'S NUMBER ONE.

A Thanksgiving Sketch by William Walters.

"Speakin' of widders," remarked old Courtin Always as he cut a huge slice of tobacco from Si Munchin's plug, "did I ever tell ye about my Thanksgivin' with the Widder Killem?"

"Nope," said Si, rufully regarding the inroad that had been made upon his "eatin' tobacco."

"Nope; that must be a lie ye ain't favored us with yit."

"'Tain't no lie, Si Munchin," old Courtin Always protested as eloquently as a full maw would permit, "an' I kin bring affydavids to prove every dern statement that I make. Not only that, but I'll bet $7.50 that what I say is the undiluted truth. A scrawny, freckled, bowlegged, baldheaded galoot like ye that no pretty widder on earth would walk across a mud puddle on natchly don't believe widders will walk on ennybuddy, but I know better, fer I"—

"THE WIDDER BOUGHT SOME SOAP AN' THINGS."

"Aw, shet up and give us yer lie!" cried Si.

"Well, this yere Widder Killem was about as trim an' neat a bit of parlor furniture as ye'll often see in the widder line. She was about mejum height, with black hair an' snappin' black eyes, cheeks like a couple of roses an' a figger—well, say!"

Old Courtin rolled his eyes heavenward and completed his description of the widow's charms in a silence more eloquent than words.

"She hadn't been in Little Joker three days before every man in the place was wearin' his best togs an' promenadin' past her cabin fourteen times a day. Natchly I was as dead gone as the gang, an' she seemed to cotton to me a heap stronger'n she did to enny of the boys."

"Natchly!" grunted the sarcastic Si. "When it comes to lady killin', ye're a bird. Nothin' kin beat ye!"

"I was the regular licensed pharmycist in Boozeley's drug store at that time, an' if I do say it I could stampede the hull outfit in them days mixin' pizen. The widder bought some soap an' things, an' I kinder got acquainted with her afore enny of the boys. The day afore Thanksgivin' I walked about thirty miles to shoot a wild turkey, an' when I made the widder a present of it at her cabin blamed if she didn't invite me to eat it with her next day. Ye see, the widder had a squaw an' a Chinaman livin' with her as servants, an' the invite didn't do no partic'lar havoc to the rules of etticett.

"Durin' the meal I made some play about bein' thankful, an' she allowed that I had good reason to be. Then I said that she, bein' a widder an' all alone, couldn't feel so very thankful, but she observed that she was thankful jest the same an' that, widder er no widder, she was perfectly able to look out fer number one.

"'Bein' a widder,' says I, laughin' kinder sly, 'I was coddlin' the rose colored hope in my buzzum that possibly ye was lookin' out fer number two,' says I.

"'No,' says she; 'I don't have to. Ambitious aspirants fer number two is comin' my way in droves. Down at Keno Gulch a baldheaded old individual named Doe came sparkin' around, an' the third day he was filled plumb full of lead by some party to the jury unknown. Another gay old feller named Smith—"Hair Dye" Smith they called him—was hangin' around three days, an' the night of the third day some party to this yere jury also unknown slips a knife into him in seventeen places. Then another feller named Gray—"Cupid" Gray—came courtin' five days, an' the sixth he was found dead in the Wingdam road with six bullets in his frame.

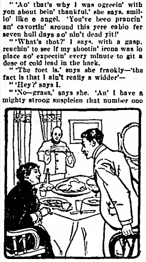
"'An' that's why I was agreein' with you about bein' thankful,' she says, smilin' like a angel. 'You've been prancin' an' cavortin' around this yere cabin fer seven hull days an' ain't dead yit!'

"'What's that?' I says, with a gasp, reachin' to see if my shootin' irons was in place an' expectin' every minute to git a dose of cold lead in the back.

"'The fact is,' says she frankly—'the fact is that I ain't really a widder'—

"'Hey?' says I.

"'No—grass,' says she. 'An' I have a mighty strong suspicion that number one is stayin' awake nights pretty reg'lar lookin' fer ambitious number twos with a brace of guns.'"



"WHAT'S THAT?"

"An' was her s'picions well founded?" asked Si Munchin, who had become interested in spite of himself.

"I had reasons to think so," old Courtin replied.

"And them reasons was?"

"Two bullets through my hat an' one through my shoulder that Thanksgivin' afternoon when I came away."

A Mighty Feed in Store.

One of these days the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of Thanksgiving will happen along. If it is kept in the spirit of most centenaries, what heavy and long drawn out feasting there will be!

8. Publication of the stories to be exclusively in The Gazette.

THANKSGIVING WEEK FESTIVITIES

PROGRESSIVE DINNER.

The progressive dinner was a novel feature of the observance here. Misses Mabel Porter, Bessie Hunt, Alyce Buse, Etta Zaiser, May Buse, Josie Kaus, Lillian Buse and Mabel Owen were hostesses, and had as guests Messrs. Milton Converse, Dr. J. E. Argue, W. A. McIntyre, H. H. Zaiser, August Mucke, Sam Hunt, Ed Townsend and Ralph Wyer.

Oyster soup was served at Mrs. E. F. Marshall's, where Miss Porter was hostess. Decorations were in carnations and chrysanthemums. The salad course was next, at the home of Miss Josie Kaus, where a profusion of palms were the decorations; the next course, of turkey, was partaken of at the home of Miss Bessie Hunt, and carnations and pinks were the decorations. Misses May, Lillian and Alyce Buse now received the guests. The dining room was decorated with chrysanthemums, and plum pudding was served. The home of Miss Etta Zaiser saw the finale, and Miss Etta was assisted by Miss Mabel Owen. Sherbet, fruits and candies were served, and potted plants were the decorations.

A feature of the event was the button-sewing contest. Three minutes were given each guest and the most proficient went up.

The event was a charming and novel social affair and a great success.

HEALY BROTHERS AS HOSTS.

Friday evening Messrs. Harry and Leland Healy entertained at a dancing party given at their spacious and hospitable home on Bottineau avenue. The event was one out of the ordinary and much enjoyed by the participants. Freund's orchestra furnished the music. Refreshments were served at twelve. The guests numbered 60.

Saturday night Messrs. Leland and Verne were hosts, and the unusual musical talent possessed by the brothers was brought into play for the pleasures of the guests. Dancing terminated the program. Refreshments were passed early on account of the approaching Sabbath.

A HITCH.

SECRETARY HITCHCOCK BLOCKS RED LAKE RESERVATION OPENING.

Washington, Dec. 2.—Senator Nelson has called upon Commissioner Jones and discussed the matter of the proposed opening of the agricultural lands on Red Lake and other reservations in Minnesota. No action can be taken on the subject by the commissioner of Indian affairs and it is not known yet what position Secretary Hitchcock will take before the close of the coming session. Senator Nelson makes a strong plea for the opening of these lands, and his ideas on the subject are backed by the sentiment in the state in favor of the disposition of these agricultural lands and opening of the country to settlers. The senator sees no connection between the lands in question and the controversies that have arisen in regard to the disposal of pine timber on the Chippewa reservations. Secretary Hitchcock, however, has taken the position that there will be no further movement by the department in regard to Chippewa matters until a solution of the Indian timber problem has been reached by appropriate legislation in congress.

CARON'S HARVEST.

IS SHIPPING THE LAST OF HIS BIG HONEY CROP.

IS THE ORIGINAL BEE MAN OF NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Oliver Caron owns a five-acre farm on the banks of the Clearwater just opposite the City hall. His business is bee keeping, dealing in apiery supplies, and raising vegetables.

Mr. Caron is the original bee man of Northern Minnesota. Years ago, when it was generally supposed bees could not thrive in our climate, he vigorously took up the industry and has since been its ardent apostle and demonstrator. He was, until three years ago, located at Huot, and moved to this city to secure railroad facilities, as he does a large supply business, some seasons securing several carloads of hives, sections, foundations, etc., for which he finds sale among his converts, who are many, and indeed the bee-keeping industry is now thoroughly established in all parts of this section, thanks to Mr. Caron's example.

It is conceded that the apiaries farthest north produce the finest, whitest honey—the white clover and linden blossoms, as well as the golden rod honey being especially fine.

The Riverside Apiary now has 106 swarms, and a new root house has been provided to winter them. During the winter season each hive is supposed to consume forty pounds of honey, and when these little workers are stored away for the winter there will go with them some 4000 pounds of honey. Bees are always wintered in the dark.

Last winter Mr. Caron had only 40 swarms. From these he has during the past season sold 20 swarms at $5 each, has gathered a crop of 3000 pounds of honey, the last of which has just been shipped to a Grand Forks wholesaler @ 14c a pound net, and has 106 swarms to winter, besides 4000 pounds of honey for these.

He has now reached the limit, and will never keep more than 106 swarms since there are other bee-keepers in this city and immediate vicinity and it has been demonstrated that no more than 150 swarms can thrive in one locality. The bees travel as far away as three miles to gather sweets. If he finds it profitable to keep more than 100 swarms he will plant another colony a few miles out in the country.

Mr. Caron's little five-acre farm brought him in this year just $1000—$450 from the sale of honey, $100 from the sale of swarms, a little more from supplies, the balance from vegetables raised on the tract which was cleared last year.

Notice of Annual Election.

Notice is hereby given that the annual election of the directors of the First State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, will take place in the banking rooms on Tuesday, the 14th day of January, 1902, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

Theo. Garceau,
Cashier.

Member Getting Scheme.

A good method of recruiting membership in fraternal organizations is by inaugurating member-getting contests, dividing the lodge into groups of ten or twenty, with a banquet and prize to the winners. The contest will not only win a good sum of money for the general fund, but cannot fail of adding new interest, thereby making the meetings more enjoyable. If, while the contest is on, meetings are held every week, it will be found the work will not be so apt to lag.

Advertised Letters.

Miss Lena Dallager, Mr. Gerhart Benjameson, Levi Champine, Nick Dresse, George Geary, Dr. M. A. Hansen, Frenk Minow, John Ormson, Eugene Rebar, Syvert Severson.

If not called for in two weeks these letters will be sent to dead letter office as prescribed by law. In calling for the above please say "advertised."

BOOM WILL CONTINUE

THOSE WELL POSTED SAY THERE WILL BE NO LET UP IN LAND SALES.

Many predictions were made early last summer that the land boom which has brought people to northwestern Minnesota and to North Dakota by the train load almost every day for many months and which has resulted in a transfer of farm property unexampled in this section of the United States, would begin to wane this fall and that nothing more than a halting demand for land would be left next spring. But as the fall advanced the demand for land has become more vigorous, and sales were never so frequent as to-day, says the Crookston Times. The most careful observers of the real estate market now declare that next spring will witness an influx of settlers and land seekers that will make the present demand seem insignificant. All the land companies are making preparations with this expectation, and the land companies under the present efficient organization of their forces, are in a position to know who and how many are coming in this direction. They have their agents in all parts of the States to the south and east, and they declare that interest in western lands in these states was never so great as at present.

The Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads will canvass the eastern states for immigration more thoroughly than ever before. Between now and March 1 the immigration agents of these lines will invade much territory in their efforts to persuade the eastern farmer that there is more money to be made in Minnesota, the Dakotas and other western states.

The Great Northern has ready for distribution an immense amount of literature which has been in preparation for several months. The eastern states will be flooded with these ~~stories of~~ northwestern prosperity and a considerable amount will be sent south of Mason and Dixon's line.

It is believed that this policy will be of much assistance in creating a new high water mark on immigration in 1902.

JUDGES STIRRED UP.

PROBATE JUDGES OF MINNESOTA TO GATHER IN CONVENTION.

A meeting of the state association of Judges of Probate has been called to meet at St. Paul on Dec. 11, the prime object being to take action relative to the recent order of the interior department notifying them that all bonds of administrators, executors or guardians that will be filed in the future, as well as those that have been on file since Jan. 1, 1899 must bear a fifty cent revenue stamp.

The judges are wroth, inasmuch as the department sent previous official notice that these documents did not require stamps. This new ruling is claimed to be based on a court decision.

What is involved in this decision may be imagined when Judge Knight states that in his office alone, it would require an outlay of about $50 to comply with the new ruling, and it would have to come out of the judges' pockets. Therefore the Minnesota association has taken it up and will fight.

M. B. A. Notes.

It was decided that the M. B. A. should give the New Year Ball, and have secured the Woodman hall for that purpose. Details later.

At a largely attended meeting of the M.B.A. held last Monday evening a report from the Supreme Office was read, showing the financial condition of the order to be in a very flourishing condition, this being especially the case with the Reserve Fund which is a special feature of the order. The report was enthusiastically received by the members, and in order to be in line with the other lodges of the order two candidates were initiated, and have more to be initiated at their next meeting.

FATAL SHOOTING AFFRAY

Frank W. March Fatally Shot by W. E. West at Grand Forks Sunday Night.

Men Had Been Fast Friends

Murderer Refuses to Talk.

Frank W. March was shot in the Hotel Dacotah at Grand Forks Saturday evening, and died Monday at 2:10 p. m. as a result of his injuries. Mr. March is a brother of Charles March formerly of Crookston. The following account is given by the Grand Forks Herald:

"This city was shocked last evening shortly after 10 o'clock over a shooting affray that took place in the Hotel Dacotah, in which Frank W. March, a well known traveling man of this city, was probably fatally shot through the bowels by W. E. West after March had knocked West to the floor. West entered the hotel a moment before, and was closely followed by March. West went to the office desk, where he stood picking his teeth, when March approached him and said something in a low tone which was not understood by those standing about. West was heard to answer "No," whereupon March struck him twice, knocking him to the floor. W. B. Wood separated the two men, and West got up. As soon as he gained his feet he reached to his hip pocket and pulling a 38 calibre revolver shot March, the bullet taking effect in his left side and shortly above the groin.

Chief of Police Ryan was summoned at once and with Officer Aireck arrested West, who was taken first to the city hall and later to the county jail, where he is now held.

The wounded man was taken to the hospital and physicians called who made an effort to locate the bullet, but in this they were unsuccessful. It was found, however, that the intestines were pierced in seven places, and at 2 o'clock this morning Dr. Wheeler, one of the attending physicians, said that the chances for the recovery of the wounded man were very slim.

The shooting caused great excitement in the city. At the time of the shooting there were several men in the office of the Dacotah, who could have prevented the terrible affair had they thought West was going to shoot. It was all done so quickly that none of the spectators realized what was going on until the shooting was done.

It developed that the two men had been very good friends till about ten days ago, when March figured that he was aggrieved. Since that time the two men had not met until last evening. West was sitting in the Hotel Prescott reading a paper, when March entered the place. March sat down at one of the tables and ordered his supper. A companion came in and he beckoned to him and the two started a conversation. March began making offensive remarks about West, and persisted after having been advised by another man in the room to desist. When the remarks began to get too personal, West put on his hat, laid the newspaper on the cigar case and left the hotel, going directly to the Dacotah.

As soon as he had left, March remarked that he had a good notion to follow him. A friend told him he had better drop the matter, but March a moment afterwards announced that he would follow West. This he did and arrived at the Hotel Dacotah a moment after West, whom he approached, and according to the story of one of the witnesses said "Have you a gun?" West said "No," and March told him that he had better get one.

At that instant March struck West twice, knocking him to the floor. He then grabbed West by the leg, but W. B. Wood sprang from behind the desk and separated the men. West scrambled to his feet and pulled a revolver from his pocket and fired the shot on the instant. March fell to the floor and cried "Shoot again," but West was siezed and the gun taken from him by Mr. Wood and P. McDonnell.

After West had been taken to the county jail he was asked about the trouble, but refused to say a word regarding the shooting till he consulted an attorney. Judge Cochrane was sent for but could not be found, and will not see West till this morning. Before West reached the jail he made the statement that he had endeavored to avoid trouble, and had therefore made no response to March while at the Prescot, and had left the place to save a clash. He said that after March struck him there was nothing left for him to do but to shoot. He refused to say a word about the cause of the coldness between himself and March, but it was learned from another source that the trouble was over a remark that West had made about ten days before, which March claimed was insulting.

There was intense excitement over the affair, and the news spread from one end of the city to the other in a very short time. Mr. March has been traveling out of Grand Forks for the North Star Boot & Shoe company for several years, and there is not a better known traveling man in the state than he, and he has also been very prominent in baseball circles, being very enthusiastic over that sport. March was unconscious shortly after he reached the hospital, and had not regained consciousness up to 2:30 this morning."

W. E. West has made his headquarters in Grand Forks since last March and represents George G. Wright of St. Paul, who has been dealing in real estate in this section heavily. He has been stopping at the Prescot ever since that time, and has never before been mixed up in any trouble, and has the reputation of being a quiet, retired sort of person. He had not been drinking last evening and is not a drinking man. He is single and has no relatives in this section of the country.

Mr. March was a frequent visitor to Crookston, and was not only well known but well liked here. Mrs. March, formerly Miss Ethel Cavanaugh, is also well known here in social circles. She is a cousin of Mrs. Ed. Sullivan of this city, and a niece of Mrs. Geo. Walsh of Cass Lake.

MAKING ITS READERS EDITORS.

The Novel Plan of a Popular Magazine for Supplying Its Subscribers' Wants.

An interesting experiment is being made by The Ladies' Home Journal. Each month the readers of this magazine are asked to answer some questions concerning the contents or conduct of the publication, and in order to make it worth while to answer cash prizes are given those who write the best letters, be they of praise or criticism. The idea was first put forth in the September issue, and thousands of persons in all parts of the world—even in Turkey—sent in their opinions as to the best feature of that number. The October question as to the least popular article brought a similar response. Aside from giving every reader not only a chance, but an invitation, to express opinions with the inducement of a possible reward in cash, this plan enables the magazine to find out what is wanted by its wide constituency. It virtually gives the public a hand in the editing.

What the President Says on Important Subjects.

TRUSTS AND RECIPROCITY

How He Would Deal With These Problems.

He Declares Publicity Is at Present the Only Sure Remedy Against Evils of Combinations—While Opposing Any General Tariff Change, He Upholds the Principle of Reciprocity—Advocates Reduction of Duty on Cuban Imports Into This Country—Importance of Building the Isthmian Canal and the Pacific Cable Urged—The Philippines and Other Insular Questions.

Washington, Dec. 3.—The president in his annual message to congress says:

The congress assembles this year under the shadow of a great calamity. On the 6th of September President McKinley was shot by an anarchist while attending the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo and died in that city on the 14th of that month.

Of the last seven elected presidents he is the third who has been murdered, and the bare recital of this fact is sufficient to justify grave alarm among all loyal American citizens. Moreover, the circumstances of this, the third assassination of an American president, have a peculiarly sinister significance. Both President Lincoln and President Garfield were killed by assassins of types unfortunately not uncommon in history, President Lincoln falling a victim to the terrible passions aroused by four years of civil war and President Garfield to the revengeful vanity of a disappointed office seeker. President McKinley was killed by an utterly depraved criminal belonging to that body of criminals who object to all governments, good and bad alike, who are against any form of popular liberty if it is guaranteed by even the most just and liberal laws and who are as hostile to the upright exponent of a free people's sober will as to the tyrannical and irresponsible despot.

Anarchy and Anarchists.

The president continues with a eulogy of Mr. McKinley, then turns to the subject of anarchy, denouncing its doctrines and preachers. He says:

I earnestly recommend to the congress that in the exercise of its wise discretion it should take into consideration the coming to this country of anarchists or persons professing principles hostile to all government and justifying the murder of those placed in authority. Such individuals as those who not long ago gathered in open meeting to glorify the murder of King Humbert of Italy perpetrate a crime, and the law should insure their rigorous punishment. They and those like them should be kept out of this country, and if found here they should be promptly deported to the country whence they came, and farreaching provision should be made for the punishment of those who stay. No matter calls more urgently for the wisest thought of the congress.

A Subject For Federal Courts.

The federal courts should be given jurisdiction over any man who kills or attempts to kill the president or any man who by the constitution or by law is in line of succession for the presidency, while the punishment for an unsuccessful attempt should be proportioned to the enormity of the offense against our institutions.

Anarchy is a crime against the whole human race, and all mankind should band against the anarchist. His crime should be made an offense against the law of nations, like piracy and that form of man stealing known as the slave trade.

The president next considers business conditions, which he finds highly satisfactory. He continues:

The tremendous and highly complex industrial development which went on with ever accelerated rapidity during the latter half of the nineteenth century brings us face to face at the beginning of the twentieth with very serious social problems. The old laws and the old customs which had almost the binding force of law were once quite sufficient to regulate the accumulation and distribution of wealth. Since the industrial changes which have so enormously increased the productive power of mankind they are no longer sufficient.

Trade Combinations.

The growth of cities has gone on beyond comparison faster than the growth of the country, and the upbuilding of the great industrial centers has meant a startling increase not merely in the aggregate of wealth, but in the number of very large individual and especially of very large corporate fortunes. The creation of these great corporate fortunes has not been due to the tariff nor to any other governmental action, but to natural causes in the business world, operating in other countries as they operate in our own.

The process has aroused much antagonism, a great part of which is wholly without warrant. It is not true that as the rich have grown richer the poor have grown poorer. On the contrary, never before has the average man, the wageworker, the farmer, the small trader, been so well off as in this country and at the present time. There have been abuses connected with the accumulation of wealth, yet it remains true that a fortune accumulated in legitimate business can be accumulated by the person specially benefited only on condition of conferring immense incidental benefits upon others. Successful enterprise of the type which benefits all mankind can only exist if the conditions are such as to offer great prizes as the rewards of success.

Reasons For Caution.

The president adds that there are many reasons for caution in dealing with corporations. He says:

The same business conditions which have produced the great aggregations of corporate and individual wealth have made them very potent factors in international commercial competition.

Moreover, it cannot too often be pointed out that to strike with ignorant violence at the interests of one set of men almost inevitably endangers the interests of all. The fundamental rule in our national life—the rule which underlies all others—is that, on the whole and in the long run, we shall go up or down together.

The mechanism of modern business is so delicate that extreme care must be taken not to interfere with it in a spirit of rashness or ignorance. In dealing with business interests, for the government to undertake by crude and ill considered legislation to do what may turn out to be bad, would be to incur the risk of such farreaching national disaster that it would be preferable to undertake nothing at all. The men who demand the impossible or the undesirable serve as the allies of the forces with which they are nominally at war, for they hamper those who would endeavor to find out in rational fashion what the wrongs really are and to what extent and in what manner it is practicable to apply remedies.

How to Correct the Evils.

All this is true, and yet it is also true that there are real and grave evils, one of the chief being overcapitalization because of its many baleful consequences, and a resolute and practical effort must be made to correct these evils.

It is no limitation upon property rights or freedom of contract to require that when men receive from government the privilege of doing business under corporate form, which frees them from individual responsibility and enables them to call into their enterprises the capital of the public, they shall do so upon absolutely truthful representations as to the value of the property in which the capital is to be invested. Corporations engaged in interstate commerce should be regulated if they are found to exercise a license working to the public injury. It should be as much the aim of those who seek for social betterment to rid the business world of crimes of cunning as to rid the entire body politic of crimes of violence. Great corporations exist only because they are created and safeguarded by our institutions, and it is therefore our right and our duty to see that they work in harmony with these institutions.

Publicity the First Essential.

The first essential in determining how to deal with the great industrial combinations is knowledge of the facts—publicity. In the interest of the public the government should have the right to inspect and examine the workings of the great corporations engaged in interstate business. Publicity is the only sure remedy which we can now invoke. What further remedies are needed in the way of governmental regulation or taxation can only be determined after publicity has been obtained by process of law and in the course of administration. The first requisite is knowledge, full and complete—knowledge which may be made public to the world.

Artificial bodies, such as corporations and joint stock or other associations, depending upon any statutory law for their existence or privileges should be subject to proper governmental supervision, and full and accurate information as to their operations should be made public regularly at reasonable intervals.

The large corporations, commonly called trusts, though organized in one state, always do business in many states, often doing very little business in the state where they are incorporated. There is utter lack of uniformity in the state laws about them, and, as no state has any exclusive interest in or power over their acts, it has in practice proved impossible to get adequate regulation through state action. Therefore, in the interest of the whole people, the nation should, without interfering with the power of the states in the matter itself, also assume power of supervision and regulation over all corporations doing an interstate business.

Amend Constitution if Necessary.

When the constitution was adopted, at the end of the eighteenth century, no human wisdom could foretell the sweeping changes, alike in industrial and political conditions, which were to take place by the beginning of the twentieth century. At that time it was accepted as a matter of course that the several states were the proper authorities to regulate, so far as was then necessary, the comparatively insignificant and strictly localized corporate bodies of the day. The conditions are now wholly different, and wholly different action is called for.

I believe that a law can be framed which will enable the national government to exercise control along the lines above indicated, profiting by the experience gained through the passage and administration of the interstate commerce act. If, however, the judgment of the congress is that it lacks the constitutional power to pass such an act, then a constitutional amendment should be submitted to confer the power.

There should be created a cabinet officer, to be known as secretary of commerce and industries, as provided in the bill introduced at the last session of the congress. It should be his province to deal with commerce in its broadest sense, including among many other things whatever concerns labor and all matters affecting the great business corporations and our merchant marine.

Labor.

The president declares that he regards it necessary to re-enact the Chinese exclusion law. In regard to labor he says that the government should provide in its contracts that all work should be done under "fair" conditions and that all night work should be forbidden for women and children as well as excessive overtime. He continues:

Very great good has been and will be accomplished by associations or unions of wageworkers when managed with forethought and when they combine insistence upon their own rights with law abiding respect for the rights of others. The display of these qualities in such bodies is a duty to the nation no less than to the associations themselves. Finally, there must also in many cases be action by the government in order to safeguard the rights and interests of all. Under our constitution there is much more scope for such action by the state and the municipality than by the nation. But on points such as those touched on above the national government can act.

He asserts that the immigration laws are unsatisfactory and that a law should be enacted to keep out not only anarchists, but persons of a low moral tendency or of unsavory reputation and those who are below a certain standard of economic fitness to enter our industrial field as competitors with American labor.

The Tariff and Reciprocity.

The president declares that nothing could be more unwise than to disturb the business interests of the country by any general tariff change at this time. He adds:

Yet it is not only possible, but eminently desirable, to combine with the stability of our economic system a supplementary system of reciprocal benefit and obligation with other nations. Such reciprocity is an incident and result of the firm establishment and preservation of our present economic policy. It was specially provided for in the present tariff law.

Reciprocity must be treated as the handmaiden of protection. Our first duty is to see that the protection granted by the tariff in every case where it is needed is maintained, and that reciprocity be sought for so far as it can safely be done without injury to our home industries. Just how far this is must be determined according to the individual case, remembering always that every application of our tariff policy to meet our shifting national needs must be conditioned upon the cardinal fact that the duties must never be reduced below the point that will cover the difference between the labor cost here and abroad. The well being of the wageworker is a prime consideration of our entire policy of economic legislation.

Need For Wider Markets.

Subject to this proviso of the proper protection necessary to our industrial well being at home, the principle of reciprocity must command our hearty support. The phenomenal growth of our export trade emphasizes the urgency of the need for wider markets and for a liberal policy in dealing with foreign nations. Whatever is merely petty and vexatious in the way of trade restrictions should be avoided. The customers to whom we dispose of our surplus products in the long run, directly or indirectly, purchase those surplus products by giving us something in return. Their ability to purchase our products should as far as possible be secured by so arranging our tariff as to enable us to take from them those products which we can use without harm to our own industries and labor or the use of which will be of marked benefit to us.

It is most important that we should maintain the high level of our present prosperity. We have now reached the point in the development of our interests where we are not only able to supply our own markets, but to produce a constantly growing surplus for which we must find markets abroad. To secure these markets we can utilize existing duties in any case where they are no longer needed for the purpose of protection, or in any case where the article is not produced here and the duty is no longer necessary for revenue, as giving us something to offer in exchange for what we ask. The cordial relations with other nations which are so desirable will naturally be promoted by the course thus required by our own interests.

The natural line of development for a policy of reciprocity will be in connection with those of our productions which no longer require all of the support once needed to establish them upon a sound basis and with those others where either because of natural or of economic causes we are beyond the reach of successful competition.

I ask the attention of the senate to the reciprocity treaties laid before it by my predecessor.

The Merchant Marine.

The condition of the American merchant marine is such as to call for immediate remedial action by the congress. It is discreditable to us as a nation that our merchant marine should be utterly insignificant in comparison to that of other nations which we overtop in other forms of business. We should not longer submit to conditions under which only a trifling portion of our great commerce is carried in our own ships. To remedy this state of things would not merely serve to build up our shipping interests, but it would also result in benefit to all who are interested in the permanent establishment of a wider market for American products and would provide an auxiliary force for the navy. Ships work for their own countries just as railroads work for their terminal points. Shipping lines, if established to the principal countries with which we have dealings, would be of political as well as commercial benefit. From every standpoint it is unwise for the United States to continue to rely upon the ships of competing nations for the distribution of our goods. It should be made advantageous to carry American goods in American built ships.

At present American shipping is under certain great disadvantages when put in competition with the shipping of foreign countries. Many of the fast foreign steamships, at a speed of fourteen knots or above, are subsidized, and all our ships, sailing vessels and steamers alike, cargo carriers of slow speed and mail carriers of high speed, have to meet the fact that the original cost of building American ships is greater than is the case abroad; that the wages paid American officers and seamen are very much higher than those paid the officers and seamen of foreign competing countries, and that the standard of living on our ships is far superior to the standard of living on the ships of our commercial rivals. Our government should take such action as will remedy these inequalities. The American merchant marine should be restored to the ocean.

Financial.

The passage of the act establishing gold as the standard money has, it is declared, been shown to be timely and judicious. The president adds:

In many respects the national banking law furnishes sufficient liberty for the proper exercise of the banking function, but there seems to be need of better safeguards against the deranging influence of commercial crises and financial panics. Moreover, the currency of the country should be made responsive to the demands of our domestic trade and commerce.

Economy in expenditures is urged. Amendment of the interstate commerce act is advised to insure the cardinal provisions of that act. The work carried on by the department of agriculture is next considered and praised highly. The president then turns to forest preservation and irrigation of arid lands, saying that both are highly necessary. He would put all the work in connection with the forest reserves in charge of the bureau of forestry.

Irrigation.

The president continues by tracing the connection between the forest reserves and the water supply. He says:

The forests are natural reservoirs. By restraining the streams in flood and replenishing them in drought they make possible the use of waters otherwise wasted. They prevent the soil from washing and so protect the storage reservoirs from filling up with silt. Forest conservation is, therefore, an essential condition of water conservation.

The forests alone cannot, however, fully regulate and conserve the waters of the arid region. Great storage works are necessary to equalize the flow of streams and to save the flood waters. Their construction has been conclusively shown to be an undertaking too vast for private effort. Nor can it be best accomplished by the individual states acting alone. The government should construct and maintain these reservoirs as it does other public works. Where their purpose is to regulate the flow of streams, the water should be turned freely into the channels in the dry season to take the same course under the same laws as the natural flow.

The reclamation of the unsettled arid public lands presents a different problem. Here it is not enough to regulate the flow of streams. The object of the government is to dispose of the land to settlers who will build homes upon it. To accomplish this object water must be brought within their reach.

The pioneer settlers on the arid public domain chose their homes along streams from which they could themselves divert the water to reclaim their holdings. Such opportunities are practically gone. There remain, however, vast areas of public land which can be made available for homestead settlement, but only by reservoirs and main line canals impracticable for private enterprise. These irrigation works should be built by the national government. The lands reclaimed by them should be reserved by the government for actual settlers, and the cost of construction should, so far as possible, be repaid by the land reclaimed. The distribution of the water, the division of the streams among irrigators, should be left to the settlers themselves in conformity with state laws and without interference with those laws or with vested rights.

The declaration is made that in the arid states the only right to water which should be recognized is that of use. The president says that the doctrine of private ownership of water apart from land cannot prevail without causing wrong.

Insular Problems.

Insular questions are next treated. In Hawaii our aim must be to develop the territory on the traditional American lines. Porto Rico is declared to be thriving as never before. The attention of congress is called to the need of legislation concerning the island's public lands. In Cuba it is stated that much progress has been made toward putting the independent government of the island upon a firm footing, and it is declared that independence will be an accomplished fact. The president adds:

Elsewhere I have discussed the question of reciprocity. In the case of Cuba, however, there are weighty reasons of morality and of national interest why the policy should be held to have a peculiar application, and I most earnestly ask your attention to the wisdom, indeed to the vital need, of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States.

In dealing with the Philippine people we must show both patience and strength, forbearance and steadfast resolution. Our aim is high. We do not desire to do for the islanders merely what has elsewhere been done for tropic peoples by even the best foreign governments. We hope to do for them what has never before been done for any people of the tropics—to make them fit for self government after the fashion of the really free nations.

The only fear is lest in our overanxiety we give them a degree of independence for which they are unfit, thereby inviting reaction and disaster. As fast as there is any reasonable hope that in a given district the people can govern themselves self government has been given in that district. There is not a locality fitted for self government which has not received it. But it may well be that in certain cases it will have to be withdrawn because the inhabitants show themselves unfit to exercise it; such instances have already occurred. In other words, there is not the slightest chance of our failing to show a sufficiently humanitarian spirit. The danger comes in the opposite direction.

Troubles Ahead Yet.

There are still troubles ahead in the islands. The insurrection has become an affair of local banditti and marauders, who deserve no higher regard than the brigands of portions of the old world. Encouragement, direct or indirect, to these insurrectos stands on the same footing as encouragement to hostile Indians in the days when we still had Indian wars.

The president declares that the time has come for additional legislation for the Philippines. He says:

It is necessary that the congress should pass laws by which the resources of the islands can be developed, so that franchises (for limited terms of years) can be granted to companies doing business in them and every encouragement be given to the incoming of business men of every kind. It is urgently necessary to enact suitable laws dealing with general transportation, mining, banking, currency, homesteads and the use and ownership of the lands and timber. These laws will give free play to industrial enterprise, and the commercial development which will surely follow will afford to the people of the islands the best proofs of the sincerity of our desire to aid them.

The Cable and the Canal.

I call your attention most earnestly to the crying need of a cable to Hawaii and the Philippines, to be continued from the Philippines to points in Asia. We should not defer a day longer than necessary the construction of such a cable. It is demanded not merely for commercial but for political and military considerations. Either the congress should immediately provide for the construction of a government cable or else an arrangement should be made by which like advantages to those accruing from a government cable may be secured to the government by contract with a private cable company.

No single great material work which remains to be undertaken on this continent is of such consequence to the American people as the building of a canal across the isthmus connecting North and South America. Its importance to the nation is by no means limited merely to its material effects upon our business prosperity, and yet with a view to these effects alone it would be to the last degree important for us immediately to begin it. While its beneficial effects would perhaps be most marked upon the Pacific coast and the gulf and South Atlantic states, it would also greatly benefit other sections. It is emphatically a work which it is for the interest of the entire country to begin and complete as soon as possible.

I am glad to be able to announce to you that our negotiations on this subject with Great Britain, conducted on both sides in a spirit of friendliness and mutual good will, have resulted in my being able to lay before the senate a treaty which, if ratified, will enable us to begin preparations for an isthmian canal at any time and which guarantees to this nation every right that it has ever asked in connection with the canal. It specifically provides that the United States alone shall do the work of building and assume the responsibility of safeguarding the canal and shall regulate its neutral use by all nations on terms of equality without the guarantee or interference of any outside nation from any quarter.

The Monroe Doctrine.

The Monroe doctrine should be the cardinal feature of the foreign policy of all the nations of the two Americas, as it is of the United States. The Monroe doctrine is a declaration that there must be no territorial aggrandizement by any non-American power at the expense of any American power on American soil. It is in nowise intended as hostile to any nation in the old world. Still less is it intended to give cover to any aggression by one new world power at the expense of any other. It is simply a step, and a long step, toward assuring the universal peace of the world by securing the possibility of permanent peace on this hemisphere.

During the past century other influences have established the permanence and independence of the smaller states of Europe. Through the Monroe doctrine we hope to be able to safeguard like independence and secure like permanence for the lesser among the new world nations.

This doctrine has nothing to do with the commercial relations of any American power save that it in truth allows each of them to form such as it desires. In other words, it is really a guarantee of the commercial independence of the Americas. We do not ask under this doctrine for any exclusive commercial dealings with any other American state. We do not guarantee any state against punishment if it misconducts itself, provided that punishment does not take the form of the acquisition of territory by any non-American power. Our attitude in Cuba is a sufficient guarantee of our own good faith. We have not the slightest desire to secure any territory at the expense of any of our neighbors.

The Navy.

The president devotes considerable space to the navy, the upbuilding of which, he says, should be steadily continued. The navy offers us, it is declared, the only means of insisting on the Monroe doctrine, and a strong navy is the best guarantee against war. He recommends that provision be made not only for more ships, but for more men. Four thousand additional seamen and 1,000 additional marines should be provided, as well as an increase in officers. After indorsing the naval militia forces the president says:

But in addition we should at once provide for a national naval reserve, organized and trained under the direction of the navy department and subject to the call of the chief executive whenever war becomes imminent. It should be a real auxiliary to the naval seagoing peace establishment and offer material to be drawn on at once for manning our ships in time of war.

The Army.

It is not necessary to increase our army beyond its present size at this time, but it is necessary to keep it at the highest point of efficiency. The individual units who as officers and enlisted men compose this army are, we have good reason to believe, at least as efficient as those of any other army in the entire world. It is our duty to see that their training is of a kind to insure the highest possible expression of power to these units when acting in combination.

A general staff should be created. Promotions should be made solely with regard to the good of the service. Congress ought to provide, the president adds, for field exercises. He continues:

Action should be taken in reference to the militia and to the raising of volunteer forces. Our militia law is obsolete and worthless. The organization and armament of the national guard of the several states, which are treated as militia in the appropriations by the congress, should be made identical with those provided for the regular forces. The obligations and duties of the guard in time of war should be carefully defined and a system established by law under which the method of procedure of raising volunteer forces should be prescribed in advance.

The Merit System.

The president indorses the merit system of making appointments and says:

I recommend the passage of a law which will extend the classified service to the District of Columbia or will at least enable the president thus to extend it. In my judgment all laws providing for the temporary employment of clerks should hereafter contain a provision that they be selected under the civil service law.

It is important to have this system obtain at home, but it is even more important to have it applied rigidly in our insular possessions. The importance of improving the consular service by the passage of new laws is emphasized.

The president then turns to the Indian question. He says:

We should now break up the tribal funds, doing for them what allotment does for the tribal lands—that is, they should be divided into individual holdings. There will be a transition period during which the funds will in many cases have to be held in trust. This is the case also with the lands. A stop should be put upon the indiscriminate permission to Indians to lease their allotments. The effort should be steadily to make the Indian work like any other man on his own ground. The marriage laws of the Indians should be made the same as those of the whites. In the schools the education should be elementary and largely industrial.

Cordial support from congress and people is asked for the St. Louis exposition. The Charleston exposition is commended to the good will of the people. The work of the Pan-American exposition is praised.

It is recommended that the census office as now constituted should be made a permanent government bureau.

The Postal Service.

A tribute is paid to the postal service, and the extension of free rural delivery is commended. The postoffice department should be sustained, the president says, in its efforts to remove the abuses in connection with second class mail matter.

Much attention is paid to the situation in China, and the progress toward the establishment of peace there is recapitulated. Stress is laid on the importance of our continuing to advocate moderation in the dealings with China. The president concludes his message as follows:

The death of Queen Victoria caused the people of the United States deep and heartfelt sorrow, to which the government gave full expression. When President McKinley died, our nation in turn received from every quarter of the British empire expressions of grief and sympathy no less sincere. The death of the Empress Dowager Frederick of Germany also aroused the genuine sympathy of the American people, and this sympathy was cordially reciprocated by Germany when the president was assassinated. Indeed, from every quarter of the civilized world we received at the time of the president's death assurances of such grief and regard as to touch the hearts of our people. In the midst of our affliction we reverently thank the Almighty that we are at peace with the nations of mankind, and we firmly intend that our policy shall be such as to continue unbroken these international relations of mutual respect and good will.

FASHION-TRUE CLOTHING

Honorably-Made and Staunch

FRIEND BROS. CLOTHING

is unique among other kinds. It is care-tailored clothing. The workmanship is of master-treatment by master-hands. The grade of trimmings, so often slighted by job-clothing makers, is one point of excellence with us, but only one. Like the dress of a well-groomed man you cannot pick out one feature in a Friend Bros. garment that overshadows the balance. The result is true harmony and an exceptionally thoroughbred effect. Be sure you find our name in the right hand breast pocket. Leading dealers sell our garments.

Red Lake Falls Gazette.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER
—BY—
PHIL A. KAUFER.

Published weekly. Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the postoffice at Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

OUR SPECIAL EDITION.

The Gazette knowing the unprecedented interest taken in President Roosevelt's message, presented its readers a digest of the document Tuesday, the same day it was read in congress. This afforded our citizens an opportunity of reading the message on the day of its delivery, and demonstrates once more that The Gazette is nothing if not up-to-date and enterprising.

ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE.

No doubt it has disappointed many, who had looked for some thundering pronunciamentos that would reverberate around the world and incidentally in ten pin fashion deal a knock out here and there to industrial conditions that are very conducive to stability and prosperity now. But it is certain that the American people have come to look with favor on conservatism rather than radicalism, and to agree that nothing is so desirable in its extreme as in its moderate phase, as applying to the great waves of influence that may be set in motion by one with the vast powers possessed by a chief executive. So at least have we been led to believe by events in our recent history

President Roosevelt's message is as plain as the man himself. It is easy to read. Easy to understand. It is firm in tone and implies that the writer is deep and determined in his convictions.

The trusts are mentioned by their naked names, and the tariff is not slighted. Plainly he does not favor any general tariff changes, but as plainly "the tariff should be maintained 'where it is needed,'" and the line of development for the removal of the tariff "will be in connection with those of our productions which no longer require all of the support once needed to establish them upon a sound basis and with those others where either because of natural or of economic causes we are beyond the reach of successful competition."

This is clear enough. All can understand it.

He is not radical, and for this the nation may raise its voice in thankfulness.

His message is just right. We do not want a fire brand thrust into our national industrial existence today—rather the fuse that will work slowly and surely while such men as Roosevelt are at the head of our national affairs.

SHERMAN'S ADVICE.

Ten years ago, when the late John Sherman was secretary of state, a young man, the son of one of Sherman's schoolmates, wrote to him for assistance. He said that he had fallen so low in life that there was no place for him but the gutter; that existence had become a burden to him and that he wanted to die. Today this same young man is a prosperous merchant in New York city. He says his position is due to the advice given him by John Sherman and has given permission to publish the letter, which the owner guards more carefully than all his other possessions. Mr. Sherman wrote:

"You say that your life has been a failure and that you are thirty years old, and ready to die. You say that you cannot find work, and that you see no hope in life. You say that your friends do not care to speak to you now.

"Let me tell you that you have reached that point in life when a man must see the very best prospects for your career. You at thirty stand on the bridge that divides youth and manhood. The one is dying, perhaps, but the other will soon burst, young and hopeful, from the ashes, and you will find in yourself a new being—a man. Do not let your discontent kill this new life before it is born.

"Unless you are physically deformed go to work. Go at any honest work if it brings you only $1 a day. Then learn to live within that $1. Pay no more than 10 cents for a meal, and 20 cents for a bed, and save as much of the balance as you can, and with the same intensity as you would save your mother's life. Make the most of your appearance. Do not dress gaudily, but cleanly. Abandon liquor as you would abandon pestilence, for liquor is the curse that wrecks more lives than all the horrors of the world combined.

"If you are a man of brains, as your letter leads me to believe you are, wait until you are in condition to seek your level, and then seek it with courage and tenacity. It may take time to reach it, it may take years, but you will surely reach it—you will turn from the working man into the business, or the professional man, with so much ease that you will marvel at it. But have one idea and aim for it. No ship ever reached its port by sailing for a dozen other ports at the same time.

"Be contented, for without contentment there is no love or friendship, and without those blessings life is, indeed, a hopeless case. Learn to love your books, for there is pleasure, instruction and friendship in books. Go to church, for the church helps to ease the pains of life. Listen to music whenever you can, for music charms the mind and fills a man with lofty ideals.

Cheer up! Never want to die. Why, I am twice your age, and over, and I do not want to die. Get out into this world. Work, eat, sleep, read and talk about the great events of the day, even if you are forced to go among laborers. Take the first honest work you get, and then be steady, patient, industrious, saving, kind, polite, studious, gentle, temperate, ambitious, loving, honest, strong, courageous and contented.

"Be all these, and when thirty years more have passed away, just notice how young and beautiful the world is and how young and happy you are!"

THE POULTRY SHOW.

The remarkable success of the poultry show now being held in Washington indicates that the interest of people in general in this line of business is growing. To some folks it may appear rather a matter of apprehension that the inhabitants of a large city should concern themselves so much with poultry, for whether keeping chickens in a city back yard is cruelty to animals or not, it is certainly cruelty to the neighbors. But as a matter of fact, most of the chicken-fanciers in any city live out in the suburbs where they can give their pets plenty of room, and this is as it should be, both for the fowls and for the human beings.

The improvement of breeds of poultry and other domestic creatures is one of the arts of civilization which ought to be encouraged. There are inventions in modern days which are of dubious importance, for they only fill the world with useless and ugly articles. There is one particular profit in making cheap shoes which are not worth the money, or in putting Grecian ornaments on a stove door where they ought not to be, or in making an honest pine table look oak or cherry until the paint or veneer wears off. But thoroughbred animals, whether fish, flesh or fowl, are a pleasure to the eye and are of some practical use in the world. Moreover, the employment of raising chickens, rabbits and the like is an excellent one for children, for it is absolutely impossible to succeed in this work without paying particular attention to the likings, comforts and needs of the animal. The boy who thinks his favorite bantam is the finest thing that ever walked is less likely to take interest in more dubious entertainment.

For Twenty-one Years

1880 The Old Reliable Drug Store 1901

Has been SANTA CLAUS HEADQUARTERS. He has been here, and left an immense stock of Holiday Goods for 1901, and as he filled the order he remarked that W. A. Schreiter's stock is the best in Red Lake County and by far the best ever seen in the city before AND SANTA CLAUS KNOWS. There is a splendid assortment surely, and down below we give just a hint as to variety this year:

Christmas China and Glass

A visit to our China and Glass Section cannot fail to suggest many appropriate and useful holiday gifts. Our resources are exceptionally complete, many tasteful new things are shown, and the values given are liberal—prices the very lowest.

Choice Table Glass: Goblets, Decanters, Oil Bottles, Clarets, Water Bottles, Sherbet Cups, Oyster Cocktail Glasses. We are closing out odds and ends of table glasses, water goblets, wine glasses, liqueur glasses, etc., at greatly reduced prices.

China Cups and Saucers: Large special assortments of China Cups and Saucers are now on exhibition. All are excellent pieces, most of them beautifully decorated in gold and floral designs. Many very attractive Cups, with gold handles, and Saucers, among them especially charming French and German China, decorated with a spray of flowers, and two shapes in a thin China of soft pure white.

Exceptional values of choice China in various effects—as representative may be mentioned: An extra large size coffee cup of Haviland China with floral decorations, edge prettily finished in a green vine.

Candelabra: Candlesticks, Candelabra, holders, etc., are shown in great and well-chosen varieties. As appointments for receptions and other society events, and as Christmas gifts, the many handsome effects are most appropriate.

Christmas Statuary

Something very new. Beautiful heroic busts, in rich oriental effects, for mantel or piano ornaments. This is something especially attractive.

Christmas Perfumes

Our high grade, popular priced imported perfumes in beeautifully decorated bottles are always desirable gifts. Among our very large assortment are LIGHTNER'S Perfumes. Mrs. Roosevelt's favorites.

Christmas Books

Fancy bindings. Standard authors. Complete sets and individual books. Toy and picture books for the little tots.

Christmas cut glass

We are making a specialty of cut glass, and have a splendid assortment, including water sets, cream sets, vases, etc.

Christmas Toys

Wooden toys, chairs, rockers, bureaus, bed steads, cradles, drums, games, iron toys, etc. Our complete and dizzling assortment is bound to please.

Christmas Miscellany.

French plat toilet mirrors, brass frames. The latest Brunswick and Haviland China pieces in great variety. Something artistic and swell. Egg holders, chocolate sets, Vinegrettes, Pitchers, Match cases, Mantel and Piano vases. English China pieces, the newest creations and ideally beautiful. Dolls

This is Doll Headquarters. From 5c up to $5. The finest line ever shown in Red Lake county.

Shell Ornaments

At prices that agree with the slimest purse. Shells cut for beautiful, lasting, useful ornaments, in pin trays, etc., etc.

Holiday buying has begun much earlier this year than last. You'll find our isles filled every day with discriminating shoppers who have been taught the value and convenience of early selection. In anticipation of doubling the volume of our holiday trade of one year ago we have arranged for you choosing the choicest gathering of holiday merchandise from foreign and domestic marts ever shown in Red Lake county, at prices absolutely the lowest. Visit our holiday bazaar,—everything for gift giving arranged for your convenience.

We make many glowing statements, but they reflect the truth and that's what interests you. We would rather err on the side of conservatism than exaggerate. But when we have a good thing which you will recognize as a good thing and thank us for the telling, we are going to be outspoken. We want you to buy little things here as well as big ones. It's not what we make on a single transaction that concerns us, it's rather your permanent patronage.

Lowest Prices is not a meaningless phrase with us. When you think another house undersells us, in simple fairness compare the qualities. We never want to carry over any part of our holiday stock and our prices are made to sell the goods. Our prices are the lowest in Red Lake County. But our goods must be seen to be appreciated. From the little tot to the great grand-father our great variety reaches and you will find here something to please everyone.

IMMENSE LAND DEAL

GREAT NORTHERN ROAD SELLS 270,000 ACRES IN NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Governor Assured of Support in His Fight Against the Railway Trust. New and Strange Cattle Disease. Lumberjacks Drink Spirits of Nitre With Fatal Results—News of the State in General.

St. Paul, Dec. 1.—F. E. Kenaston of Minneapolis and O. A. Robertson of St. Paul have just completed the purchase of some 270,000 acres of land from the Great Northern Railway company. The land is bought for cash, and the transaction is the largest cash transaction ever made in land in the Northwest.

The lands are located in Aitkin, Carlton, Itasca, Cass, Crow Wing, Wadena, Otter Tail, Becker, Hubbard and Beltrami counties. They are largely meadow lands of the finest quality, and are exceptionally well adapted to dairying and stock raising. These lands have not heretofore been placed on the market, and will undoubtedly find ready purchasers among the hundreds of landseekers going into Central Minnesota.

Mr. Kenaston and Mr. Robertson are president and general manager, respectively, of the Minnesota Land and Colonization company of this city, and the lands will most likely be handled by that company.

ASSURANCES OF SUPPORT.

Two Governors Agree to Help Fight the Railroad Trust.

St. Paul, Nov. 28.—Two states will join with Minnesota in her efforts to defeat the gigantic railway trust. North Dakota, through Governor Frank White, has notified Governor Van Sant that she is in sympathy with the movement in this state to fight the combination. Governor White says he is willing to attend a conference of governors on the subject.

Governor Toole of Montana has also replied to Governor Van Sant's suggestion. Montana's chief executive says the law of his state forbids the consolidation of parallel or competing lines and whoever seeks to create a monopoly or trust is punishable by imprisonment. The attorney general of Montana, he writes, will render assistance in whatever procedure that may be determined upon.

Other states remain to be heard from. If they should not feel disposed to take an active hand in the struggle it is felt that Minnesota, North Dakota and Montana, backed by the assistance of the department of justice at Washington, can nullify the effects sought to be accomplished by the formation of the Northern Securities company.

CATTLE DYING OFF.

Sauk Center Stock Attacked by a New and Strange Disease.

Sauk Center, Minn., Nov. 27.—Farmers are alarmed over a new disease which has developed among cattle in this vicinity and which generally proves fatal. Dr. S. D. Brinchial, veterinary of the state board of health, has just completed an investigation and pronounces the disease to be similar to haemorrhagic septicaemia. It is of a contagious nature and no cure has as yet been found. A half dozen of the finest cows on the Alexander Dryden dairy farm have died. The animals, seemingly well at night, are found dead in the morning. Dr. Brinchial says the disease is of so contagious a nature that even pasture lands where a diseased animal has fed is dangerous for other cattle. He advises the burning of all dead animals.

BOUGHT BY MINNESOTANS.

Valuable Timber Land in Eldorado County, Cal.

Sacramento, Cal., Nov. 27.—John Batcher, Jr., has just returned from Minneapolis where he has been for a few weeks past completing the sale of 20,000 acres of valuable timber land in Eldorado county to a Minneapolis lumber company. It is said the timber will at once be placed upon the market. In order to do this it will be necessary to build a great mill in the forest of sugar and yellow pine and also to construct a railroad, involving an expenditure of at least $1,000,000.

FORT SNELLING GETS TWO.

Miles Issues Order Distributing Light Artillery Batteries.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Lieutenant General Miles, commanding the army, has prepared a general order providing for the distribution of batteries of light artillery as follows: Fort Sheridan, 2 batteries; Fort Snelling, 2; Vancouver Barracks, 2; Presidio of San Francisco, 2; Fort Leavenworth, 3; Fort Riley, 3; Fort Sam Houston, 2; Fort Niobrara, 2; Fort Douglas, 2; Fort Ethan Allen, 2; Fort Hamilton, 1; Fort Myer and Philippine Islands, 3 each.

THOUGHT IT WAS ALCOHOL.

Lumberjacks Drink Spirits of Nitre With Fatal Results.

Duluth, Dec. 2.—Mack Montroy and Dave Cummins, employed in a lumber camp at Split Rock, on the north shore of Lake Superior, found a bottle containing spirits of nitre. Supposing it to be alcohol they diluted it with water and drank it. Montroy died within an hour and Cummins shortly afterwards. Another unknown man drank some of the liquor and is in a serious condition. The bodies of the two dead men were brought to Two Harbors.

FORMERLY AT ST. CLOUD.

Mgr. Zardetti to Be Papal Delegate to Canada.

New York, Dec. 2.—A letter from one of the dignitaries at the Vatican at Rome says Mgr. Falconio, papal delegate to Canada, will surely succeed Martinelli at Washington. Falconio's successor in Canada will be Mgr. Zardetti, titular archbishop of Mocessum, formerly bishop of St. Cloud, Minn.

HOMESTEADER ARRESTED.

Mysterious Murder Near Duluth Being Cleared Up.

Duluth, Nov. 27.—On Nov. 16 Michael Hill, a prosperous Finnish farmer of Carlton county, Minn., was shot dead from ambush near his home, and Jacob France, a neighboring homesteader, has just been arrested by Detective Troyer of Duluth in one of the logging camps of Alger, Smith & Co., where he was working as a woodsman. France is charged with the murder of Hill, and he will be tried in Carlton county. The arrest is based on the reported infatuation of France for Mrs. Hill. France knew the woman in Finland before coming to America. Mr. Hill preceded her here several years, and when she came France followed her, leaving his own family behind. Hill is said to have discovered that France was madly in love with his wife, and had forbade him the house.

Nov. 16 a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hill was married to a Moose Lake man, and the occasion was celebrated in great style. During the afternoon of that day Hill was out in the yard, and a shot fired from the neighboring woods killed him.

SECRETARY ROOT SAYS NO.

Declines to Make Fort Snelling a Permanent Instruction Camp.

Washington, Nov. 27.—Senator Nelson, Archbishop Ireland and Thomas Cochran, the latter representing the Commercial club of St. Paul, called upon Secretary of War Root and presented a memorial favoring the establishing of a camp ground for the instruction and drill of the army and the national guards at Fort Snelling.

The secretary received the communication and listened to the gentlemen for some time, and then informed them that it would be out of the question to select Fort Snelling as one of the four permanent camps for instruction on account of the small space of ground available.

In each of these four camps there must be not less than 20,000 acres. The secretary stated, however, that Fort Snelling would not be abandoned, as the board would without doubt agree that this post is necessary to the service.

VIOLATES FEDERAL LAW.

Minnesota's Attorney General on the Railroad Consolidation.

St. Paul, Nov. 26.—Attorney General Douglas, who has just returned from a hunting trip, suggests proceedings by the federal authorities under the Sherman anti-trust law and the interstate commerce law against the consolidation of the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and the Burlington under the Northern Securities company of New Jersey. Proceedings by the state to annul unused railroad franchises, he thinks, may be of some assistance.

The combination, he says, is a clear violation of the spirit of the Minnesota law prohibiting the consolidation of competing and parallel lines, but not of the letter of the law.

The attorney general suggests an amendment to the federal constitution placing a graduated income and property tax on corporations.

BULLET IN A BOY'S HEAD.

Eleven-Year-Old St. Paul Lad in Serious Condition.

St. Paul, Nov. 27.—Frank Grant, 11 years of age, living at 1139 Logan street, is at the city hospital suffering from a serious injury received through the accidental discharge of a small rifle. The lad was examining the gun, when it went off, the bullet entering his upper lip, just below the nose, and passing upward into his head. Fears that he will lose the sight of his right eye are entertained and his condition is considered critical.

WILL PETITION CONGRESS.

Minnesota Settlers Want Mille Lacs Indians Removed.

Princeton, Minn., Nov. 30.—The people living around Mille Lacs lake will petition congress to have the Mille Lacs Indians removed from the lake country. Since the passage of the act of Jan. 14, 1889, only about 200 of the Indians who were on the Mille Lacs reservation have moved to White Earth, notwithstanding all reasonable means have been used by the government to have them move.

THE TIMBER PROJECTED.

A Milwaukee Brakeman's Head Is Crushed Like an Egg Shell.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 27.—James G. Emerson, a brakeman on the Milwaukee road, was killed while making a coupling in the Winona yards. A timber on one of the cars projected in a manner unnoticed by him and drove his head against the brake rod on the other car, punching a hole in his head and making him unconscious. Death resulted in an hour.

Former Official Found Guilty.

St. Paul, Nov. 26.—The jury in the district court has brought in a verdict of guilty against Walter B. Bourne, former deputy county auditor, who was tried on a charge of false auditing and fraud. The minimum penalty is two years' imprisonment and the maximum is five years, with a fine of $5,000, which may be imposed in the discretion of the court. Bourne's attorneys made a motion to arrest judgment and will appeal to the supreme court.

Dean to Take Schiff's Place.

New York, Dec. 2.—Hon. W. D. Dean of St. Paul has been selected to take the place of Jacob H. Schiff as a member of the board of directors of the Great Northern railroad. Mr. Schiff's resignation is the first among directors holding seats in two or more of the Northwestern railway directorates and it is believed it is to be followed by still others.

Only a Nervous Breakdown.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 29.—According to letters received from him by his relatives in this city, Osborn Diegnan, who accompanied Lieutenant Hobson on the Merrimac at Santiago, is in Ukiah hospital on account of a nervous breakdown, due to overwork in the service. His mental condition is perfect.

E. G. Storaasli returned Saturday from Longmont, Cal., after an absence of over three months. He started from here last September intending to take a trip to the Yellowstone National Park and Colorado on his bicycle, and did succeed in traveling this way over 1000 miles. During his absence he visited all the principal cities of the West, including San Francisco, Tacoma, Portland, Salt Lake City, Ogden and Denver. His health was much improved by the trip. So much so that his plan of settling down in Colorado for its benefit was abandoned, and he has returned to resume his old position as assistant cashier at the Bank of Red Lake Falls.

With the Churches.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

Services at the Presbyterian church Sunday night were cut short on account of the indisposition of the pastor, Rev. Andrew Walker. He is still quite sick.

Dec. 1 was Advent Sunday, the beginning of the ecclesiastical year in the Catholic church. There are four Sundays in Advent. These are intended as a preparation for Christmas as Lent is a preparation for Easter. In one form or other it is recognized by the Roman, Greek, Lutheran and Anglican churches.

Dec. 1 is the day of St. Eloy, patron saint of Bolongo on Noyon, and of goldsmiths and all other metal workers. In pictures he is represented as a farrier with a horse's leg in his hand.

Dec. 3 is the day of St. Francis Xavier, patron saint and apostal of India, and one of the greatest names in the history of missionary enter-interprise. Among his pupils when a teacher was Ignatius Loyola, founder of the Jesuits.

Dec. 4 is the day of St. Barbara, patran of several German and French cities; also of fortifications and firearms, as well as armor and gunsmiths. She is also invoked by European people as a protector against lightning and explosions.

Dec. 6 is the day of St. Nicholas, patron saint of Russia. He is also patron of the young. Santa Claus is a contraction of St. Nicholas, but why he is especially the saint of the little folks may, perhaps, most safely be left in the convenient obscurity of conjecture.

The ladies of St. Mary's church netted $62.25 at the Thanksgiving dinner and supper. Meals were served at the nominal price of 25c. and yet the tables were loaded with good things, while the fair young ladies of the congregation acting as waitresses, saw that the patrons were well supplied. The pastor, Rev. Ansgar, has very enthusiastically thanked the workers, and the citizens of all denominations whose generous patronage made the affair such success.

A junior band is being organized by Prof. Frick, who will drill the cadets with a view to their eventual promotion to the regular city organization.

Gold.

The specific gravity of gold is 19.50—that is, it weighs nineteen and a half times as much as its own bulk of water. The ductility and malleability of this metal are equaled by no other. By ductility is meant the property of allowing itself to be drawn out into a wire and by malleability its property of flattening without splitting under the hammer.

Make Some One Happy.

Charles Kingsley thus counseled a friend: "Make it a rule and pray to God to help you to keep it never, if possible, to lie down at night without being able to say, 'I have made one human being at least a little wiser, a little happier or a little better this day.' You will find it easier than you think and pleasanter."

Bowlegged Sailors.

Sailors are a bowlegged class. An old salt always walks as if he were on the deck of a ship, and he never takes great strides like a landsman. He is used to having to walk great distances, in his imagination, on the quarter deck, and he can't get rid of the habit of making the most of his promenade.

The Sponge.

The sponge reproduces its kind mainly by eggs. In each animal are contained both the male and the female elements, and it throws out the ova to be hatched in the water. At first the young are free swimming, and afterward they attach themselves to convenient spots and grow.

THE LADY OF LYNN

By SIR WALTER BESANT

Copyright, 1900, by Sir Walter Besant

wait here for a month. I shall starve you out. Do you hear? I will set fire to the thatch and burn you out! You shall come down!"

So he raved and raged. Meantime the two chairmen, who were his own servants, stood pole in hand, one in front of the house and one behind, to prevent an escape, but this was impossible, because the room, as you have heard, had no other window than a small, square opening in the roof, in which was fitted a piece of coarse, common glass.

"Jack," she told me, "when he talked of setting fire to the thatch, I confess I trembled, because, you see, my knife would not help me there, and, indeed, I think he would have done it, because he was like one that has gone mad with rage. He was like a mad bull. He stormed; he raged; he cursed and swore; he called me all the names you ever heard of, such names as the sailors call their sweethearts when they are in a rage with them, and then he called me all the endearing names, such as loveliest of my sex, fairest nymph, tenderest beauty. What a man! What a man!"

Meantime she made no answer whatever, and the darkness and the silence and the obstinacy of the girl were driving the unfortunate lover to a kind of madness, and I know not what would have happened.

"Molly," he said, "willy nilly, down you come. I shall tear down the thatch. I would burn you out, but I would not spoil your beauty. I shall tear down the thatch, and my men shall carry you down."

Then Molly made answer.

"I have a knife in my possession. Do not think that I am afraid to use it. The first man who lays hands on me I will kill, whether it is you or your servants."

"That we shall see. Look you, Molly, you are only a merchant's daughter, and I am a gentleman. Do you think I value that compared with marrying you? Not one whit. When we are married, I will buy more land. I will be the greatest landowner of the whole county. Sir Robert will make me sheriff. I will go into parliament. Molly, he will make me a peer. Come down, I say."

But she spoke no more.

Then he lost control of himself and for awhile stamped and swore, threatened and cursed. "You will have it, then? Here, John, go and look for a ladder. There's always a ladder in the back yard. Put it up against the thatch. Tear it down. Make a hole in the roof. Tear off the whole roof."

The man propped his chair pole against the door and went round to look for the ladder and to obey orders.

"So," Molly told me, "I was besieged. Mr. Rising was below, but I had my knife, and he was afraid to venture up the steps. I heard the men clumping about outside. I heard them plant the ladder and climb up. Now, a countryman who understands a thatch is able to tear it off very quickly, either to make or mend a hole or to tear down the roof altogether, and I feared that I must use my knife seriously. Was ever woman more barbarously abused? Well, I waited. By the quick tearing away of the straw I saw that the fellow on the ladder knew how to thatch a rick or a cottage. In a few minutes there would be a hole big enough for half a dozen men to enter. Jack," her cheek flushed and her eye brightened, "God forgive me, but I made up my mind the moment that man stepped within the room to plunge my knife into his heart."

However, this last act of defense was not necessary.

"Master," cried the postboy, who was waiting with the chaise—"master, here be men on horseback, galloping. I doubt they are coming after the lady."

Tom Rising stepped to the door and looked down the road. The day was already beginning to break. He saw in the dim light a company of horsemen galloping along the road. It was a bad road, and there had been rain, so that the horses went heavily. They were very near. In a few moments they would be upon him. He looked at the chaise. He made one more effort.

"Molly," he said, "come down quick. There is just time. Let us have no more fooling."

Again she made no reply. Knife in hand, with crimson cheek and set lips, she watched the hole in the thatch and the man tearing it away.

Tom Rising swore again most blasphemously. Then, seeing that the game was lost, he loosened his sword in its scabbard and stepped into the middle of the road.

CHAPTER VII.

THE PUNISHMENT.

I MUST admit that in the conduct of this affair Lord Fylingdale showed both coolness and resolution. The news that the heiress of Lynn had been abducted spread immediately through the rooms. The whole company flocked to the doors, where Lord Fylingdale stood calm and without passion, while beside him the old captain stamped and cursed the villains unknown.

He called Molly's chairmen. What had those fellows seen? They said that they were waiting by orders; that another chair stood before them at the door, the bearers of which were strangers to them, a fact which at this crowded season occurred constantly; that a gentleman whose name they knew not, but whom they had seen in the streets and at the assembly, mostly drunk, had come out hastily and spoken to these chairmen; that his lordship himself had handed the lady into the chair and closed the doors, to their astonishment, because they were themselves waiting for the lady, and that the chair was carried off instantly, leaving them in bewilderment, not knowing what to do.

He asked them next for a closer description of the gentleman: He was young, it appeared. He was red in the face. He looked masterful. He cursed the chairmen in a very free and noble manner. One of the chairmen gave him his sword to wear, which is not permitted in the assembly. He was swearing all the time, as if in great wrath.

"My lord," a gentleman interrupted, "the description fits Tom Rising."

"Has Mr. Rising been seen in the assembly this evening?"

"He was not only here, but he danced with the lady."

"Is he here now? Let some one look for Mr. Rising."

There was no need to look for him, because the rooms, even the cardroom, was now empty, all the people being crowded about the doors.

"Where does he lodge? Let some one go to his lodgings."

"With submission, my lord," said another. "It is not at his lodgings that he will be found. After the assembly he goes to the Rose tavern, where he drinks all night."

"OH, GENTLEMEN, GENTLEMEN!" SHE CRIED.

"Let some one go to the Rose tavern, then, and quickly. Captain Crowle, we will go to the Crown while inquiries are made. Gentlemen, there is great suspicion that an abominable crime hath been committed and this young lady hath been forcibly carried away for the sake of her fortune. I take blame to myself for not making sure that I was placing her in her own chair. This is my business. But I ask your help for the honor of the spa and the company."

A dozen gentlemen stepped forward and offered their help and their swords, if necessary. Among them was Colonel Lanyon.

"Come, then; let us adjourn to the Crown and make inquiries. Be of good cheer, captain. We will find out which way they took. If they have nothing but the chair to carry her away, we can easily catch them up."

"I know my girl," said the captain. "It is not one man who can daunt her, nor will a dozen men force her to marry against her will. If they try, there will be murder."

"If we cannot find the way they took, we must scour the country."

At the gates of the garden they learned that the keeper had seen the chair go out and observed that it was closely followed by a gentleman whom he could only describe by his height, which was taller than the average. Now, Tom Rising was six feet at least.

At the Crown, in Lord Fylingdale's room, they held a brief consultation, after which the gentlemen who had volunteered their help went out into the town to make inquiries.

In a few minutes they began to return. It was ascertained that Tom Rising was not at his lodging, nor was he at the Rose tavern, nor could he be found at any of the taverns used by gentlemen. This strengthened the suspicion against him. Then one remembered the strange words of the early morning in which Tom Rising had promised his friends that he would before the next day was done be the richest man in the county—rich enough to play with them until he had stripped every man as bare as Adam. Those words were taken as mere drunken ravings. But now they seemed to have had a meaning. Where was Tom Rising?

Another discovery was that of the two men belonging to the chair in which Molly was carried off. They were found in one of the low taverns by the riverside drinking. One of them was already too far gone to speak; the other, with a stronger head, was able to give information, which he was quite ready to do. A gentleman, he said, had engaged the chair and had given them a guinea to drink if they would suffer him to find his own chairmen. His description of the gentleman corresponded with that already furnished. He spoke of a tall gentleman with a flushed face and rough manner of speech. He knew nothing more except that two men, strangers to himself, had taken the chair and carried it off.

"Gentlemen," said his lordship, "there can be, I fear, no doubt. The abduction of Miss Molly has been designed and attempted by Mr. Rising. Fortunately he cannot have gone very far. It remains for us to find the road which he has taken."

They fell to considering the various roads which lead out of the town. There is the highroad to Ely Cambridge and London, but to carry a chair with an unwilling lady in it on the highroad, frequented by night as well as by day with travelers of all kinds and strings of pack horses, would be ridiculous. There was the road which led to the villages on the east side of the Wash. There was also the road to Swaffham and Norwich.

"I am of opinion," said one of the gentlemen, "that he has fixed on some lonely place not far from Lynn where he can make her prisoner until she complies with his purpose and consents to marry him."

Captain Crowle shook his head. "She would never consent," he said. "My girl is almost as strong as any man and quite as resolute. There will be murder if this villain attempts violence."

Just then the landlady of the Crown threw open the door and burst in. "Oh, gentlemen, gentlemen," she cried, "I have found out where they are gone! Ride after them! Ride after them, quick, before worse mischief is done. I have ordered all the horses in the stables to be saddled. There are eight. Quick, gentlemen! Ride after them!"

"Quick, quick!" said his lordship. "Where are they? Where are they?" The captain sprang up.

"They are on their way. They cannot be there yet."

"But where? Where?"

"Mr. Rising ordered a post chaise to wait for him at 10 o'clock."

"He left the gardens," said his lordship, "about that time. Go on."

"He ordered it at the Duke's Head. The postboy told the hostler his orders. He was to wait for Mr. Rising at the Traveler's Rest on the way to Wootten."

"The Traveler's Rest? What kind of place is that?"

"It is a bad place, my lord—a villainous place on a lonely road up and down which there is little traveling. It is a resort of peddlers, tinkers and the like, gypsies, vagabonds, footpads and rogues. It is no place for a young lady."

"It is not, indeed," said one of the gentlemen.

"Gentlemen," the landlady repeated, "ride after him! Ride after them! Oh, the sweet Miss Molly!"

"Are the horses ready?"

"They will be ready in a minute."

"Gentlemen, there are, you hear, eight horses. Captain Crowle will take one. I will take another. The remaining six are at your disposal. I shall feel honored if you will accompany me, but on one condition, if you will allow me to make a condition. The man will fight, I suppose?"

"Tom Rising," one of them replied, "would fight the devil."

"One could desire nothing better. The condition is that when we overtake Mr. Rising you will leave him to me. That is understood?"

"My lord, we cannot, by your leave, allow your valuable life to be at the hazard of a duel with a man both desperate and reckless."

"I shall take care of myself, I assure you. Meantime, if I fall, I name Colonel Lanyon to succeed me, and after him, should he, too, unhappily fall, you will yourselves name his successor. Gentlemen, we must rescue the lady, and we must punish the abductor. I hear the horses. Come."

CHAPTER VIII.

THE DUEL.

THE postboy, foreseeing events which might require a clear stage, warily drew his chaise off the road, which here widened into a small area trodden flat by many feet, into the grassy field at the side, and stood at the horses' heads in readiness.

The men on the ladder, who were pulling away at the thatch with zeal, stopped their work. "What's that, George?" asked one. "Seems like horses. They're coming after the young lady likely." So he slid down the ladder, followed by the other, and they ran round to the front, seizing their poles in case of need. At elections and on the occasion of a street fight the chairman's pole has often proved a very efficient weapon. Handled with dexterity, it is like a quarter staff, but heavier, and will not only stun a man, but will brain him or break arm, leg or ribs for him.

"For my part," Molly told me, "I saw them suddenly desist from their work, though in a few minutes the hole in the thatch would have been large enough to admit of a man's passing through. I was waiting within, knife in hand. Do you think I would have suffered one of those fellows to lay hand upon me? Well, in the midst of their work they stopped, they listened, and they stepped down the ladder. What did this mean? There was no window to the loft except a single frame of glass with half a dozen small diamond shaped panes, too high up to serve any purpose except to admit a little light. I put my head through the hole in the thatch, and I heard—imagine my joy—the clatter of horses' hoofs and the voices of the horsemen. And then I knew and was quite certain that

Gentlemen—I am pleased to inform you that Matt J. Johnson's 6088 has done wonders for me. I was taken with a severe attack of muscular rheumatism that confined me to the house for two months. I went to Crocker & Hawley's store on crutches and Mr. Hawley gave me a bottle of 6088 and wanted me to try it, as he knew I had been suffering with rheumatism for the past three years and I would be a severe test for the remedy. I had not taken half a bottle when I went to work and when I had finished the bottle I was entirely free from rheumatism. Thanking you and your agents, Messrs. Crocker & Hawley, for putting me in the way of a cure, I am yours very truly,

EMARDVILLE.

Svere Jacobson lost a young heifer Sunday. Disease, blackleg.

M. Swanson, of Garnes, was here last week dehorning cattle.

It is reported that Sam Keiv and Nick Peterson have both sold their farms.

Brede Bredeson departed for the pineries Tuesday, where he will work during the winter.

Rev. K. Olson, of St. Hilaire, delivered a sermon in Swedish at the schoolhouse in district 214 Sunday afternoon.

Arvor Bugge, Anders Lee and Ole Hagen last Friday departed for Turtle Mountain, N. D, on a combined pleasure and business trip.

E. C. Anderson returned to Park River, N. D. Friday last. Before his departure he listed his quarter section for sale with M. O. Sortedahl.

Odin Jacobson conducted service at the church Thanksgiving day in the forenoon. The Young Ladies Sewing Society served free lunch and then an auction sale was had on different articles, Harold Bugge acting as auctioneer. Everything sold for a good price. $34 was the sum netted.

The Courier in its talk about P. W. Maybe, the enterprising Thief River Falls attorney who appeared in behalf of the Emardville ditch kickers, says he won out. Well, we can't see how he won out, as it was the petitioners who recommended that the petition should be rejected as there is lots of time to take up and file another petition before spring, and the County Commissioners said that his appearing did not cut any figure as to their decision. As to his receiving the Republican nomination for county attorney this did not give him much recommedation. Attorney Thos. Germo would be a much more acceptable man for the position.

Saw Death Near.

"It often made my heart ache," writes L. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn., "to hear my wife cough until it seemed her weak and sore lungs would collapse. Good doctors said she was so far gone with Consumption that no medicine or earthly help could save her, but a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery and persistent use of this excellent medicine saved her life." It is absolutely guaranteed for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma and all Throat and Lung diseases. 50c and $1.00 at W. A. Schreiter. Trial bottles free.

NORDEN.

Miss Olga Gravlie returned Friday from Ada, where she had visited her sister.

The Ladies' Society's auction at N. E. Rodigaard's, Thanksgiving was well attended and a success.

Our teacher, Miss Thresa McCaffery left for St. Hilaire Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving with friends and relatives.

The Braten family has moved back to their farm in Sanders. They have for some time occupied R. Oens' farm in this town.

Miss Mary Amunson is visiting with her parents. Miss Amunson has been residing in Thief River Falls the past three years.

O. Nesja, who has been ailing for some time, is reported to be seriously ill. Mr Nesja is now in Crookston seeking medical treatment.

No chance to kick on our climate. It won't be necessary to go to the Pacific coast if our northwest can offer winters like this one has been up to the present.

A large meteor was seen here on the eve of the 28th, about 9 o'clock. To those that did not see the meteor itself, its light looked like a great flash of lightning. It passed from the southeast to the northwest and seemed to be quite close to our planet and a hissing sound was heard as it flashed by. These strange visits from another world naturally fill the beholder with an unspeakable wonder and awe.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Hunt of Lima Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite. Try it. Only 50cts. Guaranteed. For sale by W. A. AUDITOR'S NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF PETITION.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake. } SS.

Whereas, the petition of M. C. Harlow and others, bearing date the eleventh day of November, 1901, and on file in my office, praying for the establishment of a public ditch along the route proposed herein, has been filed in my office.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the said Board of County Commissioners, at their regular session to be held at the auditor's office in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county, on the 9th day of January, 1902 at 1 o'clock p. m.

A true copy of said petition is as follows, to-wit.

To the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for the expense of, the construction of the ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a ditch along the following described route in the towns of North and Rocksbury in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said public ditch is as follows:

Commencing at the point 20 feet north of where the north boundary line of townships 153 N R 43 west intersects the South westerly boundary line of the diminished Red Lake Indian reservation, thence running along the following route:

Begin parallel to and 20 feet distant northerly from said township boundary line to a point 30 feet easterly from section line between sections 33 and 34 of township 154 N. range 43 w., thence southerly parallel to section line between sections 3 and 4 of township 153 N R. 43 W and 30 feet distant easterly therefrom to a point due east of the ¼ section corner between said sections 3 and 4 thence west along quarter section line to and terminating at Red Lake river as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred and Fifty-eight (258) of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1901, and subsequent amendments thereto.

Dated Nov. 11th, 1901.

About Ozone.

Many people talk about ozone without so much as knowing what ozone is. There is a prevalent idea that it is something you get at the sea and that it is good for the lungs. What that something is, however, few people have sufficient curiosity to inquire. Ozone is what chemists call an allotropic form of oxygen—that is to say, it is oxygen in a highly active and concentrated condition. In ordinary pure air ozone exists, but only in what chemists call "traces." Larger amounts are found in ocean and mountain air. It instantly disappears when brought in contact with decaying matter, dissipating itself, as it were, in the act of oxidizing that matter.

Ozone is known to occur more plentifully during thunderstorms, and we have, of course, the analogy of its being artificially produced from oxygen by electrical discharges in the laboratory. On the body ozone is believed to act as a stimulant; hence the popular notion of its beneficial effects as experienced by the sea, but in any greater amount than mere traces it is a violent irritant. One authority goes the length of asserting that it is doubtful whether it is beneficial to animal life at all.

Colored Swedes.

A little Swedish monthly magazine published in New York city requested its readers a short time ago to send in accounts of the experiences they had when they first arrived in this country. Here is the prize specimen: "In my unsophisticated days I once started out to call upon a girl I had known in the old country. I was told that she lived at Madison avenue and —— street. When I reached that corner, I was in doubt which house to try, but I finally went up the steps of one that faced on the avenue and rung the bell. A girl came to the door. 'Does Miss Nelson live here?' I asked as politely as I could.

"'I don't know any such person,' she answered, and I was turning away when she called after me, 'Is she white?'

"That irritated me. 'Did you ever know any Swedes who were colored?' I asked.

"'Well, I have seen some green Swedes,' was her retort, and I did not continue the conversation.

LITERARY WORK.

The subject for next Friday's debate as announced last week is: Resolved "That Cuba should be annexed to the United States." The Athenian debaters are: Lulu Fletcher, Norman Schreiter and Drew Marshall; Spartan debaters: Pauline Nelland, Maggie Kaus and William Peppin. The Athenians chose the affirmative side.

Owing to the fact that some of the numbers were necessarily omitted, the program last Wednesday was rather short.

Next Friday the H. S. O. elects its officers for the next term.

SCHOOL IN GENERAL

Well! Well! Well! We'll have to do something to get the girls out of bed early enough for school in the morning.

Don't miss the Christmas program.

How we all like our new privilege. When we come to school now we must take our seats in the High School room and not visit in the Laboratory, Library, etc.

New pupils coming in necessitates the changing of a few seats.

Did you notice the flourish of red bandanas during the past week?

A pull at the pocket,
And the rag is clear out,
A flourish of red
And a blow at the snout.

A red bandana
Of enormous size,
But of its purpose
No one would surmise.

A jolly glee club
Composed of eight boys,
Has for its emblem—
Well we won't make a noise.

And now you all know
The very true reason,
Why the flourish of red
In the school at this season.

Let us see you out at next Friday's debate.

Don't miss the Christmas program, Friday, December 13.

INCIDENTS.

If a certain person had not tried to slip a squash in his pocket Tuesday noon no disturbance would have been caused.

Wednesday a rush was made for the door by some of the girls, when the air tight stove began to show faint signs of "blowing up."

While wending its way across the school room a note was spied by the teacher and speedily dumped in the waste basket.

The H.S. room has been very quiet? of late.

PERSONALS.

Frank Brady recommenced work in the High School Monday.

John Pahlen began school Tuesday and is taking up the Latin course.

We are all very sorry to learn that on account of ill-health, Miss Rose Harren has been obliged to drop her school work.

CONTRIBUTION.

"The Haunted Mill."

By
ROSA HARREN.

One lovely evening in July about ten o'clock I sat by my window trying to see if I could count the stars.

When suddenly I heard a loud noise, it seemed as if it was in the old mill not far from the house. As I sat listening it grew fainter and fainter until at last I could hear it no more.

What could it be? No one lived there and the mill was a dark, dreary place where no one was likely to go for rest, because it had been reported all over the country that a murder was committed there and that it was haunted.

I sat waiting to see if I could hear any more noise. when suddenly a light appeared in the old mill window. I saw it for a few moments, then it vanished out of sight and all was dark again.

Could any one have gone in the old mill or was it really haunted?

I began to feel nervous and afraid and too frightened to arouse the rest of the family and sat there almost afraid to move.

It seemed as though hours passed in those few moments of expectation. Finally I saw a tall figure coming slowly out of the mill toward my window.

I was just about to scream when I saw the form moving into the front door of our house. In desperation I started down stairs to awaken father and tell him what I saw.

Just as I reached the foot of the stairs I met the housemaid. She asked me what I was doing about at that time of night.

When I told her my story she laughed and said that it was she whom I had seen coming out of the mill. Someone had left the mill gate open and as its swinging back and forth had annoyed her she had just gone down to close it. The light from the lamp in her room was thrown on the mill window and that was the light I saw.

I returned to my room laughing at my cowardice yet rather disappointed at not having found a real ghost.

WOES OF FOSSTON

ONE OF THE TOWN'S LEADING INDUSTRIES MAY PULL OUT.

PROPRIETORS OF THE WOOLEN MILLS ARE LOOKING FOR NEW LOCATION.

The Fosston Woolen Mill, which was established at Fosston three years ago by Messrs. Stadsvold, the Fosston miller, Lewis Lohn, cashier of the Bank of Fosston, and Lewis Larson, president of the First State bank, is looking for a new location. Power, drainage and transportation are the three items seriously considered in this connection. Fosston cannot furnish what the company wants.

The Thirteen Towns, Fosston's bright newspaper, has a strong editorial in last week's issue relative to the subject. From it we glean that $48,000 has been invested in the plant. The proprietors want to enlarge the plant by half. The Thirteen Towns continues: On January 1st, 1899, it became incorporated. Starting with a small business at first it has been reaching out and extending. During three years of business it has paid out and distributed in the village of Fosston and vicinity, as wages and for material, the sum of $90,000, of which amount nearly $40,000 was distributed during the past year. In other words it has distributed in the three years of its existence a sum of money equal to one-half of the assessed valuation of the village of Fosston, for the year 1901, both real and personal. Thirty-four operatives are employed and on the regular pay roll. Some of these are heads of families, others contribute to the support of families of which they are members. Counting those dependent on the heads of families for support, excluding the owners themselves, as they have other resources to fall back on, there are one hundred persons in Fosston whose support comes from the woolen mill.

And yet, surprising as it may seem, an indifference, amounting almost to a spirit of antagonism and hostility has arisen in certain quarters towards this institution. What cause there is for this feeling is certainly hard to account for on any rational grounds. It is confined to a very few persons, in fact only one or two, yet a continual fostering and nursing of this feeling might lead to more serious consequences than even the person responsible for them would imagine."

The Modern Woman's Page.

The woman's page is a comparatively recent feature in the newspaper field, but the comparison of a woman's page of today with that of a few years back makes one wonder how it ever lived to outgrow its swaddling clothes, for the back numbers look as if the horse editor had made it up in his spare time, and it was about as interesting as a patent medicine circular, and some papers still retain this antiquated form of effort and misname it.

The woman's page to-day, to take the Pioneer Press for example, is about as lively a piece of journalism as can be imagined. They maintain a special corps of woman writers and editors who are in touch with the women of the Northwest and are amply qualified to pass on the events of interest to them. The special articles are prepared by experts who are an authority on their line.

Club news, civic improvement societies, and all the various town topics of this character come in for their full share of attention. A careful perusal of a few numbers would surprise anybody as to the amount of really helpful matter contained therein.

All this is in addition to the regular fashion articles and society news, which departments are maintained separately.

RED LAKE FALLS BUTTER TAKES FOURTH PRIZE AT ST. CLOUD.

C. F. Johnson, the Red Lake Falls butter maker, has won more laurels. On Saturday he was notified that at the State Dairymen's Convention recently held at St. Cloud, his butter received fourth place, scoring 95½. There were 200 competitors. Mr. Johnson took the butter at random from the product and shipped it to St. Cloud for scoring, little dreaming that he would receive 4th prize. In competition with the butter-makers of the entire state, the results speak for themselves. Minnesota as a state holds first place—Red Lake Falls is therefore only 4th in a country with a population of 76,295,220.

GUERARD GOES FREE

JURY OF TWELVE HEAR THE CASE AND SAY "NOT GUILTY."

TROUBLE BETWEEN COMPLAINING WITNESS AND DEFENDANT AN OLD SCORE.

Saturday before Judge Toupin and twelve good men and true acting as jurors, the celebrated case State of Minnesota vs. J. J. Guerard was pulled off. There appears to be an old grudge between the complaining witness, Sam Godhout, and the defendant, and the jurors could see no grounds for convicting the defendant and agreed on a verdict of "not guilty" without a moment's hesitation.

The Gazette gave its readers a sketch of the case last week. Godbout, in the employ of the East Grand Forks Lumber Company, was cleaning dead head logs from the Clearwater river, and in the pursuit of his duties, coming to Guerard's farm, he claims that Guerard aiming a gun at him, threatened his life. Robt. H. McCoy, president of the company, stood as his surety, and the costs of $34 95 fall upon McCoy. County Attorney F. A. Grady appeared for the state and Chas. E. Boughton for the defendant. Mr. Grady's foresight in insisting on bonds saved the county a n ut little sum, and he is entitled to credit for thus subserving t e county's best interests.

How to Make Hens Lay in Cold Weather.

A New York chemist gives a recipe which he says will make hens lay eggs regularly through the coldest winter:

The recipe includes a pound of powered red albumen, mixed with a pound of red or black pepper, ground fine. Two teaspoons of this should be added to a quart of half wheat bran and half corn meal, enough hot water being added to dampen the feed but not to make it sticky.

A quart of this hot feed should be given to each twelve hens every morning, and a quart of whole grain, wheat or corn or the two mixed, every evening. After two weeks of this kind of feeding, the chemist says, the hens will begin laying, and will lay all winter.

One man who keeps 100 light Brahmas secured an average of seven dozen eggs each day all winter. Another poultry raiser says that he has secured more than 200 eggs each day from 250 hens.

The feed is very cheap, as a pound of pepper may be purchased for 30 cents, and a pound of albumen at any drug store for 60 cents. This will feed fifty hens for a month.

The Best Plaster.

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. When troubled with lame back or pains in the side or chest, give it a trial and you are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism. One application gives relief. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

NEW ROAD ASSURED

GULF & MANITOBA RAILROAD FROM DULUTH TO KANSAS CITY.

Detroit, Mich. Dec. 6.—Joseph B. Moore of this city, who returned from England a week ago, placed $21,000,000 of 5 per cent thirty-year gold bonds in that country.

This means that the projected Gulf & Manitoba railroad from Duluth to Kansas City, 700 miles, will be constructed.

The branch from Des Moines to Kansas City, 200 miles, will be constructed at once, the remainder in the spring.

Mr. Moore is treasurer of the construction company.

Equally True Here.

From the Little Falls Herald.

No argument based on local jealousy or fear that some particular part of the city is going to grow, should stand in the way of improvements that will help the city. No part of the city can grow without helping all the city. Any increase in population will not be confined to any particular locality, and even if it were, the things which come from larger growth would be shared by all. It is time for Little Falls to get rid of the spirit of petty jealousy between sections of the city. No good ever came from it.

FOR CHRISTMAS SHOPPERS

Red Lake Falls Stores the Holiday Headquarters For Entire County.

The Stocks Here Unprecedentedly and Dazzlingly Magnificent.

The merchants of Red Lake Falls have good reason to pride themselves on the stocks of goods carried as a matter of course to meet the growing demands of a growing constituency. But it is at such times as these at the approaching holidays, when the attention of even the most casual observer must be attracted by the display of seasonable merchandise, artistically set forth in the local stores.

A merely superficial inspection will explain why Red Lake Falls has become the shopping headquarters for the entire county, but especially for the Holiday Trade.

The buying of Christmas presents has been reduced by many to a science. But it is a hard enough task at the best, even where the dazzling array of goods of all descriptions and pric s as seen in the Red Lake Falls stores, comes to one's aid. Few cities in Northern Minnesota have finer stores than Red Lake Falls. On the other hand, in point of complete stocks and elegantly up isolated places of business, we end, except in a few instances, in cities with perhaps three or four times our population.

And when it com s to holiday goods—it will pay the shopper to travel many miles to see the dazzling array presented here.

W. A. Schreiter, who has for twenty one years catered to the holiday trade, literally "ble, himself" this year. "The Old Reliable DrugStore" is a veritable paradise for the holiday shopper. He is making a specialty of cut glass, new up-to date statuary, fancy china, and th ngs for the children. His place is a feast for the eyes. The vast assortment of cut glass is a great satisfaction to the buyer who wants something strictly up to date; the statuary is another evidence of Mr. Schreiter's determination to keep abreast of the times, while the thousand and one fine things in evidence makes one admire his courage in putting so much money into a holiday stock.

The individuality of the merchants manifests itself in the selections he offers his customers. At one store it is this novelty, at another that.

Theo. LaBissoniere, the general merchant, has among his Christmas offerings a fine line of cups and saucers, bread and cake plates, novelties in tooth-pick holders, match safes, cameo boxes. He offers fine decorated cake plates, richly tinted at 30c. Seven piece salad sets at 85 cents, also very fine parlor lamps worth $7.50 for $4.50; $3.00 lamps for $1.50, and a fine assortment of stationery, celluloid goods, neck ties, etc.

Almost the entire stock of A. M. Anderson & Bros., the liberal house-furnishers, could be utilized for Christmas gifts. From the dainty sofa pillow and luxuriant oriental rug to the rich mohogany cabinets and upright pianos, there is the artistic and practical combined.

Helm & Berthoa have some cutters that would make swell Christmas presents.

While one would not look to the average hardware store for holiday goods, our Red Lake Falls stores are exceptions to the rule. Frank E. Hunt, who has been in business here for over twenty-one years, and who has one of the finest hardware establishments in the Northwest, is this year making a specialty of ranges, sewing machines, carpet sweepers, wringers, air guns, sleds, skates, pocket knives, scissors, Roger's table knives, forks and spoons, carving sets, Rochester nickel plated ware, Delft blue and white ware, bird cages, etc.

H. F. Krueger knows that although most people have a lot of Christmas tree ornaments left over a few new ones brighten up a tree wonderfully, and has laid in a great assortment. His line of fruits, nuts and candies will repay inspection.

O'Brien Bros. have earned a reputation for the completeness of their stock; and whatever in the hardware line is appropriate for Christmas offerings, they may be expected to have it. So their carving sets, skates, sleds, steel wire doll buggies, cutlery, and nickel plated ware furnishes a fine line of articles a feature of which is their practicability. In Red Lake Falls one should not forget the hardware stores when making holiday purchases.

Garceau Bros., general merchants, have an immense stock, and among their staple articles one can find many beautiful gift articles. What you do not find the obliging clerks will unearth for you. Among the nice things in evidence are a new line of fancy shield ties, 25c to 65c. An elegant line of mufflers from 25c to $1 25. Fancy and initial, silk, linen and lace handkerchiefs; kid gloves, patent leather and felt slippers; sofa pillows; covers, silk waists; men's genuine sealskin caps: special $3 25.

Wm. Findelsen, the general farm implement dealer, says he has sold more than one cutter for Christmas, and has a nice line on hand now.

J. M. Allard says for Christmas sweet-meats and bon-bons his store will be headquarters. "I will tell you a secret," says the pretty waitress smilingly. "We have a list of the names of popular Red Lake Falls girls, and opposite them we have written the name of their favorite candy. This makes it very easy for the young man who is trying to ingratiate himself with some particular girl, for girls like to have their taste remembered. The young man who sends a girl a generous box of her favorite candy has made a large stride toward obtaining the friendship of that girl."

Dropping into Foldoe's jewelry store the shopper would be shown dainty sets of silver forks and spoons in the coronial and other popular patterns, and some beautiful silver goblets and loving cups. Novelties in the way of little white necklets of enamel or moonstones and white beads are also shown and these are a popular for gifts as are the stick pins, studs, watches, rings, etc., in which lines his stock is replete. Mr. Foldoe's splendid engraving facilities come into excellent play, too.

The Racket store will be a favorite mecca for Christmas shoppers. In fact their whole stock is a delight to the holiday shopper. Dainty pieces of china, fancy dishes, kerchiefs, rugs, gloves, toys, candies, dolls, etc., are a few of the attractive things. The main feature is the low prices.

Heidgerken & Reichert are this year making a specialty of Indian baskets, birch bark and celluloid goods, gift books, perfumes, etc. Some of the daintiest things imaginable are found here, and the artistic predominates. Heidgerken & Reichert's store already presents a bower of beauty, and the early shoppers are finding many things to gratify their tastes and purses.

Bungs & Co., whose store room is 50x 80 feet, always make a specialty of catering to the Christmas trade, and their assortment this year is in line with the completeness of this store in all of its varied departments. Among the specialties this year are attractive holiday offerings, in neckwear, gloves, linen, silk and lace handkerchiefs, mufflers, perfumery and toilet articles, seasonable fruits and toilet delicacies, cut glass, silver plate, artistic table lamps, china: English, French, German, Japanese, and domestic. Toys, all kinds; childrens' books; art needlework materials; ladies' furs of all kinds.

H. W. Anderson, graduate optician and jeweler, successor to J. Q. Adams, has with characteristic enterprise, laid in a fine stock of seasonable goods. On the list are friendship hearts, bookmarks, stamp cases, and souvenir spoons, engraved with a picture of the High School; rings, chains, etc, nut crackers, flat and hollow ware, fancy spoons and Sterling silver novelties, etc.

Perhaps one of the nicest presents one can give is a photograph of one's self and you know where to get them—at W. A. Riechel's. Besides the regular kinds he has a very neat panel with holiday greetings embossed directly over the likeness.

AUDITOR'S NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF PETITION.

State of Minnesota, } ss.
County of Red Lake }

Whereas, the petition of M. C. Harlow and others, bearing date the eleventh day of November, 1901, and on file in my office, praying for the establishment of a public ditch along the route proposed herein, has been filed in my office.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the said Board of County Commissioners, at their regular session to be held at the auditor's office in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county, on the 9th day of January, 1902 at 1 o'clock p. m.

A true copy of said petition is as follows, to-wit.

To the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for the expense of, the construction of the ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a ditch along the following described route in the towns of North and Rocksbury in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said public ditch is as follows:

Commencing at the point 20 feet north of where the north boundary line of townships 153 N R 43 west intersects the South westerly boundary line of the diminished Red Lake Indian reservation, thence running along the following route:

Begin parallel to and 20 feet distant northerly from said township boundary line to a point 30 feet easterly from section line between sections 33 and 34 of township 154 N. range 43 w., thence southerly parallel to section line between sections 3 and 4 of township 153 N R. 43 W and 30 feet distant easterly therefrom to a point due east of the ¼ section corner between said sections 3 and 4 thence west along quarter section line to and terminating at Red Lake river as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred and Fifty-eight (258) of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1901, and subsequent amendments thereto.

On reading and filing the petition of Catherine Leppert, administratrix of the estate of Able Leppert deceased, representing among other things, that she has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of her administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It is ordered that said account be examined and petition heard by this court on Monday the 30th day of December A. D. 1901, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the office of the judge of Probate in the court house in Red Lake Falls in said county.

And it is further ordered, that notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once each week for three successive weeks in the Red Lake Falls Gazette a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls the 4th day of December. A. D. 1901.

By the Court,

d5-26 Judge of Probate.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND.

State of Minnesota, } ss.
County of Red Lake. }

In Probate Court,
Special Term,
Dec. 9, 1901.

In the matter of the estate of Erik C. Lee,
deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Lena E. Lee, administratrix of the estate of Erik C. Lee, deceased, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into her hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of, the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences, and praying that license be to her granted to sell the real estate of Erik C. Lee, deceased.

And it appearing by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administratrix to pay said debts, legacies or expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debt, legacies and expenses, to sell all of said real estate.

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 6th day of January, A. D. 1902, at one o'clock p. m., at the court house in Red Lake Falls, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Lena E. Lee, administratrix of said estate to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered that notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls the 9th day of December, A. D. 1901.

By the Court,
seal J. T. Knight,
d12-j2 Judge of Probate.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

Opposition to railroad legislation is anticipated in the senate.

Friends of the canal treaty are confident that it will be ratified by the senate before the holiday adjournment.

The senate committee on foreign relations has voted to report favorably the new Hay-Pauncefote treaty providing for the construction of an Isthmian canal.

The record for nominations was broken Thursday when President Roosevelt sent to the senate for its "advice and consent" the names of 2,479 persons.

Senator Lodge has reported a bill providing for the removal of the 10 years' limitation on the Chinese exclusion act, thus leaving the provisions of the Geary act in force.

Representative Hepburn (Ia.) has introduced his Isthmian canal bill. It differs from the Hepburn bill passed last year in making the total appropriations $180,000,000 instead of $140,000,000.

Representative Gardner of New Jersey has introduced a joint resolution authorizing the state department to purchase the Danish West Indies and appropriate not exceeding $4,000,000 for the purpose.

In the executive session of the senate Wednesday the new Hay-Pauncefote treaty was received and referred to the committee on foreign relations. No remarks were made apropos of its presentation.

A resolution has been introduced in the house reciting the fact of Historian Maclay's attack on Admiral Schley and calling for the appointment of a committee to ascertain the truth or falsity of the statements.

Secretary Root has prepared for submission to congress a bill providing for the voluntary retirement of the veteran officers of the army who have seen service in the three wars—the Rebellion, the Indian war and the Spanish war.

Senator Lodge has introduced a bill to provide revenues for the Philippine islands. It provides that the tariff proposed by the Philippine commission Sept. 17, 1901, and approved by the secretary of war, shall remain in full force and effect.

The report of the Isthmian canal commission has been sent to congress. The commission, as anticipated several weeks ago, favors the Nicaragua route and makes an estimate of $189,864,062 as the total cost of construction of the canal through Nicaragua.

Senator Hoar of Massachusetts, addressing the senate on the question of anarchy, said all countries having lawful governments should secure an island in the sea, which was to be owned by no one but anarchists and by those who advocated the slaying of rulers and those resisting lawful government.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

James N. Whelan, colonel of the Twelfth cavalry and commander of the department of Texas, was retired Friday.

Director of the Mints Roberts recommends that the coinage of silver dollars be suspended for the present and that the bullion on hand be converted into subsidiary coin.

The state department has received a draft for £6,000 from the government of Great Britain in full payment of the claims of certain American citizens, who claimed to have been improperly expelled from South Africa during the Boer war.

It is announced at the navy department that the courtmartial in the case of Colonel Robert L. Meade of the marine corps, who was tried on the charge of drunkenness, has resulted in his acquittal and he has been restored to duty at the Brooklyn navyyard.

By the provisons of the new Hay-Pauncefote canal treaty the Clayton-Bulwer convention of 1850 is abrogated. The United States may build and control the canal under conditions substantially the same as those regulating the operation of the Suez canal under the treaty of Constantinople.

General Leonard Wood, military governor of Cuba, is conferring with senators in the interest of Cuban reciprocity. General Wood says that some measure of reciprocity on Cuban sugar and tobacco, particularly the former, is essential to giving the island that degree of stability and prosperity which was contemplated when the United States dispossessed Spanish rule.

Secretary Gage's report shows that the revenues of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, were $699,316,530.92. The expenditures for the same period were $621,598,546.54, showing a surplus of $77,717,984.38. Compared with the fiscal year of 1900 the receipts for 1901 increased $29,721,099.74. The increase in expenditures amounted to $22,253,661.44.

HAD A GOOD SEASON

BUSINESS AT THE PORT OF DULUTH HAS PROVEN VERY SATISFACTORY.

Minnesota Buttermakers Lead in Number of Diplomas Awarded at Buffalo—Two Killed in Railroad Accidents Near Duluth—Gambler Shot While Resisting Arrest—News of the State in General.

Duluth, Dec. 6.—Navigation at the Head of the Lakes for the season of 1901 is practically over, so far as lumber and ore is concerned; but there will be some grain shipped and coal and general merchandise received before the ships tie up for the winter. The harbor is beginning to freeze over enough to hamper the boats a little, but the lake usually remains open until Feb. 1, and until that time some of the smaller boats run to and from north shore points.

According to the records at the customs office up to Dec. 1 the aggregate tonnage carried through the Duluth canal for the season has been 5,414,346 tons, compared with 5,525,346 for the entire season of 1900. When the present season finally closes the business will probably exceed that of last year by several thousand tons. The figures given represent 4,179,755 of shipments and 1,234,691 receipts.

MINNESOTA IS AHEAD.

Got More Butter Diplomas Than Any Other State in the Union.

St. Paul, Dec. 7.—Superintendent McMullen of the Minnesota Pan-American building has reported to the dairy and food department on the final scoring of Minnesota butter displays at Buffalo. Minnesota scored more diplomas than any other state in the Union. The North Star state record is 80 butter exhibits, which scored 94 and better. Minnesota was the only state to score 98 flat, New York coming next with 97.75 as its highest score. No other state had so large a number of exhibits scoring diplomas as Minnesota. Had Minnesota been upon the same financial footing as some of the Eastern states at the Pan-American her triumph would have been absolute and complete in every department, but as it was the dairy display was the wonder and admiration of all visitors at Buffalo.

TWO RAILROAD VICTIMS.

Patrick O'Gara and Louis Benard Are Killed Near Duluth.

Duluth, Dec. 9.—Patrick O'Gara, the Northern Pacific watchman at Smithville, a western suburb of this city, was struck by a Northern Pacific train and received injuries from which he died two hours later. O'Gara was walking on the track in a cut through rock going to work and was caught by the fast train. He was 60 years old and came recently from St. Paul, where his wife and family reside.

Louis Benard, woodsman, was instantly killed by an Iron Range train near Two Harbors during the evening. He started to walk from Two Harbors to a nearby camp, where he was employed, but liquor overcame him and he laid down on the track to sleep. His crushed body and a jug of alcohol was found in the morning. He lived at Saginaw, Mich.

FOR THE SALE OF TIMBER.

Congressman Morris Would Amend the Nelson Bill.

Washington, Dec. 4.—Congressman Morris has introduced a bill to correct the abuses of the Nelson act in the matter of the cutting of timber on Indian reservations. He would have timber sold on bank scale instead of in 40-acre lots. He would have it disposed of in larger quantities in the discretion of the secretary of the interior, the object being to get the largest sum possible for the Indian fund.

This plan would prevent purchasers from selecting the best for ties and leaving the others.

After the pine has been removed the Morris bill provides that the land be held in the same way that the agricultural land is held—subject to homestead laws.

GAMBLER RESISTS ARREST.

Is Killed by a Blow of an Officer's Fist.

Duluth, Dec. 6.—James MacLillian, suspected of stealing an overcoat at Tower, Minn., is dead as a result of resisting arrest at the hands of Chief of Police A. E. Peck.

The officer went to MacLillian's room to arrest him, and the latter resisted. He was knocked down by the officer and rendered unconscious.

The man was taken to the hospital, where he died soon after. The report is that death was caused by a broken bloodvessel.

The dead man was a gambler and well known in Bowery circles.

SHOT FOR TRESPASSING.

Minnesota Boy Wounds the Daughter of a Neighbor.

Appleton, Minn., Dec. 3.—Lena Rosenkranz, the 14-year-old daughter of a prominent farmer, was shot and seriously injured by Henry Haben, the young son of a neighbor.

Haben's father has complained of neighbors crossing his farm, which he considered a trespass, and when the son saw the rig coming he fired from an ambush at the child, the shot taking effect in the lower limbs.

Young Haben has been arrested and bail furnished by his father, pending a hearing.

Cornered the Squash Market.

Minneapolis, Dec. 5.—A Boston commission merchant has unintentionally cornered the squash market in the Northwest. Just before Thanksgiving he bought eight carloads of squashes here and shipped them to Boston. The result was that the local supply was soon exhausted and now there is not a squash to be had except 200 dozen owned by a farmer who is holding out for $2 a dozen, which would mean a retail price of 26 cents apiece.

WOULD CHANGE SENTIMENT.

President Hill Threatens to Remove Shops From St. Paul.

St. Paul, Dec. 4.—A local paper prints the following:

James J. Hill has threatened to make the Twin Cities, but more especially St. Paul, pay dearly for the opposition which is being shown to his plans for controlling the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, unless the present agitation is stopped.

He is understood to have written to one or more prominent business men in St. Paul to that effect. He stated specifically, it is reported, that unless opposition to his plans was withdrawn and a certain St. Paul paper swung into line he would remove his railway shops from St. Paul and would not build the big shops so long contemplated.

Acting on the strength of his letters and the personal solicitation of his representatives in the Twin Cities, a secret meeting of the jobbers of St. Paul, of members of the chamber of commerce and the manufacturers' association, was held in the chamber of commerce rooms in St. Paul during the afternoon. It was largely attended, and the subject discussed at length. After the meeting adjourned a number of those in attendance were questioned regarding the action taken but all refused to give out information.

TO COME TO MINNESOTA.

Shorthorn and Hereford Breeders Will Hold a Show at Fair Grounds.

St. Paul, Dec. 8.—Secretary Randall of the State Agricultural society has received a telegram from Dean William Liggett, superintendent of the cattle department at the International Live Stock exhibit at Chicago, stating that the National Shorthorn Breeders' association and the National Hereford Breeders' association had decided to hold the national show again next year at the Minnesota fair grounds.

It is believed that these associations were influenced to take this action by the exceptionally fine showing made by this state at the Chicago exhibit, thus demonstrating the value of advertising of this character. The next state fair will bring to Minnesota the finest collection of high bred cattle ever seen in this country and every section of the nation will be represented.

MINISTER'S LIFE THREATENED.

Scored Anarchists and Is Now Threatened by Them.

Rochester, Minn., Dec. 4.—Rev. Frank Doran pastor of the Methodist church, is the object of attack of some individual who says he seeks to take his life.

At the McKinley union memorial service Mr. Doran denounced the anarchists, scoring them and their teachings. Shortly afterwards he received a letter threatening his life. He paid no attention and was greatly surprised a little later to become the recipient of another threatening missive. Since the memorial day exercises he has received 20 of these letters.

At first the letters simply warned him to look out, but the later ones include his wife, who, he is told, must not accompany him to any place, as the writer does not want to kill her.

MINNESOTA'S MANUFACTURES.

Preliminary Report Issued by the Census Bureau.

Washington, Dec. 7.—The preliminary report of the census bureau on manufacturing industries of Minnesota shows: Capital invested, $165,232,246, increase 30 per cent; number of estimates, 11,114; wage earners, 77,234; total wages, $35,465,125; value of products, $262,655,881, increase since 1890 37 per cent; cost of materials used, $173,425,615, increase 46 per cent. Statistics for cities separately reported are: Duluth, capital, $8,963,676, increase 68 per cent; value of products, $10,785,726, increase 22 per cent. Minneapolis, capital, $59,983,471, increase 40 per cent; value of products $112,069,260, increase 35 per cent. St. Paul, capital, $28,106,389, increase 24 per cent; value of products, $38,428,952; increase 16 per cent.

KNOCKED INTO THE RIVER.

Milwaukee Railroad Brakeman's Head Smashed by a Bridge.

La Crosse, Wis., Dec. 9.—While a Milwaukee train was crossing the Black river drawbridge about 8 a. m., George Mink, a brakeman, residing in Winona, Minn., was knocked from the top of the furniture car into the river 50 feet below and all efforts to recover his dead body have been fruitless. He was missed at River Junction and a switch engine from this city was ordered to the scene. The top of the car upon which he stood was splattered with blood, as was the bridge which he struck in the fall to death. His cap was found on the bridge smeared with blood. During recent repairs on the bridge the guard ropes at the entrance have been removed.

PREPARING LEGAL PAPERS.

Minnesota Officials Begin the Fight on Railroad Consolidation.

St. Paul, Dec. 3.—Governor Van Sant and Attorney General Douglas held a lengthy conference in which the investigations of the latter bearing upon the big railway combine were gone over. Everything was found to be satisfactory from the standpoint of both and the following official statement was issued:

"Governor Van Sant reports that he has been informed by Attorney General Douglas that from the investigations made he has decided to institute legal proceedings in opposition to the proposed consolidation of railway interests, and that the papers are in process of preparations."

We carry a complete line of the celebrated ROCHESTER TROUSERS, "Made-At-The-Mill" by the same people who manufacture the cloth. We get them at a low price because we buy direct from the Mills at Rochester, Minnesota and there are no middlemen's profits tacked on. The manufacturers guarantee them to be the best low-priced trousers on earth; there is not a shoddy thread nor a careless stitch in them. They will not rip nor split; they look well and wear well. We have them in a variety of patterns and sizes, and can please you. Come in and look at our stock of Rochester Trousers.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER
—BY—
PHIL. A. KAUFER.

Published weekly, Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the postoffice at Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

PRINCIPLES ESTABLISHED.

The broad principles settled by the recent supreme court decisions concerning the constitutional questions are stated to be these:

First: The constitution does not follow the flag until it is planted on new territory by special act of congress.

Second: The extension of the sovereignty of the United States to new territory carries with it all the constitutional guarantees of the enjoyment of liberty, the right to property and the protection of the people thus affected in securing justice and maintaining public order and promoting peaceful progress.

Third: The islands acquired from Spain by the treaty of Paris are "property of the United States" in the strict sense in which that term is used in the constitution, and, this being the case, congress can dispose of these islands in any way which it may believe conducive to the highest interests alike to the United States and of these islands.

A corollary of these propositions finds expression in the statement that the United States is a trinity in point of territory, which may be described under three heads, as follows:

First: The states.

Second: Incorporated territories.

Third: Unincorporated territory or territory belonging to or appurtenant to the United States.

Logically this gives to the nation three different classes of people dependent upon it for protection, to-wit:

First: Persons vested with full and sovereign political power, or the residents of the states.

Second: Citizens of the incorporated territories who are not vested with full and sovereign political power as long as they are residents of the incorporated territories in that they can not vote for presidential electors.

Third: The people of the "territory appurtenant to the United States." as such, who cannot become citizens of the United States until congress extends the provisions of the constitution.

A PLEA FOR THE WEE ONES.

(By a staff contributor.)

Apropos of the approaching holiday season, let me say my say in behalf of the dear little tots whom kind (?) mammas drag through the stores The dear ones wish to see Santa Claus, well and good. The loving mothers stand ready to indulge the cherubs, but, at what a cost. Ye "gods and little fishes." Granted you dear good mothers that you cannot afford to pay for more than one trip just now; granted again that you have twenty-seven presents to buy with three dollars and sixty-nine cents, hurrying the while that you may return home to prepare a warm dinner for John; you are overworked perhaps, may be, too, you are pinched by economy and hurried my many demands upon your time, and God bless and help you in your trials; but, is that any reason why you must fret that darling baby of yours? Suppose he does wear trousers and strut about with manly strides—bless his heart—is that any reason, I say, why you should haul him in and out, up and down, always walking too fast for him? I wish you would try having someone lead (or pull would fit the case better) you about for just one hour. How your arm would ache!

Don't do it mothers. Don't harrow the lives of the dear flowers which God has given you the care of. Only think of what you are doing and many a scene will be avoided. Only consider, mothers, what it means to take a child about in a crowd for hours. Leave the tots at home to their blocks, books and what not in preference to the martyrdom many a child has endured.

A Mother.

FACTS AND FANCIES

The Warren Sheaf thinks Van Sant's and Hill's modes of transporation are at logger-heads, and that this is where the rail and water clash.

That official coolness between Gov. Van Sant and the railway commissioners will no doubt be dubbed a play to the galleries, too. But in these cases the parquet and dress circle start the applause and will be in at the finish. The opposition to Van Sant is coming from the rigbt direction—for Van Sant.

The East Grand Forks Courier thinks there is a golden opportunity for a person who gets in on the ground flour with a new hotel there.

× ×

Charles S. Mitchill in the Alexandria Post-News says the railroad merger is a good thing. It looks as if the Post-News was fitting its views in this case to its attitute towards Gov. Van Sant. The Post-News is devoting considerable of its valuable space to showing up a state newspaper sentiment in favor of the "merger." It will soon run out of material, however

For Twenty-one Years

1880 The Old Reliable Drug Store 1901

Has been SANTA CLAUS HEADQUARTERS. He has been here, and left an immense stock of Holiday Goods for 1901, and as he filled the order he remarked that W. A. Schreiter's stock is the best in Red Lake County and by far the best ever seen in the city before AND SANTA CLAUS KNOWS. There is a splendid assortment surely, and down below we give just a hint as to variety this year:

Christmas China and Glass

A visit to our China and Glass Section cannot fail to suggest many appropriate and useful holiday gifts. Our resources are exceptionally complete, many tasteful new things are shown, and the values given are liberal—prices the very lowest.

Choice Table Glass: Goblets, Decanters, Oil Bottles, Clarets, Water Bottles, Sherbet Cups, Oyster Cocktail Glasses. We are closing out odds and ends of table glasses, water goblets, wine glasses, liqueur glasses, etc., at greatly reduced prices.

China Cups and Saucers: Large special assortments of China Cups and Saucers are now on exhibition. All are excellent pieces, most of them beautifully decorated in gold and floral designs. Many very attractive Cups, with gold handles, and Saucers, among them especially charming French and German China, decorated with a spray of flowers, and two shapes in a thin China of soft pure white.

Exceptional values of choice China in various effects—as representative may be mentioned: An extra-large size coffee cup of Haviland China with floral decorations, edge prettily finished in a green vine.

Candelabra: Candlesticks, Candelabra, holders, etc., are shown in great and well-chosen varieties. As appointments for receptions and other society events, and as Christmas gifts, the many handsome effects are most appropriate.

Christmas Statuary

Something very new. Beautiful heroic busts in rich oriental effects, for mantel or piano ornaments. This is something especially attractive.

Christmas Perfumes

Our high grade, popular priced imported perfumes in beeautifully decorated bottles are always desirable gifts. Among our very large assortment are LIGHTNER'S Perfumes. Mrs. Roosevelt's favorites.

Christmas Books

Fancy bindings. Standard authors. Complete sets and individual books. Toy and picture books for the little tots.

Christmas cut glass.

We are making a specialty of cut glass, and have a splendid assortment, including water sets, cream sets, vases, etc.

Christmas Toys

Wooden toys, chairs, rockers, bureaus, bed steads, cradles, drums, games, iron toys, etc. Our complete and dizzling assortment is bound to please.

Christmas Miscellany.

French plat toilet mirrors, brass frames. The latest Brunswick and Haviland China pieces in great variety. Something artistic and swell. Egg holders, chocolate sets, Vinegrettes, Pitchers, Match cases, Mantel and Piano vases. English China pieces, the newest creations and ideally beautiful. Albums, pocket books, toilet sets, fancy combs, sterling silver pieces, Christmas gift pen holders, cigar jars, Manicure sets.

Dolls

This is Doll Headquarters. From 5c up to $5. The finest line ever shown in Red Lake county.

Shell Ornaments

At prices that agree with the slimest purse. Shells cut for beautiful, lasting, useful ornaments, in pin trays, etc., ete.

Holiday buying has begun much earlier this year than last. You'll find our isles filled every day with discriminating shoppers who have been taught the value and convenieuce of early selection. In anticipation of doubling the volume of our holiday trade of one year ago we have arranged for you choosing the choicest gathering of holiday merchandise from foreign and domestic marts ever shown in Red Lake county, at prices absolutely the lowest. Visit our holiday bazaar,—everything for gift giving arranged for your convenience.

We make many glowing statements, but they reflect the truth and that's what interests you. We would rather err on the side of conservatism than exaggerate. But when we have a good thing which you will recognize as a good thing and thank us for the telling, we are going to be outspoken. We want you to buy little things here as well as big ones. It's not what we make on a single transaction that concerns us, it's rather your permanent patronage.

Lowest Prices is not a meaningless phrase with us. When you think another house undersells us, in simple fairness compare the qualities. We never want to carry over any part of our holiday stock and our prices are made to sell the goods. Our prices are the lowest in Red Lake County. But our goods must be seen to be appreciated. From the little tot to the great grand-father our great variety reaches and you will find here something to please everyone.

Ole Ellingson, a pioneer resident of this section, died on his farm Monday night. He had been given up by the doctors six months previous, but struggled on with a complication of asthma and dropsy. Three children, the eldest 13 years of age, are left at home, while one, aged nineteen, is serving a term in the state reformatory. Mrs. Ellingson has been dead for several years. Deceased lay speechless three days before his death, but the children did not seem to realize that the proper thing to do was to send for a physician.

The lumbermen at the head of the lakes are finding a great deal of fault with the car shortage which exists at present. They are unable to secure enough cars to supply their demand, and from the present outlook the same condition will exist next winter.

The preliminary report of the census bureau on manufacturing industries of Minnesota shows: Capital invested, $165,232,246, increase 30 per cent; number of establishments, 11,114; wage earners, 77,234; total wages, $35,455,125; value of products, $262,655,881; increase since 1890 37 per cent; cost of materials used, $173,425,615, increase 46 per cent.

While Mrs. Louis Peterson of Duluth was filling a lighted lamp with kerosene it exploded and the burning oil was blown into her face. Evidently in opening her mouth to cry out she inhaled the flames. She was alone at the time. When her husband returned 10 minutes later the neighbors were lifting her lifeless body from the floor where it had fallen on the rear porch.

According to the records at the customs office up to Dec. 1 the aggregate tonnage carried through the Duluth canal for the season has been 6,414,346 tons, compared with 5,626,346 for the entire season of 1900. When the present season finally closes the business will probably exceed that of last year by several thousand tons. The figures given represent 4,179,755 of shipments and 1,234,691 of receipts.

A Court of the Women's Catholic Order of Foresters will be instituted at Gentilly Sunday. Mesdames LaBissoniere, Harren and Fortier and Misses Melvina Allard and Jsonie LaBissoniere, of Joan of Arc Court will have charge of the ceremonies.

Clearwater Lodge held a special session Monday night, to confer the final degree on Charles Talley, who is preparing to leave the city, and who wished to become a full-fledged Bro. Odd before his departure. The degree team has been doing considerable work of late, and are said to be one of the cleverest in this section.

Cincinnati is filling with representative lay and clerical members of the Catholic church from all parts of the country, to attend the big national convention. The purpose of the gathering is to complete the permanent organization of the new American Federation of Catholic societies of the United States. Several bishops and archbishops of the church will take part in the convention.

Arrangements for the New Year's ball to be given by the M. B. A. are already well under way. The Woodmen hall has been secured for the occasion, and the decorations will be equal to, if not finer than those used at the Firemen's ball. Freund's full orchestra, assisted by Prof. Frick, will dispense the latest music for the dancers, and as the New Year makes its appearance an appetizing lunch will be served. Members are requested to be present at the meeting next Monday night as election of officers and other important business will be transacted.

The total membership of the C. O. F. is 93,034. Minnesota ranks fourth in point of membership.

What promises to be a most interesting discussion for members of the Catholic Order of Foresters is commenced in the December issue of the official organ. The question to be decided is: Should men engaged in the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors, on account of the hazard of this occupation, be admitted to membership in the Order?

The Oddfellows know how to have a good time. After their degree work Monday night a fine spread was in order to which all did ample justice.

A large delegation of Foresters from North Star Court C. O. F. went over to Gentilly Sunday to assist in installing the officers of the new Court there which starts out with over twenty charter members. The visitors were Past Chief Ranger Theo. LaBissoniere, Chief Ranger Thos. Crompe, former Recording secretary A. P. Toupin, Financial secretary J. P. Harren, Treasurer Enzeb Normandeau, and trustees Frank Cyr, Jos. Tschirhart, Adolf Dufault, Wilfred and Ephraim Chattel and Arastide Robillard.

Around the State.

Ephraim Phelps dropped dead at Battle Lake while sawing wood. Heart disease was the cause.

The state railroad commission has ordered the Northwestern road to build the sidetrack asked by the Schmidt-Anderson Grain company at Seaforth.

The contract for the ornamental iron for the Kansas state capitol building has been awarded to the Flour City Ornamental Iron works of Minneapolis at $30,000.

The Martin-Hanfgarn company has been organized in Winona, for the manufacture of workingmen's clothing, with a capital of $50,000. $15,000 of which is subscribed by Winona capitalists.

Albert Smith, a lumberman, was crushed to death at Camp No. 2 of the Pine Tree Lumber company, 18 miles west of Park Rapids, while hauling logs. He was about 30 years old and his home was at Little Falls.

The annual convention of the Southern Minnesota Bee Keepers' association will be held in Winona, Jan. 21 and 22. An interesting programme of papers on topics of special interest to bee men will shortly be prepared.

J. Albert Hagstrom, the youngest member of the Thirty-first session of the Minnesota legislature, is dead at Minneapolis from tuberculosis. Mr. Hagstrom was born Nov. 23, 1872, and nearly his entire life was spent in Minneapolis.

Nathaniel Head, who was postmaster on the Red Lake reservation until a short time ago, has been arrested on a charge of embezzling $800, the post-office inspector having found his account short this amount when he came to check up.

The lumber mills of Winona cut the past season much less lumber than the previous one. The cut for this year was 72,500,000 feet of lumber, 29,450,000 laths and 99,000,000 shingles. There is a falling off of close to 10,000,000 feet of lumber.

Tams Bixby, the well known state politician and chairman of the Dawes commission, is seriously ill at St. Luke's hospital in St. Paul. He was threatened with appendicitis and was ordered by his physicians to secure absolute rest for a time.

Woodsmen are so plentiful now that the rate of wages for timber operators has declined about $6 a month, from more than $30 to $26, and there are not jobs enough to go round. This is because of the great influx of men from the West and North.

August Walstrom was indicted by the Benton county grand jury at Foley for murder in the second degree. Walstrom lived in the town of Watab, Benton county, and some four weeks ago reported the accidental killing of his wife by the discharge of a shotgun.

Attorney General Douglas has recommended a settlement of $22,000 be accepted from the bondsmen of Former Treasurer Bohleter. The total amount of the state's claim is $45,000, but there is certain realty held by the state which will reduce this to about $27,000.

THE LADY OF LYNN

By SIR WALTER BESANT

Copyright, 1900, by Sir Walter Besant

my rescue had arrived. 'Jack,' I said to myself, 'has found out the way taken by this villain and is riding after him.'"

Alas! I who should have been riding in the front of all was at that moment unconsciously sleeping in my bunk aboard the Lady of Lynn.

"I thought that at such a moment Mr. Rising would be wholly occupied with defending himself. I therefore withdrew the boards from the top of the stair and looked down. No one was in the room below that I could see. I cautiously descended. In the corner of the settle by the fireplace there was the old woman of the house.

"'They are coming after you, missy,' she said. 'I knew how it would end. I warned him. I told him that everything was against it. I read his luck by the cards and by the magpies and by the swallows. Everything was against it. They are coming. Hark! They are very close now. And they will kill him.'

"I ran to the open door. Mr. Rising was in the middle of the road, without his hat, his sword in his hand; behind him stood his chairmen. He was not going to give me up without a fight. The postboy had drawn the chaise into the field, and the sedan chair was standing beside it. And down the road, only a little way off, I saw in the growing light of daybreak Lord Fylingdale leading, the captain beside him and half a dozen gentlemen following, all on horseback.

"'There she is! There is Molly!' cried the captain. 'What cheer, lass? What cheer?'

"Lord Fylingdale held up his hand. The whole party drew rein and halted. Then their leader dismounted. They were now about 20 yards from the men. He threw his reins to the nearest of the little troop. 'Gentlemen,' he said, 'we must proceed with this business without hurry or bluster or threats. Mr. Rising will perhaps threaten and bluster. We are here to rescue a lady and to punish a villain. Let both be done without appearance of wrath or revenge. Captain Crowle, do not dismount, I entreat you, until the conclusion of the next act. Molly is, as you see, apparently safe and unhurt.'

"They obeyed.

"'I shall now measure swords with the young gentleman who thinks that he can carry off heiresses with impunity. I would advise you to advance a little closer to the house. He must understand that punishment awaits him, if not from me, then from some other of this company.'

"'Look at Tom,' said one of them. 'His blood is up. He is now all for fighting. He means mischief, if ever he has meant mischief. I remember at Swaffham when he fought the young squire of Headingley. That was about a girl, too—a mere, worthless drab of a tavern servant. Tom broke down his man's guard and ran him through in half a minute. I wish we were well out of this job.'

"Tom stood in the road, as I have said, his sword in hand, his hat lying on the ground before him. If flaming cheeks and eyes as fiery as those of a bull brought to bay mean mischief, then Tom's intention was murderous.

"'To thwart Tom in anything,' the gentleman went on, 'is dangerous; but to take away his girl—and such a girl—to rob him of that great fortune just at the moment of success, would madden the mildest of men. He looks like a madman. Should one warn his lordship? And he has got two chairmen with their poles in readiness. We should ride in upon them before they can do any mischief.' So they whispered.

"Said Captain Crowle: 'Kill him, my lord. Kill the villain. Kill him.'

"'Let me warn your lordship,' said the gentleman who had last spoken. 'His method will be a fierce attack. He will try to break down your guard.'

"'I know that method,' Lord Fylingdale replied coldly. Then he stepped forward and took off his hat. 'Mr. Rising,' he said, 'this affair might very well be settled by two or three sailors or common porters. We are willing, however, to treat you as a gentleman, which, sir, you no longer deserve.'

"'Go on, go on,' said Tom. ''Twill be all the same in five minutes.'

"'I am therefore going to do you the honor of fighting you.'

"'I shall show you how I appreciate that honor. Stop talking, man, and begin.'

"'I must, however, warn you that if you are to fight as a gentleman you must try to behave as one for this occasion only. Should you attempt any kind of treachery my friends will interfere. In that case you will certainly not leave the field alive.'

"'What do you want, then?'

"'You must send away those two hulking fellows behind you. I am willing to fight you with swords, but I am not going to fight your lackeys with clubs.'

"Tom turned round. 'Here, you fellows; get off. Go and stand beside the chair. Whatever happens, don't interfere. Well, my lord, the sooner this event comes off the better.'"

He laid down his sword and took off coat and waistcoat, turning up the sleeve of his right arm. Then he turned to Molly and saluted her. "Mistress Molly," he said, with a grin, "you are going to have a very fine sight. Perhaps when it is over you will be sorry for your shilly shally—stand off—no, I won't fuss. You're not worth carrying off. If I'd known— Now, my lord."

Lord Fylingdale had also removed his coat and waistcoat and now stood in his shirt, with the sleeves rolled up, hatless.

Just at that moment the sun rose swiftly, as is his manner in this flat country. It was as if the earth had leaped into light in order to give these swordsmen a clearer view of each other. They were a strange contrast—Molly's champion erect, pale and calm, his adversary bent as if with passion, grasping his sword with eager hand.

"He means mischief," repeated the gentleman of the troop. "I would this business was ended. I wonder if the noble lord can fight. He does not look afraid anyhow."

"He looks as if he could feel neither fear nor anger nor love nor any passion at all. He is an iceberg. Ha, they are beginning!"

They faced each other.

The swords crossed. "Look to yourself," cried Tom. "I will spit you like a pigeon."

He stamped and lunged. The thrust was parried easily and lightly. Tom lunged again, and again, with a slight turn of the wrist the thrust was parried, but as yet Lord Fylingdale seemed to stand on the defensive.

"He knows how to fence," they whispered. "See! He means to tire his adversary. He parries everything. Tom thrusts like a madman. Why, he exposes himself at every lunge. See! He has lost his head. One would think he was fighting with an automaton who could only parry."

At the door stood the object and cause of the encounter—namely, the girl—who had brought all this trouble upon Tom Rising's head. She stood motionless, hardly breathing, watching the duel as they say the Roman women used to watch the fight of the gladiators in the amphitheater and as I have seen the Spanish women watch the men who fought the bulls in their circus. I believe that women, in spite of their tender hearts, are carried away, out of themselves, by the sight of mere fighting. It is a spectacle which they cannot choose but gaze upon. It shows the true nature of man as opposed to that of woman. He stands up and risks his life, trusting sometimes to his skill, as in a duel with swords, and sometimes to chance, as on a battlefield where the bullets are flying. Molly therefore watched the fight with gleaming eyes and parted lips. She was almost ready to forgive the man who had attempted this injury for the sake of his courage, and she could not sufficiently admire his adversary for the cold and impassive way in which he met every furious attack, just with a simple turn of the wrist, as it seemed to her.

HE FELL UPON THE GROUND, FAINTING, IN A SMALL POOL OF BLOOD.

Tom was a strong and lusty fellow, and he could fight after his fashion, which was with thrust upon thrust, fast and furious, as if reckless of himself so that he could engage his adversary wholly in defense until he found a moment of weakness.

He had fought many times and hitherto always without a scratch or a wound, the fight always ending with his adversary prostrate. On this occasion, however, he found that every thrust was parried, that his adversary yielded not so much as an inch of ground and that he had to do with a wrist of iron and the eye of a hawk.

"Jack," said Molly, "I hope that I desired not the death of the young man, but I did desire his defeat. It was splendid to see him stamping on the ground and attacking like lightning. But it was more splendid to see his adversary immovable. He stood like a rock. He showed neither passion nor excitement. He parried every thrust with just a turn of his wrist."

The gentlemen on horseback closed in and looked on, holding their breath. There was no longer any fear on account of their champion. For the first time in their lives they saw as fine a master of fence as ever came out of the schools of Paris. Meantime the other man was as one maddened. He drew back; he roared like a bull; he rushed upon his enemy; he panted and gasped, but he continued the fight undaunted.

Suddenly his sword flew out of his hand and fell in the field beside the chaise.

"Pick up your master's sword," Lord Fylingdale ordered the chairmen.

The spectators looked to see Tom run through on the spot. On the contrary, Lord Fylingdale remained in his attitude of defense. He was playing with his enemy.

"Take your sword," he said. "You are at my mercy. But take your sword, man. We have only just begun."

Tom received his sword and wiped the mud upon his shirt. Then he renewed the attack. But it was with less confidence. That one should refuse to finish the duel when he had disarmed his adversary was a thing beyond his experience.

"Tom is dashed," said one of the company. "It is all over with Tom."

It was. After a few more lunges, parried with the same quiet skill and calmness of manner, Tom's sword once more flew out of his hand. Then the duel was over, for Lord Fylingdale made one thrust, and his sword passed clean through the right arm at the shoulder, passing out at the other side. Tom reeled. One of his chairmen ran to his help, and he fell upon the ground, fainting, in a small pool of blood.

Lord Fylingdale paid no attention to him. He wiped his sword on the grass, replaced it in the scabbard and put on his coat and waistcoat. This done, he advanced to Molly.

"Madam," he said, "we are fortunate, indeed, in being able to effect a rescue. This is not a place for a lady, nor is this a sight that one would willingly offer you. I trust that no violence has been used."

"I thank your lordship. It was a horrid sight. Oh, do not let the poor man die! He is a villain, but he has failed. Be merciful."

Then the captain came running up

"Molly!" he cried, with the tears running down his face. "Molly, we are not too late? They haven't married you? The villain is paid. He is paid, I take it. He hasn't married you yet? By heaven, if he has I will brain him with my cudgel so you shall be a widow as soon as a wife."

"Captain, can you ask me? The man had a chaise waiting here and would have forced me into it. But I ran into the house and so into the upper floor, whither he could not follow. He set his men to pull off the thatch. What he would have done next I know not. But I could defend myself."

"What is that in your hand, Molly?"

It was the knife, which she still held in readiness. She threw it away. "I shall not need it now," she said. "What do you think I should have done with it?"

"Molly, I know what you would have done. I said that there was no man in England who could marry you against your will. It was his heart and not his shoulder that would have received the knife. My dear, I knew my Molly. I knew my girl."

Then the other gentlemen crowded round, offering their congratulations, no one taking the least notice of the unlucky Tom, who still lay pale and bleeding on the ground.

It was Lord Fylingdale who came to his assistance. "Here, fellow," he ordered the chairman. "Take up your master and put him in the chair. So, and as for you," he addressed the postboy, "here is a guinea. Drive as fast as you can back to Lynn. Put him to bed in his lodging and send for a surgeon or a wise woman or some one to look after the wound."

"Will he die?" asked one of the bystanders.

"I should think it not unlikely. His wound is dangerous, and, if I know anything about a man, from his appearance I should say that he would be inclined to fever. But we are not concerned with his fate, whether he dies or lives; he has attempted a villainous act and has met with a fitting punishment."

The carriage with the wounded man in it went rattling along the road, the jerks and bumps among the ruts being enough to keep the wound open and the blood flowing.

Then Lord Fylingdale called the chairmen. "Who are you?" he asked. "Do you belong to the town of Lynn?"

They looked at each other. Then one said: "No. We be from Swaffham. Squire Rising sent for us to do his job."

"Put in your poles. You must now carry the lady back."

"We have done our work," said his lordship. "It remains for us to escort Miss Molly home again. Madam, you can leave this foul den with the consciousness that you are avenged."

"Indeed I want no revenge."

"Justice has been done. Justice is not revenge. You can now, madam, go back in the chair in which you were brought here. The villain who made the attempt is already on his way back. Since you desire mercy rather than revenge, we must hope that his wound is not fatal."

So Molly re-entered the chair. Then she was brought home in triumph. The captain rode on one side, her champion on the other; before and behind rode her mounted escort. If she had been a queen, they could not have shown her greater deference and respect.

CHAPTER IX.

THE LAST STEP BUT ONE.

LORD FYLINGDALE resolved to marry Molly. You shall hear by what cunning this noble and virtuous person, this adornment and boast of the peerage, laid his plans for securing the fortune and the hand of our Molly. He had persuaded

Matt J. Johnson Co. Dean, Minn., April 17, 1900.

Gentlemen—I am pleased to inform you that Matt J. Johnson's 6088 has done wonders for me. I was taken with a severe attack of muscular rheumatism that confined me to the house for two months. I went to Crocker & Hawley's store on crutches and Mr. Hawley gave me a bottle of 6088 and wanted me to try it, as he knew I had been suffering with rheumatism for the past three years and I would be a severe test for the remedy. I had not taken half a bottle when I went to work and when I had finished the bottle I was entirely free from rheumatism. Thanking you and your agents, Messrs. Crocker & Hawley, for putting me in the way of a cure,

I am yours very truly, J. H. NEIL.

Special meetings have been called Tuesday and Wednesday for the election of officers of each society.

Last Friday's debate was won by the Spartans. It was something to rejoice over. But, nevertheless, we await with keen anticipation the outcome of the next one.

Subject for Friday, Dec. 20: Resolved, "That capital punishment should be abolished." The Spartans chose the affirmative. Their debaters are Eleanor Findeisen, Pauline Nelland and Dah Johnson. The Athenian debaters are Lee Healy, Rachel Taylor and Katie Berthiaume.

Don't forget the Christmas program to be given Friday afternoon, Dec. 20.

SCHOOL IN GENERAL

On account of the lately fallen snow a general washing of faces and all-around snow fight is indulged in by the younger frye.

The change of program on Monday resulted in putting geometry the first thing in the morning, thereby necessitating that geometry be studied at home.

Remember that the Christmas program occurs this Friday. Owing to the fact that at the nearest regular meeting of the H. S. O. a joint debate is to be held, it was deemed advisable to give the program the next nearest date, Dec. 13.

The Spartans announce a Fourth of July program for their next opportunity in the display of talent. This will occur Jan. 10, 1902. Come It will no doubt be interesting.

The Spartans are glorying in their success at last Friday's debate. Let them remember, however, that the Athenians are still 7.18 points ahead.

A foot ball has been run out of its hole and the kids are rejoicing in kicking it about in the snow drifts.

Owing to the bad behavior of some pupils, the principal was forced for the last time to repeat the law recently made in regard to taking seats immediately after entering the building.

Tuesday night at the regular meeting of the Athenians, it was found advisable to make a change in the Athenian colors, owing to the fact that they so nearly resembled the High School colors. Scarlet and white were chosen. Let the worthy Spartans remember this and not choose one of our colors again.

It has been decided to have the debate for Friday, Dec. 20, in the evening and charge a small admittance fee of 15 cents to help defray the expenses of the debate with Fertile. Let us see a big crowd out.

Remember, the Christmas program, Friday, Dec. 13, is given by the Athenians. We still maintain our reputation as being very expert in the giving of literary programs.

The bulletin board has become too popular in the display of old rags. We wish when your handkerchief becomes too dirty for use you would burn it rather than pin it up for public inspection.

Still the girls come late. We would be very glad to receive any information from any one as to how we can get them here early enough to participate in the morning exercises. Let any such information be handed to The Gazette for publication under "contributions" in next week's notes.

Both societies have been busy in writing original Christmas stories the past week. We're working for the prize offered by The Gazette.

On account of the good sleighing a number of High School pupils enjoyed a fine ride Monday night.

PERSONALS.

Miss Emma Wagner returned to school Monday, after fully recovering from an attack of measles.

Bertha and Albert Lafreniere are detained from school on account of a quarantine.

Miss Delia Toupin sings a Christmas solo next Friday.

Misses Kathryne Pirath and Olga Kretzschmar and Master Ralph Healy were appointed members of the new reporting committee for the Athenians.

Do you read the High School Notes? If you don't you had better, they are interesting, or if you have friends that do not, urge them to do so. They are printed in The Gazette each week.

INCIDENTS.

Tuesday noon on the return to school, the room was filled with the pleasant (?) odor of burning rubber. It was at first thought to be due to the fact that some of the girls had on some very hot neckties, until a piece of rubber was discovered on the stove.

XMAS FEASTING IN OLD ENGLAND

By J. P. Donn.

[Copyright, 1901, by Hamilton Musk.]

When, in 1647, Puritan sentiment caused the parliament of England to abolish Christmas formally, on the ground of pagan origin and what it deemed pagan observance, most of the people grieved sorely and yearned with such good effect for the return of the old custom that today the season is kept as their chief festival by English speaking people.

About that period there was published at Oxford a document entitled "An Hue and Cry For Christmas" which reveals quaintly the popular yearning.

"Any man or woman * * * that can give any knowledge or tell any tidings of an old, old, very old, gray bearded gentleman called Christmas, who was wont to be a verie familiar ghest and visite all sorts of people, both pore and rich, and used to appear in glittering gold, silk and silver in the court, and in all shapes in the theater in Whitehall and had ringing, feasts and jollity in all places, both in the citie and countrie for his comming * * * whosoever can tel what is become of him, or where he may be found, let them bring him back again into England."

So back again he came, but not to the same honors as of old. Never again was there to be such feasting as in the old days, all the public ceremonial which used to greet him was gone forever. Today the Christmas celebration is an event of the home and the children among reunited families instead of the gay street pomp of old.

The English lore of high Christmas feasting goes back beyond history into the banquet hall of King Arthur, and having read it the reader wonders no more at the mighty deeds performed by the lance of Launcelot or the broad Excalibur. Whistlecroft thus sets the legend in rhyme:

They served up salmon, venison and wild boars
By hundreds, by dozens and by scores,
Hogsheads of honey, kilderkins of mustard,
  Muttons and fatted beeves and bacon swine,
Herons and bitterns, peacocks, swan and bustard,
  Teal, mallard, pigeons, widgeons and, in fine,
Plum puddings, pancakes, apple pies and custard,
  And therewithal they drank good Gascon wine,
With mead and ale and cider of our own,
For porter, punch and negus were not known.

In the middle ages, beginning with the king, every one feasted during the two weeks of Christmastide to the very best of his physical and financial ability, and none was too poor to have his fill of the Christmas cheer. Open house was the absolute rule. The wayfarer was welcome anywhere, the wassail bowl passed from the hand of the king to his nobles at court, from the hand of the baron to his retainers hilarously celebrating with him around the blazing Yule log in the center of his hall, the abbot's capons and good ale warmed the heart of the penniless wanderer if he did not choose farming house or hall to spend the Yuletide in. Anywhere he would be royally entertained, for every one had his own Yule log and wassail bowl, and the average bill of fare may be judged from this gem from Evans' collection of old ballads:

All you that to feasting or mirth are inclined
Come, here is good news for to pleasure your mind.
Old Christmas is come for to keep open house;
He scorns to be guilty of starving a mouse.
Then come, boys, and welcome, for diet the chief,
Plum pudding, goose, capon, minced pies and roast beef.

The public pageants were masquerades, each under the direction of a lord of misrule, or abbot of misrule, as he was sometimes called, who directed the sports and mummeries of the maskers and all the festivities of the others. The lord of misrule who misruled in the court had a liberal appropriation from parliament for himself and his attendants. The lords and barons had each their own appointed mummers and there were other bands of them, self appointed, who roamed about the country on a grand spree during the holidays. The excesses of these in time caused the custom to be abolished by law.

In houses and halls, under the holly and ivy and mistletoe, the merrymaking proceeded for the men in the old days, with a kiss for Joan every time she was found under the omnipresent mistletoe, but there was no special part of the festivity for the little ones, with the exception of singing the carols in expectation of gifts, until the prince consort of Queen Victoria introduced from Germany the Christmas tree and Santa Claus.

CHRISTMAS DAY.

I.

The times are changed, the world grows old;
We have no more the age of gold.
Perchance it is decline; perchance
'Tis but the tokens of advance;
But nowadays we hold no more
That once good fellowship of yore.
It may be that the strain and stress
Of our mad times bring joylessness;
It may be that our feverish days
Forget the old, good, genial ways.

II.

But, thanks to one persistent spark,
Unrest and haste and care and cark
Not yet shall strip our aging heart
Of all its old congenial art.
Aye, thanks to that still jovial day,
We shall forget and make our way
With dance and frolic, friends and rhyme,
Back through grim ages to the time
When "laughter, holding both his sides,"
Turned all men's days to Christmastides.

ARTHUR J. STRINGER.

THE CHRIST CHILD IN THE MANGER

ODD CHRISTMAS SUPERSTITIONS

By Warrington Wayne.

[Copyright, 1901, by W. L. Vail.]

Perhaps the most interesting of Christmas superstitions to the young people is that which puts the maid under the curse of another year's celibacy unless she be kissed under the mistletoe at Christmas. For years and years female ingenuity struggled with the problem of finding a fitting place in the room for the mistletoe. A fitting place is one under which the maiden must pass. It is not seemly for her to seek kisses. The problem was solved years ago. The mistletoe was put over the door.

In this country two mistletoe leaves are placed together before the fire by many an anxious lover. He or she names the leaves secretly. If they fly together as they grow crisp, those they represent will wed; if they fly apart, fate wills otherwise.

But the greater Christmas superstitions concern themselves with the recognition of the holy hour of midnight on Christmas eve by the lower animals.

The rooster is supposed to be the most sapient of these in this regard. His crowing, at other seasons heralding the dawn, is well known by all true believers in ghosts to be a notice to prowling spirits to hie them home. In the holy season he crows at intervals all through the night, the superstition says, to keep the earth clear of these nocturnal ramblers. Shakespeare alludes to this belief in "Hamlet:"

Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated.
This bird of dawning singeth all night long.
And then, they say, no spirit dares stir abroad.
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallowed and so gracious is the time.

In many parts of Europe there is a superstition to the effect that at the midnight hour, when Christmas day begins, the cattle kneel in the stalls. Many can be found who testify that they have seen this phenomenon. They have gone into the dark stables with lanterns, awaking the beasts, which usually rise after such disturbance. In the course of half an hour or so the animals grow used to the light and lie down again. In lying down they kneel.

The miners of Derbyshire, England, hear masses sung by invisible choristers in deep and distant recesses of their mines as the hour of midnight arrives.

In other parts of England bees, then in their torpor, "sing" in the hives. Sheep on the continent have been observed to start on pilgrimages toward the east in imitation of the shepherds of old.

Many of those superstitions have reached North America. They thrive better in Canada than in the United States. Howison tells of an Indian in upper Canada whom he found creeping late on Christmas eve on hands and knees to get a look at the deer kneeling at the midnight hour.

Sir Walter Scott tells us that, according to a popular belief, those who were born on Christmas had the gift of seeing ghosts. The Spaniards attributed the haggard look of Philip II. to this undesirable faculty.

Mrs. Twaddle—Why, Dr. Jalap, it's ages since I saw you. How have you been? Do you enjoy good health?

GIVING ON CHRISTMAS

By Cecilia Rose.

[Copyright, 1901, by W. L. Vail.]

ALTHOUGH the giving of presents, like other customs of Christmastide, may be traced to heathen sources, yet the beautiful tribute of the wise men from the east to the infant in the manger may be taken as a symbol of appropriate ceremonies for the celebration of the birth of Christ. Pagan kings and princes, their satraps and subjects, did indeed give presents, often in connection with great feasts, with various ends in view, but it is clear from the records handed down that the gifts were not always bribes nor tribute to physical power. Moral worth and beauty were often honored by the bestowal of rare treasures or some symbol of riches.

The story of the visit of the wise men to Bethlehem as told in the gospel of Matthew carries with it evidence that the strangers were not on a self seeking errand. The narrative reads:

> Now, when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judæa in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that was born king of the Jews? For we have seen his star in the east and have come to worship him.
>
> When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled and all Jerusalem with him, and when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together he demanded of them where Christ should be born, and they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judæa, for thus it is written by the prophet, And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judæa, for out of thee shall come a governor that shall rule my people Israel. Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared, and he sent them to Bethlehem and said, Go and search diligently for the young child, and when ye have found him bring me word again that I may come and worship him also. When they had heard the king they departed, and, lo, the star which they saw in the east went before them till it came and stood over where the young child was. When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy, and when they were come into the house they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down and worshiped him, and when they had opened their treasures they presented unto him gifts, gold and frankincense and myrrh.

David wrote in the Psalms, possibly referring to Solomon as the type of Christ: "The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents; the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts." The reason for the tributes to Solomon is given in Kings, where it is stated: "And all the earth sought Solomon to hear his wisdom, which God had put in his heart, and they brought every man his present, vessels of silver and vessels of gold and garments and armor and spices, horses and mules, a rate, year by year."

In another place David speaks of gifts as a tribute to majesty. He says: "Vow and pay unto the Lord your God. Let all that be roundabout him bring presents unto him that ought to be feared."

The pagan festivals which were believed by some to have suggested the Christmas celebration consisted of feasts and the giving of presents. To celebrate the nuptials of Esther King Ahasuerus "made a great feast unto all his provinces and gave gifts according to the state of the king." Gifts of that nature could only bear the meaning of generous token of good feeling and good will.

Long before the Christian era the Greeks celebrated a festival in midwinter when presents were distributed to the children in the name of the household gods.

Whether the ceremonial gift be costly or plain it bears with it a meaning which has no relation to its value, and the gifts of the rich cannot have deeper significance than the gifts of the poor. Emerson said: "Rings and other jewels are not gifts, but the apologies for gifts. The only gift is a part of thyself."

THE SUPREME COURT SUSTAINS LOWER COURT IN GRAY CASE.

GRAY SECURES JUDGMENT AGAINST RED LAKE FALLS LUMBER CO.

The case of Albert Gray vs. the Red Lake Falls Lumber Co., which was tried in the February, 1901, term of district court in this county, was on Thursday decided by the supreme court, in favor of the plaintiff, the judgment of the lower court, which awarded $3000 damages to Gray, for the partial loss of a foot while in the Red Lake Falls Lumber Company's employ, being sustained. Gray was a log decker and the accident happened through the carelessness of a comrade adjusting a chain. Two days before Gray had complained of his mate's inefficiency and his employers had promised to get a new man.

The supreme court's decision establishes the precedent that an employer is responsible for the inefficiency for help in hazardous occupations, and employes have a right to demand efficient comrades in work, employers refusing to furnish such at their own risk.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite. Try it. Only 50cts. Guaranteed. For sale by W. A. Preparing for Christmas.

BY A STAFF CONTRIBUTOR.

Getting ready for Christmas, the most joyous of all joyful seasons, is or should be a great pleasure for every one.

The "Christmas Spirit" hovers o'er us. Has it reached you, and you?

Hark, do I hear a sigh? Mutterings at this time when we should cleanse our hearts for the coming of the Christ child? And in a department store of all places. If not mutterings, what would you call this? Husband and wife battling through the crowd—wife sees something pleasing. "John, do stop. See this lovely chatelaine bag. It would be just the thing for Blanche for I've got to get her something."

"John: "Come on Mary, we've got too much now; let's get home to the children."

Alas, poor John; Alas, poor Mary! If you've "got to," give Blanche something, give her love, give her inspiration to a noble life, aye give her a little token if you can afford it (most of you can) but, I beg of you in this blessed time, when the very Frost King takes the initiative by ornamenting all nature most beautifully, don't give her your peace of mind—your most precious possession, indeed. At Christmas everything says to us, "Love one another." Don't spoil the pleasures of Yuletide Don't give it to make a show, but give in all love, and there is no doubt but the spirit of the season will glide in the heart as your gift reaches your friend.

Now mothers, a word to you, for I love you, being one of you, don't destroy home comfort while making presents. Where can the harmony be, I'd like to know, when a woman has exhausted her nerve force on tatting embroidery, sewing or lace making? Ah, how often it occurs that John and the dear cherubs come home to find mother's brow puckered and her temper, too, perhaps. Now aren't John and the dear cherubs more to you than this work and all the Blanches put to-gether? Decidedly yes.

Therefore, as our school books used to say, don't destroy the object of the first Christmas and I promise you a happy home in which 'love light leads aloft.'

Opposed to Shopping.

The following placard is exposed in an Oxford street (London) store:

"Americans will please take notice that this place is not a museum. It is a shop."

Some of the London papers say that this is intended as a hint to some Americans who visit the shops and spend hours looking over and pricing things, but never buy anything.

WISE COUNCIL.

REMI FORTIER, MASTER OF THE GENTILLY GRANGE SOUNDS NOTE OF WARNING.

WANTS FARMERS TO JOIN IN FIGHTING PROPOSED HARMFUL LEGISLATION.

Remi Fortier, master of the Gentilly Grange, was in the city Monday and handed us the following communication for publication:

Gentilly, Dec. 23. 1901.

Editor Gazette:

It is stated on good authority that there will be a bill presented to congress during the present session in the interests of capitalists, providing for the leasing to them by the government of the grass lands of the Indian reservations for grazing purposes, requiring of them in return the payment of a merely nominal rental. Such a bill, if passed, would work great injury to the farmers in all parts of the United States, and especially to the farmers of the Red River Valley, where the policy of diversified farming, stock raising, and dairying is being very generally adopted. This change of method becomes absolutely necessary for the continued prosperity of the agricultural interests of the valley. It is the only way in which our lands can be brought up to the highest possible condition of fertility and maintained there in future years.

The leasing of these large areas of grazing lands to capitalists at a merely nominal rental will give them an enormously unfair advantage in their competition with the farmer. In acquiring such privileges they would either be entirely relieved from the payment of taxes, or be placed in a position that they could easily escape the larger portion of them, while the farmer is obliged to pay taxes on every item of property on his farm, and even upon the mortgage, which, in many instances, he is unfortunate enough to pay interest upon. With this advantage the capitalist will be enabled to raise cattle for about half what it costs the farmer on land worth from $10 to $40 per acre. But the farmer, though placed at such an enormous disadvantage must sell his beef in competition with that produced by the extensive cattle capitalist, and if this proposed bill is passed, the small farmers of the country will be started on the road to bankruptcy.

Some of the eastern papers are lending their influence toward the success of this scheme by predicting that in the event of its failure and the refusal of the government to accede to the demands of the cattlemen there will be a beef famine. But is it not true beyond any doubt that the millions of farmers throughout the land will be able to supply the demand provided they are encouraged in the work by the prospect of a fair remuneration for their labor and investment? And is it not the part of wisdom for us, brother farmers, to work up our own interests and use all honorable means to avert the passage of this bill and all other legislation which would result so disastrously to us? Let us arouse ourselves to the importance of bringing to bear upon our legislators all possible influence to secure their opposition to the proposed measure. In this connection we ask the friendly co-operation of all business men, as we believe it to be for their interest as well as the benefit of the farmer that the agriculturists be fostered and encouraged instead of handicapped and discouraged by placing enormous discriminating advantages in the hands of a few capitalists. If the farmers in the northwest are prosperous, the cities and villages reap their share of the benefit; but on the other hand if the farmers' interests are handicapped so that the tillers of the land are reduced to poverty, the business men must assuredly suffer with them.

REMI FORTIER,
Master Gentilly Grange.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

PHIL A. KAUFER.

Published weekly, Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the post-office at Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

The Gazette wishes it readers a "Merry Christmas."

At this season of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men" 'tis a real pleasure for us to express these wishes to our readers, many of whom, from associations dating back over nine years, have become as warm friends, and the greetings are given in a somewhat more personal sense than we generally feel in addressing our weekly audience. Nine years is not a long span of years; and yet, this space of time holds within its compass changes as momentous as any can be to individuals. The girl of nine that got her first taste for reading from the columns of this paper, as in childish innocence she scanned its pages, may to-day perhaps be a wife and mother; while the bride and groom, the account of whose wedding was a subject for our editorial enthusiam may now be subscribers with more than two readers in the family circle; the matron, whose age was still a matter of delicate importance, and who hestitated to give details when her friends surprised her on a birthday anniversary has long since passed beyond that stage, and one of her concerns is now whether her christian name is a proper adornment for her favorite grand-daughter; and, sad thought, the old pioneer whose cheery encouragement and whole-souled patronage was a bright spot in the young editor's oft clouded sky—many has had his obituary sadly and tenderly penned by the writer. Life's kaleidoscope has worked rapidly for us all.

Christmas time is a time when the asperities of life may easily be put aside. Indeed, there never is a time when they should not be heroically trampled under foot. But at this season, when we know how the influence of Christianity permeates the sentiments of the human race the world over, it is easy to place oneself in harmony with that wave of peace and good will sweeping over the sea of human weakness, to carry off the skum, leaving only good, hearty, charitable and wholesome sentiments in its wake. No wonder Christmas time brings o'er the heart a chasening influence.

It is inevitable. The heart of the most stoical individual responds to the memories awakened at these times, as the mind's eye goes back into the dim vistas of the past—back until it is lost in the fairy-like haze of infancy when the first dawn of understanding bade adieu to mere instinct.

It all comes back—and at Christmas time we all love to sit and view the panorama in which our own existence has played its part. Family circles as they were wont to be in the long ago, depicted as the changeful pictures pass call up comparisons with what they are today—and the old affections and the new unite.

So it is at Christmas time "one touch of nature" seals anew the kinship of the human race.

Again, a "Merry Christmas."

THE MERGER, ETC.

The number of state newspapers supporting President Hill in the proposition of the Northern Securities Company, is surprising. In fact the stand that some of the leading editorial writers of Minnesota are taking in favor of giving Hill full sway, is bewildering to the reader who is not given to looking under the surface. The cry of Hill's greatness, of his wonderful achievements in behalf of the Northwest, of the necessity for giving him the "tools" he needs and must have in order to carry out his great Oriental trade conceptiuns, etc., are all very nice-sounding in their way.

So are the assertions that we get oil cheaper of the Standard Oil Company trust than we could possibly have expected to get it without the aid of that philanthropic institution which has declared dividends to the aggregate of 271 per cent. in the past ten years.

But the stubborn facts remain, to be observed by a person with half an eye.

Jas. J. Hill is great, truly great. But that greatness can expand without a relinquishment of the best interests of the people effected by his operations.

The destruction of competition may be necessary to raise the earning powers of his properities sufficiently to pay dividends on railroad assetts acquired by him at too high a price. But the original purchase of the Burlington was not at all necessary to enable him to continue his exploits, in the subjection of the Oriental trade; it will rather enable him to make money out of the enterprise faster than he otherwise could have expected to.

The facts show how freight rates in districts where he has competition are much higher than those where he has none, and are good illustrations of the inevitable effects of consolidation.

No. There is no more need to give Jas. J. Hill (appreciate him though we do) more than he deserves, than there is to continue tariff favors to the steel trust, the sugar trust, and other like institutions, which have long since outgrown the need of government succor.

The rank and file in Minnesota is just anxious for a chance to show its appreciation of his fearless integrity displayed by Gov. Van Sant in tackling the merger as the people's champion.

On national issues the continued success of the Republican party will depend upon its ability to meet the demands of the people, along these lines of opposition to consolidated usurpation of the people's rights.

Minnesota carried off honors at the stock show. Next.

Deliver us from the "holier than thou" individual, who, after miring in the filth himself, perhaps, knows no such virtue as charity or toleration.

Red Lake county lands sell as well after a snowstorm as before. This isn't a reflection on anything—rather an illustration of well-placed confidence.

Miss Roosevelt-Scovel is very careful to keep the first half of the hyphenated name in evidence—the family while stage folk having learned the value of feature advertising.

That former Red Lake Falls cigar maker who is quarantined for small pox at Thief River Falls, no doubt wishes he had maintained his residence in this healthful and delightful city.

The original Christmas stories published in The Gazette this week take the place of the serial "The Lady of Lynn," which will be resumed next week. We count it a good trade, the Christmas stories being productions of no mean talent, as well as a timely topic.

Of course it is real brave for those Republican editors to rake the board of control. But it seems to be only those editors located in institution towns who are so deeply wrought up over the board's manner of doing things. The tax-payers of the state, however, will not be averse to the board effecting a reduction of the expenses of these institutions. It may have been a case of taxing the many for the benefit of a few.

For Twenty-one Years

1880 The Old Reliable Drug Store 1901

Has been SANTA CLAUS HEADQUARTERS. He has been here, and left an immense stock of Holiday Goods for 1901, and as he filled the order he remarked that W. A. Schreiter's stock is the best in Red Lake County and by far the best ever seen in the city before AND SANTA CLAUS KNOWS. There is a splendid assortment surely, and down below we give just a hint as to variety this year:

Christmas China and Glass

A visit to our China and Glass Section cannot fail to suggest many appropriate and useful holiday gifts. Our resources are exceptionally complete, many tasteful new things are shown, and the values given are liberal—prices the very lowest.

Choice Table Glass: Goblets, Decanters, Oil Bottles, Clarets, Water Bottles, Sherbet Cups, Oyster Cocktail Glasses. We are closing out odds and ends of table glasses, water goblets, wine glasses, liqueur glasses, etc., at greatly reduced prices.

China Cups and Saucers: Large special assortments of China Cups and Saucers are now on exhibition. All are excellent pieces, most of them beautifully decorated in gold and floral designs. Many very attractive Cups, with gold handles, and Saucers, among them especially charming French and German China, decorated with a spray of flowers, and two shapes in a thin China of soft pure white.

Exceptional values of choice China in various effects—as representative may be mentioned: An extra large size coffee cup of Haviland China with floral decorations, edge prettily finished in a green vine.

Candelabra: Candlesticks, Candelabra, holders, etc., are shown in great and well-chosen varieties. As appointments for receptions and other society events, and as Christmas gifts, the many handsome effects are most appropriate.

Christmas Statuary

Something very new. Beautiful heroic busts in rich oriental effects, for mantel or piano ornaments. This is something especially attractive.

Christmas Perfumes

Our high grade, popular priced imported perfumes in beeautifully decorated bottles are always desirable gifts. Among our very large assortment are LIGHTNER'S Perfumes. Mrs. Roosevelt's favorites.

Christmas Books

Fancy bindings. Standard authors. Complete sets and individual books. Toy and picture books for the little tots.

Christmas cut glass

We are making a specialty of cut glass, and have a splendid assortment, including water sets, cream sets, vases, etc.

Christmas Toys

Wooden toys, chairs, rockers, bureaus, bed steads, cradles, drums, games, iron toys, etc. Our complete and dizzling assortment is bound to please.

Christmas Miscellany.

French plat toilet mirrors, brass frames. The latest Brunswick and Haviland China pieces in great variety. Something artistic and swell. Egg holders, chocolate sets, Vinegrettes, Pitchers, Match cases, Mantel and Piano vases. English China pieces, the newest creations and ideally beautiful. Albums, pocket books, toilet sets, fancy combs, sterling silver pieces, Christmas gift pen holders, cigar jars, Manicure sets.

Dolls

This is Doll Headquarters. From 5c up to $5. The finest line ever shown in Red Lake county.

Shell Ornaments

At prices that agree with the slimmest purse. Shells cut for beautiful, lasting, useful ornaments, in pin trays, etc., etc.

Holiday buying has begun much earlier this year than last. You'll find our isles filled every day with discriminating shoppers who have been taught the value and convenience of early selection. In anticipation of doubling the volume of our holiday trade of one year ago we have arranged for you choosing the choicest gathering of holiday merchandise from foreign and domestic marts ever shown in Red Lake county, at prices absolutely the lowest. Visit our holiday bazaar,—everything for gift giving arranged for your convenience. We make many glowing statements, but they reflect the truth and that's what interests you. We would rather err on the side of conservatism than exaggerate. But when we have a good thing which you will recognize as a good thing and thank us for the telling, we are going to be outspoken. We want you to buy little things here as well as big ones. It's not what we make on a single transaction that concerns us, it's rather your permanent patronage.

Lowest Prices is not a meaningless phrase with us. When you think another house undersells us, in simple fairness compare the qualities. We never want to carry over any part of our holiday stock and our prices are made to sell the goods. Our prices are the lowest in Red Lake County. But our goods must be seen to be appreciated. From the little tot to the great grand-father our great variety reaches and you will find here something to please everyone.

POLLY MARTIN'S CHRISTMAS EVE

A Story of Country Life at Yuletide by Eliza Archard Conner.

[Copyright, 1901, by Eliza Archard Conner.]

She was only sixteen, pretty Polly Martin, with round, soft cheeks the color of apple blossom buds and eyes as blue as the skies of her own native Canada. She had six brothers and sisters, all like herself born in the beautiful country.

Her father was a tenant farmer in a new settlement in western Canada. Pretty Polly milked the cows, fed the pigs and chickens and helped her mother with the children. When she could get employment away from home, she went out to service. Being brought up with so many children had made her very useful about a house; patient, too, and she was naturally sweet tempered, so people were glad to have her with them. And then they liked to see her in their houses because she was so pretty.

The Martins' nearest neighbor was three miles away. This was not because neighbors were so few, but because Mr. Martin's employer, Thomas Valentine, owned all the land between his own house and the log cottage where the Martins lived. But Polly was not lonely. She never thought of being so. On the contrary, she was very happy. Polly loved nature. If she raised her eyes a moment from her work and looked toward the west, she saw the grand green forest flashing and ringing with the bright winged, sweet voiced birds that civilization had not yet killed out.

If she glanced toward the northern horizon, there was the undimmed sky, radiant blue, with a marvelous gleam of silvery brightness in it that stretched away—away to the north pole itself. Eastward there was the crystal pure brook dancing to the music of its own everlasting little tinkle, tinkle, tinkle, which not even the ice of winter was able quite to subdue. Polly thought it was the sweetest music that is or ever was, and I am not sure she was wrong. To the south there were the sleek heifers wading and feeding in the clover, the white coats of the sheep shining out against the emerald pasture, and beyond, mile on mile, stretching far as eye could see, the great grainfields already changing from green to gold. Polly's heart leaped with gladness when she looked.

At Christmas time, the year Polly was sixteen, Mr. Valentine's family sent for her to come and help them for a week. Mr. Valentine lived in a handsome house surrounded by vineyards and orchards of apples, peaches, plums and pears. Near the mansion was the shining white dairy house, with the big power churn that they made the Jersey bull work by walking on a treadmill, to his intense disgust, which he showed by pawing the ground and bellowing, with his tail in the air, so soon as he was released from the humiliating treadmill.

Farmer Valentine reared grand draft horses large as small elephants and shining Christmas beeves every year for the market. Two days before Christmas that year he made his annual sale of beeves and got unusually good prices for them. It was too late to put the money he received into the bank that day, so Mr. Valentine brought it home with him, $500 in gold and silver, and locked it in a bureau drawer. Polly did not know it was there.

On the evening of the 24th of December the farmers of the county gave their annual Christmas ball. It was a great event, bringing together socially friends widely separated who did not see one another often during the rest of the year. Polly was wanted to keep the Valentine house while the family should be away at the ball. They went early, for there was a ten mile sleigh ride between them and the town where the ball was. The great sleigh, with its big, handsome horses pawing the snow and shaking their massive necks to make the bells jingle, was drawn up before the carriage door of the farmhouse, and one after another the family took their places in it. Those fine, intelligent horses looked as if they enjoyed the prospect of the sleigh ride as much as any one.

After they had gone Polly went around the house to see that all was in order for the night. She peeped into the fruithouse first just to glad her eye with the sight of the long shelves loaded with red cheeked apples and with shining green and yellow pears wrapped in tissue paper to make them keep till Christmas. She looked down into the box where lay a few bunches of late autumn grapes, the down still upon their fat, purple cheeks. They pleased Polly's artistic eye.

Next Polly fed the pigs and locked the poultry houses. Then she went indoors. The house was a modern built one, with large double plate glass windows to keep the cold out and with a great furnace in the cellar from which hot air pipes carried warmth into all the rooms. Many a king's palace was less comfortable than this house. Polly looked to see that doors and windows were fastened; then she sat down in the warm dining room to read and knit and think by turns.

Polly was not lonely or afraid. The country neighborhood was considered quite safe, and, besides, pioneer girls are not the kind to scream at a mouse. She remained up till 11 because she did not like to leave the warm fire. Then she felt sleepy and prepared to go to bed. The family would not be back till 3 o'clock in the morning. The guests at the ball danced till midnight; then they had supper, then a farewell cotillon. Then for the Valentines came the ten miles' sleigh ride.

In their home at 11 o'clock Polly, the cool headed, strong armed border girl, went down to the cellar to give the furnace a last feeding and shake up for the night and to see that it was not hot enough to set the house on fire on the one hand and that it should give out heat enough on the other hand to make the rooms warm and cozy for the family when they arrived. Then she went back to the dining room. To Polly, who lived in a cabin, but who nevertheless liked pretty things as well as any one, that room looked beautiful, with its crimson painted walls and the handsome silverware sparkling upon the sideboard. She had heard that silverware was worth $400, and she eyed it with something like awe. What a lot of money!

Admiring the silverware, Polly did not notice how time passed till she looked up with a start and saw it was half past 11. She jumped to her feet, and at that moment exactly she heard the sound of a sleigh and the horses' hoof beats upon the snow. What had happened to bring the Valentines home three hours and a half sooner than they expected to come?

But, no! Listen! Where were the sleighbells? They did not ring. They were muffled—the bells on this sleigh. What did it mean? It might mean harm, danger, terror, if the sleigh with the muffled bells stopped in front of the farmhouse.

It did stop.

Poor Polly's breath almost stopped, too, a moment later when she heard two men approach the door and talk together in a low voice. The next moment they hammered on the door tremendously, making all the noise they could to scare the girl the more, and one of them ordered her in a thundering voice to open the door:

"Open this door, Polly Martin! We know you are in there all alone, and there's $500 in the house that Valentine brought home yesterday, and we're going to have it."

But Polly said never a word, only sat still, so still she might have been carved out of stone.

"Open this door!" roared the men again. But the beating of Polly's heart was the only sound in answer, and they could not hear that. Then they pounded harder than ever and kicked the door and shook it in a rage. But it was of brave oak, strong and well seasoned, and would not yield. The robbers were in a fury. Once again they called to her, cursing her horribly. They said:

"If you open the door, we will let you off alive. If you don't, we'll get in anyhow, and then we'll shoot you dead for sure."

Still little Polly would not open.

The noise at the door ceased. What would the next terror be? Polly soon understood. The robbers went to a window. It was easy enough to force the shutter. Then there was a faint grinding sound. The burglars were cutting the large, new fashioned window pane with a diamond. And yet Polly would not open the door. Indeed it would have been no good to do so now, for the robbers would soon be in the room anyhow. Polly only sat still and waited for her doom. Her tongue felt dry in her mouth. She felt so cold her teeth chattered, and she could not even hear her heart beat now, for it seemed to almost stop.

Crash went the outer pane. The grinding, cutting sound began on the inner one. It was quickly loose on two sides; only a matter of five minutes more for Polly, and then—

And then, in the very nick of time, in the last moment, there came a sound of sleighbells, merry chiming, sweet and clear, tinkle, tinkle, like the fairy bells she had heard tell in her childhood sounded in the air above people's heads sometimes. Yes, thank God, it was bells, but real sleighbells, and very, very near! The robbers took to their heels and to their sleigh with the muffled bells and drove off as fast as they could lash their horses to go.

But it was not the family returning. Nobody came into the house. No sleigh stopped in front, neither did any move past with its merry ting-a-ling of music, though Polly certainly heard the bells a moment or two longer. Then all quieted down. But Polly was too shaken up now to go to bed at all. She sat there alone, frightened and trembling, three hours longer till the family came home. She was only a girl, you know, scarcely more than a child.

But where were the sleighbells that had saved Polly's life and the Valentines' property? You would never guess, and it was some time before they found out for certain. The story is really a wonderful one, and, best of all, it is a true story.

In the harness house a large white cat was kept to destroy the rats and mice. She seldom left the harness house and had a warm bed made for her in a barrel of hay. That afternoon a careless stableman had thrown a set of sleighbells across the barrel where pussy's bed was. The noise the robbers made disturbed her, and she had jumped out to see what it meant. In doing so, being a large, heavy cat, she shook the bells and jangled them, and that was what scared the burglars off.

* * * * * * *

Polly took a fine, big, honest husband a few years later and is living in a pretty country home of her own, with the radiant skies above her, the woods and orchards and green fields around her, the very scenes to her so well beloved. There she will probably live to tell her grandchildren how the cat shook the sleighbells and saved her life and Farmer Valentine's $500. After all, which is the real heroine of the story, Polly or pussy? One question more:

Was it a mere accident that the cat shook the bells and made them ring at the particular moment she did or was it something else?

The Trimming of The Tree

[Copyright, 1901, by E. L. Sabin.]

WHAT SHALL WE DO FOR THE BRAVE YOUNG TREE
DRAGGED IN ITS PRIME FROM THE FRAGRANT WOOD—
DRAGGED FROM ITS DWELLING WIDE AND FREE
AND NOW IN A NARROW CHAMBER STOOD?
WHAT SHALL WE GIVE IN THE PLACE OF ALL
THE MANY THINGS THAT IT KNEW SO WELL—
THE SUN, THE BUDS AND THE THRUSH'S CALL?
LISTEN, OH, PEOPLE, AND I WILL TELL:

LIGHT ITS BRANCHES WITH MIRTH AND JOY,
CROWD IT WITH LAUGHTER, LIMB TO LIMB.
BESIDE THE SMILE OF A HAPPY BOY
THE SUNNIEST SUMMER DAY IS DIM.
HANG IT HEAVY WITH PEACE AND LOVE,
KISSES AND WELCOME AND CAROLS GAY,
TILL FROM BASE TO FEATHERY CREST ABOVE
IT OFFERS THE FRUITS OF THE WONDROUS DAY.

NOW, IS A THRUSH'S NOTE AS CLEAR,
AS SWEET AND TENDER AND GLORIFIED
AS THE VOICE OF THE CHILDREN, FAR AND NEAR,
SINGING THE PRAISES OF CHRISTMASTIDE?
AH, GALLANT PINE, WE MAY TRY IN VAIN
TO GIVE YOU BACK TO YOUR HAUNTS, 'TIS TRUE;
BUT, VALLEY OR HILLTOP, PEAK OR PLAIN,
NEVER A TREE SO BLEST AS YOU!

A Letter to Sandy Claws.

The Sunday school teacher was telling Tommy Tuffun about Santa Claus and his big department store up at the north pole and about the great free distribution of presents to good little boys and girls.

"An' does de Sandy Claws guy give 'em away free gratis fer nuttin'?" asked Tommy.

"Certainly," said the teacher.

"Gee! He mus' be easy!" cried Tommy. "What a puddin'! But, say, teacher, has yer gotter be good boys to be let in on de ground floor uv de graft?"

"Yes, you must be good," was the reply.

"Gee! Den dat lets me out! I'm good—nit. Sandy Claws'll turn me down hard, sure, an' me wantin' a jackknife de woist kind!"

"But you're a good boy, Tommy," remonstrated the teacher. "All the boys in the class are going to write a letter to Santa Claus telling him what they want for Christmas, and you must write too."

Tommy agreed to do so, and after half an hour of hard work with a pencil he handed the teacher the following letter:

Deer Sandy Claws—I want a jackknife fer Crissmuss, see? I ain't a good boy, see? But if youse don't gimme de jackknife fer Crissmuss de nex' time me an' de kids ketches yer in Cherry Hill we won't do a t'ing to yer! See?

A Bountiful Giver.

"Is Pooreman's rich wife liberal with him on Christmas?"

"She was last year."

"What did she present him with?"

"Triplets."

Too Much For Her.

Mrs. Pinchacent—I had a terrible dream last night, Hiram. I dreamed you did something that made me drop dead.

Mr. Pinchacent—What was it I did, Maria?

Mrs. Pinchacent—You gave me a present for Christmas.

Some Christmas "Nevers."

Never "mark down" a pricemark on a Christmas present. If the mark doesn't indicate that you are properly extravagant, rub it out or, still better, mark it up.

Never give your dear wife a cord of wood or a ton of coal for Christmas just to show her that you have money to burn.

Never tell your little boy that there isn't any Santa Claus. The older boys will do it for you all too soon.

Never buy more Christmas presents than you can afford. This is very good advice, and, of course, you won't follow it.

Never give a minister a pair of slippers if there is a small boy in his family, for small boys ought to be happy on Christmas.

Never ask a girl for a kiss when she's under the mistletoe bough. Take it.

Never try to give your wife a $500 sealskin sack if you are somebody's cashier on an income of $7 a week.

Never give your husband a box of cigars. Give him a big box of Schuyler's bonbons, and some of it may come your way.

Never get mixed and give Mrs. Jones the present she sent you last year. She may recognize it.

Never warn a woman that she is standing under the mistletoe. If she's homely, she will be your enemy for life; if she's pretty, she'll think, not without reason, perhaps, that you're a fool.

Hard Luck.

Johnny Bug—Why, what are you crying about, Willy?

Willy Centiped—Boo-hoo! I hung up my stockings, and Santa Claus only put presents in thirty-nine of 'em! Boo-hoo!

LICKED INTO WEST POINT

A Valuable Christmas Present Given With Closed Fists.

By MALCOLM SEARLE.

[Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.]

ON a certain homekeeping Christmas occasion in the latter part of the seventies I was the chief performer in an affair which was regarded at the time by some as of doubtful credit to me.

Let no one take alarm. This is not a love story. The incident smacked of the prize ring, and I, too, might have looked on myself as a bad lot but for certain extenuating circumstances and the good results that came from it.

It was not often that I had been "whopped," as the boys called it. When youngsters—my brothers and myself—we lived most of the time in the country on a big place a mile or so from a village, where we never went except in a carriage and with our elders. So we seldom "met up" against the enterprising youth of the town.

We did not allow the tutor to flog us much, as he had been directed to do by the governor when it should become necessary. The governor had been flogged himself in his school days and believed in the system.

But, however much we scuffled among ourselves—not ill naturedly—we resented physical correction on the tutor's part. Once or twice rulers and inkstands went flying in the air at him for it.

The last time this happened he resigned, because he thought his authority had not been sufficiently supported by the governor.

I was immediately sorry for what I had done and had offered an apology, before the governor, to the irate tutor, but he would not have it and insisted on the trouncing.

To this my father would not consent, after my offer to apologize, and so the tutor went, and in his place came a younger man, college bred and studying for the clergy, but an all around gymnast and good boxer. As a sparrer he "'andled 'is mawleys uncommon."

The new tutor, in fact, was a good fellow, a gentleman as well as scholar. He was a graduate of the modern Athens, which, like the ancient, cultivates muscle as well as mind.

The governor readily acceded to the gymnasium outfit, including the gloves, and in this liberal education we worked off our superfluous and sometimes inconvenient energies.

For my own part, I took kindly to the joyous art of sparring and had got up a muscle and proficiency with the gloves.

The bully of the town was a couple of years older and bigger than myself and had plenty of pluck. He and his friends had been giving us lots of "sass" for some time whenever we drove into the village, because of our "store clothes," as his comrades said, and he had announced once or twice that he would give me a nice cuffing if I would step out of the carriage and accommodate him.

It happened that a cousin about my own age, of whom I was envious, was with us at the last one of these invitations. My cousin had entered college ahead of me, and he was not only a fine scholar, but a young athlete as well. He had come down to spend Christmas holidays with us, and as I did not care to be bullied before him nor to show the white feather I invited my pugnacious adversary on this occasion to come out with his friends, who would see fair play, on the next afternoon—day before Christmas—to a spot near our place, where we would have it out.

He accepted promptly and came out on time with a gang of a dozen or more companions about his own age to the tryst, just outside the house grounds in rear of the stable. The coachman knew about the affair, as he always came in for a share of the hectoring when in the village, and he was on hand with two or three of the stablemen likewise to see fair play.

The village bully was a good one, full of pluck and not vicious, as he presently showed. Though confident enough in his ability to whip me, he lacked the coolness which proper training gives and which I had, or thought I had. A ring was formed, and the village chap was impatient to begin.

Hardly before I had tossed my jacket aside he jumped for me with the spring of a young tiger.

I stepped to one side, of course, as I had been taught, and as he went by I gave him a right hander on the side of his head with some force. He staggered a little, but kept his feet and, turning, was upon me again with a leap, meaning to close.

This time I was ready, and, stopping him with my left hand in his face, I got a good blow in with my right directly on his diaphragm. Down he went, with both hands on his stomach, and it was some seconds before he could get his breath. When he did, he was up again all right.

But he had learned caution, and when he came to the scratch for the second round, so called, he held up his hands somewhat in proper form for sparring and waited for me.

I had seen too much of his strength and quickness to risk a rush at him and contented myself with a little light playing for awhile, tapping him on the nose and mouth and parrying an occasional blow aimed by him.

He soon got hot at this tapping and parrying and came at me again with both fists flying and head down, like a bull. I had some difficulty here in parrying his blows and avoiding his attempts to close, but finally by a quick movement I got his head "in chancery"—that is, under and between the left arm and side.

By this time I had begun to get enough exercise and rather wished myself well out of the business. I thought if I gave my stout adversary a black eye or two he would be willing to quit, so while I had his head in a viselike grip I hit him a couple of smart clips with half closed hand between the eyes. At the same time, with a trip of his feet, I flung him away from me sprawling on the ground.

Instead of having enough he was up again in a second, and I saw that I had got to fight in sure earnest or get whipped, and that pretty soon.

Steadying myself, I sent my left hand to his face and gave him the "fifth lesson," or as heavy a blow as I could strike with my right, full on his left ribs, well to the front. As he doubled up and turned a trifle I let him have the left again with full force. It landed on his right jaw just under the ear. This did the business, and he went to the ground, knocked out.

The victory I had won was that of pure skill accompanied by fairly good courage and muscle against ignorance with twice as much strength and an equal courage.

An angry snarl came from the crowd that had come out from the village when they found their champion defeated and unable to renew the fight, and one of the biggest among them yelled:

"Let's do the swells up!"

At this juncture the broad shoulders and chest of the tutor put in an appearance to restore discipline. At the same moment my late antagonist—Tom Cushing was his name—recovered from the slight daze which the blow under the ear had caused, and, hearing the talk of the villagers, he hopped up like a poked lion.

"Look here, you fellows," he said to his companions, "if I can't lick young Searle here"—my own name—"I can whip any one or two of you chaps, and the first one who puts a hand on him will have to settle with me. I brought this fight on myself and got licked on the square, and served me right, because I didn't know how to fight, and he did."

At this manly talk I walked up and cordially shook hands with Cushing. He responded as warmly and said, with a rueful look at my hand:

"Rather a small fist to knock out a big lubber like me."

"No lubber at all," I said. "You only lack a little science. Come out to the gymnasium next week and take a lesson or two. All you want is practice."

At this entente cordiale the crowd cheered, and all hands parted good friends.

Cushing came out to the place, as I had invited him to do, and we showed him how to "put up his hands" to such effect that when I got back home in the spring I found him on pretty nearly even terms with the tutor in everything the gymnasium afforded, including fencing and general athletics as well as boxing.

He was an orphan with scarcely a relative in the world. His mother had died in his infancy, and some five years later his father, who had been a man of wealth and social standing in the city, died, broken in fortune by unfortunate stock transactions.

And so the boy had grown up to the age of seventeen, handsome and well formed enough, but ignorant of everything except the rudiments of schooling and the contents of half a dozen books or so, the remnants of his father's once fine library.

I had taken an immense liking for Cushing, and he had for me, as boys often do after a row. His situation in life, contrasting with my own, appealed to me, and, being rather a favorite of my father, especially after the fight, of which he had heard, I easily persuaded him to take an interest in the premises. He had known Cushing's father slightly and that his business career, though disastrous, had been an honorable one.

It was slated, therefore, that my father was to advance the necessary money for young Cushing on his future and that he was to come over to our place and be fitted for college with the rest of us.

But a better scheme yet soon presented itself. We had some influence with the congressman of our district, and there was a vacancy at West Point to be filled by him. The honorable member had already selected a politician's son for the position, but my father intimated to the congressman that if he wanted to be quite sure of his re-election he would do well to appoint our man.

This was sufficient. Cushing got the appointment and was literally called from the plow that season to prepare for the service of his country. Coached by our tutor for a few weeks, he made such headway that there was no trouble about passing his examination at the Military academy when the time came. His physical requisites were simply perfect, and he went in with flying colors and is now a gallant officer in the army.

And, far from feeling the qualms of conscience which afflicted me somewhat at the time of it, I am disposed to look with complacency on what may be termed a virtuous prizefight, to the advantage of all concerned, but taking place at a season when peace should reign supreme.

As for Cushing, he has always declared that the thrashing I gave him on the afternoon of that Christmas eve was the most valuable Christmas present he has ever received.

HIGH SCHOOL LITERARY SOCIETIES

WHERE KATIE SPENT CHRISTMAS.

BY THE SPARTAN SOCIETY

The snow was falling softly as Ben started home from the southern end of the wood lot with a heavy load of wood. It had been a hard day for Ben. To begin with, he had not had enough breakfast to keep a healthy boy of his size comfortable and only a few crusts of bread and some cold baked potatoes for dinner. The snow that winter was late so that sleds could not be used for hauling and this made the work much harder for him. As he plodded slowly along beside the team, he thought of his little crippled sister staying patiently at home alone, and as usual he tried to work out some scheme for raising money to take her to a great physician who had lately come to the city fifteen miles away.

Ben and his sister Katie had been alone that winter. The mother had died in the early fall, and the father, a worthless man, had gone they knew not where—to look for work, he said, though it might have been to continue in idleness. The children were often lonely, for they had no other relatives in the world, and although Ben worked all day hauling wood and Katie sold a few of the pretty little baskets and fancy things she was always making it was hard work to keep the wolf from the door. In two days it would be Christmas which made things seem worse than ever for they could not but think of the last happy Christmas when they had all been together.

As Ben neared the house he saw the little girl sitting at the window, and trying to forget his troubles and weary limbs he waved his hand and threw at her a handful of snow now falling swiftly and in large flakes.

"Going to be a big snowstorm, sis," he said, stamping the snow off his boots. "And mighty glad I am of it, for it is just what I need for my hauling."

The child looked up as she heard his hearty voice, and a bright smile flitted across her wan little face.

"Hello Bennie," she called, do you think now Santa Claus will come since it is snowing? I have been most dreadfully afraid he couldn't get here, because you see he couldn't use his sleigh without any snow."

"We will hope for a visit from him, but I am afraid this is slightly out of his way, so he may forget us,"—and Ben turned away from the sorrowful look which came over the little face.

After supper was cleared away and Katie in bed, Ben sat down before the grate whose dying embers threw a faint light over the room and very soon the weary boy fell asleep. He dreamed his mother was back sitting with him by the fire. She started to tell him a plan for Katie's Christmas, he thought; and he heard her calling him by his baby name, Bennie, so plainly that at length he awoke.

"Bennie, Bennie, won't you come?'

"Katie, poor little girl, it is her back," he said, hastening into her room.

"It hurts so, I can't lay here Bennie," she moaned. "Won't you take me in your arms?"

Lifting her tenderly, Ben carried her out and sat down before the fire. But the pain did not seem to be relieved. She tried to lie quietly in his arms and begged him to sing. but even this did not calm her, and she soon had to return to bed, where she lay tossing and moaning.

Poor Ben, a mile from the nearest neighbor, a heavy snowstorm raging without, and a little sister suffering agonies within! He had been hoping that cold weather would not bring back the old trouble, but here it was again, and what could he do to help her? All night he sat by her bedside tenderly caring for her, and hoping against hope that she would be better in the morning. But morning found her with flushed cheeks and eyes strangely bright, murmuring incoherently about mamma, papa and Santa Claus. All day long she raved, and Ben dared not leave her side. Early in the afternoon, with the storm still raging, it began to grow dark, and Ben felt more and more that he could not bear another night alone. Finally Katie fell into a troubled sleep, and pulling on his overcoat, cap and mittens he started out, intending to apply to the nearest neighbor for help.

It had now grown very dark. The wind was blowing a gale and piling the snow into deep drifts. Nearly blinded, but confident that he was going right, Ben floundered along. Still when it seemed certain that he had gone far enough he could not see any house or light or anything but darkness.

Could he have missed the way? No, no, it was farther on, he reassured himself, and struggled frantically forward. But the snow kept getting deeper and deeper, and the wind blew more fiercely; it blinded him so that he fell often, and soon became terribly exhausted. Then he discovered that he was beyond the woods and knew that he was lost on the prairie, in a blizzard, with his sister at home, perhaps dying.

Suddenly in the distance he heard some one calling. He sprang up, shouting with all his might, and struggled through the snow in the direction of the voice, until he could distinguish the dim outline of a horse and cutter. Without stopping to ask who the man was, his only thought to get help to Katie, Ben asked him eagerly where they were. But the man knew no more about it than Ben, so the only thing to do seemed to be to wait until the storm abated. While they waited Ben told about his little sister, how she had suffered since a baby, and all about their troubles. The man asked many questions about the little girl and told Ben he would go home with him to see her, as he was used to tending the sick.

The storm was now subsiding and very soon Ben could make out familiar landmarks, which enabled him to get back home. When they reached the house, Ben hurried to Katie's bedside but found her sleeping heavily as he had left her. He did not see that the stranger came and looked intently at the little sleeper, withdrawing quietly with a very sober look on his face. But later Ben saw him opening a little black satchel, the very sight of which made him shudder. The thought flashed through his mind—could it be the great doctor?

The man seeing Ben's perplexity, crossed the room and said, "My boy I am sorry for you, I am Doctor —— and will do my best."

Ben knew it was the great doctor brought by chance or providence right into the house. Feeling that it was perhaps too late, he turned aside quickly to hide the burning tears and left the house.

The doctor gazing earnestly at the pale little face, thought, "If I had but seen her sooner," and his heart ached for the children.

The daylight was creeping in around the curtain before Ben returned to the room. "Sir," he said, "I have no money, but if you can cure my sister I will work for you as long as I live and give you all I earn."

"Money, my boy, money! Have I not enough?" and taking Ben's hand he added, "We will do our best."

That night Katie seemed better. The pain was gone and she looked brighter than she had for days. Ben's spirits rose, but the doctor knew that although she seemed better the end was near.

As the darkness gathered, Ben's spirits fell, but to Katie everything was joyous. She talked about Santa Claus and spending Christmas with mamma. At last she asked Bennie to rock her and sing the song she called her own: about the baby lying in the hay. After the last verse she fell into a quiet sleep, and Ben laying her gently down little thought he would never hold the dear, frail form in his arms again.

Shortly after midnight she passed quietly away; she had gone to spend Christmas with her mother.

Poor Ben, whose heart was entirely wrapped up in his little sister, threw himself beside her and sobbed bitterly, begging her to come back. And this was Ben's sad Christmas. Was Katie's sad?

The good doctor told him it was better so, and after laying her to rest beside her mother, asked the sorrowing little boy to come and make his home with him. And Ben went.

CHRISTMAS AT LOFTON'S.

BY THE ATHENIAN SOCIETY.

Help! Help! The shouts rang out on the midnight air, and shrieks of terror-stricken women, intermingled with moans of the injured and dying, and orders of sturdy men, whom providence had safely guided from the wreck, broke the death like silence, which but a few moments before held sway.

As a branch of the Union Pacific railroad winds its way through the blue hills of southern Idaho, it suddenly breaks out of a large grotto known as Panther's gulch into the bright and beautiful valley of Snake River. During the day rain had fallen in torrents and many a herder's sod hut was doomed for destruction. A small streamlet, enlarged on its course down Lofton's hill, had grown to a creek of some size and had found its way between the ties at the beginning of the recently constructed grade at the outlet of the cut. A space eight feet long and two feet deep on one side was washed out. The deadly work was completed at the arrival of the eleven-thirty train and there was no one to warn the onward rush of the Union Pacific Express, no one to tell the passengers of the awful fate that some were to meet that night. Now the train has rounded the bend, and, like an arrow shot from the Indian's bow, it shoots through the cut in Lofton's hill, and—Oh! That some one had seen the washout. The dreary dismal night and the drizzling rain added to the misery of the scene.

Some of the more fortunate passengers who had escaped uninjured immediately set to work to relieve the suffering. A young man of evident self-possession and sterling worth could be seen aiding and helping the wounded. Finding that some shelter was necessary, he looked about him. About a quarter of a mile distant his quick eye caught the faint glimmer of a light through the black darkness. Everyone saw the situation in a minute and following their young leader, who was carrying one of the injured, all, who could, aided the wounded to a place of refuge. As they neared the house the door was flung open and a round faced, good natured German appeared.

"Vel! Vat haf been de matter, a train wreck?"

"Yes, and a bad one," was the reply.

"I t'ought so, I t'ought so, I knew that rain vas cum down for notting yesterday. I had lame foot and cud no heard my sheep or I vould haf saw it."

The kind hearted German proved to be none other than Mr. Lofton. He had been a herder in that country ever since he was fifteen and was well acquainted with all in the neighboring towns. His doors were flung open and his house, although poorly furnished, was turned into a hospital.

Roland Montegue had led the sufferers to a place of refuge.

The next morning saw a big change in the condition of affairs. Many, who had merely fainted from fright had recovered, others, who were bruised had been doctored and had regained sufficient strength to leave the hospital, when help arrived from the nearest village of Beaver. Some remained, however, to aid in the care of those who were still suffering until nurses could be secured.

That night was Christmas eve and many a happy expectation had been turned to grief by this unexpected occurence. However, all joined in with the good host and hostess in making it as pleasant as possible for the unfortunate ones. Acquaintances were made all around and Roland found that the young lady whom he had borne to the house was Lisia Verne.

Her parents resided about five miles north of Beaver in a small cottage-like house, built in the early seventies. Although small, it was neatly and well furnished. Her mother was strikingly beautiful to be seen way out in the Rockies, among the mountaineers. Lisia had inherited most of her mother's beauty and fine womanly qualities. Her father was a rough mountaineer, one who had experienced many hardships and who had made his living by hunting, trapping and acting as guide, in which practice he was an expert. Her two brothers, big stout fellows, worked in the Idaho mines and were the principle means of support in keeping her at school at Pocatello in southern Idaho.

Roland Montegue on the other hand had made his way through life, ever since he was fifteen, alone, without the comforts of home and the cares of a mother. His father had died while he was but a child and the rash treatment of his step-father had driven him early from home. From his home in Montana, by undergoing many hardships, he worked his way south, and at the end of two years had reached San Francisco, a place he had always longed to visit. He believed some distant relatives of his father resided there.

His first work here was splitting wood. He had the chance offered him and he took it. In the course of time, by chance, he found some of his father's friends and was given the job as errand boy in a large bank. By degrees he worked his way up and on account of his integrity and energy, he was to become assistant cashier.

For the first time since he had left he was to visit his home and suprise his mother and little step-sister on Christmas day, but now it was out of the question. He could not reach home until two days after Christmas. And so the stories went the rounds until everyone knew the others' history.

The next morning was Christmas. The day was not at all pleasant. A heavy fog hung over the valley and withal, it was a typical day during the rainy season out West. Although gifts were lacking, still a fine Christmas dinner was enjoyed. The fattest of Mr. Lofton's lambs was killed and roasted and hot pumpkin pies were brought out. Steaming potatoes and many other things which seemed with them now luxuries were prepared and together were set forth. As fine a Christmas dinner as one could wish for was partaken of by all. During the afternoon Lisia's parents arrived, together with other aid, and at about four o'clock, all were on their way for Beaver, after many good byes and many thanks had been exchanged.

In the course of time Lisia recovered from hes injuries and, after an absence of nearly two months, was ready to resume her work at school. By close application to her studies she was able to make up her work and that following spring, she was a sweet girl graduate.

Rolond returned to San Francisco with his mother and step-sister and took up the responsibilities of assistant cashier of the First National Bank.

The hall was crowded with the gayest of people and everyone had donned their best apparel. It was the occasion of a grand musical in San Francisco, January the thirtieth. Lisia Verne, who had the fall following her graduation come to San Francisco to study music, was present. In the course of the evening she accidentally met Roland Montegue. Each learned of the other's welfare and for the first time it occurred to Roland how much he enjoyed Lisia's presence.

The following Christmas, two years after the terrible train wreck they were happily married. So that, ever after, Christmas was a reminder to them of the happy union as well as the awful circumstances under which they first met.

WHY SANTA DIDN'T COME

A Christmas Story For Good Little Girls and Boys.

BY HOWARD EARL.

[Copyright, 1901, by Hamilton Musk.]

EVERY child who reads this story doubtless remembers the time, not long ago, when Santa Claus apparently forgot to put in his or her stocking the toys that had been especially asked for, when, in short, it really looked in the morning as though Santa Claus had actually failed to come at all. Now, the fact is that Santa did not come, and, though the news of his failure was suppressed at the time, I am at last able to reveal the secret.

One day shortly before that Christmas Santa Claus was feeling very blue because Prancer and Dancer were getting old, and Blitzen was so much "off his feed" that it was very doubtful whether the reindeer team could start on its great annual present delivery run on Christmas eve. Santa knew that millions of children would be very much disappointed if he did not visit their homes. He had received such a lot of letters and telephone messages from good little girls and boys asking for drums and dolls and bicycles and all sorts of toys that a big tear or two rolled down his bearded cheek as he thought of the sad looks the children would wear should he fail to come. Suddenly Santa's face brightened.

"Say!" he shouted. "What's the matter with my trying one of those new naughtymobiles? They never get old and stiff in the joints like Prancer and Dancer and are never 'off their feed' like poor Blitzen. The reindeerless age has come, and I must be strictly up to date. I'll order a naughtymobile this very day."

When the beautiful machine came, Santa was as tickled as a little boy with a new red wagon.

He was so anxious to take a spin in his big new reindeerless toy delivery wagon that he did not wait for the automobile teacher to come and show him how it worked. Leaping in, he turned the power on suddenly, and the machine gave such a jump forward that poor fat Santa bounced up in the air like a rubber ball and then nearly bounced off into the snow when he came down on the seat again. He bit his tongue terribly, too, and you know how that hurts, but he had no time to think of it because the machine was zipping toward the north pole like the lightning express going down grade. Dozens of explorers are anxious to make dashes for the pole, but as it is very icy and very hard none of them would care to run into it with an automobile going a mile a minute. Santa Claus felt exactly the same way about it, and, giving the steering gear a quick twist, he just missed finding the pole by about two inches and dashed straight for his big toy factory at the same terrific speed.

"Heavens! I wish somebody'd move that building out of the way, and move it mighty quick!" he thought, clinching his teeth and giving the steering rod another jerk. "If I ever hit that toy factory, there won't be even a pink elephant left for the children to smash, and there won't be any Santa Claus left, either! Whoa! Haw! Gee!"

The automobile swerved sharply to the left on two wheels, ran over a polar bear that didn't turn out quick enough and then made a bee line for the big barn and yard where the reindeer were kept. When they saw the strange thing coming, the reindeer snorted in surprise and began pawing the snow. Blitzen, who was rather ugly because he had the stomach ache, jumped the fence, lowered his head and charged straight toward the machine, which doubled him up like a jackknife and sent him flying over the barn as easily as a boy would bat a rubber ball. Poor Blitzen! He never knew what struck him. As for the other reindeer, they kicked up their heels, broke down the fence and ran for dear life just as Santa and the automobile, or, to be more exact, the automobile and Santa, tore the barn doors from their hinges, roared through the barn like a cyclone and then started straight for the south pole, 12,430 statute miles away, as if they were wanted there, and wanted badly.

He tugged frantically at the steering gear and tried to shut off the power, but all his efforts were in vain.

Zip! Bang! Bumpty-bump, bumpty-hump! Zip! Whir-r-r-r!

"Stop us! Whoa! Back! Steady, boy; steady! Naughtymobile? I should say so—the very naughtiest that ever got loose!" poor Santa Claus cried.

Zip! Bumpty-bump! Whir-r-r-r! On and on they sped. Santa Claus was powerless, or had too much power, and the machine never stopped until it reached the south pole. This took a lot of time, and, as Santa, of course, had to walk back those 12,430 statute miles, he didn't reach his toy shop and the north pole and the dear old reliable reindeer until about the middle of February, all of which explains why he and the reindeer failed to make their usual toy delivery trip on that particular Christmas you remember when you did not get all the things you had asked him for.

OLD SANTA IN HIS MOODS.

They Keep Him Busy.

Santa Claus—Get a move on you, boys. There's 1,400 Joneses in the city directory, and we've got to visit every one of them tonight!

No Questions Asked.

Santa Claus (as he starts out on Christmas eve to fill stockings)—Well, there's one good thing about this Santa Claus business—a feller kin stay out one night in the year without gettin' a jawin' from the old woman next mornin'.

THE TRUE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

By M. K. Rutledge.

[Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.]

I had taken advantage of the absence of the children on an errand to drag the Christmas tree out of the cellar and set it up in the parlor. It was Christmas eve. My wife had left me alone with the tree for a few minutes while she went to get a spool of green silk which she thought would be an improvement for tying purposes on the white cord which I had begun to use.

Presently the room darkened as if filled by a cloud, and the cloud gathered into a compact mass near me, startling me. Much more was I frightened as it gradually assumed the shape of a tall, long bearded old man, but when the figure grew still more distinct and I saw the benignant smile and the hands full of ornaments lit for my tree my fear subsided.

"Here," said the spirit, handing me a little box, "is something which you should not dress your tree without. It is the observance of all good old Christmas customs. Too many have been neglected in the past. Within are instructions for making wassail, for composing carols, for mumming, for the game of snapdragon and indeed for all the ceremonies wherewith good folks were wont to honor Christmas before we fell upon these degenerate days."

Reverently I took the box and hung it up.

"This," said he, handing me a small lamp, "you should fill and trim at each Christmastide, but keep lighted all the year around for your children's sake. It is the lamp of good example."

With a mental vow I took the lamp and set it lighted among the sweet smelling fir branches.

Out of a bag he shook a heap of spangly, shining ornaments on the floor.

"The wit, the song, the story and the loud laughter which ought to garnish your Christmas," said he. "Do not hang them up yet. The box of ancient custom will show you how to arrange them on the tree. But here is something indispensable."

Another bag was emptied. Sweetmeats in all forms and of all sorts, I thought.

He read my mind. "All of one kind," he said—"all the sweets of cheerfulness—though they have a varied look. Yet they never pall on the taste. Hang them up at once. They are magical sweets, never disappearing no matter how freely they are partaken of if you only desire them to remain. Keep them in the house all the year. Let each member of your family carry some always, but never forget to pat the whole board on the Christmas tree."

REVERENTLY I TOOK THE BOX.

I had been hanging them while he spoke. He now stopped me with:

"There is not much more time for me to stay here, so I will trouble you to attend to the rest of what I say, doing no work meanwhile. Here are the apples of plenty. You gather them by persistent endeavor during the year. Never fail to garnish your tree with them, one for each member of your family and one for the wayfarer.

"I give you lastly this golden taper. You are to set it lighted on top of the tree, and when the time for present giving comes you are to present it to your good lady. You are both to keep it lighted all the year around. It is the taper of love and loyalty."

"And who are you?" I asked, seeing that he began to fade away.

"The true spirit of Christmas," replied he faintly and was gone.

One Chance Left.

"I know why you always sit up so late on Christmas eve, Miss Oldgal."

"And why do I, Freddy?"

"You think mebbe you'll see Santa Claus and he'll ask you to marry him."

ORDER FOR HEARING PROOF OF FOREIGN WILL.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake. } ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, 23rd Nov. 1901.

In the matter of the estate of George Parsons,
Deceased.

Whereas, certain writings purporting to be duly authenticated copies of the Last Will and Testament of George Parsons, late of the County of Waukesha, Wisconsin, deceased, and the probate thereof in the Waukesha County Court, Wisconsin, have been delivered to this court;

And whereas, John H. Parsons has filed therewith his petition, representing among other things that said George Parsons lately died in said county of Waukesha, testate, possessed of certain real estate, situated in said Red Lake county, Minnesota, and that said petitioner is the executor named in said will and praying that the instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters testamentary be to him issued thereon:

It is ordered that proofs of said instrument and the said petition be heard before this court, at the probate office in said county, on the 23d day of December, A. D. 1901, at one o'clock in the afternoon, when all persons interested may appear for or contest the probate of said instrument:

LOCAL ❖ ITEMS.

Call at Allard's for Christmas tree decorations.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Q. Adams returned Thursday from Crookston.

Among the prominent Thief River Fallsite in the city Thursday was Phil. Zeh.

F. B. Newton made a business trip to Grand Forks Monday, returning yesday.

'Tis said Arthur Perras will succeed N. W. Brown as landlord at the Palace hotel.

August Mucke left Monday for Walhalla, N. D., to spend the holidays with his parents.

W. Keeser, of Rutland, Iowa, came up yesterday with a view to buying out one of our local business institutions.

L. P. Stranahan, auditor of the St. Hilaire Retail Lumber Company, was conferring with local manager Ed. Townsend on Monday.

Rev. Andrew Walker returned Monday from from Crookston, having occupied the pulpit in the Presbyterian church the day previous.

Judge Knight's many friends will be pleased to learn that his condition is again almost normal, and he will soon be able to be about.

Frank E. Huut, A. E. Garceau and Ed. L. Healy are looking up rates to the West, with a view of visiting that section after the holidays.

W. A. Schreiter visited his brother-in-law, Mayor Kretzschmar, at Thief River Falls, yesterday. Mr. Kretzschmar is still very ill with diabetes.

Clerk of Court Perrault this week issued the following marriage licenses: Crist Kinn and Gerty Reindal; Halvor O. Veiken and Caroline P. Rosedahl.

Ovila D. Quesnell was in from Mentor Tuesday after that new brass trimmed harness, which L. A. Kaufer says is the swellest thing ever turned out of his harness shop.

Prominent among the out of town hustlers in the city Saturday was F. C. Leppert, of the firm of Leppert Bros., Wylie, who are building up a big trade in the hardware and farming implement line over there.

Several farmers living on the east side of the river in the town of Rocksbury held a meeting last week, and considered the advisability of having the East Side ditch extended further south. This was the unanimous opinion.

Supt. Whiteley leaves Friday for Grand Rapids whence he goes up to his claim on the Big Fork river as the advance agent for the other members of the Red Lake Falls colony, who expect to start their actual residence during the holidays.

Miss Elizabeth McNerthney is back from Winona, two weeks in advance of the holiday vacation, on account of a threatened quarantine of her boarding place. It's small-pox, of course, and Miss McNerthney is glad to get back here where the disease is unknown, as it were.

Among those availing themselves of the low rates offered by the Great Northern, are Joseph Boril, Adelard Delormo and M. Bomdardie. Mr. Baril goes to St. Narcisse, Quebec, to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Baril, after an absence of seventeen years, Montreal being the destination of the others. They left on the Great Northern Monday.

The Rev. Val Kern was in from Polk Centre Monday laying in a store of supplies for the Christmas observance in his church near Wylie. A large "Christbaum" will be a conspicuous feature. Mr. Kern says after reading the pointers to Christmas shoppers in last week's Gazette he was convinced that Red Lake Falls was the place for Christmas shoppers.

Another one of those pleasant "neighborhood parties" was the social gathering Saturday night last, when Mrs. C.F. Johnson entertained a company of ladies at her home on Edward street. The guests pronounced the event an unqualified success. An interesting program was arranged, chief among the pleasures of which was the instrumental music by the hostess, who is an accomplished pianist. Bounteous refreshments were served at an appropriate hour. The ladies voted Mrs. Johnson a charming hostess.

Miss Oliva Renquist died at her home at Cannon Falls, this state, on the 10th inst. Miss Renquist was a teacher in our schools last year. As the year's work was drawing to a close, she was suddenly stricken with consumption, and had to give up her work here. We doubt if in the history of our schools any teacher was ever more strongly entrenched in the affections of her pupils and co-workers, and to these the sad news of her death comes as in the nature of a personal bereavement.

Jas. Meehan, who could pose as an Adonis without stretching a point was a business visitor from Thief River Falls Tuesday.

Harry Healy leaves Friday for the Twin Cities where he will visit for a time before proceeding to his former home at Morris to spend the holidays.

W. C. Hall, Western Union Telegraph Company lineman, was up from Crookston Monday on a tour of inspection. He found everything in line, including Agent Thomas and Operator Bryant.

Ole Christiansen on Monday submitted to an operation for appendicitis. He is in a hospital at St. Paul. Ole's many friends here will be pleased to know that his condition is entirely satisfactory.

Xavier Sauve, the wealthy Terrebonne farmer, who, in company with M. A. Hatten has been making a tour of the West, returned home yesterday Mr. Hatten tarried longer but will be back in a few days.

Nick Holm has secured the contract for painting and decorating the new palatial residence of Ferd Gother, of Polk Centre. He left Tuesday for the scene of his labors, accompanied by Arthur Marcier.

Misses Eleanor Findeisen and Rachel Taylor and Messrs. Lee Healy and Fred Richard, enthusiastic members of our High School, went to Crookston Friday to hear the debate between the Crookston and the Ada schools. Crookston won.

D. W. Winton and J. J. Crowe returned to this city last week from the Red Lake country where they had been looking after the interests of the Thief River Lumber company. They visited eight of the company's ten camps, and report that everything is progressing in a satisfactory manner.—Thief River Falls News.

Miss Olive Rinquist died at her home in Cannon Falls township, Dec. 10, aged twenty-five years. The deceased was a graduate of the Cannon Falls High School and the Moorhead state normal school. For a while she taught in the schools at Red Lake Falls, but was compelled by declining health to resign.—St. Paul Globe.

Remi Fortier drove in from Gentilly Monday. He was making preparations to attend the state meeting of the farmers' Grange, as a delegate. Mrs. Fortier, who had also been chosen a delegate, named A. J. Sauve as her proxy. The party were joined at Crookston by Geo. W. Eastman, muster of the Prairie Grange of Andover, and proceeded to Minneapolis Monday evening.

Word was received yesterday from Springfield, Ohio, of the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Bischoff, which occurred at 11 A. M. Her son Herman leaves to-day to attend the funeral, which will be held Saturday. Mrs. Bischoff was one of Red Lake Falls' pioneers, having resided here about twenty-three years. About a month ago she went to Springfield to spend the winter with her daughter Mary.

The latest Emardville ditch petition is being circulated by Harold Bugge. The route of the proposed ditch commences near the south east corner of the northeast quarter of section 25 running thence north between ranges forty one and 42, to the south east corner of the north east quarter of section 1, where it intersects a ravine, running into the Clearwater river in section thirty six of Wyandotte township, making a north and south ditch five miles long.

Budd Reeve, the "Sage of Buxton," N. D., was with us Monday, selling his book of poems entitled "The Real Thing" by Budd Reeve himself. Mr. Reeve has extensive newspaper fame, and northwestern newspaper readers are familiar with his versatile literary productions. Mr. Reeve has lived at Buxton for twenty-one years and has acquired a farm of eight hundred acres. The Gazette acknowledges the receipt of a complimentary copy of his book. Northwestern people, regarding the Sage as peculiarly their own, are giving the book a warm reception.

With the Churches.

THE CHURCH PROGRAMS AS WORKED OUT FROM WEEK TO WEEK.

The Rev. Andrew Walker was called to Crookston Sunday to hold divine service in the absence of a minister for the Presbyterian congregation which has not had a regular pastor since the departure of Rev. F. W. Frazer a couple of months ago. Mr. Walker, with the approval of the elders of the church here, decided to accommodate the Crookston congregation in view of past favors.

Christmas services at St. Mary's church will be as follows: First high mass at 5 a.m., followed immediately by low mass; second high mass at 10:30. Evening services at 7:30. The pastor, Rev. Ansgar, will be assisted by three priests.

The services at the Presbyterian church Sunday will be special Christmas devotions. The sermon by Rev. Walker in the evening will be on "The Incarnation." The choir has prepared special music.

Communion services will be held at the Presbyterian church the first Sunday in January.

Owning to the indisposition of the beloved pastor of St. Joseph's church, the Rev. E. Fayolle announces that there will be no midnight mass on Christmas. The first mass will be at 8 a. m., with high mass at 10:30 a.m.

THE "WHEN" POEMS.

When searching press or magazine
To catch a moment's bliss,
You're sure to find some poem there
Which reads about like this:
"When Mabel Trips Across the Street,"
"When Mollie Mounts Her Wheel,"
"When Susie Seats Herself to Play,"
"When Stella Starts to Squeal."

"When Celia Comes Upon the Stage,"
"When Helen Has a Beau,"
"When Sophie Skates Upon the Ice,"
"When Sallie Starts to Sew,"
"When Mother Makes a Johnnycake,"
"When Polly Pours the Tea,"
"When Father Shaves His Stubby Face,"
"When Susie Smiles at Me."

"When Grandma Winds Her Ball of Yarn,"
"When Patience Packs Her Trunk,"
"When Sammy Spins His Brand New Top,"
"When Father Slays a Skunk,"
"When Ezra Eats Pie With a Fork,"
"When Charlotte Chews Her Gum,"
"When Gertrude Strikes Her Golfing Ball,"
"When Baby Sucks His Thumb."

"When Rachel Rakes the Meadow Hay,"
"When Betsy Bumps Her Crown,"
"When Willie Wears His Trousers First,"
"When Reuben Comes to Town."
And so it goes from day to day,
No matter which you read,
The daily press or magazine,

John Doe.

"One night Costello picked up a man who was unable to give his name, so they booked him as 'John Doe,' of course," said the bailiff. "In the morning he was brought up before Judge Dooley.

"'What's his name?' asks the judge.

"'Sbragawinski, your honor,' says Costello. 'He couldn't remember it last night, so we had to book him as "John Doe."'

"'Well, well,' says the judge. 'I don't wonder. If I had a name like that, I'd forget it myself.'"—Chicago News.

The Christmas program was given Friday by the Athenians. Those not attending missed the best literary program given so far. We scored 38.75 points in all.

Rachel Taylor and Lulu Fletcher were chosen president and secretary respectively for the Athenian society; Dan Johnson and Alice Newton were elected president and secretary respectively for the Spartan society.

Don't forget the debate to be held next Friday evening. Subject for debate: Resolved "That capital punishment should be abolished." The Athenian debaters are Lee Healy, Rachel Taylor and Katie Berthiaume. Spartan debaters are Eleanor Findelsen, Pauline Nelland and Dan Johnson. The Spartans chose the affirmative side.

SCHOOL IN GENERAL

The boys spend their evenings concocting schemes to get the girls to school on time. We girls urge them not to spend their forenoons, too, thus occupied. Spend the night in sleeping, boys; then you won't need to miss a half day's schooling.

The Spartan program was announced and we are sorry to say the Spartans have different ideas for a Fourth of July program from ours.

The physics class was very busy the last week experimenting in the laboratory.

The two weeks' Christmas vacation starts next week.

We are positive the Athenian colors (scarlet and white) are pretty: The Spartans had also thought of changing their colors to scarlet and white, but we got ahead of them again.

A number of frozen ears is the result of the cold weather.

V-i-c-t-o-r-y did not seem out of place last Friday at our program and we hope it won't the next time.

The Spartans have finally selected colors—green and orange—that are not like the Athenians'.

PERSONALS.

Mr. Denton, superintendent of the Fertile High school, visited us last Thursday.

Miss Wyman was surprised last Thursday to see one of her classmates, Mr. Oppegard, transacting business in the city.

Miss Maggie Rose returned to school Monday after recovering from an attack of measles.

Miss Wyman is detained from school this week with an attack of gastric fever. On this account the daily program has been changed until her return.

Emma Cyr's recitation on the Christmas program was necessarily omitted by her absence on account of sickness.

Miss Carrie Patnode, after a siege of small pox, has resumed her school work.

INCIDENTS.

Owing to the absence of a teacher one of the pupils occupied the chair and proceeded to give the necessary instructions in a very dignified manner.

We notice the boys have a new system of transporting their notes.

One of the singers of the male quartet was complimented by the mayor of the city.

Just before the Caesar class recites the teacher is generally obliged to search for her pupils, who are scattered in the recitation rooms.

Where was our secretary when the score was read? Out playing foot ball. Of course he was a Spartan and was aware of the good results.

A PROUD SPIRIT SUBDUED.

BY R. J. T.

Elias Jones and his wife Maria were as good-hearted a couple as one could find in the little New England town of Farentum. They were well-to-do farmers whose every hope was centered in their promising son John. Although their education was limited they very much desired to see their son's complete. From childhood he had been a bright boy, and in his early youth took to books. He often declared his dislike for farming and boasted that he would become a lawyer. This spirit pleased his parents, and many nights they would sit by the hearth planning his future.

'Twas on one of these nights that Elias Jones came into the ample kitchen and sat very close to his wife; with a satisfied look on his tanned face he said, "Maria, do you remember the joy that came into this home twenty years ago? "Yes Elias." "Well we must do something for our boy. I reckon we have done well by him, but he must go to college now. You know he was never cut out for a farmer." "I know Elias, but we'll miss him sorely." "We must bear up Maria; he must go and one day we will visit our son in the White house."

Words cannot express John's delight when his father announced his intention of sending him to college. Being a quiet, reserved boy he did not show much feeling, but his parents understood him. Time seemed to drag; the day of his departure came too slowly to suit him. Not so with his mother. She was very busy preparing his wardrobe, and every minute seemed precious

At last the long looked for day arrived. John was dressed in his best and looked much like a city boy; he had always been very neat about his dress and observed very carefully the styles of city boys. The last good-byes were spoken and John Jones, trembling with excitement was on his way to college. The first few days he felt very strange, but soon fell into the regular routine, and became one of the college favorites. On account of his sunny disposition he won many friends. Of all the pupils the President liked him best. He studied John's disposition and found him a man in every sense of the word, only he had a little false pride.

The first year passed quickly and pleasantly, and John, proud of his excellent reports returned home to spend the summer. His parents' delight was unbounded when he would tell of his college experiences. Never before had he noticed the defects in his father's and mother's speech and appearance until now. His parents saw only a change for the better in him.

Fall soon came again and he went back to Cambridge, a Sophomore. When he had been there two months his father had business at Cambridge and confidentially told his wife that he was glad for he had long wanted to visit the college buildings. When farmer Jones arrived John was in his room studying. He welcomed his father as cordially as he could, but noticed as never before the old man's untidy appearance. While his father roamed about the room looking first at one book and then another, asking numerous questions, and making queer remarks, John was wondering how he could keep him indoors, so that the boys would not see him. Soon his worst fears were realized. Farmer Jones began putting on his hat and arranging his necktie. "Where are you going father?" asked John. "Why to see the president to be sure. I want him to show me around these buildings, and explain things to me." John, nervous with dread, and at his wits end, concocted a lie, the first he had ever told his father and the memory of it lingered in after years. How often has he repented of it. Assuming an indifferent air, he at last managed to say. "The President is dangerously ill, and cannot be disturbed." Just then the class bell rung and he knew he must go. "Father stay here and amuse yourself, I will be back as soon as possible." John had been gone but a few minutes when there was a rap on the door and Elias Jones called out "Come in." In walked a dignified old man; he regarded Elias with a pleasant glance and asked for John. "Why bless me, he just stepped out. Take a chair and amuse yourself, he said he would soon return. By the way who be you? I am Elias Jones, John's father." "And I am Philip Duncan, and a great admirer of your son." "I am very glad to meet you Mr. Duncan, are you acquainted in these parts? As the President of this institution is sick, would you mind showing me around a little? "The President sick?" questioned Mr. Duncan. "That's what John said when I proposed getting the President to show me around." "Well as the President is so unfortunate I will be glad to entertain you." The two old men linked arms, and spent the morning very pleasantly. Mr. Duncan soon found out that although Elias Jones had very moderate education, he was well informed in Botany and Zoology; not book information, but education from actual observation.

At length Mr. Jones proposed returning to John's room, and there John found them in deep conversation. He did not join in very heartily, but remained quiet and reserved. Mr. Duncan did not seem to notice this, but his father remarked, "John you are still a very quiet boy, and Mr. Duncan, he is the light of my life. But bless me, I must be going; my train is soon due. Good-bye Mr. Duncan, I have enjoyed my visit so much and if Maria would not worry, I would stay over another day. Good-bye John, I like your friend, and am sorry you could not spend more time with me, but school is school."

When he had gone, Mr. Duncan layed his hand on John's head and said, "John I like your father. He is a man with a bright mind, and a good heart. Be sure my boy that you love and reverence him as you should. You will never have such another friend."

John wondered if President Duncan knew of the lie he had told his father. That he did, John never found out. Professor Duncan understood the boy's proud nature and could tell by his downcast eyes that a proud spirit had been subdued.

John Jones at last had seen his father in his true character, and again regarded him with his old boyish affection, but in after years, when he looked at that old wrinkled face, that lie, the only one he had ever told his father, came back with full force, and memory had revenge on false pride.

A NEW YEAR'S HABIT

BY A. W. FERRIN.

[Copyright, 1901, by A. W. Ferrin.]

The time honored custom of swearing off on New Year's day is as widely observed on this New Year's day as it was on the first day of the year 0. Every one is swearing off something, from taxes to cigars. To do the things which we ought to do and to refrain from doing the things which we ought not to do are what we all resolve at this time of year, though we may never think of it all again. If it be true that the infernal regions are paved with good intentions, this must be a busy day in the street construction department of Beelzebub's capital.

The pleasure of swearing off, of dreaming of sprouting wings and golden harps, is equaled only by the pleasure of swearing on again. Habits are bad things, but the man who has none cannot know the joy that goes with a good resolution made on New Year's morning.

Mark Twain tells of a man who nearly lost his life through having no bad habits. He was ill, and the doctor came. "You must stop drinking," the doctor said.

"I never drink," said the man.

"You must stop smoking."

"But I never smoke."

"Then you must not sit up late at night."

"I go to bed every night at half past 9," replied the man.

"Then," said the doctor, "I fear there is little hope for you. The only thing left for you to give up is eating."

Still, if there is nothing which you can swear off you may find some consolation in making a positive resolve. Resolve to get up at 6 o'clock every morning, take a cold bath and run ten miles before breakfast. Resolve that you will become a millionaire before the year is out, that you will be a statesman or a soldier and save your fatherland from the ruin which is always confronting it or write a diary. Nothing takes more strength of purpose than the keeping of a diary, and if you ever grow to be famous you can sell your diary to some enterprising publisher and add riches to your fame. Leave a record of your inmost life for your descendants to read with pride. If your life is uneventful, give your imagination play. Above all things, make your journal interesting. It must be full of great thoughts. If you cannot think great thoughts, copy the thoughts of some one else.

A diary is a man's best friend. It is not deaf, but it is dumb, unless you will it otherwise. It is the safest confidant in affairs of the heart. If you are diffident, you can leave it where the lady will find it. This clever bit of strategy has consummated many happy marriages.

Few persons are so placed that they can make neither negative nor positive resolutions, but if you are one of these you can spend the holiday season on the Pacific ocean, where in sailing east a day is lost, and, crossing the date line on the 31st of December, you will skip New Year's day and its joys and sorrows.

New Year's Customs In China.

The Chinese New Year's, as everybody knows, is the celebration of the beginning of the emperor's reign. Every year the day of his assumption is celebrated, and of course each new emperor ushers in a new date for the beginning of the year. The Chinese New Year's falls upon Feb. 25 now, and it is safe to say that the average American citizen who has seen the stolid and uncommunicative Mongolian on the streets of his city would be a very greatly surprised man could he witness the manner in which they celebrate the incoming year.

On the eve of the new year the Chinese merchant tears down the weather stained posters which he stuck above his door the year before and pastes up new flaming red ones in their places. On each poster is printed a verse, maxim or motto of some sort, but the general prayer is, "May the rich guest alight at this door."

The Wassail Bowl.

What was the wassail bowl? The name is derived from "Waes hail!" Saxon for making health. It was a large loving cup passed from each of the company to another. In the court and in the castles of the rich it was made of highly spiced and sweetened wine with roasted apples floating therein. The wassail of the poorer folk was made of ale spiced with nutmeg, ginger, sweetened with sugar and having in it the roasted apples and roasted crabs.

Trying to Keep Him Straight.

"Ma says will you folks come right over to our house and bring along all the neighbors you can find at home?"

"Is your ma going to have a New Year's party?"

"No, ma'am. Pa is beginning to make New Year's resolutions, and ma wants all the witnesses she can get to hear him."

Circumstances Alter Cases.

Mrs. Crawford—Charlie is going to spend the holidays with his aunt.

Crawford—Then buy him the drum and whistle I told him he couldn't have.

A New Year's Pledge.

'Tis New Year's morn, and here's my pledge,
That's given without sorrow.
The last cigar; I'll smoke no more,
Until—I smoke tomorrow!

The Way of It.

The New Year—Sorry for you, old chap, but every dog has his day, you know. By the way, you look pretty dry.

The Old Year—That's because I've just been rung out.

To a Turned Leaf.

Turn backward, turn backward,
You'll do it, oh, leaf,
The second of Jan., as
I know to my grief!

[Copyright, 1901, by C. W. Hooke.]

IN the parlor of a small suit in the Capital hotel sat John Ainsworth, governor elect. He had drawn a chair close to the grate and was staring into the fire.

It is a curious fact, perhaps worth mentioning here, that it is nearly impossible for a college bred man to look at a grate fire without being carried back to the old days—the days when he was young, brave, free and honest. The phenomenon was familiar to Ainsworth, and upon this occasion quite welcome.

In the obscurest corner of the room sat an old colored man, long a servant of the Ainsworths and destined thereafter to attain some measure of fame as "the governor's shadow." When, presently, Ainsworth arose and began to pace the floor, the black man's eyes followed him with the yearning solicitude that one may see so often in a dog's eyes.

There was a knock on the door, and it startled both master and man. The governor elect made a slight gesture of the hand. Old Horace stepped softly toward the bedroom of the suit and disappeared therein. When he emerged, it was with a manner betraying anxiety. He put a visiting card into Ainsworth's hand.

"The devil himself!" said the governor elect softly. "Well, I knew somebody would find me, but I hoped it wouldn't be this man—not so early, anyway; not until I'd had time to think it out. Yet it may as well be now."

The servitor bowed with his own peculiar gravity, and then went out into the hall by way of the bedroom. Two minutes later he returned with the visitor, retiring to the bedroom after ushering him in.

David Harrow, party leader in the state, and commonly mentioned in the newspapers merely as the Boss, with a capital "B," would have been a man of good height if he had ever stood erect, but certainly he never did it in public. He had always the look of one who is beginning to make a formal bow, and his characteristic expression was one of mingled solemnity and condescension, with an indefinable suggestion of mockery. His grizzled, pointed beard lay close upon his chest for a moment as he paused before Ainsworth and murmured "Good evening." Neither of the men extended a hand.

"You have been the guest of your prospective father-in-law, Mr. Schuyler Herold," said Harrow. "Why have you deserted him?"

The impertinence of this question did not in the least surprise Ainsworth, and he replied frankly:

"I wanted to be alone, to think, and I felt it discourteous to shut myself up anywhere in his house. So I came here as quietly as possible."

A gray ghost of a smile flitted across the old politician's face.

"Good resolutions for the new year," he said, and Ainsworth's eyes assented. "It begins tomorrow, and your administration also. By the way, how about Langford?"

"I have decided not to appoint him," replied Ainsworth. "That is the first of my good resolutions."

"I have your written pledge," said Harrow.

"It is a matter of no consequence, of course," responded Ainsworth, "that you got it out of me at 5 o'clock in the morning, when I had not slept for forty-eight hours, during which period I had traveled several hundred miles and had made heaven knows how many speeches over a raw palate. The important matter is that this thing was the price of your support of Bruce and Lawrence for the state senate. I regarded their election as of equal importance with my own because they were thoroughly identified with reform measures. That was my bargain with you; it was not for myself. And you defeated both those men."

"There is nothing said about these men in this writing of yours," rejoined Harrow, making a feint of drawing a document from his breast pocket. "The natural inference will be that it was a bargain for my support of you, and that having reaped the reward in your election you now repudiate the payment. The publication of this thing will ruin you, Ainsworth."

"Our bargain was made in the presence of"—

"Congressman Hanley, who has since died," said Harrow with the air of a hired mourner. "How unfortunate! If he had lived, I should have had to fix him."

"You ask me to appoint a notoriously unfit man to a very high position," said Ainsworth. "I once weakly agreed to do so, and now I won't. That's the whole of it."

NEW YEAR'S BELLS.

"It is essential to my plans that Langford should be appointed," said the Boss. "If you do not do it, I shall have your written pledge photographed and shall give copies, with my own story of the affair, to the man who can do you the most harm."

"You refer to Morton Raymond," responded Ainsworth, "the smartest journalist in the state"—

"And the man who would have married Schuyler Herold's daughter if you hadn't stepped in," said Harrow. "The man who may get her yet, for Herold is the last man to approve of your conduct. His views of politics are much like mine."

"I am afraid there is some truth in what you say," answered Ainsworth, his forehead very red and deeply lined, "but we will have no further reference to Miss Herold, if you please. As to the two men whom you have named let me tell you that I anticipated your threat and have sent for both of them."

The Boss' eyes, habitually half closed, opened wider than Ainsworth had ever before seen them.

"You have committed political suicide," he said. "Don't you see that if you get these two men here you will force my hand? You can't mean to do this."

"I mean to start the new year fairly," replied Ainsworth. "This pledge to you is the ball and chain upon my leg. If I can't get rid of it, I will at least wear it openly. I will drag it around with me throughout my administration, but it shall not coerce me to do one act, however small, that is not honest."

"I will not be a party to such folly," exclaimed Harrow. "It may be necessary in the end for me to use this weapon for your destruction, but I will not run amuck with it. I won't stay here to abet this madness."

"You can't help it," said Ainsworth.

mond is staying at the Carrollton across the way, and it is but a stone's throw to the Herold residence. Ah, already!"

The bedroom door opened and Horace appeared. He crossed to Ainsworth's side with the slow, careful tread of inherited servitude and spoke in a whisper. Ainsworth turned to Harrow.

"He has found Raymond," said he, "and has sent a messenger for Mr. Herold."

The Boss was about to speak when there was a knock upon the hall door. Ainsworth opened it, and a young woman entered, hasty, breathless and trembling with anxiety. She turned suddenly to Ainsworth.

"Jack," she exclaimed, "what has happened? I was so frightened! I was at the door when the messenger came. I thought you were hurt and had been brought here."

Ainsworth took both her hands.

"It's all politics," he said. "There's nothing hurt except my future, and really nobody can hurt that except you, so it's safe. I sent for your father."

"It was foolish of me to be alarmed," said she, "but the messenger made such a mystery of it"—

"JACK," SHE EXCLAIMED, "WHAT HAS HAPPENED?"

There were tears in her pretty brown eyes, and as she stood with her hands clasped in Ainsworth's and her pale face upturned to his a young man came softly in by the door which still stood open. Miss Herold was unaware of his entrance, but Ainsworth looked over her head into the man's eyes, which were light gray, cold and shrewd.

"You sent for me?" said the young man, and Miss Herold turned hastily at the sound of the familiar voice. Morton Raymond looked at her for some seconds intently, and then slowly bowed his head.

"Raymond," said Ainsworth, "there is a piece of news for your paper, and for the whole syndicate of my enemies who take their cue from you. Previous to my election I pledged myself in writing to Harrow that I would appoint Steve Langford commissioner of banking, and now I've decided not to do it because the man is not honest. It is only fair, however, to say that I knew that he wasn't when I made the pledge, but I believed that I could keep him straight while he was in office. I have decided on the eve of the new year that that sort of thing won't do. I have resolved to give public office to no man who isn't clean."

Raymond stopped him with an impatient gesture. Then he pushed back the tangle of grayish yellow hair from his forehead and pressed his hand down upon it hard as he turned slowly toward Harrow.

"Give me that paper," he said hoarsely.

"I regret to say that I have not brought it with me," responded the Boss suavely.

"It doesn't matter," said Raymond, wheeling to face the governor elect. "It doesn't matter so long as you have it. And now, John Ainsworth, I've got you where I want you. I knew this pledge had been made, but not that it was in writing. I knew why it had been made. I knew that the only man who could prove that it was not a personal bargain to secure Harrow's support for yourself was dead. But I never dreamed that I could get hold of it in black and white. It is the end of you, Ainsworth. Some people might think it a comparatively small matter, but I know this game too well to make such a mistake."

"I have never erred in that way," said Ainsworth with a grim smile.

"I made a strong fight against you," continued Raymond, "and half the press of the state followed me, but you beat us. You have always beaten me. Now it is my time. With this scandal at the beginning of your administration I can separate you from your only real friends—from the men who honestly desire reform in the government of this state. It is the weakness of the reformer that he deserts the man who has sinned, whatever the man's character may be. You won't have a friend in your party when I get through with you, Ainsworth. I'll begin before you have a chance to make any as governor, and I'll never let up until you're dead, politically or actually, I don't care which."

The fervor with which he spoke, the light that flamed from his eyes, bore Ainsworth back for a moment and silenced him, while Harrow towered blackly in the light of the fire and grinned like a demon.

Miss Herold had moved slowly forward as Raymond had been speaking, and when he ceased the two were face to face.

"Morton Raymond," said the girl, "I will not believe this of you, even from your own lips. I understand but little of this, yet enough to know that this written pledge is not what you will represent it to be. You opposed Mr. Ainsworth in this campaign; you did all that you could to hurt him; but, so far as I know, the fight was fair. Certainly he never complained, and, as for me, I held myself to be still your friend. It is not in you to do this thing."

HARROW, SEEING HIS INTENTIONS, RUSHED FORWARD.

Raymond looked at her for ten seconds and then turned away with a sneer. At this Harrow stepped forward and laid his hand upon the journalist's shoulder.

"You are the man for me," he said. "You know your friends and your enemies. I was a little afraid that for sentimental reasons you might take another course." And he glanced at Miss Herold.

"The written pledge!" said Raymond, with white lips. "Let me see it."

Without a word, Harrow took the document from his pocket and gave it to the journalist. Raymond staggered half way around the table, supporting himself upon it and coming at last to face Miss Herold.

"Forgive me!" he gasped. "I had to do it. I had to play the part. It was the only way to get it, and I knew he had it in his pocket. You couldn't do a thing like this, Ainsworth. It wouldn't be in your line. But it is in mine. Harrow, you infernal scoundrel, look at this!"

He sprang around the table, and in an instant Ainsworth's pledge was lying on the glowing coals. Harrow, seeing his intention, rushed forward, but Raymond, turning, restrained him by a steady hand upon his breast.

"You spoke of the new year, Ainsworth," said he. "I have had my thoughts of it. There is a lesson, too, that rises from a broken heart like mine. And the sum of it all is that I had made up my mind to be square and fair with your administration, Ainsworth—to give you credit for the good you do and oppose only the evil."

"I believe you now, Morton," said Miss Herold as Raymond walked to the door.

She held out her hand to him, but he had covered his eyes with a quick, boyish gesture, and so, shaking his shoulder free of the grasp that Ainsworth laid upon it, he stumbled out of the room.

A NEW YEAR'S PRAYER.

And give us blessings not a few;
O Father Time, throw wide the gate.
We crave, O Time, another deal;
Pray make for us another date.
Ring in the new; we eager wait
To face what fate may have in view,
No matter whether woe or weal.
Ring in the new, ring nineteen two!

But in the ringing of your chime
Pray, change the programme, Father Time,
When lovely woman is your cue.
Ring in the woman shy and sweet
Our sires with joy were wont to meet,
The woman modest, coy and true,
Who never wore the stockings blue
Nor yearned her brother's work to do.
Oh, ring, good Time, we beg, entreat,
Ring in the "old," ring out the "new!"

EARLE HOOKER EATON.

A Narrow Margin.

"Hey, pop!"

"Well?"

"Kin I stay up and see the old year out?"

"No."

"Hey, pop!"

"Well?"

"Kin I stay up and see the new year in?"

Saving Seed Potatoes.

An exchange says that if only the largest tubers in the potato crop are selected for seed the crop will be improved in quantity each year. We will not say that this is not true, for we have not tested it, but we do not believe it, says American Cultivator. If the grower will select well formed and mature tubers from the hills that yield the largest amount of merchantable potatoes when he is digging them, we think he will increase his crop, regardless of the size he selects. By selecting seed from the hills on which the vines remain green to the latest date he can prolong the growing season of the future crop, drought and accidents excepted, and by using immature tubers he can get potatoes earlier, but we would not expect from such seed a large crop or the best quality.

Keeping Up Fertility.

The ordinary farmer seems to look upon seeding down a piece of land as an expense which could be undergone only as often as is absolutely necessary in order to cut good hay and plow the land only when it has ceased to produce a paying crop. In fact, however, the oftener a good sod can be turned under to decay and supply humus the better will the fertility be kept up. Money expended in grass seed with a view to maintaining fertility is far better investment than in purchasing fertilizers. And the more clover seed you can get in the better will this object be accomplished.

Mares on the Farm.

There is no good reason why mares should not be made to serve a dual purpose—work on the farm and raise colts, says Farmer's Voice. Under proper management they should give as good satisfaction in the harness as the horse gives, and the colts which may be raised nearly every year until the mares are along in the teens represent clear profit. In buying horses for farmwork buy mares—good ones of weight, depth, width and constitution.

Mangels For Dairy Cows.

The cow beet or mangel is considered one of the best and cheapest foods for dairy cows when fed as a part of the ration during winter, says a dairyman. They are superior to the turnip.

An Oyster Cocktail.

Oysters, now in their prime, furnish a delicious change in the daily menu. They can be served in an endless number of ways that will tempt the most delicate appetite. Raw oysters should be opened on the deep shell and served in it on a bed of cracked ice, with a half of a lemon and some stimulating condiment. Oyster cocktail is a popular appetizer, and it may be served in hock glasses or in lemon shells. If in the lemon shells, remove the pulp and fill the shells with small oysters and pour over them a sauce made of one teaspoonful of grated horseradish, two teaspoonfuls of catchup, a dash of worcestershire sauce and a pinch of salt. An oyster cocktail is also acceptably served in the center of a small grapefruit from which the core has been removed.

Land and Animals.

The hog is the animal for level, fertile grain land and the sheep for hilly, thin and worn land, as sheep graze closer to the ground than any other farm stock.

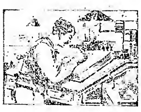
THIS time of promises is here!
Well, let me [illegible] and see
Just what the heralded new year
Is promising to me.

IT promises a store of days
In which to slave and work,
Unheeding blame, unheeding praise,
Though others fail or shirk.



IT promises me time for sport,
For love and honest deeds,
For wisely wrought reforms—in short,
For all a fellow needs.

AND as I look each promise o'er
I feel it's up to me
To meet the new year at the door
With hospitality.

'TIS true I reckon promise much
By way of [illegible] return.
For New Year's promises are such
As [illegible] are wont to spurn.

YET when my thinking cap I don
The case's facts to prove
I find that years are things that on Acquaintanceship improve.

SO to this new one I will vow,
Hands up or cross my heart,
At all times when I feel as now
To play a worthy part.

AND as the days in merry dance
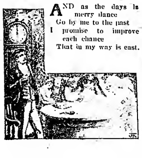
Go by me to the past
I promise to improve
each chance
That in my way is cast.



PEOPLE OF THE DAY

In the Big Railway Deal.

The largest railway deal ever made or even attempted has been consummated under the title of the Northern Securities company. In the combination are the vast properties of the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Chicago and Northwestern, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul and the Burlington, making a total of over 47,000 mileage. E. H. Harriman, who was a prominent figure in the Northern Pacific war of last May, was one of the principal factors in bringing about this amalgamation.

E. H. HARRIMAN.

Among others interested in this greatest of railway transactions were J. P. Morgan, J. J. Hill, James M. Stillman, W. K. Vanderbilt and John D. Rockefeller.

Russell Sage says this latest move of the railway kings is a menace to the country, because it means the destruction of competition in railway transportation.

The Oldest Living General.

After the Duke of Luxemburg, the Grand Duke of Meckleuburg-Strelitz—a brother-in-law of the Duke of Cambridge—who recently celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of his enrollment in the Prussian army, is now the oldest living general. He is, moreover, the third oldest sovereign in Europe, the Duke of Luxemburg being the oldest and King Christian the second oldest. He was eighty-two on the 17th of October and has for many years been totally blind. He is a great favorite of King Edward and spent some time at Homburg with him last month.

Oldest Man.

James Farrell of Barboursville, W. Va., recently celebrated the one hundred and fifth anniversary of his birth. He is now probably the oldest man in the United States. Mr. Farrell served in the war of 1812 and later was in Mexico, under Jefferson Davis. When the war between the states broke out he enlisted, although no longer a young man, and saw four years of service. He was probably the oldest veteran to offer his services to the government when the Spanish war broke out.

A Defamed American.

Considerable interest is taken both in England and the United States over the trouble that has arisen between an American girl and an English artist. Miss Vanderbilt Wackerman, a beautiful New York woman, has resided abroad several years in company with her mother. The young lady has been painted by several famous European artists, and not long ago Professor Herkomer, the well known London artist, solicited "the honor of painting her exquisitely beautiful face and figure." Before the picture was completed Miss Wackerman's mother had to pay a visit to this country, and the young lady went upon invitation to stay with the Herkomers. As soon as the picture was completed Professor Herkomer turned his beautiful model from his door under circumstances and with words that constituted a serious reflection upon the young lady's character. No specific charges were made, and those who know Miss Wackerman became very indignant at what they call the defamation of her character. Worry over the cruel insinuations made against her by the artist has unbalanced the mind of Miss Wackerman, and she has been committed to a London hospital for the insane.

MISS VANDERBILT WACKERMAN.

What steps will be taken by the parents and friends of the injured young lady to bring Professor Herkomer to account for his unjust and uncalled for attack remains to be seen.

A NEW LEAF AT KENO GULCH

BY WILLIAM R. WALTERS.

[Copyright, 1901, by W. L. Vail.]

One New Year's day when Cyclone Davis rode into Keno Gulch at a quiet lope and for half an hour refrained from "shooting up" a single store or saloon in the place the populace marveled.

Lariat Luke tapped his brow significantly as Cyclone rode by with a dejected air. Three Fingered Williams opined that Cyclone had probably experienced religion at the Keno Gulch revival, and Judge McWhisker, who had been a race track judge in the east and assumed a legal air to bolster up his title, delivered an opinion in re to the effect that a commission de lunatico inquirendo would be quite the proper caper. There wasn't a woman in Keno Gulch, but somehow or other Curiosity, with a capital "C," stampeded the camp in five minutes. Finally Cyclone rode up to the Palace hotel, where an expectant crowd had gathered.

"Boys," he said sadly—"boys, this yer camp has got to reform, turn over a new leaf, have a new deal."

"What'd I tell ye?" whispered Three Fingered Williams to the judge. "He's got religion, and got it bad."

"A real, live camp as is a camp," continued the dejected Cyclone, "should have a glowin' futur' afore it instid of a gloryus past."

Lariat Luke nudged Williams at these words and tapped his head significantly a second time. The judge muttered sotto voce that Cyclone plainly had more "wheels" than an eastern high grade bicycle factory after a hard times season.

"Huh!" grunted Williams. "I don't see why Keno should turn over a new leaf. She's improvin' daily. Got a new skulehouse, ain't we?"

"Uh-huh, got a new skule," Cyclone admitted gloomily.

"Goin' to have a new hotel, ain't we?" persisted Williams.

"Uh-huh—new hotel."

"Even got a revival meetin' runnin' night shifts, I hear."

"That's jes' it," Cyclone cried excitedly, "and we've gotter turn over a new leaf. Jes' think of it boys! Yere we are not only runnin' a big revival, but we ain't actoually had a necktie party in our midst fer a hull week!"

And before night public spirited Cyclone had shot a tenderfoot and posed as principal in a necktie party, and Keno Gulch had turned over a new leaf.

A NEW YEAR'S BLUFF.

How Poor Peters Struck Old Skinner For a Raise of Salary.

Poor, patient, plodding, painstaking Peters had worked a trifle less than fifty years under old Skinner, the yeast manufacturer, for a weekly rake off of from $3 to $20 per. The snowstorms of years had whitened his whiskers, and the lawn mower of Time had clipped the hair on his head so close that the top of his dome was a perpetual patent leather shine.

When the salary of Peters struck the twenty dollar mark, it clung to it closer than a brother. Peters was not only a temperate man himself, but even his salary refused to budge. Years came, and so did the same old twenty, week after week. Years went, and so did the twenty, every "red" of it. He didn't bring up a family of seven and endow very many hospitals or pay numerous church debts on $20 per—not in the city.

"I WISH YOU'D PUT ONE OF THESE IN MY PAY ENVELOPE."

One New Year's day, after his salary had remained as stationary and immovable for fifteen years as a mortgage on the old farm, Peters knocked timidly on old Skinner's office door and respectfully saluted his chief.

"Mr. Skinner," he said, holding up one of the world famous Skinner yeast cakes, "I wish you'd put one of these in my pay envelope this week."

"Why so, Peters?" asked Skinner.

"I'll tell you," said Peters. "Your yeast can raise about everything from a loaf of bread to the dead and buried. Who knows? Perhaps it can even raise my salary."

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Clean Cooking Vessels.

Give all cooking vessels an occasional hot soda bath to keep them pure and sweet. Put them over the fire in a large boiler of water, with one ounce of soda to each gallon, and boil for twenty minutes. This is an excellent way to clean enameled ware. If by accident food burns in such ware, do not make the mistake of trying to scrape it off. Instead cover the bottom of the vessel with wood ashes, fill it with cold water and boil for a little while. If badly burned, it may be necessary to repeat the process.

To clean the kitchen knives nothing gives better results than powdered brick dust applied by means of a raw potato cut in halves.

To keep coffee and tea pots sweet and clean, in addition to the thorough scalding each time after using, occasionally throw into them a cupful of wood ashes or some powdered borax, fill with cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Empty and scour well with hot water and pure clean soap, using a brush, never a dishrag. Then scald several times. Many a time the delicate flavor of a cup of tea or coffee is ruined by a musty pot.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE PERIODICALS

The Northwestern Agriculturist is the leading farm, live-stock and home paper in the West. It appeals to every member of the family, being filled with instructive reading matter from beginning to end. Its various departments are under the charge of practical men, who have made a success themselves in the particular line on which they write. Among the department editors, who contribute regularly to The Agriculturist, are Prof. Thomas Shaw, Professor of Animal Husbandry at the Minnesota State Agricultural College, editing the sheep, beef cattle and horse departments, A. N. Hyatt, a dairyman known all over America as a practical and experienced dairy writer, Forest Henry, editor of the swine department, a man who has paid off mortgages by raising swine in Minnesota, A. K. Bush, in charge of the horticultural department, State Lecturer on Horticulture at the Minnesota Farmers' Institutes. These are only a few of the more important departments of the paper. Sample Copies will be sent free to all who are interested. The Northwestern Agriculturist is published semi-monthly, and already reaches over 50,000 farm homes twice a month. Subscription price, fifty cents a year.

Success is the great illustrated Home-Magazine of Inspiration, Progress and Self-Help. It is bright, cheerful and optimistic. In thousands of ways—direct and indirect—it tells people of all ages, classes and callings, how to achieve success in life. It's contributors include the best known names in literature, also business men of the highest standing, who write for no other periodical.

The Cosmopolitan covers every branch of human interest with timely, suggestive, well-written, and finely illustrated articles by the best authors.

Leslie's Illustrated Weekly is the popular, up-to-date pictorial and literary record of stirring events at home and abroad.

The New England Magazine paints with loving touch the landmarks of New England, tells of her history and traditions, and of the achievements of her sons throughout the world.

The Household is a supreme authority in home-work and decoration, table-equipment, nursery-lore, etiquette, photography and offers a very high class of poetry and fiction.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly is one of the great modern monthlies whose articles and illustrations are the highest expressions of magazine art.

The Best Plaster.

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. When troubled with lame back or pains in the side or chest, give it a trial and you are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism. One application gives relief. For sale by W. A. Schreiter.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

—BY—

PHIL A. KAUFER.

Published weekly. Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the postoffice at Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

THE GREAT WORK BEGUN.

The program for the formal ground-breaking ceremonies Friday, marking the beginning of construc tion work on the St. Louis World's Fair, includes a monster civic and military parade, and a banquet at night, at which the governors of many states, and other distinguished citizens, were guests of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company.

This is to be the first great World's Fair of the 20th century, and is to be held in celebration of the centennial of what is known in history as the Louisiana Purchase. By this transaction the United States government in 1803 secured from France all the land lying between the Mississippi river and the Rocky Mountains, an area of more than a million square miles, and exceeding the territory of the United States at that time. Fourteen states and territories have been created out of the Louisiana territory, having a total present population of 15,000,000, and an estimated wealth of $30,000,000,000.

St. Louis, the city at which the World's Fair is to be held, is the metropolis of the Mississippi Valley and is the fourth city in size in the United States, having a population with its suburbs amounting to 700,000 people. It is the terminal point of more than twenty railroads and holds a leading place in finance in the United States.

The money available for the exposition far exceeds the amount ever before in hand for such an enterprise, comprising some $16,000,000. The citizens and corporations of St. Louis raised by private subscription the sum of $5,000,000; the municipality of St. Louis added $5,000,000 more; the State of Missouri appropriated $1.000,000, and the United States government gives its endorsement and help to the exteot of $5,000,000, besides appropriating $250,000 for the government building. It is expected that the last named sum will be considerably increased for the purpose of making the most complete government exhibit ever brought together. Appropriations have been made by several States ranging all the way from $15,000 to $250,000 each.

On the 20th of August last the President issued a proclamation to all the nations of the world inviting them to participate in the World's Fair at St. Louis. This invitation was delivered through diplomatic channels to the heads of the various governments, and favorable replies have been received from a large number of them indicating world-wide interest in the exposition.

The site of the World's Fair is in the western part of the city, the authorities having set aside more than 600 acres of Forest Park for the uses of the exposition, and an adjacent area having been secured makes a total of nearly 1200 acres devoted to the Fair. Included in the Fair grounds are the buildings and grounds of Washington University valued at $3,000,000.

A TRAGEDY OF THE WOODS.

A story which comes from the Adirondack region is worthy of a place among Mr. Seton Thompson's romances of animals. A young woman staying at one of the hotels went for a walk one day and wandered off into the woods, where she lost herself. Searching parties were sent out for her as soon as she was missed, of course, but the Adirondack Mountains are rather extensive territory over which to hunt one small woman, and seriousness was added to the situation by the fact that cold weather had set in and the wanderer was likely to die of cold if not from hunger before she could be found. Finally, however, she was discovered, safe and well though much exhausted by her journeyings; and the story she told was as strange as anything in fiction.

When utterly worn out and chilled, she had eecountered a deer, who seemed to take in the fact that she was, if not of his own sort, at least a fellow-creature in distress. He stood by her a moment as she lay on the ground, and theo laid himself down beside her, where the warmth of his body kept her from freezing as effectually as a fire would. When the searching party was heard approaching, he started up and stood at bay, and was shot where he stood.

There is really nothing more strange in this than in the well-authenticated stnries of children befriended by bears and wolves in similar situations. It is, however, essentially dramatic in its climax, and to a pessimist it might seem that this is the history of the wild animal in a nut shell. When let alone he is more than likely to be man's best friend but he generally gets shot for it in the end.

Wood and Water Supply,

Wood and water, or in other words, the forests and streams are to-day among the most important of the cuuntry's possession. In the west they are indispensable, the foreste for lumber and for the protection of the woter eupply, and the streama for the reclamation of thousands of scres uf herrcn and almost useless land through irrigation. It has been estimated that there are 72,000,000 acres of so-called arid lands west uf the Missouri River which with the water now aveilable, can be made richly productive and the seet of large pupulatiuns. Thua in the west the atreams, even mure than the furests, must be considered of prime importance as home makers. In the east and west alike, and over all the country, the atream ara rising yearly in ioipurtance for water power, aod as towns and cities increase, for domestic supply as well But with the streams the furests must always stand as protectors. The preservation of forests on the mountains and foothills meana the perpetuation of the water supply, aod the security of the water supply means incalculable development and beoefit for all aections of the country. The results of the investigations of the U.S. Geological Survey, in its atudy of the water resources of the country, have repeatedly demonstrated the increasing value of the streams. The water and the forests resources are so closely allied that they must alwsys stand side by side in the development of the country.

Converse-Buse.

Christmas eve the Presbyterian church was crowded to the doors with invited guests who had come to witness the ceremony that was to make two of our popular young society people, Miss May Josephine Buse and Mr. Milton A. Converse, man and wife.

Promptly at 7:30, the appointed time, Mrs. E. F. Marshall, organist, played Mendelssohn's wedding march, and the bridal party entered in the following order: H. H. Zeiser, best man, followed by the groom and Mr. Sam Hunt, groomsman; Miss Alyce Buse, sister of the bride, bridesmaid, escorted by W. A. McIntyre, one of the ushers; Lilian Buse, sister of the bride, maid of honor escorted by Ed. Townsend; finally the beautiful, stately bride, leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her to the groom standing expectantly with the groomsman and best man at the front of the church.

It was sweet that the bride had as maid of honor and bridesmaid her two sisters—forming a trio whose loyalty and devotion have always been marked. The bride wore a gown of soft white silk mull, and carried bride roses; the maid of honor Miss Lilian was attired in a becoming costume of pink muslin de sole; the bridesmaid Miss Alyce wore a dress of white organdie. Both the maid of honor and the bridesmaid carried bouquets of pink chrysanthemums.

The Rev. Andrew Walker, after eloquently expounding the solemnity and character of the ceremony about to be performed, read the marriage service. After the vows were spoken and the ring given to plight their troth, he pronounced them man and wife, and one of the prettiest while one of the most impressive, wedding ceremonies that has been witnessed here, was over.

The bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's father where a wedding supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Converse have gone to housekeeping in the pretty cottage adjoining Mr. Buse's residence. They are among the most prominent and popular of our young people, and their hosts of friends have been lavish in extending well-wishes and loads of costly and beautiful presents to attest the high regard in which they are held.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

JOHN HANSON A YOUNG GARNES FARMER INSTANTLY KILLED.

ACCIDENT OCCURRED IN GARNES TOWNSHIP ON SATURDAY.

John Hanson, who has a claim in Garnes Township, aged 22, unmarried, accidentally shot and killed himself Saturday morning, while in the woods talking to Anders Ellingson, a wood chopper.

Hanson was out for a hunt and coming across Ellingson, on a farm in Garnes, close to the Emardville boundary line, he stopped for a chat, placing the butt of his rifle, which was an old Winchester, on the ground among the brush, and resting his arm on the muzzle with his left breast directly over it. While conversing, he was kicking the snow with his foot, and the rifle was discharged, the shot entering his breast and out through his left shoulder. Death was instantaneous.

Coroner Belair was summoned and went out Sunday in company with Dr. Watson. An inquest was deemed unnecessary. Upon investigation, the rifle, a one barreled affair, was found half-cocked.

ONE SIDED PLEASANTRY.

Horrid Joke Played Upon a Woman by Her Too Funny Husband.

"It is all right for a man to have a sense of humor," a young clubwoman remarked, "but in the effort to enjoy life themselves and make it cheerful for other people some men often go a trifle too far. That's the way with Harry. When he gets funny, he occasionally gets too funny, or, what is just as bad, he gets funny in the wrong place or at the wrong time.

"The other day we were down in a little southern country town which is notoriously the Gretna Green of its state. Elderly or middle aged people who want quiet weddings and eloping young people all flock to Blanktown to be married by the justice of the peace. He does such a large and flourishing business in this line that he has a sign in his office, 'Matrimonial Parlors,' and the pavement in front is generally filled with loafers in chairs waiting to be entertained by the always interesting spectacle of a wedding.

"Well, I heard of the 'Matrimonial Parlors' and was curious just to look at the place, so suggested to Harry that we walk out that street and pass it. It was rather late in the afternoon, but the door stood open, the elderly justice was sitting outside ready for business, and the pavement was filled with men in chairs. To my amazement and horror when we were right in front of the door Harry seized me by the arm, pulled me toward the steps and said in a loud voice:

"'Come on, now, Polly. Don't try to back out. When we were here before, you backed out, but I'm not going to let you back out this time. Come on; come right in.'

"The justice stood up at once, and the men in the chairs shuffled around and stood up too.

"'Harry,' I ejaculated in an excited undertone and pulling away with all my might, 'what do you mean? What on earth do you mean?'

"'There it is,' he said to the justice, still holding me and pretending to pull me toward the door. 'That's the way she does. We were up here before, and she backed out. I'm not going t let her back out this time. Now come on in, Polly. Come on!'

"'My name is not Polly,' I explained to the justice, 'and we've been married five years,' I added. 'Do come along and behave yourself, Harry.'

"'Now look at that,' he explained apologetically. 'You see, it isn't my fault. You can't depend on girls. They never know their own minds. Well, goodby, justice. I'll get her up here again some day.'

"The justice sat down, looking like a man wickedly cheated out of $2, and the sidewalk gentlemen all sank back in their chairs. Harry laughed all the way home, but I didn't laugh at all. In fact, I am mad yet whenever I think of it. Wasn't he horrid?"—Detroit Free Press.

The Tragedians and the Ghost.

"Yes," said Stormington Barnes. "I have had some remarkable experiences. One of them was with a haunted house."

"Do you mean to say you lived in a house with such a reputation?"

"Yes. And we earned the lasting gratitude of the owner of the property."

"How?"

"As soon as my company of tragedians moved into the house the ghost refused to walk."—Washington Star.

She Was Shocked.

"She said she was shocked when he kissed her," said the girl in blue.

"Do you believe her?" asked the girl in gray.

"Oh, yes," was the reply; "I was there, and I know it's true. He had one of the handles of an electric battery and she had the other."

"Oh, well," admitted the girl in gray, "in that case perhaps she was shocked."—Chicago Post.

Misjudged.

"Now you know, Henry," she said reproachfully, "that you had to propose to me three times before you could get me to say yes."

"I admit it," he replied, with sudden spunk, "and I'd probably be proposing to you yet if you'd had any faith in my powers of perseverance."—Chicago Record-Herald.

PROVED GUILTY

Several years ago I attended the superior court for the county of ——. A case of murder was tried. The evidence disclosed that the deceased and the prisoner had been drinking together and had quarreled; that the prisoner had struck the deceased; that he had sworn he would be the death of him; that through the intercession of the bystanders a patched up reconciliation had taken place, willingly on the part of the deceased, doggedly by accused; that the deceased had started to go home by his usual route and that the prisoner had immediately followed him, although his home was in a contrary direction; that sounds of strife were heard shortly after; that the deceased had never again been heard of; that, suspicion having fallen upon the prisoner, his steps upon the night of the difficulty had been traced; that marks of a struggle had been found upon the earth and drops of coagulated blood, and that the accused, having been asked to account for the deceased, denied that he had ever seen him after the moment that he left on the night of the difficulty.

The defense was conducted by the prisoner in person, and it was evident to me that, although the calm and collected manner in which it was made had its impression upon the judge, it had none upon the jurors or bystanders. They had made up their minds as to his guilt and were determined that his life should be taken. The solicitor general closed the case. He dwelt with burning and bitter eloquence upon the crime of murder. He spoke of the cool and deliberate manner of the prisoner and reproached him as one who could gloat like a cannibal over the mangled remains of his victim.

He dwelt with great minuteness, clearness and ingenuity upon the train of circumstances "which could not lie," and he threw a web of guilt around the prisoner that no one doubted would involve him in destruction, but still the prisoner quailed not. The judge summed up the case to the jury, narrating the circumstances and unfolding the law. He admitted that the facts were very strong against the accused, but that one material link was wanting. It had not been proved that Grimes was dead. He concluded by admonishing them that they should not convict unless they had sufficient evidence of that fact.

But this caution was thrown away upon the excited feelings of the jury, who without retiring made up their verdict of guilty, and the foreman was in the act of signing it when the prisoner again rose.

"I ask permission of the court," said he, "to call a witness who, I think, will relieve me of this diabolical charge, who will prove that my hands are not red with my brother's blood, who will show the impropriety and danger of a conviction upon circumstantial evidence—in short, who will satisfactorily convince the malignant and demonlike heart of the solicitor general that I am innocent of this crime."

"Have you any objection, Mr. Solicitor General?" asked the judge.

"None," responded the state's attorney, with a bitter sneer, "but if he wishes to convince me and to save his neck from the gallows he had better produce John Grimes."

"That is precisely the witness I seek to introduce," said the prisoner. "Mr. Sheriff, call John Grimes."

The proposition created great excitement. Some of the bystanders laughed aloud. Others heaped bitter execrations upon the prisoner. The solicitor general sneeringly asked him if he would have him called again, and the judge was evidently fast changing his favorable opinion of the prisoner, who, he thought, was trifling with the court. I turned to the culprit and was amazed at the terrible change that had taken place in his countenance. Its placidity and composure were gone. It was covered with livid spots, and immense drops of perspiration were rolling rapidly from his brow.

The sheriff repeated the call. The storm that had been slumbering for a short time now burst forth with tenfold violence. The rain beat furiously upon the shingled roof, the wind howled and moaned like a condemned culprit, and several of the large pine trees that surrounded the building fell with a tremendous crash, startling the already excited inhabitants of the courtroom. It was an awful scene without. It was a still more awful one within. The unearthly appearance of the prisoner, the sudden and awful change that had taken place in him, his solemn adjuration and his earnest manner, all had deeply affected the bystanders, and many looked as if they really expected to see the murdered man arise at the invocation. All were gratified save the implacable solicitor general, who sat scowling at the accused with a look of triumph and fiendish exultation on his countenance. The judge rallied himself and motioned to the foreman of the jury to proceed, when suddenly an individual arose, no one knew from where, and, striding to the witness stand and throwing off a huge cloak which enveloped his form, disclosed to the horror stricken and amazed crowd the features of John Grimes.

Long afterward I learned that there had been a bet between the prisoner and his supposed victim bearing on the weight of circumstantial evidence.

After the Race.

"So your horse was distanced, was he?"

"Yes."

"Did you have anything on him?"

"I thought I had a jockey on him, but it seems I didn't."—Richmond Dispatch.

ORDER FOR HEARING PROOF OF FOREIGN WILL.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake, } ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, 23rd Nov. 1901.

In the matter of the estate of George Parsons,
Deceased.

Whereas, certain writings purporting to be duly authenticated copies of the Last Will and Testament of George Parsons, late of the County of Waukesha, Wisconsin, deceased, and the probate thereof in the Waukesha County Court, Wisconsin, have been delivered to this court;

And whereas, John H. Parsons has filed therewith his petition, representing among other things that said George Parsons lately died in said county of Waukesha, testate, possessed of certain real estate, situated in said Red Lake county, Minnesota, and that said petitioner is the executor named in said will and praying that the instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters testamentary be to him issued thereon:

It is ordered that proofs of said instrument and the said petition be heard before this court, at the probate office in said county, on the 23d day of December, A. D. 1901, at one o'clock in the afternoon, when all persons interested may appear for or contest the probate of said instrument;

And it is further ordered that notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake. } ss.

In Probate Court,
Special Term,
Dec. 9, 1901.

In the matter of the estate of
Erik C. Lee,
deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Lena E. Lee, administratrix of the estate of Erik C. Lee, deceased, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into her hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of, the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences, and praying that license be to her granted to sell the real estate of Erik C. Lee, deceased.

And it appearing by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administratrix to pay said debts, legacies or expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debt, legacies and expenses, to sell all of said real estate.

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 6th day of January, A. D. 1902, at one o'clock p. m., at the court house in Red Lake Falls, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Lena E. Lee, administratrix of said estate to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered that notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls the 9th day of December, A. D. 1901.

THE LADY OF LYNN

By SIR WALTER BESANT

Copyright, 1900, by Sir Walter Besant

the simple old sailor to believe anything he chose to advance; he had shown himself in the eyes of the girl that which women admire more than anything else in the world—possessed of fearlessness and skill; he had also shown himself ready to place his courage and his skill at the service and for the rescue of a woman. So far everything was prepared and in readiness for the next step. But there were certain obstacles still in the way. These he proceeded to remove.

The Lady Anastasia, after the morning prayers, at which she was a regular attendant, generally returned to her lodging, where she sat with her maid engaged in the important affairs of the toilet until dinner. Lord Fyllingdale was carried to Lady Anastasia's lodging in the market place.

The lady dismissed her maid. "You have something to tell me, Ludovic," she said. "I cannot tell from your face whether you are going to deal truthfully. I have had experience of the other way. Now, what is it?"

"What I have come to say is important. Anastasia, in this matter I have given you my entire confidence. There have been, I own, occasions when I have been compelled— But all that is over. I now confide absolutely in you and in you alone. My interests are yours."

"You have already given me that assurance." She implied, perhaps, by these words that the assurance and the fact were not identical.

"What can I give you except my assurance?"

"Nothing, truly. But, pray, go on. I hear that you have been playing the part of the knight errant and fighting for distressed damsels. I laughed when I heard of it. You to fight on the side of the angels! Where are your wings, my Ludovic?"

"The thing happened exactly as I could have wished. The country bumpkin who carried her off had no knowledge of fence. He could only lunge, and he was half drunk. There was a great appearance of desperate fighting because he was mad with drink and disappointment. I played with the fellow long enough to make a show of courage and danger, then I pinked him."

"Is he dead?"

"I believe that he is in some kind of fever. Well, Anastasia, the result of the affair is that I have now arrived at perfect confidence on the part of my old friend the guardian."

"And with the girl?"

"The girl matters nothing. The first part of the business is done. You can now go back to London"—

"To go back to London?" she replied suspiciously.

"You have done all I wanted done here. You have given me a very good character. You have charmed the people of the spa. You have flattered the girl and inspired her with discontent. Why should you stay any longer?"

"To be sure, I am at great expense, and the bank is in a poor way. But what are you going to do?"

"Anastasia," he sat down and took her hand. "I have inquired carefully into the whole business. There is no doubt, none whatever, that the girl is far richer than even her guardian understands. She has a huge income, a great accumulation of money and, what is more, a collection of jewels which is in itself a large fortune. Go back to London tomorrow or next day. Then sit down and write a letter inviting the girl to stay at your house. Bid her bring with her all her jewels and finery. I, for my part, will urge the captain to let her accept the invitation."

"All this is very circumstantial. What then?"

"I will promise the captain to find her a husband, a man of position, a man of rank, and, above all, one as virtuous as myself." He said this without the least blush or even a smile.

"Where is that husband to be found?"

"As yet I do not know. He must be a creation of our own. He must not know; he must simply obey. We shall find such a person somewhere. I have, I believe, a good many of my former friends in the fleet or the king's bench. Now, Anastasia, to find one of these unfortunates, to offer him an allowance, say a guinea a week, in return for a power of attorney to administer the property. True, there are the creditors, but we might take over the detainers. He must not be suffered to get out." He went on suggesting deceits and villainies.

"You said 'we.' What have I to do with the scheme? It is, you must confess, Ludovic, one of those arrangements or understandings which the world calls a conspiracy"—

Lord Fyllingdale released her hand. Her words pained his sensitive soul. "If at this time, after all we have done together, we are to talk of conspiracies, we had better act separately," he said coldly.

"No. I am your servant, as you know—sometimes your most unhappy servant, but always at your command—only now and then it pleases me to call things by their proper names. At such times, Ludovic, I look in my glass, and I see not the Lady Anastasia in a company of fashion, but a poor wretch sitting in a cart with her arms tied down, a white nightcap on her head and a prayer book in her hand. There is a coffin in the cart"—

"Anastasia, you are ridiculous! What have we done that all the world would not do if it could? These scruples are absurd, and these visions are fantastic. What is your share? You know that half of mine—all that is mine—is yours as well. You shall have my hand and my name. These you should have had long ago had they been worth your picking up. Alas, Anastasia, no one knows better than you the desperate condition of my affairs!"

"Well, I will obey you. I will go back to town. I will go tomorrow. The other parties in our innocency—they will also go back, I suppose?"

"They will have done their part, Sir Harry and the colonel and the parson; they will all go back. They cost a great deal to keep, and they have done their work."

"Should I see the girl before I go?"

"Perhaps not. Write to her from London. Invite her to stay with you. For my own part, I will look about me for the man we want—a prisoner; on the poor side; a gentleman, one who will do anything for a guinea a week. The girl will not know that he is a prisoner. It will be quite easy"—

"YOU HAVE CHARMED THE PEOPLE OF THE SPA."

This he said, concealing his real intention, and only anxious to get this lady out of the way, but he left her suspicious and jealous. That is to say, she had already become both, and this intricate plot of a husband from the Fleet and the rest made her still more suspicious and jealous.

Having dismissed Anastasia, there remained the parson and the poet. The latter he could send away at a day's notice; the former he would probably want for a certain purpose. He sent for Mr. Semple, his secretary.

"Semple," he said, "I have now made inquiry into the truth of your statements—I mean as regards this young lady's fortune."

"It is as I told your lordship?"

"It is. The fortune you have exaggerated, but it is, no doubt, considerable. Well, I have sent for you in order to tell you that I am now resolved upon carrying out the project you submitted to me. My own affairs are, as you found out, embarrassed. The girl's fortune will be useful to me. Her person is passable; her manners will be improved. I have therefore determined to make her my countess."

"My lord, I rejoice to have been the humble instrument"—

"You have kept the secret so far, I believe. At least I have seen no sign that any one suspects my intentions. You have invented a lie of enormous audacity in order to bring us all together—myself, with your project up my sleeve, and certain friends of mine to assist in various quarters. Your inventions have converted an ordinary well into a health restoring spring. You have caused the elevation of this town of common sailors and traders and mechanics into a fashionable spa. Semple, you are a very ingenious person. I hope that you are satisfied with your success."

"Gratified, my lord, not satisfied."

"I understand. You shall be satisfied very shortly by the fulfillment of my promise. It is, if I remember, to find you a place under government worth at least £200 a year, with perquisites. You shall learn, Semple, that I can be grateful and that I can keep my word, written or spoken. Now, there remains one more service."

He proceeded to give him certain instructions.

"And, remember, the greatest secrecy is to be observed. Neither you nor the captain is to reveal the fact until the business is completed. Everything will be ruined if anything is revealed. Your own future depends upon your secrecy. You are sure that you have your instructions aright?"

"I am quite sure, my lord. I am your embassador. I come with a message of great importance. There are reasons why the proceedings are to be kept secret. The lady will be made a countess before a prying and impertinent world can be informed of your lordship's intentions. I fly, my lord. I fly."

"One moment, friend Semple. Before you depart on this mission resolve me as to a difficulty in my mind."

"What is that, my lord?"

"You are aware, of course, that my plan of life is not quite what this girl expects in a husband. She will expect, in fact, the bourgeois virtues—constancy, fidelity, early hours, regularity, [illegible] You know very well that she will not find these virtues. You are preparing for the girl, in fact, a great disappointment and perhaps a life of misery. If I did not want her money, I might pity her."

Sam's face darkened.

"Tell me, my friend, in return for what acts of kindness done to you by the captain or by Molly herself are you conferring this boon upon the girl?"

The poet made no reply for awhile. Then he answered, his eyes on the ground: "The thing is as good as done. I may as well let you know. The captain cudgeled me like a dog—like a dog. My gratitude is so great that I have succeeded in marrying his ward to you, my lord. What worse revenge could I take?"

"Frankly, I know of none."

"You will waste and dissipate the whole of her fortune, and would if it were ten times as great, in raking and gaming; you will send her back to her own people broken hearted and ruined. That will be my doing."

"Friend Semple," said his lordship, "if I were not Fyllingdale, I would be Semple, and, to tell the truth, if I saw any other way of raising money I would—well—perhaps—I would—even pity the girl and let her go."

CHAPTER X.

THE EXPECTED BLOW.

THAT evening the blow, feared and expected, fell, for then we lost, or thought we lost, our maid. I found the captain sitting in the summer house alone without the usual solace of his tobacco and his October. "Jack," he said, with a gloomy sigh, "I am now the happiest of men because my Molly is the most fortunate of women. I have attained the utmost I could hope or ask. The most virtuous of men—I should say noblemen—has asked the hand of our girl. Molly will be a countess! Rejoice with me!"

I stood outside on the grass, having no words to say.

"She will marry him immediately. Nothing could be more happy or more fortunate. Such rank, such a position as places her on a level with the highest ladies of the land, though the daughter of plain folk, with a shipowner for a father and a sailor's daughter for a mother—there is promotion for you, Jack!"

"She will go away, then, and leave us?"

"Aye, she will leave us, Jack. She will leave us. His lordship—you do not ask who it is."

"Who can it be, captain, but Lord Fyllingdale?"

"The best of men. He will carry her off to his country house, where they will live retired for awhile, yet in such state as belongs to her rank. We shall lose her, of course. That, however, we always expected. The country house is in Gloucester, on the other side of England. Perhaps she may get to see us, but I am 75 or perhaps more, and Jennifer, her mother, is not far from 50. I cannot look to set eyes on her again. What matter," he hemmed bravely and sat upright—"what matter, I say, so that the girl is happy? Her mother may perhaps set eyes on her once more, but she will be changed, because, you see, our Molly must now become a fine lady."

"Yes," I groaned; "she must become a fine lady."

"Jack, sometimes I am sorry that she has so much money. Yet what was I to do? Could I waste and dissipate her money? Could I give away her ships? Could I give her, with the fortune of a princess, to a plain and simple skipper? No. Providence, Providence, Jack, hath so ordered things. I could not help myself."

"No, captain, you could not help things. Yet"— I broke off.

"Well, Jack, why don't you rejoice with me? Why the devil don't you laugh and sing? All you want is to see her happy. Yet there you stand as glum and dumb as a mute at a funeral."

"I wish her happiness, sir, with all my heart."

"Sam Semple came here this afternoon by order of my lord. Sam gives himself airs now that he is a secretary and companion. He came and demanded conversation with me. It was quite private, he said, and of the utmost importance. So we sat in the parlor, and with a bottle of wine between us we talked over the business. First he told me that his patron, as he calls him, meaning his master, had been greatly taken with the innocence and the beauty of Molly. I replied that unless he was a stock or a stone or an iceberg I expected nothing less. He went on to say that, although a noble earl with a long pedigree and a great estate, his patron was willing to contract marriage with a girl who was not even of gentle birth and had nothing but her beauty and her innocence. I told him that she had, in addition, a very large fortune. He said that his patron scorned the thought of money, being already as rich as most noblemen of his exalted rank; that he was willing also to pass over any defects in manners, conversation and carriage, which would be remedied by a little acquaintance with the polite world. In a word, his lordship offered his hand, his name, his title, his rank and himself to my word."

"His condescension," I said, "is beyond all praise."

"I think so, too; beyond all praise. I ask his advice touching a husband for my girl. He promises his assistance in the matter, and he then offers himself. Jack, could anything be more fortunate?"

"I hope it may turn out so. What does Molly say?"

"You may go in and ask her yourself. She will tell you more than she will tell anybody else. The matter is to be kept for the present a profound secret between his lordship and ourselves. But since Sam Semple knows it, and Jennifer knows it, and you are one of ourselves, therefore you may as well know it too. But don't talk about it."

"Why should it be kept a secret? Why should it not be proclaimed everywhere?"

"My lord says that the place is a hotbed of scandal; that he would not have Molly's name passed about in the pump-room, to be the object of common gossip and inventions made up of envy and malice. He would spare Molly this. When she is once married and taken away from the place, they may say what they please. Whatever they say, they cannot do her any harm. Why, some of them even declared that she was one of the company of strolling actresses. There is nothing that they will not say."

I made no reply because it certainly did seem as if in asking for secrecy his lordship had acted in Molly's interests.

"Well, captain, we must make the best of it. You must find your own happiness in thinking of Molly's."

"What aggravates me, Jack, is the ridiculous behavior of my cousin Jennifer. She is in the kitchen crying, and the black with her. Go and comfort her before you see Molly."

I looked into the kitchen. Molly's mother sat in the great wooden chair beside the fireplace. She held her apron in her hands as if she had just pulled it off her face, and the tears were on her cheeks. When she saw me, they began to flow again. "Jack," she said, "have you heard the news? Has the captain told you? The worst has happened. I have lost my girl. She is to be married. She will go away. She will marry a man who scorns her guardian and despises her mother. A bad beginning, Jack. No good can come of such a marriage. A bad beginning. Oh, I foresee unhappiness! How can Molly become a fine lady? She is but a simple girl, my own daughter. I have made her a good housewife, and all her knowledge will be thrown away and lost. It is a bad business, Jack. Nigra has been telling her fortune. There is nothing hopeful. All the cards are threatening. And the magpies and the screech owl"—

She fell to weeping again, after which she broke out anew: "The captain says he is the most virtuous man in the world. It isn't true. If ever I saw the inside of a man in my life, I have seen the inside of that man. He is corrupt through and through"—

"But consider. All the world is crying up his noble conduct and his many virtues."

"They may say what they like. It is false. He is heartless. He is cold. He is selfish. He marries Molly for her money. Persuade the captain, if you can. He will not believe me."

"How can I persuade him? I have no knowledge. Are they all in a tale? Are you the only person who knows the truth? How do you know it?"

"I know it because I love my girl, and so I can read the very soul of a man. I have read your soul, Jack, over and over again. You are true and faithful. You would love her and cherish her. But this man—he knows not what love means nor fidelity nor anything. Go, Jack. There is no help in you or in any other—because there is none other." She spoke the words of the prayer book: "'None other that fighteth for us but only thou, O God! Only thou, O God!'" She covered her face again with her apron and fell to sobbing afresh.

So I went into the parlor where Molly was sitting. "Jack!" She jumped up. "Oh, Jack! I want you so badly."

"I know all, Molly—except what you yourself say and think about it."

She had a piece of work in her hands, and she began to pull it and pick it as she replied. For the first time in my life I found Molly uncertain and hesitating.

"The captain says that it is the greatest honor that was ever offered to any woman to be raised from a lowly condition to a high rank, and all for love."

"All for love?" I asked.

"Why, what else can it be that made him fight for me with that desperate villain? He risked his life. Whatever happens, Jack, I cannot forget that."

"No. It was doubtless a great thing to do. Has he told you himself that it was all for love?"

"He has not spoken about love at all. He has never once been alone with me. It seems that these great people make love by message. He sent a message by Sam Semple"—

"A very fine messenger of Cupid, truly!"

"THERE AGAIN, MOLLY, DO YOU LOVE THE MAN?"

—"offering marriage. The captain cannot contain his satisfaction and sits glum. My mother says that she will never see me again and begins to cry."

"Well, but, Molly, to be sure it is a great thing to become countess. Most women would jump at the chance under any conditions. Do you, however, think that you can love the man?"

"He hasn't asked for love. Oh, Jack, to think that people should marry each other without a word of love! If he loves me, I suppose he thinks that I am bound to give him love in return."

"There again, Molly, do you love the man?"

XMAS GREETING

IT'S SERVED BY POLK CO.'S SHERIFF AND MEANS "DIG UP."

The day of reckoning having at last arrived, the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county met on Monday to make a special tax levy of 3.09 mills, for the purpose of meeting the demands of Polk Co., which require Red Lake county to assume a total of $16,500 of Polk's bonded indebtedness, as a heritage from our former misalliance.

Needless to say Red Lake county hesitated to move in the matter, and the commissioners did not until compelled to do so.

The interesting document emanating from the court and legally termed a writ of mandamus, which persuaded our county board to act, reads as follows:

State of Minnesota to W. C. L. Demann, James Sutor, Ole J. Johnson, J. B. Hebert and L. Hanson, successor in office to Karl M. Hanson above named, County Commissioners of the County of Red Lake in the State of Minnesota.

Greeting:

Whereas, it appears that a judgment has been entered in the above entitled action, wherein and whereby it is adjudged and decreed on December 17, 1901.

1. That it is the duty of the respondents and their successors in office to levy and assess a tax upon the taxable property of the county of Red Lake, in the State of Minnesota, annually and in addition to all other taxes, a sum sufficient to pay the interest accruing annually upon the portion of the bonded indebtedness of Polk County for which said Red Lake County is liable, as hereinafter set forth, and to levy a tax sufficient to pay the principal of said portion at the time any part of said principal is about to become due.

2. That said county of Red Lake pay portions of the various issues of bonds of Polk County, as follows:

First. Of the issue of Polk County bonds bearing date January 2, 1882 and due January 2, 1902, said Red Lake County pay the sum of one thousand and five dollars and ninety-cents, with interest on the said sum at the rate of seven per cent. per annum from January 2, 1896, and interest being payable annually.

Second. Of the issue of Polk county bonds bearing date May 14, 1883, and due May 15, 1913, the said Red Lake county pay the sum of five thousand and eighty-two dollars and fifty-three cents, with interest on said sum at the rate of six per cent per annum from May 14, 1896, interest payable annually on May 14th of each year, and until said bonds are fully paid.

Third. Of the issue of Polk County bonds bearing date April 10, 1885, and due April 10, 1915, said Red Lake county pay the sum of three hundred and seventeen dollars and sixty-five cents, with interest on the said sum from April 10, 1895, at the rate of six per cent per annum, interest payable annually on the tenth day of April in each year, until said bonds are fully paid.

Fourth. Of the issue of Polk county bonds bearing date the first day of June, 1885, and due June 1, 1915, said Red Lake county pay the sum of one thousand and sixteen dollars and fifty cents, with interest on the said sum from June 1, 1896, at the rate of six per cent per annum, interest payable annually on the first day of June in each year, until such bonds be fully paid.

Fifth. Of the issue of Polk County bonds bearing date the first day of September, 1887, and due September 1, 1917, said Red Lake county pay the sum of three hundred and eighty-one dollars and nineteen cents, with interest on said sum from September 1, 1896, at the rate of six per cent per annum, interest payable annually on the first day of September of each year, until such bonds be fully paid.

Sixth. Of the issue of Polk County bonds bearing date the 8th day of March, 1889, and due the 8th day of March, 1919, said Red Lake county pay the sum of two thousand five hundred and forty-one dollars and twenty-six cents, with interest on said sum since the 8th day of March, 1896, at the rate of five per cent per annum, interest payable annually on the 8th day of March of each year, until said bonds be fully paid.

3. That the respondents and their successors in office forthwith levy and assess a tax upon the taxable property of the county of Red Lake and in addition to all other taxes, a sum sufficient to pay the interest upon said bonded indebtedness, which said Red Lake County should pay as aforesaid, accrued since January 1, 1896, at the rates of interest hereinbefore specified, and sufficient to pay the interest to accrue on their proportion of said indebtedness during the year 1902, and sufficient to pay their portions of the principal of said bond issue dated January 2, 1882, and due on the second day of January, 1902, and to annually thereafter levy a tax as aforesaid, sufficient to pay the interest to accrue annually upon the portion of said bonded indebtedness for which they are liable as aforesaid, in addition to all other taxes and sufficient to pay any portion of the principal sum of said indebtedness at the time the same is about to become due.

And whereas, it has been made to appear at the Court that you have in all matters wholly failed to perform your duty as hereinbefore set forth.

Now, Therefore, we command you, as County Commissioners of the county of Red Lake, to forthwith proceed to perform your said duty and levy the tax hereinbefore specified.

Witness the Honorable William Watts, the Judge of said Court, and the seal of said Court, at the city of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, this 18th day of December, 1901.

E. E Lommen,
Clerk of District Court,
Polk County, Minnesota.

The Deed Is Done.

Red Lake Falls, Minn. Dec. 33 1901.
1 o'clock P. M.

Board of County Commissioners met in extra session this day.

Meeting called to order by the chairman.

Members all present except Commissioner Johnson.

Commissioner Demann offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

Resolved that the Board of County Commissioner levy and assess a special tax of $5915.75 upon the taxable property of the county, and that the County Auditor is hereby instructed to extend said sum on the tax lists of the county for the year 1901. Pursuant to Judgment of the District court in case of Polk vs. Red Lake county which resolution was seconded by Commissioner Sutor and on motion carried unanimously the same was adopted.

On motion duly carried meeting adjourned.

J. B. Hebert,
Chairman.

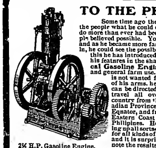
TO THE PEOPLE:



2½ H.P. Gasoline Engine.

Some time ago the "Jack-of-All-Trades" began to tell the people what he could do. He made great claims; promised to do more than ever had been done before, and more than most people believed possible. You all know the success he has attained, and as he became more familiar with the country he was traveling in, he could see the possibilities of greater work, and to accomplish this he has introduced to you a traveling companion. Behold his features in the shape of a 2½ H. P. Geared Base Vertical Gasoline Engine. His specialties are pumping water and general farm use. He is very versatile, and when his time is not wanted for pumping water, by a movement of one of his arms, he can disconnect the gears and his power can be directed for other purposes. He is beginning to travel all over the country from the Canadian Provinces to the Equator, and from the Eastern Coast to the Philipines. He is taking up all sorts of work for all kinds of people, and it is surprising to note the results of his work for the first year.
